Film Vogues

The preferences and prejudices of the United States of America, a democracy accommodating some 105,708,771 individuals, is a subject of never-ending interest to the average student of humanity and an unceasing cause of great and indignant activity upon the part of the professional reformer. These attitudes have been particularly true with regard to the unprecedented popularity of the motion picture.

That a form of entertainment, originated but a few years ago in dumpy little camps of a proportion mean in comparison with the higher-rated and better patronized circus, should have come to dictate this nation's ever changing vogues is a fact which the student accepts as both absorbing and amusing in his review of the moderns, their lives and habits; while the reformer, with his equally keen, but more jagged perception, is as fully but antagonistically alive to this totally unwarranted influence. Ask him!

In fact, these two know of us much that we do not ourselves consider despite the box office statistics which we take great pride in and our fan letter assurance of the juvenile nation's worship. We continually miss significant evidences of our unapproachable sway of the populace.

For instance, today's newspapers and magazines are full of flapper stories and references. Youngish females, short haired and skirted, with bright eyes and snappy mannerisms surround us everywhere. They are flappers. We perceive it instantly; they strive continuously to maintain the effect. Why? A few seasons back, Constance Talmadge, Dorothy Gish and several other young picture stars saw possibilities in a less inane ingenue and the flapper was born for ultra modern femininity just as the be-spit-curl'd vamp of another age followed in the fascinating wake of heavy-lidded Theda Bara.

Older women about us with heavier extremities but the same passion for imitation drape their figures and dress their heads in Gloria Swanson's best manner or the nearest approach that they can attain. What matter it if the result is disastrous? They're in the swim.

So on it goes through the masculine world which is by no means immune. Favorite male stars are watched and patterned as religiously, if more furtively. The pictures tell them all—irrevocably.

Of course, there's no moral to this discourse for we certainly aren't going to prescribe profitable personalities or fashions for the celluloid celebrities.

But the industry which can demand of the student the homage of recognition as a big factor in the molding of a country is not to be scorned and the class of people that can disturb any professional moralist is to be congratulated. At least our mission is as gratifying as it is distinct.

Dark Days on the London Stage

This article in "Vanity Fair" by Hugh Walpole is so striking and excellently handled that we reprint it wholly for the edification of those who have not already seen and appreciated it:

"I suppose that at no time in the memory of living play-goers has there been so much discussion, both in public and in private, concerning the condition of the London theatre as at the present moment.

"The reasons are not far to seek. Play after play is withdrawn; actors and actresses in the thousands are out of work; and no single explanation of these tragedies seems of itself strong enough to account for them.

"There are certain obvious causes. The strong attraction of the cinema is one, the enormous rental of theatres is another, the poverty of the world in general a third.

"As to the cinema, I do believe that it cuts short the life of doubtful theatrical productions, and by doubtful I mean productions that have no very strong reason, artistic, commercial or sensuous for their existence, but that might have lived once upon a time because then there was no alternative attraction; but the art of the cinema is, I am convinced, never going to damage the art of the theatre at its best.

"As to the question of theatre rents, I know nothing about it and had therefore best be silent, but from the mere onlooker's point of view, there seem to be any number of hard-headed commercial gentlemen tumbling over themselves to snatch at any vacant theatre, and I refuse to believe that they would do this if to take a theatre were almost certainly to court failure.

"There is, I think, another reason for the present sad state of affairs. As one grows older and looks back, distance most certainly lends enchantment to the view, and it may be mere middle-age that makes me think that the theatre, both in plays, in performers and in actual production, was richer in personality twenty years ago than it is at this moment.

"Ellen Terry, Irving, Tree, Wyndham, Hare, Alexander, were, twenty years ago, artists who, however strongly you might criticise them, had outstanding definite, highly coloured personalities. 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray,' 'The Liars,' 'The Gay Lord Quex,' 'Arms and the Man,' and a host of others were highly coloured plays, and whatever you may say of Tree's productions, of 'Herod' and 'Ulysses' and 'The Darling of the Gods,' of the Vedronne

Film Capital Production Notes

TULLY PREPARING "OMAR THE TENT-MAKER"

Richard Walton Tully, whose initial cinematic play, "The Masquerader," will be released by First National during the fall season, is busy arranging definite preparations for the filming of "Omar the Tentmaker." Guy Bates Post, who was the star of "The Masquerader," will again hold the stellar position in this second film. It will be remembered that "Omar the Tentmaker" was an original play by Tully, which served Post for a vehicle on the speaking stage for the four years preceding his long run of over two thousand performances in "The Masquerader."

The same production and directorial staff will be busy on "Omar the Tentmaker" as assisted Tully in making "The Masquerader." James Young will again be the director; Wilfred Buckland, art director; Georges Benoit, cinematographer; A. Carle Palm, laboratory expert. Post's stage manager, Milano Tilden, will again officiate in this capacity; the office forces have been held over between productions and will, of course, remain. These consist of George Landy, publicity director, Philip Kroha, office manager, and Joan Blackmore, his assistant.

FORM IROQUOIS PRODUCTIONS

Iroquois Productions, Inc., has been formed to make North Woods Stories. The first will be "The Law of the Northlands," and will be directed by Carl S. Fleming. Distribution will be via the independent market by the K. D. and B. Photoplays, Inc., likewise a new organization. The officers of Iroquois are F. R. Hazzard, president; Carl Fleming, vice-president; H. C. Sholes, secretary and treasurer, and N. C. Sholes, business manager.

TO RELEASE JAPANESE FILMS

The Fairfax-Jasper Motion Picture Co. recently signed a contract with E. K. Tanaka of the Imperial M. P. Co. of Tokyo, whereby he will direct a series of six two reels. Miss Fairfax will write the stories, and they will be made with Japanese casts. They will be released by the American Releasing Corp.

MAY USE GLENDALE, LONG ISLAND, PLANT

It is expected that the Chronicle of America Pictures Corp., which will produce historical films under the auspices of the Yale University Press will use the Glendale, L. I., studio, recently purchased by Charles C. Burr.

"THE MYSTERIES OF INDIA" FALL RELEASE

"The Indian's Tomb" made by Joe May in Germany for the E. F. A. and Famous Players, will be released in the fall as "The Mysteries of India."

Second National's fourth release will be "Broken Shadows."

Lillian Lawrence and Lydia Yeamans Titus are playing important parts in "Blue Blood," starring Alice Calhoun, which recently went into production at Vitagraph.

SITTENHAM FORMS COMPANY

Fred W. Sittenham, formerly with Metro, has organized a producing company, and will immediately begin shooting on his own story, "Not for Fools."

Among Sittenham's past productions are "The Misleading Lady," "Clothes," and "Fine Feathers."

HOXIE FINISHING FIRST OF SUNSET SERIES

Announcement has been made by Anthony J. Xydias, president and general manager of the Sunset Productions, of the signing of Jack Hoxie, the cowboy star, to make a series of eight western super-features, for the State Rights market.

The first of the new series, "Barb-Wire," from the pen of William Lester and Marin Sais, is nearing completion at the Sunset Studios, under the direction of Frank Grandon.

EVA NOVAK PRODUCTIONS

Eva Novak, former Universal star, who has been on a vacation recently, has just organized her own producing company and will begin camera work in a few days at the Fine Arts Studios.

According to executives of the new company, Miss Novak is to be starred in a number of five-reel special features of the mystery type. E. L. Butler and William R. Reed are the men behind this new organization, and details of the plans will be forthcoming within a week. The first story is now being written into continuity form and the studio prepared for actual shooting.

DOING MACDONALD PICTURES

Lois Zellner has just completed the continuity of Katharine MacDonald's forthcoming production, "White Shoulders," and will also prepare the follow up scenario for that star. Meanwhile, Miss Zellner is writing scripts for two independent producing companies.

SECURES FRENCH PICTURE

Stoll of London has purchased Great Britain rights to "The Agony of the Eagles," based on an incident in the life of Napoleon. The picture was made in France under the direction of Bernard Deschamps.

NEW COMEDY UNIT

William Fox recently organized a new comedy unit, which will produce a type of comedy burlesquing the old-time western melodramas, to be separate from the other Fox comedy organizations.

SMITH AND ADAMS TO CONTINUE IN HALLROOM COMEDIES

Sid Smith, who is featured as Percy, and Jimmie Adams, who is Ferdie, in the Hallroom Comedies, were recently placed under contract to continue in the 1922-23 series.

PROD. SECURITY TO RELEASE DUTCH FILMS

Elsie Cohen, representing the Hollandia Film Co., of Holland, recently completed arrangements with Producers Security Corp., to market her product in this country.

A new laboratory has been opened in Chicago, known as the Better Pictures Corp., with C. A. Beatty as general manager. While its main business will be to develop and print, it will also do some producing. The studio will be located in the old Emerald Studio, where Billy West formerly made his pictures.

"THE GHOST BREAKER" TO BE REDONE

Bebe Daniels and Wallace Reid are to appear in "The Ghost Breaker," under the direction of Alfred E. Green, at Lasky's, starting early next month. This film was made once by H. B. Warner. Mr. Green recently completed Thomas Meighan's latest vehicle, "Our Leading Citizen," by George Ade.

Current Reviews

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR"

Grauman's

All of the rather startling strength of the George Broadhurst play has been retained by William de Mille in his film version for Paramount of "Bought and Paid For." In fact, with its big situations played in two or three sets the picture is reminiscent in various ways of the stage production which caused such a sensation some seasons back.

The struggle of a woman to maintain her self respect and of a man, his pride, which, pitted against one another, form the story's theme, are consistently, vividly interpreted here into a very human, if somewhat daring drama, perfectly directed. Clara Beranger has developed each situation in her scenario to the plainest point possible, which is at least a relief from the regulation, conventional way of the majority of adaptors.

Agnes Ayres heads the players in Virginia Stuard, the wife who was "bought and paid for." No part could have more invaluable dramatic possibilities than this one, but the actress misses many of the best moments and doesn't even appeal greatly. Miss Ayres' work is not improving. She should have more interest in it.

Jack Holt in the millionaire, Stafford, gives one of his always precise, dependable performances. His action is handled without a flaw.

Walter Hiers puts over some excellent comedy in James Gilley, Virginia's incapable but energetic brother-in-law, and with his role succeeds in lightening the whole agreeably.

Leah Wyant is a good type for his wife, while George Kuwa, Bernice Frank, Ethel Wales and Bertie Johns are excellent in the minor business.

Guy Wilky's camerawork is more than satisfactory.

"SISTERS"

Kinema

Kathleen Norris' story, "Sisters," as produced by Cosmopolitan for American Releasing Co. distribution, is a fairly absorbing drama, the keynote of which is divorce denunciation. Due to its adamant stand upon the much discussed question, it is liable to lack appeal for a great portion of the modern audience, but the arrangement of its situations hold interest in themselves. The production is only perfectly directed in places by Albert Capellani and the lighting and photography are most inferior. Often it is difficult to follow the performer's transitions on this account.

"Sisters" is a story of two daughters—Alix, the elder, a practical, undemonstrative type who compromises not at all with right as she sees it, is a role well cared for by Seena Owen, who obtains much sympathy for it although here she has not the opportunity that her leading part in "Back Pay," so amply afforded. Her attractively spirited, selfish, little sister is done with all the pretty petulance that has marked so much of Gladys Leslie's work. It is characteristic of girls like Cherry that they need their own husbands and other women's as well to aid in their childish, unhappy pursuits.

Matt Moore has a restrained portrayal in Peter, the man who, loving one sister, marries the other. It is little more than a straight part but it is carefully and consistently handled.

Martin, Cherry's blundering but well intentioned husband, is filled by Joseph King, with Tom Guise, Frances Grant, Fred Miller, and Mildred Arden appearing in minor positions.

ANTRIM SHORT

Editorial

and Barker management at The Court, of George Alexander's staging of 'Paolo and Francesca,' those were events that will remain in one's theatrical memories forever.

"With the theatre of 1922, one seems to be swimming in a kind of misty sea and never setting foot on dry land. No actor, save Sir Gerald du Maurier, no actress, save Miss Irene Vanbrugh, seems to follow a definite theatrical policy. Actors move from theatre to theatre, are to be found at one moment on the music hall, at another in revue, suddenly in the provinces, then off to South Africa or Canada. One of our finest theatres is given over to inane, clumsy barbarisms, and above all, most of the actors and actresses of the older school have left us and we are quite uncertain as to who will take their places.

"There is no question that the theatrical fare in London during the last two years has been of the thinnest. We have had one of the best comedies of our generation in Mr. Milne's 'The Truth About Blayds,' another admirable comedy in Mr. Maughan's 'The Circle,' an eternally memorable revival of 'The Beggar's Opera,' a splendidly plucky and interesting management in Hampstead, some excellent Grand Guignol acting, and then what else? Where are the new plays? We have had, it is true, 'Heartbreak House,' which the critics rose up early in the morning to kill, but Mr. Shaw is something to be thankful for, indeed, but not to acclaim as the hope of the next generation.

"Play after play seems to promise good things and then not to have enough red blood in it to carry it through the evening. A single exception to this, besides the work of Mr. Milne, is that of Miss Clemence Dane, who, whether you like 'A Bill of Divorcement' and 'Will Shakespeare' or no, is at any rate stuffed with personality.

"And as for the plays, so with the acting. Who are stepping forward at the head of the theatre in line with Sir Gerald du Maurier, Sir Charles Hawtrey, Miss Vanbrugh? One remembers individual performances, one can see Mr. Godfrey Tearle at one moment, Miss Fay Compton at another, here a glimpse of Mr. Leon Quartermaine, there a passionate half hour with Miss Sybil Thorndyke, but all these impressions are fugitive, and we slip from theatre to theatre, hoping for some good thing but finding an actor or actress who has shown great personality in one part giving no sign of it at all in another.

"We have two younger actresses who never fail us in any part that they may undertake. I mean Miss Meggy Albanesi and Miss Athene Seyler, and those who saw Mr. Basil Rathbone's astonishing Iago will feel doubly reassured about his future if they also watched his brilliant creation in the strange and ill-fated Andreyev play, 'He Who Gets Slapped,' and then his cheerful, impertinent burlesque of the nonsense in 'The Edge o' Beyond,' both in the same day.

"Yes, but Miss Albanesi, Miss Seyler and Mr. Rathbone are not enough, nor do they seem anywhere near the position of command that they ought to have. Why, what a comment on the English stage of the moment that for three quarters of the year it should be impossible for us to see Miss Seyler on the stage.

"We are told that theatrical expenses are so high today that managers dare not risk more artistic and probably less financially successful productions, but it seems to the outsider that they lose over the non-artistic productions just as heavily as over the artistic. 'Put and Take' fails even more completely than 'Will Shakespeare,' and in which was there a greater glory? Who thought that 'A Bill of Divorcement' and 'The Beggar's Opera' would run for over a year apiece? Is the poor British public, which is invariably cursed when an artistic production fails, so entirely in the wrong when it has loyally supported plays like these and 'The Whiteheaded Boy' and 'If' and the 'Quality Street' revival? Why, if a manager is going to lose, should he not lose over something that gives him credit rather than discredit?

"Mr. MacDermott, Mr. Basil Dean, Mr. Nigel Playfair, have all shown admirably consistent personalities, but they are always changing their actors and actresses, cannot often run their theatres, without desperate appeals for money, and are suffered rather than supported by the theatre in general.

"Has it come to this, that we are many of us actually lamenting the old actor-manager who was cursed so bitterly by all of us during his lifetime? I don't know, but it was a comfort in those days to know that you would get English comedy and Mr. Cyril Maude at the Haymarket, that you could have your fantasy, were you so in-

Where to Find People You Know

DEL ANDREWS WITH HUNT STROMBERG

Del Andrews recently resigned from the Thomas H. Ince Studios to become production manager and chief film editor for Hunt Stromberg Productions. During his nine-year association with Thomas H. Ince, Andrews alternated in serving the producer as film editor, continuity expert, production consultant and director. Among the Ince cinemaplays edited by Andrews are "Lying Lips," "The Bronze Bell," "Beau Revel," "The Home Stretch," "One a Minute," "Bell-boy 13," and "The Hottentot," the latter two Douglas McLean specials to be released by First National. In the pioneer days at old Inceville, Andrews edited "Civilization," and many of the Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray and W. S. Hart pictures.

In addition to his work for Thomas H. Ince, Andrews personally cut and edited such Constance Talmadge photoplays as "A Pair of Silk Stockings," "Up the Road with Sally," "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," and "Who Cares." Andrews has just completed the cutting and editing of the first Bull Montana comedy special for Stromberg Productions "A Ladies' Man."

FAIR OPPOSITE WARNER

Elinor Fair has been engaged by Carl P. Winther, production manager of Metropolitan Productions, to play the feminine lead in "High Stakes," an Earl Wayland Bowman magazine story in which James B. Warner will be featured. Among Miss Fair's recent screen appearances are leads with Otis Skinner in "Kismet," with Mary Pickford in "Through the Back Door," and with Hobart Bosworth in "White Hands." In "High Stakes" she will be seen as a Spanish senorita.

TO STAR MILTON SILLS

Max Graf, motion picture impresario, making his headquarters at the San Mateo Studios in San Francisco, recently signed Milton Sills to a stellar contract, which takes effect following Mr. Sills' present engagement.

SHAMROCK ENGAGES CAMERON

P. S. McGeeney, director of the Shamrock Productions, has secured Grace Cameron to star in "Little Dolly Dimples." Work on this picture will start as soon as Miss Cameron completes her present contract.

DEANE IN CORK COMEDY

Doris Deane, formerly with Universal, has been signed to play the feminine lead with Clyde Cook in his new comedy, which recently entered production at the Fox Studios. Miss Deane's last picture was with Frank Mayo.

DEXTER WITH YOUNG

Elliott Dexter, who lately returned from a long vacation in Europe, has been engaged as leading man for Clara Kimball Young.

Mario Marjoroni, R. W. Johnston and George Nash are among the players in "The Men of the Silent Valley," the new Borzage picture which is under production in Banff, Canada.

LYTELL TO CO-STAR WITH COMPSON

It is understood that Lasky has secured Bert Lytell to co-star with Betty Compson in "To Have and to Hold," the forthcoming George Fitzmaurice cinemaplay which will start production shortly.

CARPENTIER TO APPEAR IN BLACKTON PRODUCTION

Georges Carpentier is to appear as a film star under the direction of producer J. Stuart Blackton in England.

The production will be made by Mr. Blackton in association with Allen Thomas and Alexander Bird and work on it will soon be started in London, and will precede the next Stuart Blackton production featuring Lady Diana Manners, which will be started later in the summer.

Distribution will be in the hands of Messrs. Thomas and Bird who have formed the National Super-Productions for this purpose.

LASKY SIGNS MENJOU

Adolph Menjou has been secured by Lasky to interpret an important role in a Penrhyn Stanlaws special, now titled "Pink Gods."

CODY WITH BORZAGE

Lew Cody will appear opposite Alma Rubens in "The Valley of Silent Men," a new Cosmopolitan production, which Frank Borzage is directing.

Paul Cramer is employed as assistant cameraman on the Pathe serial in which Ruth Roland is starred.

Charles Dudley is included in the cast of "Blue Blood," the current Alice Calhoun starring vehicle for Vitagraph.

Mother Anderson, who has just finished playing the part of "Martha" in "Oliver Twist," is now cast in Florence Vidor's current production.

Philip Space, eastern newspaper man, has recently been appointed the post of Director of Publicity and Exploitation of the Sunset Productions, by President Anthony J. Xydias.

Coy Watson, Jr., who is recovering from scarlet fever, may be seen in the leading role in "School Day Love," which is in its eleventh week at Miller's Theatre.

Spottiswoode Aiken has been added to the cast of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," the Universal serial in which Harry Myers plays the principal male role.

Raymond Hatton will be seen in a leading role in "Pink Gods," a Penrhyn Stanlaws cinemaplay for Famous Players about to start production.

Frank Lawrence, who was with Vitagraph and Universal for twenty years, has been engaged as cutter by Chester Bennett for the Jane Novak photoplay, "The Snow Shoe Trail."

Dimitri Stephson is responsible for the cutting and titling "My Mother," which will be state righted by the Arista Film Corp., and is also responsible for the titling of "The Curse of Drink."

Victory Bateman, James Donnelly, Sadie Gordon and Harry Pringle are among the players who have been cast by Vitagraph to support Alice Calhoun in "Blue Blood," which went under production this week.

Pickups By The Staff

NEILAN INSTALLS RADIO

Marshall Neilan has installed a radio-phone receiving and sending outfit at his studio in Hollywood, which he expects will render practical service in motion picture production.

Mr. Neilan experimented with a company of players on location recently and the outcome was found successful.

"Many practical uses will be found for the radio in the picture world," said Mr. Neilan in discussing the matter. "Already I have found this wonderful instrument, which has taken the country by storm, a method of saving much time and expense in movie making. It will not be long before every studio will find the radio as important a part of its equipment as the arc light or the camera."

MACFARLANE VISITS STUDIOS

Peter Clark MacFarlane, author and lecturer, with Mrs. MacFarlane and their daughter motored here from San Francisco last week. They were guests of Adeline M.
Alvord and witnessed motion pictures in the making at Lasky's and Universal City.

Mr. Macfarlane is remembered in motion picture circles through his stories and novels which have reached the screen. Interest awaits his forthcoming novel which will be published this spring.

SAUNDERS A GROOM

R. D. Saunders, casting director at the Hollywood Studios, appeared recently as the groom opposite Mary Harron as the bride in a small town church episode of "Her Man," the forthcoming Marshall Neilan photoplay for Associated First National.

ZUKOR PRESENTS GIFT

Toward the close of the Paramount ball held recently at the Commodore in New York City, Adolph Zukor presented Mathilda Cass with a platinum watch as a reward for ten years' service with Paramount. Miss Cass is now in the foreign department.

ENGLAND LIFTS BAN

The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of London has lifted the ban against the exhibition of German pictures in England.

The Kinema Theatre has installed a radio phone.

Richard Headrick, the child who was featured in Louis B. Mayer's "The Child Thou Gavest Me," appeared recently in the charity benefit at the Los Angeles Children's Exposition.

Judge Curtis D. Wilbur of the California
Supreme Court, now a candidate for the position of presiding judge, when in Los Angeles a few weeks ago, asked his friend,
Louis K. Webb when he would next be seen on the screen. Mr. Webb replied that he had parts in "Foolish Wives" and "False Woman," both of which were about to be released. "In the courts," the judge replied,
"we release foolish wives and false women every day."

COUDERT IN TROPICS

George Coudert, cameraman, who shot
"The Leather Pushers" series, has gone to Colombia, South America, on a picture expedition, and will make films of the oil fields, as well as film nature views and studies.

UNITED SOCIETY OF CINEMATOGRAPHERS MOVE INTO NEW QUARTERS

The United Society of Cinematographers has moved into its new quarters in the Putnam Building, Broadway, New York, in order to be in closer touch with the activities of the industry.

The last meeting of the organization was held several days ago, at which time Mr.
John Wallace Gillies gave a talk on "Soft
Focus Lenses as Applied to Motion Picture
Photography." An address on "Composition" was also given by the same speaker. A buffet supper was served in the clubrooms after the meeting.

Sam Allen has returned from a location trip to Yosemite Valley.

Kenneth C. Beaton (K. C. B.) was a guest of the Hal E. Roach Studios recently.

Baby Muriel Frances Dana is working in "The Sunshine Trail" with Douglas Mc-
Lean, at the Ince Studio.

Robert B. McIntyre, Goldwyn casting director, recently placed under contract Eleanor Boardman, a Philadelphia girl, and William Haines, a New Yorker.

Wallace Reid in the Paramount production, "Across the Continent," opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre on Monday,
April 17th. Mary MacLaren, Theodore Roberts, Betty Francisco and Walter Long are numbered in the cast.

GRIFFITH REPRESENTATIVE HERE

E. T. Banzhoff, legal representative for
D. W. Griffith, arrived in Los Angeles recently from New York, to be present at the annual meeting of the United Artists Corporation, consisting of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin and D. W.
Griffith, known as "The Big Four of Film-dom."

While no statement has been made as to the nature of the business that will be taken up at this year's meeting, it is understood that it has to do with establishing a distributing system throughout the Orient.

BUTLERS GET AWARD

David Butler and his father, Fred J. Butler, were recently awarded damages of $10,- 800 against Irving M. Lesser, for services due under contract. The Butlers were jointly employed under contract to make six pictures, and they were dismissed before completion of the contract.

COMING TO STATES

It is understood that J. Gordon Edwards, who has been in Europe directing "Nero" and "The Shepherd King," is to return from Rome in May with both productions completed. The visit home is said to be chiefly for consultation concerning future production plans abroad.

Some of the writers taking part in the titling of Owen Moore's latest for Selznick,
"Reported Missing," were John Medbury of the N. Y. Journal, H. I. Phillips of the N. Y.
Globe and Bill Johnston of the Evening World.

George D. Baker lately completed his contract with S-L Pictures and is now en route for New York via the Panama Canal.

The dancer, Ruth St. Denis, has been engaged by Goldwyn to supervise the dance scenes in Rupert Hughes' latest comedy,
"The Bitterness of Sweets," which he is himself directing.

"Find the Woman," a Paramount mystery production based on the story by Arthur Somers Roche with Alma Rubens as the star, comes Sunday, April 16th, to Grau-man's Rialto.

There's no rest for "Freckles" Barry.
Due back from a transcontinental trip the youngster is scheduled to start on a long tour of personal appearances with Marshall
Neilan's "Penrod."

Constance Talmadge is scheduled to travel around the world during the making of her next First National production, "East Is West," the stage success in which Fay
Bainter was starred.

The injunction suit of Charles Chaplin against Charles Amador, who is making films under the name of "Charles Aplin," has been deferred until the latter part of April. Chaplin is trying to restrain Amador from the use of the former's famous vagabond accoutrements.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Marshall Neilan has left for New York with the negative of "Her Man," which will be shown publicly following "Fools First," another Neilan production recently finished. Mr. Neilan will edit "Her Man" on the train going East. He is accompanied by Frank Urson, his associate director, David Kesson, photographer and D. J. Gray, film editor. While in the East, Mr. Neilan will consult with his associates on his new production plans and will take a number of scenes for a new picture. He will then take a vacation, and may make a short trip abroad before starting on his new producing schedule.

Buster Keaton's next two-reel comedy, "The Frozen North," is nearing completion. Eddie Cline directed the picture and members of the cast are Bonnie Hill, Joe Roberts, Freeman Wood, Robert Parker and others. It is expected that the film will be completed within a fortnight and will be ready for preview soon afterward. The picture is a Joseph M. Schenck production for release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Mack Sennett's forthcoming comedy-drama, "For Love or Money," an original by Sennett, is being titled and rushed to completion for early release through Associated First National. "For Love or Money" includes among its players, George O'Hara who plays the principal male role, Kathryn McGuire in the feminine lead, Ethel Grey Terry, Noah Beery, Billy Bevan, Ben Deely, Mildred June and Charlie Murray. F. Richard Jones, director of many Mack Sennett productions, not the least of which were "Mickey" and "Molly O," directed "For Love or Money."

B. P. Schulberg, head of "Preferred Pictures," is building sets at the Louis B. Mayer studio, where Katherine MacDonald is to star in more First National releases.

Richard Walton Tully, producer, will start making tests this week for the principal parts in his next production, "Omar, the Tentmaker."

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "Snub" Pollard has finished his first two-reeler and will begin work next week on a new production, which Supervising Director Charles Parrott will direct. Sets at the Studios are now about completed for the new picture.

Harold Lloyd's big feature for Associated Exhibitors, "Grandma's Boy," is now on its way to New York, the picture leaving the studios this week. "Grandma's Boy," which runs to five-reel length, went under production October 22d and is the result of five months' work. Screen credit, in addition to Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis playing opposite, goes to Charles Stevenson, the "rival," Anna Townsend, grandmother, Dick Sutherland, the "rolling stone," and Noah Young, sheriff. Hal Roach, Jean Havez and Sam Taylor wrote the story; H. M. Walker, the titles; Fred Newmeyer directed, and T. J. Crizer is responsible for the film editing with the photography by Walter Lundin, who has shot every Lloyd comedy since the comedian wore the horn rimmed spectacles.

The masterprint of "One Clear Call," the latest John M. Stahl photoplay, leaves this week for Chicago where it will be matched up with the negative at the Rothacker Laboratories. It is expected that prints will be ready for First National distribution in May.

BALBOA STUDIO NOTES

The Morante Company is shooting exteriors at San Pedro Harbor this week, on the N. W. Mounted series, under the direction of Milburn Morante.

Bill Thomson recently completed his first picture for the James B. Leong Productions and has been engaged to direct the forthcoming twelve pictures that this company will make during the coming year.

Fred Caldwell has finished the continuity on the seven-reel feature picture that will soon start production for Commonwealth Pictures. C. E. Peters will photograph the feature.

C. W. Stater is expecting to return from Oklahoma this week, where he has been filming scenes for his eight-reel western feature that will soon go into production. This will be the third feature that Mr. Stater has produced in the past two years.

NEW REEL FORMED

Starland Revue, the name of a specially incorporated company formed in Albany, N. Y., recently with a capital of $20,000, intend making a new reel showing intimate glimpses of stage stars at play and at home somewhat along the lines of Screen Snapshots.

NAME OF AUSTRALIAN-LASKY UNIT CHANGED

The name of the Famous Players' company in Australia has been changed from Feature Films, Ltd., to Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., the name used by the British and Canadian distributing companies.

NEAL HART FINISHES FIFTH

The William Steiner Production Co. of San Antonio, Tex., has completed its fifth Western, starring Neal Hart.

Under a new contract, Clara Kimball Young will make five photoplays for Metro release within the next eighteen months.

Lee-Bradford if offering a series of six one-reel comedies said to be enacted entirely by squirrels.

The title of Fred Caldwell's latest production has been changed from "The Release" to the "Mystery Man."

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Frances Marion has returned from New York and is preparing the continuity for the Constance Talmadge starring production of "East is West," which will be under way in about three weeks. Director Sidney Franklin is now casting this production.

Director Frank Lloyd has engaged a six-piece orchestra to supply music during the filming of "Oliver Twist," starring Jackie Coogan.

Radio Chief O. S. Burns, of the Radio Station of the United States Navy at San Pedro, is installing a long-distance transmission wireless instrument on Allen Holubar's stage for use in the interior ship scenes in Dorothy Phillips' starring production, "Hurricane's Gal." The instrument is the same size as those used on battle ships.

The silk merchant in Persia who supplied the material for the costumes in the stage production of Richard Walton Tully's "Omar the Tentmaker," has shipped the fabrics to the studios that will be used in the forthcoming picturization of the play. The plate designs of the costumes have already been completed and approved by Mr. Tully.

Ruth Roland and the company that is supporting her in the filming of the Pathe serial, "The Riddle of the Range," are using the Chatsworth Park locations during the filming of the first episode. Interiors are being made at the studios.

The Lloyd Hamilton and Jack White units of the Hamilton-White Comedies have both finished their current series for Educational Pictures. After a short vacation they will commence production on their next series.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS NOTES

Robert C. Bruce, whose new series of Wilderness Tales are now being released, has returned to the Northwest to resume his work of making plays with scenic backgrounds.

The current issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, shows motion pictures of "where you'll live if you're president." For the first time White House officials have permitted the taking of motion pictures of the interior of the president's mansion, and the Kinograms "shots" show the famous East Room, the $22,000 piano, the Red Room, the china used by President Washington and President Lincoln, and the Diplomatic Room.

"The Skipper's Policy" is the latest release in the popular series of Toonerville Comedies, by Fontaine Fox.

AT VITAGRAPH

Under direction of David Smith, Alice Calhoun this week started the production of "Blue Blood," an original story by Graham Baker, head of the editorial forces. Bradley Smollen is responsible for the scenario.

Larry Semon is shooting interiors for his current two-reel comedy.

APRIL PLAYGOERS RELEASES

Playgoers Pictures, Inc., will release during April "A Pasteboard Crown," a Travers Vale production; "Sunshine Harbor" and "Lonesome Corners."

PLAYGOERS TO RELEASE "TRACKS"

A contract was recently closed by Playgoers with the Western Photoplay Corp. for the distribution of "Tracks," a Noble Johnson Production, which was directed by Joseph Franz.

Production Notes

TWEEDY COMPLETES FIRST

Tweedy has completed his first two-reel comedy for the Sanford Productions, Inc., at the Boyle Heights Studio, under the co-direction of himself and Frank S. Mattison.

This is Tweedy's first production on the west coast, his previous pictures having been made in the East and Europe. Dorothy Earle, his leading lady, and Director Frank S. Mattison, were with him last year when he produced the Mirth Comedy series.

The title of the first is "Fire! Fire!" and will be released on the state right market by Frank M. Sanford. There will be twelve in the series to be released one a month.

STROMBERG CASTING

The second Bull Montana comedy special for Hunt Stromberg productions under the working title, "Lowry from the Bowery," is now being cast, with production scheduled to begin next week. A third story entitled "Fifth Avenue," is in preparation.

HORNER AND WESTOVER WRITE ANOTHER FOR BURSTON

Louis Burston has accepted for early production another original story by Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover. It is temporarily titled, "The Greater Redemption," and will be made with an all-star cast, headed by David Butler. This will be the third Horner-Westover story Burston has purchased, the others being "The Milky Way," and "According to Hoyle." Another original story by these writers is "The Man from Downing Street," a recent Vitagraph release starring Earle Williams.

CALDWELL STARTING

Director Fred Caldwell and his manager, Mrs. A. B. Maescher, have completed casting for "The Night Life of Hollywood," a seven-reel drama whose cast includes such screen players as Gale Henry, Josephine Hill, Frank Glendon, Jack Connolly and Scotty King.

R-C TO RELEASE HY MAYER'S TRAVELAUGHS

Hy Mayer, cartoonist, has joined R-C Pictures. His Travelelaughs will be released by this organization one each week, beginning about April 23d.

Coincident with closing arrangements for the distribution of his Travelelaughs with R-C Pictures, Mr. Mayer has made plans for a tour around the world, in the course of which he will visit the capitals of Europe, Africa and Asia and many of the remote, out-of-the-way places in which he can procure novel material for presentation to the public.

The first Travelelaugh to be released under the new arrangement will be entitled "Such is Life in London." Another early release will be "Volendam" which takes the audience into a small Dutch town far from the "beaten path" of tourists and illustrates the quaint and picturesque life of the Hollanders.

SHOWING OF "FATE" RESTRAINED

An injunction, in Lawton, Okla., to restrain the showing of "Fate," the Clara Smith Hamon picture, has been made permanent.

REEL PRODUCTIONS NOW QUARTERED AT R-C

The Frederick Reel, Jr., Productions has moved from its old address on Boyle Heights where they have been working for the past few months and are now quartered at the Robertson-Cole Studio where special feature films will be made for R-C release. Mr. Reel's former staff will be with him during the filming of his forthcoming features.

ACHIEVEMENT SECURES DAWLEY

J. Searle Dawley is engaged in making a picture for Achievement Films, Inc., a Philadelphia company, at the Talmadge studio in New York.

Achievement made "The Power Within," which is being released by Pathe.

Scene from "Five Days to Live" at Pantages, Directed by Norman Dawn

ALL STAR CAST IN "THE CURSE OF DRINK"

Noted Dramas, Inc., recently completed "The Curse of Drink" in a New York studio under the direction of Harry O. Hoyt. In the cast are Harry Morey, Edmund Breese, George Fawcett, Marguerite Clayton, Alice May and Miriam Battista.

RECENT PATHE RELEASE

Late Pathe releases are: "The Mysterious Client," starring Irene Castle, next Pathe Playlets. "The Runaway Car," the third episode of "Go-Get-'Em Hutch," the new Pathe serial starring Charles Hutchison. "Bride and Gloom," re-issued one-reel comedy starring Harold Lloyd. "The Wicked Cat," latest animated cartoon of the series of Aesop's Film Fables. "Full O' Pep," Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard.

Resolutions condemning salacious films were adopted recently at the two day convention of the M. P. T. O. of Kentucky.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Miss Bradley King, staff writer, has commenced work on an original story that is expected to be one of the Ince feature releases for the coming year.

Douglas MacLean has started work on his next comedy-drama vehicle, "The Sunshine Trail," under the direction of James Horne. Among the members of the supporting cast are William Courtright, Josephine Sedgwick, Barney Furey and four-year-old Muriel Frances Dana.

Lambert Hillyer has finished taking several reels of forest fires in Northern California as a part of the background for "The Brotherhood of Hate."

MORE GERMAN PICTURES

A print of the Shakespearian tragedy, "Othello," produced in Germany, is in this country. It was brought over by K. J. Fritzsche, of the Transocean Film Co., of Berlin.

Emil Jannings is starred in "Othello," which was made by Woerner Films, and directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki.

Fritzsche has also brought over "Destiny," which Fritz Lang directed and in which Le Dagover appears.

"MIRAGE" FOR NORMA TALMADGE

Joseph Schenck recently purchased the rights to "The Mirage," by Edgar Selwyn for Norma Talmadge's next photoplay. "The Mirage," it will be remembered, was used as a starring vehicle for Florence Reed a few seasons ago.

CONTRACTS RENEWED

Earl W. Hammons, of Educational, recently renewed contracts with Christie for twenty-two two-reelers, with Mermaid for twelve two-reelers and with Lloyd Hamilton for six two-reelers.

LASKY SIGNS KANE

Famous Players-Lasky will soon have another Robert Kane in the organization. A contract has been signed with the actor who has the same name as the young man who acts in the capacity as assistant to Jesse Lasky. The contract calls for a year of Mr. Kane's services.

"PAL" BUSY

The canine actor, Pal, who plays with Max Linder in "Be My Wife," is at present working with Baby Peggy at the Century Comedy studios. Some of Pal's recent films are "Hot Dog," with Clyde Cook; "Playing Dead," with Earle Williams; "Rent Free," with Wallie Reid, and C. B. de Mille's "A Fool's Paradise."

Bennie Ziedman recently obtained an option on "The First Fifty Years" for screen privileges.

R-C Pictures will release "The Man Who Turned White," with H. B. Warner as "The Sheik of Araby."

It is said that Louis B. Mayer will soon start several all-star productions in addition to his John M. Stahl unit.

"Felix Makes Good" is the title of the third "Felix" cartoon series which is being state righted by M. J. Winkler.

Harold Bucquet, Allen Holubar's assistant director, has been with that producer during the last four years.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE HEART SPECIALIST"

(Realart-Paramount)

"The producers have capitalized on the sob-sister columns of the family newspapers to find a medium for Mary Miles Minter. While it carries its improbabilities, the story is a pleasing yarn which carries interest chiefly because it keeps going with plenty of vitality.

"The Heart Specialist' is a first rate comedy most of the way. It isn't heavy or weighted down with too much hokum. What appears is in good order to bring humor or adventure."—Motion Picture News.

"The Heart Specialist" promises to be a success chiefly because it is an expression of good showmanship Cleverly avoiding the frequent tendency of such productions which rely upon variety rather than theme, and because of that show a lack of organization, this feature has such fine continuity that the effect is complete entertainment at almost every minute. . . . In fact, the intrigue—and there is a good deal of it—is all of the very obvious and wicked order—but it has been punctuated with good comedy, is in the hands of interesting performers and has been so intelligently interpreted by the director that the results are very good."—Moving Picture World.

"Mary Morrison's story is rather a complicated affair, really a story within a story. There is any amount of plotting and mysterious angles that keep accumulating with such rapidity that you wonder how they will ever find a solution for all of them.

"In this connection the director has managed very well to build up an effective suspense and hold it satisfactorily until very close to the end. While it is all quite improbable, it is well done and provides a good entertainment for those who like it."—Film Daily.

SEEING'S BELIEVING

(Metro)

"A comedy of complications developed in refreshingly original style is provided by Metro in 'Seeing's Believing.' Most important of all, it's funny. Both in the matter of detail and in the way the big scenes are handled, it shows a spontaneity of imagination that is delightful."—Moving Picture World.

"They sort of knock the old adage contained in the title of this picture for a goal. 'Seeing's Believing' is a first rate little comedy-drama—one which affords the spectator no little amusement. Certainly he will notice that it carries a plot that can be called slightly different.

"The suggestion of humor is constantly manifesting itself. In fact the plot carries out the spirit of 'give and take' with sufficient gusto to delight most any crowd except those who are hopelessly hard-boiled. . . .

"While you can see the finish arriving far in advance, this is not detrimental to the interest. There is enough sparkle and dash to keep one from yawning. Some hokum appears in the country hotel but it is not overdone."—Motion Picture News.

"BEAUTY'S WORTH"

"Beauty's Worth,' a Cosmopolitan production, will be watched steadily from opening to closing scene. By sheer eye appeal the splendidly photographed settings and costumes insure this attention. In view of a rather obvious story and subtitles that seem not to belong to the narrative, this mechanical excellence is important."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"Director Robert Vignola and a noteworthy cast are mainly responsible for the success of this picture; Mr. Vignola for taking a slender plot and stretching it for a multiple reel feature when in reality there was material for only two or three reels; the cast for working honestly and conscientiously with roles that had few possibilities and by sheer force of personality, putting them over.

"It would seem that the picture might be cut to advantage, especially in the matter of excess titles that have a great deal to say about 'beauty,' 'beauty's worth,' etc."—Motion Picture News.

"Judged from a purely artistic standpoint 'Beauty's Worth' registers as a delight to the eye. . . . As a vehicle for exploiting the physical perfections of the star the picture accomplishes its purpose, but not much can be said for the story, which is woven of extremely thin cloth and lacking in human interest.

"There are many pretty outdoor views, a rich variety of handsome interiors and superb lighting effects. The continuity is unbroken and the action fast."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"UP AND GOING"

(Fox)

"Tom Mix is called upon to do many strenuous things in 'Up and Going' from playing a stiff game of polo to vanquishing a villain under water.

"Mix puts pep into his acting and with the naturalness of his supporting cast, the strong appeal of the settings and the beautifully rugged out-of-doors stuff, it is a thoroughly enjoyable film."—Exhibitors Herald.

"With 'Up and Going' coming right on top of 'Sky High,' it looks as if Tom Mix is out for a record. The newest release contains all the fine qualities of the last-mentioned with the possible exception of the pictorial values However, the latest offering releases some remarkable shots which are fully taken advantage of by an appreciative director.

"Mix appears as a polo player at his introduction and he shows his versatility in other directions besides his horsemanship and his skill with the trigger finger. He can paddle a birch canoe like a son of Deer-foot.

"The picture offers several thrills which take up man-to-man fights. The battle in the canoes and the struggle in the water is sufficiently picturesque to score everywhere. Of course the offering carries its padded scenes. In reality the climax is a long time coming, but the intervening moments are packed with enough punch to carry over the lapses."—Motion Picture News.

"In 'Up and Going' Tom Mix has used another one of his stories with a prologue. This time a story of the Canadian Northwest, bringing in lots of outdoor action and beautiful scenic effects. A slightly new departure for the star from his usual cowboy roles, but nevertheless providing ample opportunities in which he is able to display his style.

"Action in a Tom Mix picture means ACTION. In supplying this demand the director has overlooked no opportunity in which to get the most out of every situation. There is a bit of deft canoeing, a polo match and a thrilling fight under water. And of course there is the famous Mix horse.

"The scenes taken up through the Northwest are beautifully photographed and give a fine conception of the country in which the story is supposed to take place."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"TOO MUCH BUSINESS"

(Vitagraph)

"Vitagraph has a first rate entertainment in this Earl Derr Biggers story and one that offers decidedly amusing situations with fine comedy values. The original was called 'John Henry and the Restless Sex,' but Vitagraph has selected a shorter and equally effective title in 'Too Much Business,' and certainly an appropriate one. Biggers has conceived some thoroughly original ideas in the way of comic situations and supplied interesting and wholesome characters to carry them out."—The Film Daily.

This satire on American business gets the laughs from beginning to end. It is one of the best long comedies we have seen for a long time, and, what is more, the comedy situations haven't the appearance of being forced in by the scenario writer in hopes of getting a laugh. They fit in as a natural sequence to the action of the story, which makes them all the more laughable. It is really good clean comedy with the laughs kept in and the slapstick stuff kept out.

"The continuity is unbroken and the direction is so well handled that the action never becomes confused, but moves forward rapidly, telling the story in a manner that holds the interest of the spectator all the way through."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

CO-OPERATIVE PRODUCERS, INC.

Director Edgar Alexander has finished "Come On In," first offering of Co-operative Producers, Inc., and will immediately begin arrangements for the production of "Inner Fires," a story by Margaret Kingsley Goodrich written especially for Ethel Ritchey who is the featured star of "Come On In."

Mr. Alexander will direct and play opposite Miss Ritchey.

GLYN TO WRITE OF HOLLYWOOD

A new team of defenders of Hollywood was recently consummated in the persons of Elinor Glyn and Sol Lesser and arrangements have been completed between this pair, whereby Lesser will shortly produce a five-reel feature, an original comedy-drama written by Madame Glyn, entitled "The Eyes of Truth," in which the secondary theme will be an exposition of the real facts about much maligned Hollywood.

CAREWE DENIES ORIENT ENGAGEMENT

Denial of the report that he will make pictures in the Orient is made by Edwin Carewe.

Carewe points out that he is contracted to make a series of twelve productions under his own name for a syndicate headed by B. P. Fineman, Bennie Ziedman and C. C. Burr, and has but recently completed the first, "I Am the Law."

RAPF HAS BUSY SCHEDULE

Director Henry Rapf of Warner Bros. expects to begin operations at the Warner Bros. Studio by May 1st, on "From Rags to Riches," a Wesley Barry picture, upon the completion of which, another Barry special, "The Little Hero," will start production. Mr. Rapf will then turn his attention to "Brass," the Charles Norris novel, and "Main Street," Sinclair Lewis' famous book and play, which will follow in production.

LUBITSCH MAKING "PETER THE GREAT"

Ernst Lubitsch, German producer of historical films, is now at work on his next Famous Players-Lasky picture. This time he has chosen "Peter the Great" as his subject. Emil Jannings, who knows so well how to portray these characters of ancient and medieval history, has been selected for the role of Peter.

GOLDWYN TO RELEASE COMPSON PICTURE

Goldwyn announces the release in the near future of his third Betty Compson picture, an Egyptian romance written by Perley Poore Sheehan and bears the title of "Always the Woman."

APOLLO TO HANDLE GUNNING FILMS ABROAD

It is understood that the Apollo Trading Corp. is to control the foreign release of all productions handled by Wid Gunning, Inc.

In addition to the Gunning pictures already released, the Apollo Company will export a number of Victor Schertzinger films, the first of which, "Dollar Devils," has just been completed, all future Lois Weber productions, and the twelve productions to be made by Gunning.

HUNTER STARTS WORK

Production on Glenn Hunter's next picture, "The Second Fiddle," has started at the Glendale, L. I. Studio. The cast supporting Mr. Hunter will include Mary Astor, Helena Adamowska, Mary Foy, Townsend Martin, Leslie Stone, William Wally, Kenneth Murchinson and George Mitchell. Frank Tuttle is author and director of Mr. Hunter's next.

RECENT UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are:
"The Man Who Married His Own Wife," featuring Frank Mayo.

Fifteenth episode of "With Stanley in Africa," starring Geo. Walsh and Louise Lorraine.

Sixth episode of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," with Harry Myers.

"Loose Nuts."

International News Nos. 35 and 36.

"Red Hot Rivals," starring Lee Moran.

"A Guilty Cause," featuring Tom Sanschi.

THINGS TALKED ABOUT

From the Film-Express (German)

On Jan. 1 the "Agfa" ("Aktiengesellschaft fur Anilinfabrikation") has once more raised the price of raw film up to M. 9 pro. meter.

The Prussian cabinet has given cut directions in order to protect cinemas of too heavy taxes.

The "Projektions A-G. Unich," the oldest producing company of the German film-industry has had its annual meeting; in this company the Ufa holds the majority of the shares.

The "Lichtbildbuhne" is preparing a year-book of the German film industry which will be published in spring.

The Richard Oswald A. G. has increased capital from 7- to 12,000,000 M.

In view of the general scarcity new tariff negotiations are pending between employers and employees of the film industry.

The "Lichtbildbuhne" complained about the violations of German film monopolies being the rule in the Balkans and in Egypt.

In Koblenz the American army of occupation has been forbidden to visit any cinemas.

The Promo Film A. G. has increased capital from 5- to 12,000,000 M.

In Leipsic a distributing A. G. has been founded by exhibitors; the firm is called "Deutsche Vereins A. G."

The German film trade union has held her general meeting in Berlin.

The "Filmliga," an association for furthering good film production, protested against the high cinema taxes hampering the film industry in producing artistic film.

In November, 1921, Germany imported 11,000 kg. of exposed film, worth 2,973,000 M. The export of raw film amounted to 354,000 kg., worth 49,462,000 M., whilst 61,000 kg. of exposed film, worth 4,987,000 M., have been exported.

The Vienna firm, "Das Kino," has been transformed into a joint stock company with a capital of K 120000000. Thus the firm, disposing of 2 printing establishments and a modern studio, is the biggest Austrian enterprise.

In Gummersbach the "Film-Fabrik-Aktien-Ges." has been founded with a stock of M. 30,000,000 with a view to producing raw film. This foundation is of special importance, in view of the fact that the world's markets demand of raw film considerably surpasses the supply.

In January, 1922, the capital invested in the German film industry was increased by M. 24,270,500.

In December, 1921, Germany exported 16,500 kg. (2,475,000 m.) of exposed film, valued M. 13,975,000. As to rawfilm, 40,400 kg. (6,060,000 m.), worth M. 32,265,000 have been exported.

The Richard Oswald Film A. G. is preparing a new big film, "Lucrezia Borgia." This joint stock company has increased capital to M. 12,500,000 besides it was joined by the (new foundations): Conrad Veidt-Filmco Ltd., Nina Lizzafilmco, Ltd., Heinz Ullstein-Filmco, Ltd., Karl Mayer-Filmco., Ltd.

On Feb. 1 the London exhibitors voted for the raising of the ban of German films. All branches of the C. E. A. (with one exception) having voted against the ban, the British market should now be opened to the German films.

In view of the ever increasing prices new tariff negotiations were taking place between employers and employees of the German film industry. Some understanding was reached, the employers granting a 5 per cent increase of the wages, paid in December. Of course this is a new heavy burden on the film industry.

On Feb. 28, the raw film producers' and film industry's agreement re cheaper deliveries for the inland market terminated. The "Agfa" has declared not to be prepared to reeneter negotiations about different prices of raw film.

The railway strike which broke out beginning of February was rather disagreeable for renters and exhibitors.

In the extraordinary general meeting of the Terra-Film A. G. all motions (increase of stock from 16 to 25 millions, agreements with Eiko and Vita in Vienna) were unanimously carried.

A. George Smith, of Goldwyn, Ltd., (British), is in New York from London.

"The Splendid Outcast," is a new vehicle for John Gilbert.

William Fox recently subscribed $5,000 to the relief fund for Jewish sufferers.

"The Death Wagon," a Swedish Biograph production handled in this country by Metro, will be released in July.

O. J. Monat of Paris has produced a version of "Robinson Crusoe," in which Bani, an Italian actor, appears as Crusoe.

The state division of film censorship has barred from showing in Ohio "For His Mother's Sake," featuring Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion pugilist.

Warner Brothers have purchased foreign rights to "I Am the Law," the recently completed Edwin Carewe production for Affiliated Distributors, Inc.

The Charles E. Bartlett picture, "White Hell," has been completed in the East, and work has started on "The Shadow Eater." Richard Travers is starred in the series.

Mischa Guterson, musical director at Grauman's, recently visited Allen Holubar's stage and played several numbers for Dorothy Phillips while she was playing an emotional scene.

Lloyd Bacon, scenario writer for Mermaid Comedies, will be seen in support of Lloyd Hamilton in his latest picture for the Educational-Mermaid series. Mr. Bacon has appeared in several screen comedies, but lately has been devoting his attention to scenario writing. Mr. Bacon and Mr. Hamilton played together on the spoken stage about twelve years ago.

clined, at His Majesty's, and that you could find Shaw and Hauptmann and Galsworthy and Barker any night at The Court.

"Out of the present state of flux, what is coming? Why do John Drinkwater and St. John Ervine and Lennox Robinson give us plays so seldom?"

"Why are we baffled and confused by a succession of revues that change, not only their programmes, but their personalities every week or so? Why are Mr. Cochran and others compelled to scour the Continent for Spanish beauties, Peruvian comedians, Chinese acrobats? Personality has for the moment, at any rate, gone out of our theatre, and I for one believe that it will not really come back to it again until we have people running our theatres commercially, as well as artistically and dramatically, who know something about the art of the theatre as well as about the returns of the box office."

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912

Of Camera! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry, published weekly at Los Angeles, California, for April 1, 1922.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and County aforesaid, personally appeared Raymond Cannon, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Publisher of the Camera! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the pub-

English Block Booking

Last week we read what Hugh Walpole thinks of the English stage today as contrasted with its past glories. He admitted that the cinema had helped to bring about its deterioration by crowding it in various quarters. Here we have an equally interesting report upon the English picture system than which there is none more important save our own. Wid's Daily offers the following extracts from a confidential communication to the U. S. Department of Commerce from Wilfred G. Eyre, a clerk in the American Consulate at Washington:

"During the past few weeks there have been many reports in the newspapers and elsewhere in regard to the alleged falling off in the attendance of cinema theaters in the United Kingdom, which is attributed to the inferior class of films which is now being shown before the public. As regards London, it is certainly true that even at the best cinema theaters, a very inferior class of film is being exhibited in comparison to a year ago.

"In the United Kingdom there are 4,000 cinema theaters as opposed to the 20,000 in the United States. As, practically, the entire American film output is booked for exhibition in the United Kingdom, it is inevitable that such a system must be adopted. In addition, there are on the market a large number of British films (produced by British companies, photographed in England and featuring English actors), as well as films produced on the continent, moreover, British exhibitors frequently book the entire output for the year of some well known company, such as The Famous Players or Gaumont, without seeing any of the pictures, but relying merely on the past reputation of such firms, and the drawing power of their names. It is obvious that in the annual output of such companies which may amount to 50 or 60 pictures, there must be some failures. Where, in the United States, such failures would be shelved forever, in the United Kingdom they are shown because they have already been booked, and it is natural that the public after seeing a number of such failures, should become discouraged and stay away from the cinema altogether. Moreover, the British films which have been shown to date are inferior to the good American productions. And the patriotism which prompts the exhibitors to show British films, is not responded to by the public who are willing to pay provided they get their movie's worth in amusement.

"The London County Council has recently issued certain new regulations in regard to the censorship of films, of which the two most important provisions are as follows:

"(1) After January 2nd, no films are to be exhibited in any theater holding a Council license unless they have been previously passed by the British Board of Film Censors.

"(2) After July 1, 1922, no person under the age of 16, unless accompanied by a parent or bona fide guardian, shall be present at any theater, where films passed by the Board for 'public' or 'adult,' but not for 'Universal' exhibition, are shown. Films are divided by the Board of Censors into two classes, those called 'A,' which are suitable for adults only, and those called 'U,' which the Board considers suitable for universal exhibition.

"It is evident that block-booking is, to a great extent, responsible for a number of very inferior films being shown. The public, certainly, in any case, as regards London, is as anxious as ever to patronize the silent drama as long as there are good plays to see. The fact remains that many of the foremost picture houses in London are suffering from considerable loss of patronage. This must be due to the class of picture shown. The largest and most luxuriously appointed cinema theaters in the United Kingdom are found in the Provincial towns of England such as Manchester, Bradford, Leeds and Liverpool, though none of them compares in size and comfort with the Capitol in New York.

"These vary considerably according to the tone of the theater and the class of film which is being shown. Admission to the regular first class cinema theaters in London range from 1/3d. 5/6d. Second class cinemas charge —6d. to 2/— or 3/—. At the Royal Opera House and the Empire where 'The Three Musketeers' and 'Way Down East' were shown respectively, 13/— were charged for the most expensive seats, which is the regular West-End theater price."

Film Capital Production Notes

HOLLYWOOD FILM PREVIEWED

Representative motion picture celebrities of Hollywood saw themselves as others see them this week when Robert E. Sherwood, screen critic of "Life" and contributor to numerous national magazines, gave a special preview at the Beverly Hills Hotel of his unusual film review, "Through Darkest Hollywood with Gun and Camera," with an accompanying lecture.

The lecture and picture are to be presented in a number of Eastern cities during the coming few months, Sherwood being booked for an extensive lecture tour which will open before the University Club of St. Louis. His appearances will be chiefly before clubs and civic organizations.

Among the notables attending the preview were Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Madge Bellamy, Douglas MacLean, Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton, Elliott Dexter, Bradley King, Tom Moore, Gloria Swanson, Colleen Moore, Florence Vidor, King Vidor, Frank R. Adams, Barbara LaMarr and many others.

Sherwood's film was produced at the Thomas H. Ince Studios.

STAHL WANTS STORIES

Having completed the cutting and titling of "One Clear Call," his latest First National production for Louis B. Mayer, Director John M. Stahl is now looking for a story for his next picture. Human interest is the principal requisite for these vehicles, but they must also have regular, every day sort of people for characters, a strong climax and a consistently good, logical plot.

PREMIUM PICTURES, INC., STARTS INITIAL PRODUCTION

The Premium Pictures Corporation, a Portland, Oregon, concern, has leased and enlarged the Bisbee, Ariz., studio, and has now started on its first of eight pictures to be made there. Harry Moody is directing and the principal players are Hugh Saxon, character actor, Jack Livingston and Mary Wynn, leads, and Al Ferguson, heavy.

The pictures are to be screened from western stories and many of the exteriors will be taken in Mexico.

SECOND GOLDWYN-HAMPTON RELEASE READY

Benjamin B. Hampton's second contribution to the Goldwyn program, released in the same group as "When Romance Rides," is an adaptation of another story by the same author, Zane Grey. At present it is called "Golden Dreams," but this title may be changed before the picture reaches the theatres. Three directors were associated with Mr. Hampton in making this production, Jean Hersholt, Gus Peterson, and C. O. Rush.

REAGUER FINISHES FIRST

"Slow and Easy," the initial picture produced by the Reaguer Production Company, and featuring Billie Armstrong is finished and ready to be shipped East. Production on the second picture, which is titled "Never Too Late," will be started Monday.

NAPOLEON FILMS IN NEW YORK

Two productions dealing with the life of Napoleon are in New York at the present time. One of them is the picture made in France and called "The Agony of the Eagles," for which Stoll, of England, recently purchased British rights. The other is "Napoleon's Son," understood to be an Austrian production.

OBTAINS OPTION

It is understood that Bennie Zeidman has purchased an option on the screen rights to "The First Fifty Years," now playing at the Princess in New York.

"Torchy's Shoes" is the new Torchy comedy now in production at Burr's Glendale Studio.

RUBAIYAT PEACE ATTAINED

The dove of peace laid the olive sprig at the feet of Omar Khayyam's cinema re-incarnation recently after stockholders in Rubaiyat, Inc., participated in the annual election of a board of directors.

Preliminary to the election Ferdinand Earle and Herbert D. Newcomb, retiring respectively as vice-president and secretary-treasurer, withdrew from consideration for re-election in the interests of executive harmony. There was nominated and separately elected by unanimous ballots Theodore Ahrens, Frank S. Coates and A. J. Stone to guide the corporation for the ensuing year.

A friendly adjustment was entered into which covered the disposal of the unused negative film, releasing arrangements, and the story's copyright.

The statement of the president disclosed that $174,735 has been expended in producing "The Rubaiyat," in which Messrs. Ahrens and Earle are the heaviest stockholders.

RAY NOT IN MARKET FOR ORIGINAL SCENARIOS

Charles Ray will adhere to a policy of filming only published fiction and successful stage plays in the series of productions he is making for United Artists. He says, "I am only appearing in two photoplays a year under my United Artists contract, and have already secured vehicles for the next two years."

"I will not be on the market for 'original' scenarios, and—owing to the element of time—our scenario department will return all 'originals' without reading them."

Ray is now starring in "A Tailor Made Man," the filming of which is about half completed. Joseph DeGrasse is directing.

PATHE ADDS NEW SERIES

Elmer Pearson, General Manager of Pathe Exchange, announces that Pathe will add a new series of specially prepared two-reel Western features to its weekly releases—the "Santa Fe Mac" stories featuring Leo D. Maloney.

Mr. Maloney's previous work on the screen is recalled in "The Girl and the Game," "Whispering Smith," "Medicine Bend," "Judith of the Cumberlands," "Manager of the B. and A.," "A Lass of the Lumberlands," "The Overland Disaster," "The Lost Express," "A Fight for Millions," "The Spitfire of Seville," and "The Arizona Catclaw."

Ford I. Beebe is associated with Mr. Maloney and will direct the series.

FINAL TITLE FOR CUMMINGS-CHANEY PRODUCTION

"Flesh and Blood" is the final title of the current Irving Cummings production starring Lon Chaney, heretofore called "Fires of Vengeance," which will be completed in the near future and will be released shortly thereafter.

Assisting Irving Cummings in the direction is his wife, known professionally as Ruth St. Clair, who recently finished playing opposite Guy Bates Post in Richard Walton Tully's production of "The Masquerader."

American Releasing will distribute "The Hidden Woman," made by Allan Dwan.

Current Reviews

"A VIRGIN PARADISE"

California

Whether one takes "A Virgin Paradise" in the light of an insult to modern intelligence and drama or merely as a delightfully fanciful piece of celluloid diversion, it must be admitted the radical production of the month. Perhaps as much should have been expected when Fox undertook the filming of Hiram Percy Maxim's story of the wilds with energetic Pearl White starring. Nevertheless we admit the indescribable shock that its showing brought to us—a shock entirely unprepared for.

Introducing a young white woman, self raised in solitude upon a deserted South Sea island, the story pictures her cavorting playfully with a half dozen lions before she is taken back to civilization and a fortune, both of which she accepts in open rebellion. Thereafter perhaps the most vicious fight ever recorded upon celluloid is engaged in by the wild woman and her chief male tormentor. A huge punch lies in the girl's victory, largely on account of the rarity of such situations. In addition, an element of genuine romance does much to humanize the entire photoplay besides adding the necessary heart interest. Exceptionally good direction of the big fight sequence must be credited to J. Searle Dawley, who has gotten all possible in the way of vividness and suspense out of it.

Miss White does an unusual thing for a serial star in Gratia Latham, the lonely island dweller. She characterizes her role with equal consistency through its serious and comedy moments. She is for this reason convincing in the unsophisticated but highly independent young female.

Robert Elliott's work in Bob Alan, the masculine lead, is only meant to form the star's romantic background, but he has two or three excellent moments which he handles correctly.

Another sympathetic portrayal is well done by J. Thornton Baston, who is seen as Slim, a reformed ex-crook.

The serial type of heavy is called forth in Bernard Holt, a callous gentleman who feels no qualms at knocking a young millionairess unconscious with a pugilistic upper cut. The part is filled by Alan Edwards.

Henrietta Floyd, Grace Beaumont, Lynn Pratt, Lewis Seeley, Charles Fulton and Hal Clarendon are the other players in "A Virgin Paradise."

"FIND THE WOMAN"

Grauman's Rialto

Cosmopolitan's screen version of Arthur Somers Roche's "Find the Woman," has even less to recommend it than the original which was far removed from the brilliant novel class.

In Doty Hobart's adaptation the plot as well as the characters have been re-vamped, although some of the situations remain recognizable. Nevertheless it is still a murder mystery story without any great accent on the mystery. Too many characters divide the sympathy to allow anyone a satisfactory quota. It lacks sadly in real entertainment value, both from the standpoints of human interest and suspense.

Alma Rubens plays Sophie Carey, the second part in the novel. It is a straight, merely a link in the final chain of evidence.

Clancy Deane, the original's principal, is in the hands of Eileen Huban. Her footage is so cut as to ruin the importance of the part as previously written. She is just another link.

George McQuarrie and Harrison Ford also in unvaried, straight positions play opposite the actresses, with Henry Sedley in the one known heavy, Don Carey.

RUTH ASHBY
Who Plays "Julia" in "My Lady Friends"

Ethel Duray, Norman Kerry, Arthur Donaldson and Sidney Deane are excellent types for the Broadway couple the theatrical agent and the detective.

Tom Terries directed "Find the Woman," a task which must have been nerve-racking, to say the least. He finally pieced it together very well, all things considered.

The photoplay is a Paramount release.

"PAY DAY" AND "MY LADY FRIENDS"

Kinema

Charlie Chaplin's latest two-reeler for First National, "Pay Day," headlines the Kinema bill this week, occasioning more enthusiastic laughter than any recently-shown comedy. New gags ingeniously twisted out of old ones and enhanced by Chaplin's priceless repetition jam every foot of the little picture. A constant chuckle interspersed with repeating bursts of something near unto hysteria issues from the delighted audience as it views the quaint capers of this truly unique artist, while he employs the pick and shovel of a modest laborer, devours his fellow workman's lunch, miscounts his pay envelope and returns to his cheerless home after a night at the Bachelor's Club. The little comedian of the screen is truly a great thespian.

"Pay Day" is infinitely more amusing than "The Idle Class." In it, Chaplin, who was both author and director as is his custom, is assisted by Edna Purviance, Mack Swayne, Phyllis Allen and Sidney Chaplin.

The remainder of the Kinema photoplay hour is occupied by the Carter de Haven's film version of "My Lady Friends," the stage farce, by Emily Nytray and Frank Mandell, prepared for them by Rex Taylor.

Full of good situations and given interesting settings, the picture seems to have been inordinately rushed in the taking, a fact which keeps it in the mediocre class. Its most inexcusable example of carelessness lies with the title writer who repeatedly misspells and fails to punctuate his titles. With rare consistency he substitutes the plural for the singular possessive form of his nouns.

John Smith, a millionaire publisher of Bibles, gets himself into untold difficulty through an attempt to spread a little harmless sunshine in the lives of three modern maidens by financing their artistic educations. John is a devoted married man, but it seems hard for him to prove the fact. Carter De Haven plays the part in good form and evokes considerable mirth with it.

Mrs. De Haven, as his unnecessarily economical, plain, little wife, lends the proper balance to the renowned team assisted greatly by Helen Raymond and Thomas Lingham in their married friends.

Helen Lynch, May Wallace, Ruth Ashby and Clara Morris complete the players in "My Lady Friends," which was directed by Lloyd Ingraham and is distributed by First National.

"THE LANE THAT HAD NO TURNING"

Grauman's

The chiefly notable thing about "The Lane That Had No Turning," is the interpretation par excellence in it of an actor who has long played small supporting business at the Lasky Studio, Theodore Kosloff.

Besides his remarkable offering the facts that this is a Paramount picture, that it stars Agnes Ayres and was adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's original by Eugene Mullin, may prove of some added value in attracting attendance. Generally the French Canadian drama based upon the undying quality of a woman's love, has been well presented by its director, Victor Fleming, who is greatly assisted to his success through the superior photography and good detail work that are demanded by the Lasky technical standard.

Miss Ayres enacts Madelinette Racine, a talented young wife whose love and loyalty demand that she abandon her operatic career and devote every thought to the husband who has become a hunchback. The star's sincerity in her interpretation of that all enduring love which is granted a few in this world should satisfy the most critical and is, by the way, a great improvement over her recent efforts.

It is Kosloff as Louis Racine, the unfortunate and tempestuous object of Madelinette's affections, however, who reaches the heights with his portrayal. An ambitious man wholly in love, he faces alone the prospect of becoming repulsive to his adored wife as his infirmity grows upon him. To hold her he will acquire great power and cut a splendid figure in their little world. His appreciation of her tactful kindness, his continually pained pride and intense jeal-

HORTON IN SECOND SCREEN VEHICLE

After having played in stock for eight years, during which time he had such leading women as Dorothy Dalton, Ethel Clayton, Ethel Grey Terry, Winifred Kingston, Leona Powers, Sue McNamany and others, Edward Everett Horton finally accepted an offer of the Jess Robbins Productions to play in "Too Much Business," the six-reel light comedy now being distributed by Vitagraph. Horton is at present continuing his stock engagement with the Wilkes Company at the Majestic Theatre and working before the camera during his spare time. His second screen subject is temporarily titled "The Ladder Jinx," and is being made by the Jess Robbins Productions from the story by Edgar Franklin.

Mr. Horton's engagement with Dorothy Dalton and Ethel Grey Terry was at Portland, Maine. He played with Sue McNamany at Albany and Ethel Clayton and Winifred Kingston with the Orpheum Players at the Chestnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia.

ADDITIONS TO PALMER STAFF

Howard Faye, former production manager for Peerless Pictures, Inc., and who has served as technical director with Ethel Clayton, Tom Forman, Sam Wood, Robert Warwick, Gloria Swanson and others, has joined the Advisory Bureau of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation of Los Angeles. Mr. Faye's work in connection with the Department of Education of this institution will be under the supervision of Mr. Eugene B. Lewis, Editor-in-Chief. Eugene Baylan, magazine writer and Theodore Oliver are two other acquisitions to the personnel of the Palmer Advisory Bureau.

CAST FOR MURRAY FILM

Monte Blue, Ward Crane, Raymond Bloomer, Alma Tell, Maude Turner Gordon and Charles Lane have been engaged for the new Mae Murray production, "A Broadway Rose," which is now in production.

STEWART IN WILSON'S NEXT

Roy Stewart has been engaged to enact the leading male role in the next Ben Wilson production, the working title of which is "Daybreak."

NEW BRITISH COMPANY SIGNS CRISP

Donald Crisp, who went to London for Paramount, has been engaged to direct there for the Bird Film Co., a new releasing organization which also plans some production.

FAWCETT IN PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Famous Players recently signed George Fawcett on a year's contract to do character roles. Fawcett leaves New York for the coast shortly.

Elinor Fair is interpreting the leading feminine role in Clifford S. Elyett's latest photoplay for Metropolitan Productions entitled "High Stakes."

Marjorie Miller is assisting Allen Holubar with the cutting of his production of "Hurricane's Gal," in which Dorothy Phillips is starred.

WITH DE HAVENS

May Wallace has been engaged by Carter De Haven to play the part of Mr. De Haven's mother in the first of a series of twelve two-reel domestic comedies to be produced by the De Haven company at the R-C Studios.

PICKFORD ENGAGES HARRIS

Mary Pickford has engaged Elmer Harris, play and photoplaywright, until recently in charge of production at the Realart Studio, as supervising-editor of all her productions. Mr. Harris will act hereafter as chief counsel in matters pertaining to Pickford photoplays.

The Harris' photoplays include, "The March Hare," "Ducks and Drakes," and "The Speed Girl," all starring Bebe Daniels; he is also author of "Sham," produced first as a stage play and subsequently used as a screen vehicle for Ethel Clayton.

Aside from preparing a photoplay for Jack Pickford, Mr. Harris will also co-operate with John S. Robertson, who has been engaged to direct Miss Pickford in her very latest, "Tess of the Storm Country," which will go into production within the next two weeks.

GOLDWYN ADDS TO STAFF

Alice D. G. Miller, author of "The Fourteenth Lover" and other screen stories, has been added to the Goldwyn scenario department, of which Paul Bern is editor. Miss Miller, who was formerly associated with D. W. Griffith, is having a hard time keeping her mail from getting confused with that of Alice Duer Miller, the novelist, who recently spent several weeks at the Goldwyn studio while writing "The Man with Two Mothers."

TULLY SECURES FAIRE

The role of Shireen, the heroine of "Omar the Tentmaker," Guy Bates Post's second starring vehicle and the second motion picture to be produced by Richard Walton Tully, will be portrayed by Virginia Brown Faire. Miss Faire recently appeared in the ingenue lead in "Doubling for Romeo," the lead in "Without Benefit of Clergy," "Fighting Mad," and "The Count of Monte Christo."

LASKY SIGNS CAIN

Robert Cain has signed a year's contract with Famous Players to play leading roles.

Dick Johnson has sold his interest in the Boyle Heights Studio and has affiliated with "Tweedy" Comedies.

E. K. Lincoln heads the cast in "The Price of Her Ambition," the initial production of the newly organized Genius Film Corp.

Forrest Halsey has been engaged by Edgar Selden, of Worth While Pictures, to prepare the script for "On the Banks of the Wabash," for Madge Evans.

Primrose Carryl, daughter of Ivan Carryl, the composer, will make her first appearance on the screen with William Farnum in "Shackles of Gold."

Henry E. Wilkinson, formerly with Realart and the A. S. Kane Pictures Corp., has been appointed special representative for Century Comedies.

DEVORE TO APPEAR AT GRANADA

Dorothy Devore will play her first engagement on the stage since joining Christie Comedies three years ago, during the week beginning April 23rd, at the Granada Theatre, San Francisco, the newest of the moving picture theatres operated in the Bay City by Roth and Partington.

Miss Devore will be at the Granada all week in connection with the first showing in San Francisco of the latest Christie Comedy in which she is featured which is "Fair Enough," and her appearance in San Francisco is being arranged by G. C. Blumenthal, manager for Educational Pictures in that city.

RAY SINGS PRAISES OF MARY PICKFORD

When Mary Pickford sold Charles Ray the screen rights to "A Tailor Made Man," it was the first time in cinema history that one star sold another a story coveted by both.

Says Ray, "No one can ever say that the United Artists is a misnomer, for Miss Pickford sold me a story which she knew had long been the apple of my eye, and without making a cent of profit."

Several times in the past—before "A Tailor Made Man" passed into Miss Pickford's hands—Charles Ray had negotiated for the purchase of the play, but had always encountered one stumbling block or another.

EASTERN DIRECTORS ORGANIZE

The assistant directors in the East met recently for the purpose of forming an association, similar to the one now existing here. Bert Sutch, who is D. W. Griffith's assistant, was made chairman of the meeting with Walter R. Sheridan acting as secretary. Among those present were: Ben Behrens, George Kleine, Warren Fromme, Joseph Boyle, Charles Berner, Frank Bates, Eddie James, Al Reibach, Charles Van Arsdale, Billy Hamilton, Eddie Lawrence, Chaddy Graham, William Harvey and Cullen Tate.

MACLEAN CHOSEN FESTIVAL RULER

The raisin growers at Fresno, California, have elected Douglas MacLean to be crowned king of their annual Raisin Day Festival which will be celebrated on April 27th.

The most beautiful girl in central California is being selected to ride with MacLean as queen of the pageant. For the past several years various stars of filmdom have appeared as rulers of the festival. MacLean was the unanimous choice of the committee in charge of this year's event.

Harold Lloyd has added "Mickey" Daniel, 7-year-old youngster, to the cast of his current comedy under production at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Natalie Johnson, formerly with the Zeigfeld Follies, has been engaged by Al Christie and is already appearing before the camera in a Christie Comedy which is to feature Dorothy Devore.

DESMOND IN ACCIDENT

While on location at Truckee, William Desmond, star in the most recent Universal serial which started production this week, fell from an ice-covered cliff 50 feet into the river below and was seriously hurt.

Production is temporarily discontinued.

GENEVIEVE BARTON

FIRST MEETING OF M. P. P. D. A. HELD

The first meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., was held recently in New York at the offices of the association. The following companies were elected distributing members together with the individuals designated to represent them:

Educational Films Corp., by Earl W. Hammons.

Famous Players-Lasky by Adolph Zukor.

Fox Film Corp., by William Fox.

Goldwyn Pictures Corp., by Frank Godsol.

Metro Pictures Corp., by Marcus Loew.

Selznick Corp., by Lewis J. Selznick.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., by Carl Laemmle.

Vitagraph Co. of America, by John M. Quinn.

One producer was selected, Joseph M. Schenck. The above named individuals comprise the board of directors. They elected the following officers: Will H. Hays, President; Courtland Smith, Secretary.

Allan Cavan is included in the cast of the forthcoming Harold Lloyd comedy, as yet untitled.

Walter Higby is playing a part in "The Ladder Jinx," which is being filmed by Jesse Robbins Productions at the Fine Arts Studios.

Wilbur McGaugh will appear as an Indian heavy in the new Ben Wilson photoplay temporarily titled "Daybreak," which is about to start production.

RADIOPHONE AIDS "ONE CLEAR CALL"

Taking advantage of the radiophone as an aid in film making, Watterson R. Rothacker, head of the film printing and developing concern bearing his name, recently held an "air conference" from his Chicago office with Louis B. Mayer, producer, and John M. Stahl, director, at the Mayer Studios relative to the "Matching-up" and printing of "One Clear Call."

FILM ROW TO GIVE DANCE

For the first time since South Olive street became known as Film Row, the employees of the various exchanges will get acquainted at a Film Row Dance to be held on the evening of May 13th. Hale Dewey's Orchestra has been engaged to furnish music, while various contests and surprise features are being arranged in order to lend variety to an enjoyable dance program.

VACATIONING

Lloyd Hamilton, Jack White, Lloyd Bacon and General Manager E. H. Allen, of Hamilton-White Comedies, will leave for New York late this week for a month's vacation. Upon their return to United Studios they will resume production on their contract with Educational Pictures.

Edward "Hoot" Gibson, the Universal star, was married last week to Helen Johnson, a vaudeville actress.

Helen Gibson has left for Minneapolis, where she is to appear personally in conjunction with her latest screen production, "The Wolverine."

J. Aldrich Libbey, singer, who made "After the Ball," and "Two Little Girls in Blue," popular many years ago, is now a Hollywood resident.

W. G. Logan, business manager of the Cosmosart Studios, is President of the Logan Wholesale Drug Corp., operating a chain of retail stores in Southern California.

A. Carle Palm, laboratory expert for Richard Walton Tully, has returned from New York, where he went with a print of "The Masquerader," and will superintend the laboratory work on "Omar the Tentmaker."

An entire "African village" was consumed by flames the other day at Universal City for a spectacular scene in "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," starring Harry Myers.

Kathryn Martin, of the Joseph M. Schenck business staff, is assisting Frances Marion with the script of the Constance Talmadge production of "East is West," which will be commenced in two weeks.

Director John Griffith Wray and his Ince company are having quite a lark—at least the American small boy would greatly covet their experience. They have been following a three-ring circus around California taking realistic scenes for "Someone to Love," a production that has much of its "atmosphere" under the big "tops."

AT UNITED

Lou Anger, general manager of the Joseph M. Schenck production units, has returned from a trip to San Francisco on business, and is busy preparing for the forthcoming Norma and Constance Talmadge productions.

For the first time in his screen career, Jackie Coogan is working at night. Frank Lloyd, who is directing "Oliver Twist," wanted the proper effects for the night street scenes, and arranged to have the diminutive star set aside five evenings for the purpose.

Stephen Goossen, who designed the settings for the Coogan production of "Oliver Twist," has returned to his desk at the Joseph M. Schenck offices and is engaged in sketching the sets for Constance Talmadge's production of "East is West," and Norma Talmadge's "The Mirage."

Wilfred Buckland, who designed the sets for Douglas Fairbanks' "Spirit of Chivalry," has resumed his association with Richard Walton Tully and is preparing for the Guy Bates Post starring production of "Omar the Tentmaker." Virginia Brown Faire will play opposite Mr. Post and James Young will direct.

Allen Holubar is progressing with the editing of the production for his next First National release, "Hurricane's Gal," in which Dorothy Phillips is starred.

Chester Bennett will finish the Jane Novak starring production of "The Snow Shoe Trail" this week.

A mammoth cave has been constructed on the exterior acreage at the studios for the Pathe serial, "The Riddle of the Range," in which Ruth Roland is starred.

AT THE COSMOSART STUDIOS

The Danny Hogan productions will start this week on the first of a series of multiple reel productions.

Work is expected to start presently on the first of the B. B. Hampton photoplays to be filmed at these studios.

The Beverly Film Association, a recently formed million dollar corporation, is expected to begin operations soon on five-reel subjects.

Mr. J. E. Bowen, President, and Frank M. Willard, Publicity Manager, contemplate a trip that will include the big cities of the East, in the interests of forthcoming Cosmorama releases.

Natural locations and waterways, together with rivers, lakes, running streams, water falls, forestry, and shrubbery of all kinds, are to be found on the premises of the studios.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan started production this week on a new picture in which he will co-star with Edith Johnson. Duncan assumes the roles of a Northwest guide and also that of an English nobleman.

Director David Smith is putting the finishing touches to the current Alice Calhoun story, entitled "Blue Blood," production of which he expects to complete next week.

The final title selected for Earle Williams' recently completed picture is "Restless Souls."

Corinne Griffith has just finished her current production entitled "A Virgin's Sacrifice."

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"Paul" Parrott is busy with his current comedy, production of which started recently. Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker are chief support and Jim Davis is directing.

Harold Lloyd has completed work on the opening sequence of his current production, as yet untitled, and has started on the second.

"Fire Fighters," the name of a two-reel comedy of "His Rascals," the kiddie-animal company, had a studio preview this week and also a showing at Ocean Park.

Tom McNamara is writing the story which will constitute the fourth vehicle in the series of pictures which feature the kiddie-animal company. The third story is now under production.

TOM BATES

C. H. "Duke" Wellington, artist of the comic strips "Pa's Son-In-Law," who sits in as "gag" man with the scenario writers for "Snub" Pollard and "Paul" Parrott, is back again at the studios after an absence of several weeks.

Harry "Snub" Pollard has started work on a new picture in which he is supported by Noah Young and Marie Mosquini. Al Santell is directing.

CHRISTIE STUDIO NOTES

The company, making a new comedy which will feature Dorothy Devore, is just back from a week at Craigs Country Club, in the hills west of Calabasas, where about half of the exteriors of the picture were made.

The previous week, Christie and several members of his staff visited Tia Juana to look over the race track, which will be used in another "location" comedy to be produced in the near future. Last month Christie completed "Cold Feet," which was filmed at Truckee, and next week he will check up on locations in Chinatown at San Francisco for a Chinese Comedy to be filmed there.

"Hickory Hick," featuring Bobby Vernon has been completed under the direction of Harold Beaudine. Charlotte Stevens supports Vernon in this picture which will be released through Educational exchanges June 4th. The comedy was written by Robert Hall who is now with the regular studio scenario staff.

AT THE R-C STUDIOS

When that megaphoned command resounded on several of the big stages of the R-C Pictures Corporation recently, co-operative photoplay production became a fact for the first time in the history of the motion picture industry. P. A. Powers recently backed up a succinct statement of a sharing basis for stars and directors, made a few weeks ago, on his arrival here from New York after acquiring a controlling interest in the R-C organization, by announcing the inauguration of such a policy with the following stars and units contracted for: Ethel Clayton, former Paramount star; Harry Carey, exponent of Western roles; Doris May, who continues with R-C; Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven resuming their domestic comedies after a year's retirement from the screen; Jane Novak, who will be featured in outdoor dramas; Chester Bennett productions, in some of which Miss Novak will appear with other stars to be announced later; Helen Jerome Eddy, who will be featured in plays of spiritual significance.

Continuity for the second of the Norman Dawn series is in preparation.

Miss Clayton will make six comedy dramas a year. Her first vehicle will be announced in a few days. Miss Clayton's last Paramount release was "The Cradle," but another, "For the Defense," has been completed and will soon be given to the public.

Mr. Carey will produce six typically Western features for R-C annually. "Man to Man" is the most recent screen offering of this star. Val Paul will direct him.

Doris May has just completed her fifth R-C production, "An Unusual Honeymoon," and is about to start her sixth, with option on her further services by the new regime.

The first of the new series of De Haven comedies is based on a script entitled "They're Off!" This unit was the first one to start operations on the co-operative basis. All the De Haven productions will be in two reels. Mrs. De Haven, once known to the stage as Flora Parker, shares acting honors with her husband. Malcolm St. Clair is directing.

Jane Novak's first R-C subject will be made under the direction of Chester Bennett. Edison Marshall's book, "The Snowshoe Trail," as scenarized by Marion Fairfax, will introduce her as an R-C star. "Colleen of the Pines" will be her second starring vehicle. Further Chester Bennett productions are also provided for.

Helen Jerome Eddy, who recently appeared in an R-C release made by Brentwood, "The Turn of the Road," returns to the fold as the star of Ray Carroll's own unit. Miss Carroll was associated with Thomas Ince and Cecil de Mille in an advisory capacity and was originally a scenarist for those producers. It was she who wrote "The Call of the Blood" for Vitagraph, a five reel photoplay which featured Maurice Costello and Florence Turner, favorites of their day. Miss Eddy has written her own story for her first R-C production. Tentatively it is titled, "A Slice of Life." Winifred Dunn, of the R-C staff, is preparing the continuity.

Mr. Powers has selected Robert Thornby to direct six all-star features a year. Mr. Thornby has several Famous Players and Hampton releases to his credit.

Mr. Powers is now enroute for New York where he will arrange for increased distribution facilities.

With recent blanket arrangement made by R-C with the United Studios, affording access to that vast storehouse of scenic wealth, the co-operative organization will find ample accommodation for its multiplied units.

SHIPMAN PRODUCTION NOTES

Nell Shipman Productions, Inc., has taken a two year lease on the studio plant of the Pan American Film Company, Minnehaha Park, Spokane, Wash.

Miss Shipman and Bert Van Tuyle, co-directors of the next Nell Shipman picture, "The Grub Stake," an out of doors tale of the Northwest, are at present in the heart of the big Northwest wilderness filming their out-of-doors scenes, which will compose eighty per cent of the picture.

The studio will be used for the interiors, and offers easy access to the heart of the big Northwest wilderness with British Columbia, North Idaho and Eastern Washington only a few hours' distant.

Miss Shipman has moved her entire zoo of nearly 150 wild animals from Los Angeles to Spokane, where it is now established in its new quarters.

FORM CHURCH FILM COMPANY

Brooks Lawrence, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Alhambra, and associates have organized the Southern Church Film Producing Corporation.

This company was formed to manufacture and distribute. Incorporators are Brooks Lawrence, Mrs. Nora E. Lawrence, V. E. Winter and M. Kitchem.

ILLINOIS TO MAKE FARM FILMS

Homestead Films, Inc., of Springfield, Ill., have incorporated, with D. O. Thompson, former secretary of the Illinois Agricultural Association; E. L. Dill, former publicity director of the farmers' state organization, and C. L. Venard of Peoria as incorporators. The company will make pictures of interest to the agricultural elements.

NEW COMPANY INCORPORATED

Graphic Productions, a $1,000,000 corporation, has been formed, and will make six features and 12 two-reel comedies. Ivan Abramson will direct one and perhaps two features and supervise the remainder. Production will be divided between New York and Los Angeles. The comedies will be made on the coast.

EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

"Nights of Many Shadows" is the third Educational release of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, in which Mr. Bruce combines outdoor dramas and scenic beauty.

"Toonerville Trials" is the next picture to be released in the series of Toonerville Comedies by Fontaine Fox.

It is reported that Jackie Coogan will next make "Just David," to be followed by "The Prince and the Pauper."

Production starts May 1st on "From Rags to Riches," starring Wesley Barry. Harry Rapf will direct.

Alan Crosland is to direct Irene Castle in "Don't Weaken." Exteriors will be shot in Miami, Fla.

Director Fred Caldwell is busy shooting the "Night Life of Hollywood," a travesty on the sensational articles appearing in the newspapers and magazines of the country.

LESSER FOREIGN DEALS

Irving Lesser has closed the following foreign deals:

Five David Butler features, "My Boy" and Peck's Bad Boy" for Scandinavia to Overseas Trading; "My Boy" to Mundus Film for France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and French colonial possessions; "Peck's Bad Boy" to Harry Musgrove for Australia; Five Butler and eight Lester Cuneos for all of South America except Brazil to Sociedad Generale Cinematografica. The Irving Cummings two reels have been sold to Canadian Features and Productions, Ltd., of Toronto for Canada.

"The Silent Call," H. O. Davis' picture for First National release, is completing its eleventh week at Miller's Theatre.

JOHN BECK

UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Early May Universal releases are:

"Second Hand Rose," featuring Gladys Walton.

"The Slave's Secret," 16th episode of "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine.

"The Hurricane," 7th episode of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," featuring Harry Myers.

"The Gay Deceiver," one reel comedy.

International News Nos. 37 and 38.

"Sic 'Em Brownie," featuring Brownie,

"The Wonder Dog."

"The Raid," featuring Neal Hart.

It is understood that "The Half-Breed" and "Slippy McGee," Oliver Morosco Productions, will be released by First National in May.

Preparation is now under way for the first photoplay for Frederick Reel, Jr. Productions under the new Robertson-Cole release. Casting will start within a week.

LAEMMLE CHOOSES FAR EAST REPRESENTATIVE

Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has appointed Tom R. Richards, of Sydney, Australia, as his personal representative in the Far East. Mr. Richards is now enroute for Java, where he will spend most of this year studying moving picture conditions in that country.

Richards has been with Universal in Australia ever since that film company organized an exchange center in the island continent. During the past year Mr. Richards has been the personal representative of Herc McIntyre, Universal's Australian chief.

BEVAN VEHICLE COMPLETED

After three weeks of strenuous work, Billy Bevan and Roy del Ruth have completed "Gymnasium Jim" at the Mack Sennett Studios.

The new picture has been cut and titled and will be shipped to New York immediately for distribution through the exchanges of the Associated First National Pictures.

K. D. AND B. PHOTOPLAYS FORMED

K. D. and B. Photoplays, Inc., has been formed to handle state right releases. Charles Kranz, former supervisor of exchanges of Pioneer, is president; G. M. Davidson, former assistant to A. F. Lefcourt is treasurer, and Donald I. Buchanan, who was in charge of Pioneer production purchases, vice-president and secretary of the new company which has secured and resold to Clark Cornelius a series of twenty-six "Tales of the Tenements," the first four of which are already made.

K. D. and B. will state right the Northwoods features to be made by Iroquois Productions, Inc., of Utica.

ASSOCIATED GETS SIX MORE

Associated Exhibitors recently closed a contract with Associated Authors Prod. Inc., for six pictures to be produced by the latter organization, which has John Howard Carras, president; Alicia Collins, vice-president, and A. Raymond Gallo, secretary and treasurer. Business headquarters for the new company are in Boston, but production will be carried on at Orlando, Fla., where studios are being built. The first picture, "The Man Eater," will be ready by August first.

Henry King has gone South for a rest. While away he will make arrangements for the next picture in which Richard Barthelmess will star.

People soliciting work with Tweedy Comedies and Charles Amador Productions will find their people at the old Bernstein Studios in Boyle Heights.

William Fox's spectacular film based on the life of the Roman Emperor Nero, which was filmed in and about the capital of the ancient Empire, is now being assembled in New York.

Federal Photoplays of California, Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., Great Authors Pictures, Inc., and Hewlings Mumper have removed from United Studios on Melrose Avenue to Cosmosart Studio on Temple Street.

Among those playing important parts in "High Stakes," featuring J. B. Warner, are Robert Grey and Les Bates.

Contemporary Criticisms

"SISTERS"

(American Releasing)

"This International Film Service Co. production deserves a special niche of its own in the hall of better films. It is a simple, straightforward little tale that will impress and please every right-minded, clean-living individual, and "Sisters" is a picture every exhibitor can invite the whole family and the family minister to see, without giving offense to the most skeptical. The smooth running story culminates in one or two fine dramatic climaxes and you 'feel good' all through at having seen it."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"'Sisters,' adapted for the screen from the novel by Kathleen Norris, deals strongly with the problems of married life. It is effectively done and brings out the contrasting situations of two married women by delving into the problems that confront them both. Through the story there runs a broad slap at divorce."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'Sisters' is one of the best pictures on the marriage theme that has been available to exhibitors for some time. It realizes the distinction of being popular without, in any sense, being common."

"Dealing as it does with the matter-of-fact side of married life after the illusions are gone, it faces the difficulty of making this prosaic slant on existence interesting, without resorting to sensationalism. In this feat, it is an artistic delight. Always restrained, it presents the inevitable sufferings of two uncongenial marriages in a way that commands absorbed attention. The quietness of the action throughout is one of the greatest charms."

—Moving Picture World.

"THROUGH A GLASS WINDOW"

(Realart-Paramount)

"With all the freshness of springtime 'Through a Glass Window' comes to the screen. It is an epic of New York's East Side life, reflecting in heart appealing manner its joys, sorrows, ambitions and despairs."

"'Through a Glass Window' touches on mother love. Because of their worship of an ailing mother, two children are willing to work hard and long to support her."

"The scenes of Gotham east side are well staged. The photography approaches perfection. The shots of the little family at the amusement beach and the ride home on Tomasso's wagon tug at the heart strings."

—Moving Picture News.

"In 'Through a Glass Window,' a title which has little to do with the picture, May McAvoy should make additional friends among patrons. She is attractive as the poverty-tossed, little Irish girl, brightening New York's East Side with kind deeds and unceasing industry and overcoming sorrows that come steadily and in volume. She makes a flimsy story presentable."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"RECKLESS YOUTH"

(Selznick)

Cosmo Hamilton has long been noted for skating on thin ice. In 'Reckless Youth' he skirts the danger mark in his customary style, pointing a moral in a subtle way and showing up the modern tendencies of the irrepressible flapper.

"There is a tendency upon the part of the author to smash conventions. At times he succeeds but the smartness often gives way to a human quality which makes this feature entirely enjoyable despite the fact that the characters are quite exaggerated."

"The picture offers some zippy incident, moves along with creditable speed and is handsomely staged."

—Motion Picture News.

"Cosmo Hamilton's story of youth's reaction to suppression has been picturized so that the appeal is one of theme rather than action. It might almost be called a pictorial essay, so free from dramatic suspense it is, until the concluding moments. The material has been approached delicately, as if the director and continuity writer were skirmishing around the edge of reality and preferred to suggest rather than portray what happened. The effect is not altogether satisfactory. The first part is too much like propaganda and not sufficiently illustrative to hold the interest. . . . This lack of dramatic force is more or less prevalent throughout, except in the scenes of the automobile accident and the sinking of the yacht, which have been splendidly produced."

"From an esthetic standpoint, the production is far above the ordinary. Like a series of beautiful portraits, the scenes have been staged with fine taste, photographed from the most advantageous angle and lighted with a skill that brings out the very best effects."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE SILENT VOW"

(Vitagraph)

"While this picture comes as another sample of the Northwest Mounted formula, it carries a deal more melodramatic exploits which because of their generous measure of action keeps the spectator sufficiently interested. Many of the scenes are violent. In fact there are no fewer than twelve deaths but since these comprise the unruly element with one or two exceptions the patron will appreciate that they deserve their untimely end."

"The romance keeps pace with the action after the third reel. Duncan has succeeded in collecting some effective shots, not a few of which are rich in color."—Motion Picture News.

"Spectacular feats of strength and skill and dramatic sequences make 'The Silent Vow' good, average entertainment."

"The picture has more than the usual quota of thrills. There are two scenes of participants taking risky falls on the precipitous side of a hill, there are the realistic fights, there is adept gunplay and there is the culminating thrill, the dynamiting of a mountain stream and the death at the foot of a great falls of the villains."—Motion Picture World.

"'The Silent Vow' is a story with the plot laid in the Canadian Northwest. . . . It is crammed full of excitement and swift action, and the director seems to have overlooked no possible chance of getting the most out of every situation."

"An interesting part of the picture is the dynamiting of the stream for fish."

"The lighting is good and the story moves swiftly along until a brilliant climax is reached."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"FREE AIR"

(Hodkinson)

"A thoroughly pleasant automobile story is 'Free Air,' and for genuine light entertainment, it is as good as they come. Sinclair Lewis' Saturday Evening Post tale was a good investment, whatever it cost. No one seems to have hit upon the idea of illustrating the trials and troubles of a young chauffeur who starts to cross the continent. It doesn't take much imagination to picture the wholesome comedy which will result. And it's all there."

"Glacier National Park has here a better press agent than any railroad company's illustrated booklet. Never was such rich human comedy laid in such a picturesque locale. Many shots are as good as in any scenic."

"'Free Air' has no 'message,' but it hits the mark as entertainment."—Motion Picture News.

"The call of the great outdoors is the strongest appeal in this picture. It simply gets right down under the hide, and no doubt will be the cause of many a cross-country trip in automobiles this summer. Some of the love scenes are rather above the ordinary, and some very tense moments come when the tramp boards the car and threatens to wreck the machine if any outcry is made."

"This picture is nearly all exterior scenes rich in natural beauty, all of which has been caught by the camera. The few interiors are well lighted and splendidly photographed. The story is told in a convincing manner that speaks very highly for the direction."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE WOMAN'S SIDE"

(First National)

"While this is a very interesting picture, it is rather doubtful whether it will carry sustained interest throughout as parts of it—the love scenes—fail to register. If they had been handled in a different manner and made more effective, this would probably have been one of Katherine MacDonald's most powerful pictures, as she does some splendid work in it. . . . It also has a comedy touch that will tickle several good laughs out of the audience, as well as some very tense moments that come when least expected."

"The interiors are remarkable for their beauty and lighting, while some of the exteriors will remain long in the minds of those who see this picture. The story is concisely told and runs smoothly, except for the love scenes, which could better have been left out."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The thread on which the incidents of 'The Woman's Side' is hung is not strong enough to constitute a gripping story. However, those fans who are willing to gloss over improbabilities will find thrills enough in the film. The incidents seem to have been particularly pictured to lead up to dramatic climaxes, but those who think for themselves will readily see the story's weaknesses. There are interludes of foolishness in which a monkey figures, that seem to have been injected for no particular purpose. It appears to be unnecessary padding."—Moving Picture World.

Lillian Leighton

By Lady Jane Horton

She recently finished a very fine piece of work with the Mission Films, and then be-took herself to the snow-deserts of Alaska—in support of Nell Shipman. During her absence I am going to say several things about her—in the ensuing paragraphs, to be precise—that I might not say if there was any danger of encountering her in the very immediate future.

You see, I was scheduled to interview her, but she left so suddenly that alas, all I have to write of her is what I gleaned thru a most pleasant association of some eight weeks. What am I kicking about? You say most interviewers require only eight minutes? Well, you may be quite right, so here goes:

She's almost too good to be true. Literally, she is most pleasingly plump, has a pair of large blue orbs that are merry—yet puzzling, and is romping through the summer-time of existence. (For aught I know her existence is a perpetual serene summer.) Her heart is as big as several ice-wagons—and her sympathies are as broad as the vast Pacific, and as deep.

She's interested in everything and everybody and happily, hers is not an intrusive interest. She attends all the concerts, reads most of the good books printed, and knows a deal about the drama, painting, and literature.

Born an indeterminate number of years ago in Auroraville, Wisconsin, she later blossomed into a full-fledged editress of the Mattoon, Wisconsin, "Clarion." Of course, just incidentally, she owned the paper—and at the time was the youngest publisher-editor in these United States. She was only twenty-one.

Two years later she entered upon a stage career which lasted ten years. She was in "stock" in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha. Some time after, she toured the Orpheum Circuit in her own sketch: "A Matrimonial Revolution."

Her cinema career commenced in 1909 with Selig, where she remained for six years. Since then she has free-lanced most of the time, although she was with Famous Players-Lasky for two years.

She was recently seen to considerable advantage in "Is Matrimony a Failure," a Paramount Production, and played an important role in "Carry On the Race" for Mission Films.

But I mentioned her expansive sympathies. She did some very valiant work on behalf of the anti-vivisectionists recently, securing many signatures for a petition to make vivisection illegal. She feels a deep sympathy for helpless animals, probably greatly engendered through her six seasons with Selig.

That was a stormy period, well calculated to call forth the sympathies of as thorough an artist as Miss Leighton.

In the early Selig days, hers was a considerable struggle—against the most adverse conditions. In the first place, picture studios were then known as camps; and they were considered by the artistic world much as the five, ten and fifteen cent stores are considered by the more opulent shoppers—in other words, they were completely ignored.

But Miss Leighton saw in the motion picture a medium for subtle, poetic, and profound expression. She maintained the courage of her convictions—long before the Barrymores, Elsie Ferguson, Pauline Frederick and others had elevated the cinema in point of dignity by appearing in screen plays.

She saw the cinema misunderstood and abused; she knew the pitiful condition under which screen players worked, and how slight the rewards were. But her vision penetrated beyond the deluding light of the "eternally present moment"—and she is one of the anti-vivisectionists recently, securing to say: "I told you so."

Her own characterizations have been imbued with a poignant realism that has established her as a peer among the first-rate character actresses of the screen, of whom there are not so many.

And that remarkable disposition! She simply refuses to dislike anyone, can ever find an excuse for mortal frailty—even if that frailty be at her expense—and can see no better purpose in this most perplexing and illusory scheme of things than that of co-operating with the sunshine.

ousy of that which is his, all of these characteristics are molded into a vivid screen character by the former dancer. He deserves every credit for his accomplishment.

Mahlon Hamilton does Robert Fourny, a small part but one which is highly signifcant in the story, while Frank Campeau complicates the plot with his drunken, almost overdrawn rascal Urdif.

Lillian Leighton in a sympathetic maid and companion to Madelinette completes the cast.

There is an interesting element of strangeness in "The Lane That Has No Turning." How it will be received is a matter for conjecture.

SCRIPTURE FILM COMPANY ELECTS OFFICERS

Scripture Films corporation has moved into its new quarters in the Loew's State Building. At the regular annual stockholders' meeting a new board of directors and officers were elected: Francis Engel, president; Rev. Holice B. White, vice-president; Alfred Graham, M.D., secretary and assistant treasurer; Edgar R. Schmitz, treasurer.

WARD WING PRODUCTIONS

Ward Wing, the director of Mark Twain's "Jumping Frog," is now finishing a five-reel feature to be released as a Ward Wing production. Lyman Broening is the cameraman, George Lackie is the assistant director, Lillian Marshall and Bradley Ward have the leading roles and Richard Gordon, Fred Stanton, Tiny Sanford, Robert Littlefield and Joy Winthrop complete the cast.

Universal Film Mfg. Co. is in the market for stories for five-reel productions to be used for both star and all-star features. Scripts should be directed to the Scenario Dept., Universal City, Calif., and if unsuitable they will be returned within ten days.

Winther-Reynolds Productions, Mayer Studio, 3800 Mission Road, are in the market for two-reel comedydramas with some western atmosphere. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and will be returned as soon as read, if unavailable.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.; and also unusual stories with big theme for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

Campbell Comedies, Fine Arts Studios, are in the market for two-reel comedies featuring children and animals, submitted in synopsis form. Send scripts to the Scenario Editor and a report from them can be expected within ten days.

Frederick Herbst Productions will consider stories, either published or unpublished, for five-reel situation and action westerns, as a vehicle for Gwinn Williams. Scripts should be addressed to the scenario department of the above named company, 6719 Putnam Ave., Culver City, Calif., and if proven unsuitable, will be returned immediately.

David Butler Productions, Hollywood, Los Angeles, is in the market for either original or published stories submitted in synopsis form for star who plays small town or country roles. Scripts will be returned as soon as read.

Chester Bennett Production, United Studios, require stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.

The following studios and production companies are not in the market for stories at present: Talmadge Productions, Frothingham Productions, Louis B. Mayer Productions, Realart Studios, Selig-Rork, Christie Comedies and Jackie Coogan Productions.

Vera James

Holly 1805

A new arrival from Australia is Vera James who has been featured in many pictures made by the Franklin Barrett Australian Films. Miss James' first success was playing the title role in "A Girl of the Bush," a six-reeler, which is now playing to big houses throughout Europe; her next success was in "Know Thy Child," a domestic drama which called for strong emotion. Miss James toured in "Bran Pie," with Lee White, prior to entering pictures.

"Miss James acquits herself with distinction and makes a very charming figure as she takes her part in all the work of the 'Station.' In the trial scene she showed her distinct powers as an actress."

Co-operation Yesterday and Today

The two years just past have brought to the motion picture industry a familiarity with the term co-operative producing company and with the workings of the type of organization bearing that term. Because these outfits, usually started on a shoe string, by the way, have met various fates, neither indorsement nor condemnation of them has been general. For although perhaps from observation it would seem that the higher priced screen artists have kept fairly clear of any entanglements with producers who could pay them only in "proceeds," it must be acknowledged that many high grade people, failing to be "snowed under" with proffered engagements during the depression and entertaining gambling instincts anyway, have considered the chance worthwhile. In some cases the judgments of these latter have been proven good; in others unfavorable experiences have otherwise indicated. So much for the co-operative producing plan as it stood until a fortnight ago!

At that time the profession was surprised to learn that P. A. Powers had acquired a controlling interest in the Robertson-Cole organization with a view to conducting the big plant upon a co-operative basis. The idea of utilizing co-operation to produce photoplays except as a last resort in lieu of the necessary funds was a difficult one to digest, but according to Mr. Powers' published statements he considers the plan in the light of salvation for the film business. He claims for it the possibility of reducing our values to bedrock, overthrowing the producer's ridiculous gamble in stars' and directors' salaries and eliminating the resultant waste to him. He does not believe that bona fide artists will suffer under this plan, but he welcomes the levelling that it will occasion in some quarters.

We must, of course, agree with Mr. Powers that co-operative producing will decrease the producer's gamble. It may, when effected by several well backed, responsible companies, even do something toward placing a more substantial foundation under our distressingly fluctuating industry. However, it cannot be expected that the conservatives are going to look upon this type of change with any great favor, at least until the theory is well proven which, it must be admitted, is not the case today. Difficulty will also lie in persuading our foremost talent that improved conditions will follow its assumption of risks formerly in the exclusive possession of the producer. Others will even imagine that the co-operative idea does not follow in the wake of firm financing.

Still, in the case of its adoption by other reputable organizations, the results are bound to be interesting and all progression must be welcomed in an endeavor that has not as yet uncovered an entirely feasible working basis for itself. Right at the start it would seem that the new plan might provide a highly profitable field to a certain class of very accomplished actors, writers and directors who have been unpleasantly neglected even "crowded" by the prevailing systems. Such a discovery in itself would justify co-operation or any other innovation in its line.

In any event, all such activity points more and more to the arrival of the independent's day and we yet base our hopes upon that glorious if greatly grieved artist. Very soon will he hold the reins of an industry whose backbone he has long formed. Anything that hastens his ends must be fairly considered.

A Business Woman Produces Pictures

One of Los Angeles' business heads, Mrs. A. B. Maescher, of the DeLuxe Building Company, has opened up temporary quarters at the Hollywood Studios and will produce feature photoplays.

Mrs. Maescher is a well-known contractor in Southern California and has built many outstanding homes now occupied by the motion picture people.

"After carefully studying the motion picture industry I am convinced," says Mrs. Maescher, "that picture making is the biggest business in the field today and I am further convinced that there is no business in the field today that presents such tremendous possibilities."

"'Night Life in Hollywood,' will be the title of my first feature, in which I will use Hollywood as the back ground. My idea is to make this a big, wholesome story into which will be worked the beautiful homes of Hollywood and Beverly. My idea is to put the money in the picture and not in salaries. I have looked over the field carefully and have selected Mr. Fred Caldwell as the director. Mr. Caldwell has made remarkable strides as a director, having directed some forty productions at a nominal price and shown his ability to please the public."

"Lurid or sensual pictures will not build up the industry. The public wants clean stories and these are the kind of pictures that the DeLuxe Film Company will produce. Two hundred million dollars is the amount spent a year in America in the production of pictures. Seventy per cent of this production is in Los Angeles. We have everything in the world in Hollywood that is needed in the making of pictures. We have the biggest people in the world that have made their homes here and there is no reason why Los Angeles should not lead the world in literature, music, science and art."

Film Capital Production Notes

UNITED ARTISTS FORM NEW RELEASING MEDIUM

With the departure for New York early this week of Dennis F. O'Brien, attorney for Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks and also a director in the United Artists Corporation, there came to a close, negotiations for the formation of a releasing company which will insure an open market to independent producers in the motion picture industry.

Although all details for the new organization have not yet been worked out, Mr. O'Brien stated before leaving that it will be a releasing medium only and will not enter the production field, and that it will handle independent productions exclusively.

The tentative name of the new concern is "The Allied Corporation," which will be permanent providing there is not another company with a similar name. The amount of capitalization is to be determined in New York where incorporation papers are being prepared.

The organizers are Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, who were also the founders of the United Artists Corporation, of which the new company is a subsidiary concern.

The aims of The Allied Corporation are set forth in the following statement, signed by Miss Pickford, Chaplin, Fairbanks and Griffith:

"The hope of the motion picture business is the 'open market.' The independent producer safeguards the theatre's source of supply, just as the independent theatre safeguards the future of the independent producers. We have demonstrated the soundness of this principle during the past three years in the success of United Artists, and now we have organized the Allied Corporation to give motion picture theatres another source of supply of high grade independent productions. The new company will give the maker of meritorious independent productions the same advantages of distribution that we have through United Artists. The Allied Corporation will follow the plan of the United Artists Corporation closely: Single picture booking, the preservation of the 'open market' and the encouragement of the independent theatre and producer are its objectives. Just as the United Artists markets pictures on their individual merits, so will the new corporation handle its product."

Negotiations for the formation of The Allied Corporation have been under way at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios since the arrival in Los Angeles two weeks ago of officials for the United Artists Corporation.

Besides Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, there were present at these conferences Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists; Dennis F. O'Brien, Albert H. T. Banzhaf and Mrs. Charlotte Pickford.

The latter three are directors of the United Artists, and Mr. Banzhaf is personal and legal representative for D. W. Griffith.

The Allied Corporation will be owned by the stockholders that control the United Artists and the board of directors is the same.

Norma Shearer will play the featured feminine role in "The Law of the Northlands," which Iroquois Productions, Inc., is making at Chatham, N. Y.

SECOND SERIES OF REVIVALS

Famous Players will release a second set of revivals to be composed of "Why Change Your Wife?" "The Woman God Forgot," "We Can't Have Everything," "The Gilded Lily," "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," "Little Women," and "Barbary Sheep."

PRODUCER ANNOUNCES FUTURE PLANS

With the signing of Reginald Barker, Louis B. Mayer recently completed the formation of a directorial triangle, the other two directors being John M. Stahl and Fred Niblo.

These three directors will produce as independent units under the Mayer banner, working at the latter's studios on Mission Road. Their pictures will have all-star casts.

Having finished the cutting and titling of "One Clear Call," John M. Stahl is now preparing his next picture for Associated First National release. Mr. Stahl's recent offerings are "The Child Thou Gavest Me," "The Song of Life," "Sowing the Wind" and "The Woman in His House."

Fred Niblo will begin work under this new arrangement immediately following the completion of Ibanez' "Blood and Sand," which he is now making at the Lasky Studio with Rudolph Valentino in the starring role. "The Three Musketeers," "The Mark of Zorro," "Mother O'Mine" and "The Woman He Married" are Mr. Niblo's most recent cinematographs.

Reginald Barker, director of "The Old Nest," "The Storm," "Bunty Pulls the Strings" and "The Branding Iron," will start within a few weeks on a new picture, the story for which is now in preparation.

Previous to his active participation in the making of pictures, Mr. Mayer was on the Metro board of directors and for years was a theatre and exchange owner in New England, making his headquarters in Boston. Associated with him as general counsel and treasurer of the Louis B. Mayer Corporation is J. Robert Rubin.

FROTHINGHAM TO DIRECT NEXT PRODUCTION

J. L. Frothingham has announced from his offices at United Studios that he will personally direct his next production, "The Vengeance of the Deep," written by A. B. Barringer, in which Marguerite De La Motte will be featured. The locale of the story is laid in New York City and the South Sea Islands. Camera work will start in about six weeks, and the production is scheduled for fall release.

LINCOLN IN NEW SERIES

Elmo Lincoln completed a fifteen weeks' personal appearance tour recently and is now in New York conferring with Louis Weiss, preparatory to entering upon a new series of films in which he will be starred.

TOURNEUR SAILING

Director Maurice Tourneur, J. J. Cohen, production manager, and leading members of the cast of "The Christian," will leave for England, April 29th.

It is rumored that Harry O. Davis, producer of "The Silent Call," has signed Will Rogers for four features.

The Historical Cinema Producers of Canada is a new company established at Winnipeg, by B. T. Hardcastle.

Current Reviews

"HANDLE WITH CARE"

New Pantages

The Rockett Brothers' latest presentation through Associated Exhibitors is "Handle with Care," a Phil Rosen-directed production, which is an effort at the high-class in satirical farce. For many reasons this photoplay fails to meet the standard which former pictures from the Rockett team have led us to anticipate. True, they have again employed an all star cast; the story by Charles Belmont Davis contains interesting material, and it has all been given an estimable production. Its miss lies in an entire lack of conviction. Despite the lines along which it is laid, there is no element of comedy present and very little other appeal. Dull is the word descriptive of "Handle with Care," a "kickless" five-reel vehicle. The direction is largely at fault for this, interest rather than technique being conspicuously lacking.

Will Ritchie scenarized the subject which was unevenly photographed by Philip Hurn.

Grace Darmond occupies the featured role in Jeanne Norris, a rather stupid, young wife who enjoys being exceedingly hard to handle. Her proposals to four former suitors that they elope with her to effect her freedom from a negligent husband form situations that contain unlimited farce possibilities, but being played with no humor upon Miss Darmond's part they lose unmercifully. Taken all in all it is a trying performance.

Landers Stevens' part of the erring spouse is little more entertaining and in fact the only genuinely amusing moments in the piece are to the credit of William Austin and Harry Myers. The former is a riot in Peter Carter, a love philosopher. Myers as the fortune hunting Ned Picard overcomes his unsympathetic action with quaint characterization and his own brand of point playing. These two have the show.

Patsy Ruth Miller, James Morrison and William Courtleigh are otherwise placed to very fair advantage.

Ray Rockett personally supervised the filming of "Handle with Care."

"LOVE NEVER DIES"

Loew's

An abundance of beautifully interpreted love appeal renders "Love Never Dies," King Vidor's recent photodrama for Thomas Ince, a far more attractive piece of entertainment than its somewhat melodramatic plot alone could guarantee. The screen story is an adaptation of Will Harden's "The Cottage of Delight," a romance in which the Vidor presentation has softened much that is maudlin. This sensitive direction together with several highly artistic portrayals, results in an unusually absorbing drama.

Lloyd Hughes and Madge Bellamy, the duo which accomplished such commendable work in "Hail the Woman," heads this cast. The former enacts John Trott, an ambitious youngster who believes himself the son of an infamous village character. His yearning after the only sweet thing in his life is done with great tenderness. Hughes' playing improves consistently and he sets a new standard in sincerity here.

Miss Bellamy's eager beauty this time gives us John's lovable child sweetheart and wife, Tilly. Her never-changing affection for the husband of her choice forms the basis for a wistful, graceful role which could not appeal more.

Something new in the juvenile feminine, by name Julia Brown, is a continual source of delight in the quaint slavey, Dora Boyles. Here is a female Wesley Barry who far out-freckles the boy comedian and who cannot miss proving as huge a sensation as the lad turned out to be. Julia's comedy is truly ingenious. Furthermore, she does not know self-consciousness.

IVA FORRESTER

Claire McDowell in John's foster mother, Fred Gambold as the boy's friend, Winifred Greenwood, Frank Brownlee, Alberta Lee, Lillian Leighton and Little Muriel Frances Dana play the remaining parts with characteristic excellence.

Max du Pont photographed this picture which Mr. Vidor scenarized.

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT"

Grauman's

We would like to prevail upon the Lasky scenario department to give the Byron Morgan-Wallace Reid combination a rest and let the poor star deal with other than automobiles for a space. Four or five of these Roaring Road vehicles in two years is sufficient to tire both producer and audience. Particularly is this true when the author uses one plot outline for the lot.

"Across the Continent," Paramount's latest Reid starring release is markedly similar to other Morgan stories recently made, containing perhaps less genuine entertainment than its predecessors. No great suspense is constructed and suspense is the one excuse for a automobile or aeroplane photoplay.

The star has little opportunity to amuse in Jimmy Dent, the inevitable son of a motor manufacturer. He doesn't even use what is allowed him, but gets disinterestedly through his action in the least exerting manner. The handsome Wallie bids fair to go Owen Moore's path out of his profession unless he stages an immediate comeback.

Mary MacLaren is a perfectly satisfactory feminine lead for Jimmy, but the picture's entire interest centers in Theodore Roberts' portrayal of John Dent. His footage is not only greater but far more enlivening than the star's. A real artist of the old school doesn't often slump even if his activities stretch over half a century, a fact which should interest the matinee idols. Roberts is inimitable as always.

Walter Long, Betty Francisco and Lucien Littlefield are good in the Tylers while Jack Herbert, Guy Oliver and Sidney D'Albrook give their best to minor positions.

Philip Rosen directed this photoplay which was given a standard Lasky production.

Interesting Personalities

ALEC FRANCIS

Alec B. Francis, the veteran English actor who may be seen in important roles in both "Smilin' Through" and "Beyond the Rocks" this week, is a native of London and a graduate of Uppingham Colledge. His long and consistently successful screen career following several stage seasons is one of great interest marked as it is by an exceptional number of classical interpretations.

Early celluloid plays presenting Mr. Francis are "The Escape," "The Man Upstairs," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "From Two to Six," "The Honeymoon" and "Outwitted."

"Courage," "Godless Men," "The Great Moment," and "A Virginia Courtship," are included in this dependable artist's later work, with "Earthbound" offering him in a particularly significant portrayal.

Well do I remember the influence exerted upon my sympathies when still quite a little girl by Alec Francis' tender, whimsical playing. The dashing young masculine leads of the day had little appeal when compared with this kindly, silent cinema friend. Personality and unmistakable soul have done much to augment Mr. Francis' naturally rare talent. His appearances are always anticipated with keen enjoyment.

JULIA BROWN

The week's most intriguing juvenile is nine-year old Julia Brown, an enthusiastic youngster from Oklahoma who bids fair to cut her mark high among her contemporaries, the children of the screen.

Bearing a marked physical resemblance to Wesley Barry and sharing the lad's comedy trend, Julia holds a unique position for a girl thespian. Elsewhere in this issue her unusually promising work in "Love Never Dies," has been reviewed, but we will state again that her little orphan slavey in that picture was of keenest delight to us.

All outdoor sports attract Julia immeasurably and her love of dogs and horses is even greater. An especial weakness for stunts and "dares" of all kinds has led the little girl through many boy parts during her three years' sojourn in Los Angeles.

DAW ENGAGED BY SELZNICK

Marjorie Daw has been engaged by Myron Selznick to play a leading role opposite Owen Moore in "A Previous Engagement," which is now under production at the United Studios, with Victor Heerman as director.

Miss Daw started upon her motion picture career a few years ago as a protegee of Geraldine Farrar. "A Previous Engagement" will mark her first appearance in a Selznick picture.

LA PLANTE OPPOSITE DESMOND

Laura La Plante is playing the leading feminine role in the Universal chapter play, "The Great Conspiracy," starring William Desmond.

HOLDING IN "HEAVY" ROLE

Thomas Holding, English actor who some years ago deserted the spoken stage for the screen, since which time he has appeared as leading man with many of the prominent stars, is making his first appearance as a villain in "The Troupers," the Gladys Walton picture that is now in the making at Universal City.

BROWN ON HORNER'S STAFF

Len S. Brown, according to announcement made by Bob Horner, chief of Western Classics, has succeeded Carl Madson, who has sold his interests in this firm. Brown will assume the general management of sales and exploitation, and will immediately reorganize the local sales company.

KERRY GOING TO VIENNA

Norma Kerry will go to Vienna next month to star in a series of pictures backed by American capital. The actor has only recently returned from an engagement in Italy.

INCLUDED IN FOX FEATURE

Bessie Love and Virginia Valli are enacting principal roles in the latest all star Fox feature, tentatively titled "Kentucky Days."

The cast for "Someone to Love," the current Thomas H. Ince feature, includes among others Harry Rattenbury and Bert Sprotte.

Robert Dudley has been added to the cast of "The Man Unconquerable," a Paramount production starring Jack Holt.

Mars V. Cornice has been engaged to play the juvenile male lead in McParturn Productions.

Gordon Maclean has joined the forces of the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate and will serve as cameraman for a five-reel western feature that is now being prepared for early production.

Baby Willie Tucker, child actor, is included in the all-star cast for a ten-reel production to be started soon under the direction of John Gorman. The picture, as yet untitled, will be produced by Wilfred Lucas, possibly at the Balboa studios, Long Beach.

LASKY SIGNS FERGUSON

W. J. Ferguson has been selected by Famous Players to interpret a principal character role in "To Have and to Hold," just starting production at Lasky's under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

The board of governors is as follows: John Arnold, H. Lyman Broening, Gaetano Gaudio, Frank B. Good, Fred W. Jackson, John Leezer, Victor Milner, Jackson J. Rose, Philip E. Rosen, Homer A. Scott, John F. Seitz, James C. Van Trees, Gilbert Warrenton, Philip H. Whitman and L. Guy Wilky.

BROCK JOINS SCHENCK STAFF

Louis Brock, formerly foreign representative of the Selznick-Select Films, has been engaged by Joseph M. Schenck, to assist in foreign affairs relating to the distribution of the Norma Talmadge, the Constance Talmadge, the Richard Barthelmess, and the Buster Keaton First National Pictures.

Mr. Brock will make his headquarters in the New York offices of the Joseph M. Schenck Productions, and will work with Felix F. Feist, General Manager of the Sales Department.

IN STROHEIM'S NEXT

Mary Philbin and Maude George have been cast in Eric Von Stroheim's new picture for Universal.

Ernest Hilliard will play the "heavy" in "Linda," Corinne Griffith's new picture.

William A. Carroll has just returned from New York, where he has been engaged in working on a picture for Vitagraph.

Louis Brock has left Selznick for whom he was foreign manager, to join the Joseph M. Schenck organization. He will supervise foreign contracts.

Ernest Miller, former Goldwyn cameraman, has been engaged to "turn" on "The Blue Sedan," the initial photoplay for the newly formed Eva Novak company.

Lincoln Stedman and Larry Steers are playing important parts in "Someone to Love," the most recent Thomas H. Ince feature to enter production.

Earle Crain is playing a Mexican heavy in Harry Carey's current starring vehicle under production at the R-C Studios.

Philippe de Lacy and Billy Windsor, child players, are enacting parts in the newest Carter De Haven comedy which Mal St. Claire is directing.

Thomas Santschi, David Butler and Tully Marshall are among those included in the all star cast of "Kentucky Days," the Fox special which is in its first week of production.

Pickups By The Staff

MARY APPEARS AS ATMOSPHERE

No less famous a person than Mary Pickford appeared as an extra in Douglas Fairbanks' film version of "Robin Hood." It was all part of a joke on Doug.

When the mob scenes were being shot in front of King Richard's castle, Mary put on a costume of the period and lent her presence to the "atmosphere" by appearing with the players.

No one recognized her, until she came up to congratulate her husband after the scenes had been taken. Then she demanded a check for her services, based on a salary value of $10,000 a week. "Whew, some price for an extra!" said Doug.

DRYDEN CONCLUDES TOUR

Wheeler Dryden has returned to Los Angeles after several weeks' tour of Southern California as leading man for the Bandbox Players, a company of artistes, presenting a program of one-act plays, directed and produced by Naomi Bailey, leading lady of the company.

A copy of "False Women" (working title, "The Crucifix of Destiny"), R. Dale Armstrong's six-reel feature film in which Wheeler Dryden is starred is now on its way to England and will be exploited by The General Film Company, of London, which is handling the picture in the British Isles.

EDWARD LAEMMLE GIVEN LOVING CUP

Edward Laemmle was recently presented with a loving cup by the principal players and assistants who worked with him in the making of Universal's historical chapter-play, "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," starring Art Acord.

The presentation of the cup took place at a reception at the studio at which those connected with the production were present.

FILM ROW TO DANCE

Arrangements are progressing for the Film Row Dance to be held at Knights of Columbus Hall on the evening of May 13th. Douglas Fairbanks has presented the management with a silver cup to be inscribed with the names of the winners of the fox trot contest, one of the features of the dance.

Many surprise features are planned for the enjoyment of those present.

MORENO CONSIDERING NEW CONTRACTS

Tony Moreno, who recently finished work in Rupert Hughes' comedy drama, "The Bitterness of Sweets," and whose work on the spoken stage with Constance Collier, David Warfield and Mrs. Leslie-Carter will be remembered, has received an offer to return to the footlights.

R-C SUED BY HAYAKAWA

Sessue Hayakawa recently filed suit against Robertson-Cole Picture Corporation for $92,000, which he alleges was due him on a broken contract.

This suit is apparently the outcome of the change in policy of R-C Pictures Corporation when P. A. Powers acquired controlling interest some weeks ago.

TACOMA TO HAVE VISUAL EDUCATION

The city of Tacoma has installed ten Zenith projectors in its public schools. This is the first step toward visual education.

Charles Christie is in New York for a business conference with Educational.

REJECT PARROTT COMEDY

"Stand Pat," a Paul Parrott comedy released through Pathe, was recently rejected by the Motion Picture Commission. Parrott, in the film spins a "put and take" top to decide whether he should take one pill or two and the commission decided this represented a scene of gambling.

Little Walter Wilkenson appeared in person recently at the Colonial Theatre in South Pasadena in connection with the showing of Harry Burns initial animal comedy for Morris R. Schlank.

Little Walter lately finished a part in a Roach comedy featuring "His Rascals."

Nita Naldi has completed her work in "Blood and Sand," the Fred Niblo production for Paramount in which Rodolph Valentino is to star. Miss Naldi, who played the Spanish vamp, left this week for New York.

NINE HUGHES PHOTOPLAYS IN TWO YEARS

Rupert Hughes, novelist, dramatist, and scenarist, has written nine photoplays for Goldwyn within the past two years, six of which have been released; two of which are awaiting release while Mr. Hughes is himself directing the photography on the newest one, which is at present called "The Bitterness of Sweets."

The nine photoplays written and produced within the past two years, in the order of their production, are "Scratch My Back," "Hold Your Horses," "Dangerous Curve Ahead," "The Old Nest," "From the Ground Up," "The Wall Flower," "Come On Over," "Remembrance" (the title of which may be changed) and "The Bitterness of Sweets."

LOCAL AUTHORS STORY AT NEW "PAN"

Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover will have another story at a downtown theater next week when David Butler will be seen at the new Pantages Theater in "According to Hoyle," the Louis Burston production. A week ago the Horner-Westover team were represented on Broadway at Tally's with "The Man From Downing Street," the Vitagraph picture which starred Earle Williams.

As soon as David Butler completes work in the Fox special, in which he is now working, he will be cast in a special Burston production temporarily titled "The Greater Redemption," by Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR FOX

Virginia Fox, Buster Keaton's leading lady, was tendered a birthday dinner recently at the Ambassador. Among those present were Billy Joy, Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis, Leatrice Joy, Harry Singer, Benny Piazza, manager of the Hillstreet Theater, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fox and L. Savage.

CHESEBRO A BENEDICT

George Chesebro, motion picture serial star, and Sophie Barman, a member of Hollywood's younger social set, were united in marriage recently. The bridal pair are now honeymooning in the Yosemite, where Mr. Chesebro's company is shooting exterior location scenes for the sixth picture of the N. W. Mounted Police series, in which Chesebro is being featured for the Clark-Cornelius Corporation of New York. Upon their return to Hollywood the young couple will be "at home" to their friends in a bungalow on North Kenmore avenue.

During the filming of a scene for Rex Ingram's production of "Black Orchids" at the Metro studio, Edward Connolly, character actor, was attacked by the orang-outang Joe Martin, which had been borrowed from the Universal film company. Connolly was severely lacerated but not seriously hurt.

California studios have been besought to send autographed photographs of stars and other exhibits to an Australian cinema exposition which is to be held in Sydney, June 7th, 8th and 9th. The Goldwyn company is sending exhibits illustrating all phases of movie production.

AT LASKY'S

Thomas Meighan will begin work with Cecil B. DeMille in "Manslaughter," the first of next week. This story is by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel by Alice Duer Miller. Work will be started on location.

Alfred Green will undertake the direction of Wallace Reid in the latter's next star picture "The Ghost Breaker," which starts the 8th of May. Lila Lee will be leading woman. The original is by Paul Dickey and Chas. W. Goddard, adapted by Jack Cunningham.

Jack Holt is still on location for "The Man Unconquerable," his new picture, directed by Joseph Henabery and adapted by Julien Josephson from the original by Hamilton Smith. It is expected that the picture will be completed by May 8th.

Irvin Willat is still busy on his big casino set for Dorothy Dalton's feature picture "The Siren Call," by J. E. Nash, adapted by the author and Philip Hurn. David Powell is leading man and Mitchell Lewis has a character role. It is a story of Alaska.

"Nice People," William DeMille's new production, adapted by Clara Beranger from Rachel Crother's play, will be completed by the 8th of May, and Mr. DeMille will then devote himself to the cutting and assembling. His next production is to be Booth Tarkington's "Clarence."

May 1st is the starting date for "Pink Gods," Penrhyn Stanlaws next photoplay in which Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood will head the cast, with Anna Q. Nilsson, Adolphe Menjou, Raymond Hatton and others in prominent roles. South Africa is the locale of this drama.

With a cast headed by Betty Compson, Bert Lytell, Theodore Kosloff, W. J. Ferguson and others, "To Have and To Hold," has started production under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Gloria Swanson is expected back on the lot around the 1st of June, when she will begin work on "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," a story by David Lisle, adapted by Elmer Harris and Percy Heath. It will be a Sam Wood production. In the meantime Miss Swanson is making a rapid tour of the Old World.

With camp accommodations for upward of 200 people, together with live stock, and with sets built on the desert, George Melford and his troupe are now at work on "Burning Sands," at Oxnard, Cal. Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills are featured in this production. The company will be on this location for a good part of the picture. The adaptation of this Arthur Weigall novel is by Olga Printz-lau and Waldemar Young.

"Borderland," in which Agnes Ayres is to be starred, is a Paramount Picture which is as different from the average photoplay as was "One Glorious Day." While in no sense a spiritualistic drama the plot has, among other features, the return of a kindly and wistful spirit whose purpose is to prevent a relative from going astray. Agnes Ayres plays both roles, thus appearing in costumes and scenes of 1850, as well as the present day. Paul Powell is directing this picture which was written by Beulah Marie Dix.

E. K. Lincoln has completed work in "A Lady by Luck," Edward Dillon's first Genius Film feature.

Harry Millarde will have at least two Fox specials to his credit for next season. One is "The Town That God Forgot," and the other an adaptation based on "Dr. Rameau," by George Ohnet.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Because of the illness of Gilson Willetts, production manager for Pathe, Frank L. Smith, author of several Pathe serials, is being sent from New York to United Studios to assist John W. Grey with the preparations for the two Ruth Roland serials which are being produced for that company. Mr. Gray, who wrote "The Riddle of the Range," which recently went into production, has temporarily taken over Mr. Willetts' work.

With plans already completed for the next series, productions starring Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore, Myron Selznick is centering his attention on the specials he is to produce. Among them will be Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," Sir Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau" and John Galsworthy's "Justice." For these productions the directors and their aides will be engaged here.

H. P. Bretherton, of the Selznick force of cutters, will be assistant director to George Archainbaud for the Elaine Hammerstein photoplay, "Under Oath," which goes into production within a few days.

Millard Webb, who recently co-directed with Rupert Hughes the Goldwyn production of "Remembrance," will be Sidney Franklin's assistant for the Constance Talmadge picturization of "East Is West."

Allen Holubar, now editing his production of "Hurricane's Gal," will start work on his next vehicle within five or six weeks. The title of the story has not been announced.

Mrs. Sidney Drew, playing at the Orpheum this week, will be Richard Tully's guest at United Studios during her stay in Los Angeles.

Frank Lloyd will complete production on Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist" within two weeks. Thereafter he will remain at United to direct Norma Talmadge in "The Mirage."

Gertrude Lamson is playing a part in the latest Shirley Mason comedy for Fox.

Norma Talmadge's next picture for First National release, taken from Balzac's novel, "The Duchess of Langeais," will be released under the title of "The Eternal Flame."

AT UNIVERSAL

While the two special productions, "The Storm" and "Human Hearts," starring House Peters, and Priscilla Dean's vehicle, "That Lass o' Lowrie's," are in the final phase of editing and titling, casting has begun for two all-star specials.

King Baggot is casting for "The Suburban," Charles T. Dazey's melodrama of racing days. He will take the entire unit to the blue grass section of Kentucky, where the story of the Kentucky derby will be filmed. Hobart Henley, who directed "That Lass o' Lowrie's," is also selecting artists for the principal roles of Booth Tarkington's widely read story, "The Flirt." Henley's last two efforts were "That Lass o' Lowrie's," a version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's companion novel to "Little Lord Fauntleroy," starring Priscilla Dean, and "Her Night of Nights," C. S. Montanye's story starring Marie Prevost.

The three historical chapter plays which were in production simultaneously are now being edited.

"The Great Conspiracy," a history of Alaska from 1867 to the days of Dawson, is in the first week of production.

"Under Two Flags," is in the fifth week of production, with Priscilla Dean, supported by an all-star cast. Tod Browning directs. Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor, is devoting his time to the preparation of a forthcoming vehicle for Miss Dean, William Hurlburt's stage play, "Trimmed in Scarlet." Edward Laemmle is preparing Anne Caldwell's play, "Top o' the Morning," which will star Gladys Walton.

Production will probably commence within a month on Von Stroheim's forthcoming feature cinemaplay.

Art Accord, cowboy star, has begun a series of short action features of the west which are titled "The Beloved Adventurer." They are being prepared by writers on the staff of William Lord Wright, short reel script editor. Arthur Flaven is directing. Virginia Warwick has the leading feminine role in the first of the series.

"Broken Chains," a magazine story with a western locale by Jack Becholt, is being prepared for Frank Mayo by Charles Sarver. "The Sheriff of the Seven Bar," an original by Ralph Cummins, is being prepared by George Hively for Hoot Gibson's use. "Top o' the Morning," Anne Caldwell's Irish play, is being scenarized by Wallace Clifton for Gladys Walton. "They're Off" is the title of Bernard Hyman's original story which Doris Schroeder is putting into shape for Marie Prevost's use.

Attractions being cut include "Her Night of Nights," starring Marie Prevost and directed by Henley; "Out of the Silent North," starring Frank Mayo and directed by William Worthington. "The Trouper," starring Gladys Walton and directed by Harry B. Harris; and "The Black Bag," a mystery picture with Herbert Rawlinson, directed by Stuart Paton.

The three comedy units are hitting up a rapid rate. Craig Hutchinson and Allen are alternating in the direction of Roy Atwell and Ethel Ritchie, co-stars in domestic situation comedies.

Dale Fuller, Cesare Gravina and Al Edmundson, who appeared in important roles in Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," have been engaged for his new picture.

Howard P. Bretherton, who has served as film cutter with Selznick for the past year, cutting such pictures as "A Man's Home," "Bucking the Tiger," "The Fighter," "Pleasure Seekers," etc., will become assistant to George Archainbaud on the Elaine Hammerstein production now in preparation.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Mack Sennett's special feature made under the working title of "For Love or Money," is to be released by First National under the title "Crossroads of New York." The cast contains such names as Kathryn McGuire, Noah Beery, Ethel Grey Terry, George O'Hara, Robert Cain, Herbert Standing, William Bevan, Mildred June, Charlie Murray and others.

The completion of "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand, will occur within another week.

"Gymnasium Jim," a two-reel Sennett comedy, has just been titled and shipped East for distribution to the franchise holders of the Associated First National Pictures. Billy Bevan is the featured comedian in this recently completed comedy, supported by Mildred June in the leading feminine part. "Such Is Life," is the title for the forthcoming Sennett two-reeler featuring Mr. Bevan. Roy Del Ruth, directing the Bevan series for First National release, has just completed casting for same and production has already started.

Dorothy Phillips is soon to be seen in her latest film, "Hurricane's Gal," produced by Allen Holubar. The production has been three months in the making. Katherine MacDonald recently completed "The Woman Conquers". Miss MacDonald's next starring vehicle is to be "White Shoulders," which is already in production at the Louis B. Mayer Studio. Charlie Chaplin is working on his next First National attraction and Buster Keaton has just completed two two-reelers, "The Blacksmith" and "The Frozen North."

For a period of two weeks Ben Turpin, Phyllis Haver and Kathryn McGuire will appear on the Pantages circuit in San Francisco and San Diego in a sketch written by Willard Mack.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "Snub" Pollard is working on a theatrical comedy. Marie Mosquini and Noah Young are in the cast and Al Santell is directing. Mr. Pollard's first two-reeler, with the working title, "Grandpa's Will," is now being cut and assembled by T. J. Crizer, film editor. Pollard's "Anvil Chorus" has been released.

"Fire Fighters," the second two-reeler of "His Rascals," Hal Roach's latest unit combining children and animals, has been shipped to New York following a studio showing and a preview at the Rosemary Theater, Ocean Park. Bob McGowan directed and Tom McNamara was the author of the script as usual. Another comedy now ready for studio showing is "Friday the 13th," starring "Paul" Parrott with Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker, Jim Davis directing.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Frances Ellington and J. O. Taylor, members of the Thos. H. Ince organization, have turned producers and have commenced work on "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," an art fairy story picture in two reels. It is the first of a series of similar productions.

The "Someone to Love" company is on location near Santa Cruz, in northern California, under the direction of John Griffith Wray, who directed "Hail the Woman."

George Melford may make "Ebb Tide," by Robert Louis Stevenson for Paramount.

SEIBEL TO PRODUCE ON CONTINENT

Bert Seibel, who lately finished "White Hell" for the Charles Bartlett Productions of Gloversville, N. Y., sailed for Europe recently to fulfill a contract calling for production in Vienna and Budapest. Rena Randolph, who has been working in Fox pictures, goes abroad later to appear in all the films Seibel will make. Bert Cann, as cameraman, formerly with Thomas H. Ince, will be a member of the staff.

NEILAN TO FILM EIGHT FOR GOLDWYN

It is understood that Marshall Neilan's new deal with Goldwyn calls for eight pictures which will take from two to three years to produce.

RUTH RENICK

METROPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS AT FINE ARTS

The Metropolitan Productions, with Clifford Elfelt, President and General Manager, has moved from the Mayer Studios and has taken up temporary quarters at the Fine Arts Studios, prior to leasing its own studios where it will have three or four companies working.

JACK PICKFORD TO START SOON

Jack Pickford is preparing to return to the screen in a picture called "Garrison's Finish." For some of the scenes he will take his company east to the Long Island race tracks.

"RANGER BILL" ON NEW ONE

Walter Bell, supervising director of "Ranger Bill" Miller western features, plans to start production on a new story within the next few days. Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate is handling the product on the state rights plan.

The Southern M. P. Finance Corp. has been formed in Dover, Del., with a capitalization of $3,000,000; the Atlanta Studio Corp., at $1,500,000.

HORSLEY TURNS TO EXHIBITION

David Horsley, who has been at various times an actor, a producer, a director and laboratory man, is to try his hand as an exhibitor and exchangeman.

He has secured the First National sub-franchise in the Hawaiian Islands and reports that he has also secured the United Artists and Hodkinson distribution there. His first theater will open in Honolulu on May 7th with "Orphans of the Storm."

PRODUCING IN OKLAHOMA

The W. M. Smith Productions, Inc., of Tulsa, Okla., which is making a series with Franklyn Farnum, Francis Ford and "Shorty" Hamilton intends producing a special eight-reel picture for state rights release. Production will be started May 1st, and W. A. S. Douglas will direct.

DE HAVENS BUSY

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, with production quarters at the R-C Studios, are progressing on their current comedy.

Mal St. Clair is directing, Lee Garmes is behind the camera, "Sky" Moreno is assistant director and Jimmy Anderson is film editor.

TILFORD CINEMA CLOSES CONTRACT

Tilford Cinema Studios of New York has closed contracts to design and make the sets on "Broadway Rose," the new Mae Murray production; the next Irene Castle production which Alan Crosland will direct; the fourth Tri-art with Mary Astor and the first William Nigh production.

BRUCE IN OREGON

Robert C. Bruce, producer of scenics for release through Educational, will spend six months in the Pacific Northwest gathering material for "Wilderness Tales."

KANSAS PASSES "FOOLISH WIVES"

"Foolish Wives" has passed the censor board in Kansas and will be shown there.

David Kirkland, former director for Constance Talmadge, states that he is co-author and co-director of "Reported Missing."

A second series of fifteen Pathe Playlets is announced for weekly release beginning May 14th.

Pyramid's fourth picture will be "When the Desert Blooms," by Donald McGibney. Ray C. Smallwood will direct.

"Three Pals" is being released by Cosmopolitan in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. It is designed for use in schools.

"Challenge," the first of the Dolores Cassinelli pictures, is now being cut and edited. Tom Terriss directed.

Managing Director John W. Hicks, Jr., of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of Australia, will sail from Sydney presently for a visit to the New York home office.

Affiliated Enterprises have contracted with the Graphic Film Corp. exchanges, United States and Canada, for the release of "The Fountain of Youth," (originally "Faust.") California is retained for their own exploitation. Reginald Warde will handle foreign rights.

Contemporary Criticisms

"REPORTED MISSING" Selznick-Select

"'Reported Missing' is an excellent all around production that combines real humor with some serious melodrama and results in an entertainment that will delight picturegoers. The story unfolds simply and runs along in a consistent manner providing untold opportunities for the star to display his powers of high comedy and ending in a thrilling and smashing climax.

"The photography helps considerably in heightening the comedy moments and intensifying the drama. Clever camerawork and some unusual perspectives add to the pleasures in this offering."

—The Film Daily.

"If there is one picture which deserves the tribute of 'something out of the ordinary' that picture is 'Reported Missing,' accurately described by Selznick as its greatest achievement. Henry Lehrman, who wrote and directed this melodramatic comedy, has been given free rein to add to the gayety of a nation. And he has contributed a feature which will be talked about for its adventurous action, its novel gags, its subtle and broad humor, its quaint characterization, its development toward a climax which carries explosive qualities and its overwhelming suspense.

"The titles are genuinely funny and are contributions by humorists associated with New York dailies. Indeed Selznick has not overlooked one department to give the feature a thoroughness of production."

—Motion Picture News.

"That there is no rhyme or reason to the story of 'Reported Missing' is of absolutely no consequence. The picture has been designed to make you laugh, and it accomplishes its purpose. Constantly, completely, however inconsistently."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE WOMAN HE MARRIED" First National

"Anita Stewart seems to be running along in about as hard luck as Katherine MacDonald and Elaine Hammerstein, as far as stories are concerned. But even considering that 'The Woman He Married' is a weak one, the picture is about the best of her recent ones. The star works hard enough to make you like her and so far as her admirers go she will undoubtedly satisfy them, but otherwise her effort is not likely to create an impression out of the ordinary."

—The Film Daily.

"Fred Niblo's 'The Woman He Married,' a First National production, starring Anita Stewart, proves to be somewhat better entertainment than the average run of pictures. There is nothing about the story to make the picture different, but it runs smoothly without lagging and is well acted. The plot is so well-known that most people cannot doubt its outcome; nevertheless the picture possesses the essential quality of realism."

—Moving Picture World.

"This one is different. That is, while 'The Woman He Married,' is another story about New York's idle rich, a striving artist's model and a successful artist, yet it is told in a different manner with some new twists, which take a firm hold on the interest, carried to the end.

"It is thoroughly clean, evidencing the use of good material wherever necessary, and supplied with refreshing sub-titles of considerable humor."

—Motion Picture News.

"The film has a lavish magnificence about it that at once commands one's attention and there are many exquisite sets. There is a mysterious murder near the end that captivates your attention and on the whole it is a very entertaining and satisfying screen play. The continuity is good and satisfactorily. It has no especially high lights and while it does reach a climax, the incidents following it are just convenient enough to detract from any force the climax might have had. But it had to have a happy ending and probably this way out was as good as any."

—The Film Daily.

"No special effort toward achieving anything unusual has been made in this Constance Binney feature, which is a light and sanguine romance, typical of the star's recent offerings. For the most part it pursues a familiar course with now and then a humorous twist, or a melodramatic feat and, once, a real thrill."

—Moving Picture World.

"MONEY TO BURN" Fox

"Frenzied finance mixed up with a little romantic paprika serves as the latest recipe for William Russell. It doesn't take any imagination to discover that the title finds its expression in the manner the hero has accumulated his wealth.

"'Money to Burn' is not the vital type of story one has been accustomed to see with Russell as star. It is light, though fairly breezy. The titles are in a pleasant vein and bolster up the plot with the necessary humor."

—Motion Picture News.

"The picture offers an entertainment of average quality, with its value probably rising and falling according to the popularity of the star. The story is from Sewell Ford's 'Cherub Divine' and gives Russell a role which doesn't require as much action from him as usual, but is appropriate and well suited to his personality."

—The Film Daily.

"A lighter role than usual, with a frequent chance for comedy, has been assigned to William Russell in 'Money to Burn.' His appearance in a more conventional part such as this will probably have a variable appeal, depending upon the tastes of his admirers. He seems not entirely sympathetic with this sort of characterization, as his personality is a little too rugged and serious for the romantic young irresponsible which he plays. This is not a glaring misfortune, however, as the picture, on the whole, is bright and entertaining."

—Moving Picture World.

"'Money to Burn' from Sewell Ford's story, 'Cherub Divine,' is good comedy-drama entertainment of the variety that will appeal to audiences with the coming of warmer weather when the public's fancy naturally turns to the lighter form of amusement.

"There is much excellent photography, some funny happenings in a house that is supposed to be infested with spooks and the usual exciting broker office scenes."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"BOBBED HAIR" (Realart)

"Director Heffron was given a big order when he was asked to make a full length feature out of this story, that at best would only have made a two-reel comedy, and even then it would have lacked action. For this reason every detail had to be stretched to its limit, every situation had to be milked dry and pushed to its farthest point and plenty of hokum slipped in to fill the gaps."

—Wid's.

CLARA DRAY

Fred Niblo's direction shows the results of his years of stage and screen experience in working up to a strong climax."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"THE SLEEP WALKER" Realart-Paramount

"The story of 'The Sleep Walker' is told in much the manner of indulgent parent to sleepy child at bed-time, with deliberate introduction of details and painstaking provision against confusion. As a consequence of this style, rather than because acting, setting or story are at fault, the feature smacks of the juvenile. It is not quite adult drama, despite two or three melodramatic incidents brought in to make it seem such."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"With the trend of the times in both the legitimate theatre and on the movie screen toward the melodramatic, Realart Pictures, with Constance Binney as the star in 'The Sleep Walker,' has hit upon a theme and offers a production that is well worth while.

"It is melodrama that is not too mellow, but at the same time it is more or less replete with thrills, not of the usual wild nature, but which at the same time afford plenty of anxiety to the audience regarding the welfare of the star."

—Motion Picture News.

"Though the idea is a bit far-fetched, 'The Sleep Walker' affords an average entertainment that should satisfy enough people in the majority of audiences to put it over

News From Broadway

By Hank

The vogue now is to make comedies. The problem is where to sell them. Here in Gotham several outfits start a month and die terrible deaths. The Shiller Brothers, former Ford agents in Yonkers, dropped a cool half million trying to make 'em, it is rumored along the Gay White Way. They released through the Reelcraft which, we think, is no more. "Tweedy" and others were the fun makers. Frank Mattison, now in Los Angeles, was production manager. We note with pleasure that Frank is again making comedies at one of the Hollywood studios with "Tweedy," who would be a very good box office attraction if he were to let some one direct him instead of trying to be everything but the raw film stock himself. He has ability and is a comedian, but that is not all the essentials to comedy making. Let's hope Frank Mattison advises him this trip, for Frank is a clever fellow.

American Express going into the picture game. It is to distribute. Producers are to work through them directly. Great scheme and it's practical, too. They will ship films like parcel post, with central exchanges. The film goes from one theatre to another with no stop circuit. American will see that it arrives there with all accessories. More later.

Warner Brothers are to start for the coast to shoot three features. Will Nigh will direct; Harry Rapf will produce; Warner will release. Weslie Barry is to star in two. This means more work for the Hollywooders. Cheer up, spring is here and no one has enough pictures made to go around. They have to produce!

Ray Smallwood is using the old Astoria Famous studio. Ham Smith is at old Metro. Fort Lee looks like a morgue. No one there at all. Four directors are going to Germany. Carl Fleming has started a picture company to shoot Northwest features.

Richard Rowland and Maxwell Karger have secret sessions every day. Something in the wind. Many offers to directors are being made. It seems they plan a new distribution scheme. Who said things looked blue?

Selznick has left for Los Angeles with Ralph Ince, Victor Herman, George Archambaud and a staff to stay permanently. We hear that there are several others following suit. New York has taken the back seat, it seems.

"Reported Missing," directed by Henry Lehrman with Owen Moore, is a cuckoo. It is the best comedy in some time. All credit to Henry this time, boys, with Owen second. Henry should never be idle when he makes this kind.

Betty Blythe will star in a series of features here in old New York for Whitman Bennett, and dame rumor sayeth that the American Releasing Company will distribute them.

Frank Borzage is up in Canada doing a Cosmopolitan play called "The Valley of Silent Men," and will shoot interiors in Los Angeles for the same. Good news for L. A.

Burton King is to start a serial, we hear, with Eddie Polo. His latest feature with Houdini at the Times Square is making a hit with blasé New Yorkers. Alan Crosland is directing Irene Castle in her next feature. I repeat—things are getting better!

"Orphans of the Storm" closed last week to go out on the road. Business not so good at $2.00 top. The day of two buck pictures is over in this town. "Come on Over," recently at the Capitol, voted one of the best ever seen on Broadway. Al Green directed this one. He should hear what people are saying about his ability.

George Sargent, who used to call Los Angeles home a few years back, is getting homesick, we think. George is a good director and an oldtimer. Not that we are boosting him, you know, but don't forget George. No, he didn't ask me to mention his name in Camera! Forgot to tell you his address is the M. P. D. A., New York lodge, where all good directors have their mail sent.

A lot of actors ask me whether they ought to go to Los Angeles or remain in New York. I tell them that if they are good actors to grab a Pullman or fast freight for the land of sunshine. What has become of Sidney D'Albrook and Hugh Thompson, to say nothing of Eddie Burns, Kid Hogan, sometimes called "Danny," Dale Henshaw and a few more that knew Broadway when the Automat was a swell joint? Now I ask you.

J. Searl Dawley, just like that went and made a picture. Never told anyone, not even Wid's Daily, which generally hears considerable.

Our former friend, side kick and chow-mein eater, Harry Myers, never gives the old "White light district" a tumble. Harry just went and forgot everyone. Remember

Harry, old dear, when we used to quit the Screen Club, when the night clerk started to wrap himself in the arms of Morpheus and go to the chink joints for the "yocks" you loved so well? Them were the happy days! Everyone knew one another in the business by their right names then.

We hear, though can't say how true it is, that Adolph Zukor and Lewis J. are again silent partners. Stranger things have happened you know.

We hope to have some real news next issue if the mails get it there in time. Fade.

She is intensely interested in any sort of camera work, however, and it only shares honors with her absorbing school.

The picture going world will come to recognize Julia Brown as the reviewers are recognizing her today.

Having completed the writing of "Under Oath," which will be the first Elaine Hammerstein production made by Selznick on the West Coast, Edward J. Montagne is working with Myron Selznick on another story entitled "Borrowed Wings," also to serve as a vehicle for Miss Hammerstein. PROD NOTES—

Among those included in the cast of Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven's current comedy for R-C Pictures are Mae Wallace, Charles King and Nick Cogley.

Lois Wilson has been added to the cast of "Manslaughter," the forthcoming Cecil de Mille production.

Eddie Gribbon and George Hackathorn are playing important parts in the latest Fox special, tentatively titled "Kentucky Days," which Jack Ford is directing.

Arthur Fresneda, for several years cashier at Universal City, has been appointed business manager of Harry Carey's unit.

Mrs. Hank Knight, character woman, is at present on location at Victorville, Calif., with the Shirley Mason company, a Fox production.

Maude George's vaudeville engagement is to be terminated by the demand for her services in a forthcoming Universal production.

Pat Moore and Gordon Griffith, child players, are included in the cast of "Kentucky Days," which lately went into production on the Fox lot under the direction of Jack Ford.

has left for Japan for new material.

Nellie Peck Saunders is included in the supporting cast of "A Tailor Made Man," the current Charles Ray production for Limited Artists.

Edward Sturgis, who assisted Henry Lehrman in the making of the Owen Moore special "Reported Missing," is assisting Victor Heerman in the direction of "A Previous Engagement," the latest Moore production now under way at the United Studios.

McParturn Productions are busy cutting their first two-reel comedy, "Hose and Heroes," the first of their six productions.
Work on their second will commence shortly. The productions will be under the direction of Thomas Morgan, with Harry Pariser as production manager.

EDUCATIONAL TO RELEASE SHERLOCK HOLMES PICTURES

The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, a series of two-reel pictures made from the Sherlock Holmes detective stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, are being prepared for release by Educational Film Exchanges.

There will be twelve of these short features in the series, each a complete story and a feature in itself. The first, "The Devil's Foot," will be released some time in May.

All the pictures were made in England, in the localities about which Conan Doyle wrote.

Elile Norwood, an English actor, portrays the role of the detective and the part of his bosom friend, Dr. Watson, is taken by Herbert Willis. The pictures were made under the direction of Maurice Elvey.

Following "The Devil's Foot," Educational will release "The Dying Detective" and "A Case of Identity." Others in the series will be "A Scandal in Bohemia," "The Noble Bachelor," "The Yellow Face," "The Red-headed League," "The Copper Beeches," "The Empty House," "The Tiger of San Pedro," "The Priory School" and "The Solitary Cyclist."

ALLISON AND ELLIS IN PORTO RICAN FILMS

Arthur S. Kane recently signed a contract with Edward A. McManus for four features for Associated Exhibitors. McManus, Charles A. Logue, May Allison, Robert Ellis, a complete cast and a full complement of cameramen are enroute for Porto Rico, where the four pictures are to be made, the first to be delivered about August 1st. Miss Allison and Ellis are to be featured in the productions, which will be from the pen of Charles A. Logue. Ellis will also direct.

CUMMINGS EDITS FILM ENROUTE EAST

Irving Cummings has just left for the East with the master print of his latest production for Western Pictures Exploitation Company, entitled "Flesh and Blood." Mr. Cummings will perform the final editing and cutting of his picture on the train. "Flesh and Blood," which was originally named "Fires of Vengeance," is an original story by Hope Loring and stars Lon Chaney. Supporting him is a cast which includes Edith Roberts, Jack Mulhall, Noah Beery, DeWitt C. Jennings, Ralph Lewis, Kate Price, Wilfred Lucas, and Togo Yamamoto.

FAIRBANKS TO MAKE "MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

When Douglas Fairbanks finishes "Robin Hood" he will have "Monsieur Beaucaire" waiting for him, for he has purchased the motion picture rights to that comedy by Booth Tarkington.

"Beaucaire" has been served to an appreciative public as a play, as a musical comedy and in book form.

McParturn Productions has engaged Margie Andrews to enact the feminine lead in their forthcoming productions.

Marie Prevost, who has just completed her starring performance in "Her Night of Nights," will rest for a week before beginning on her next picture for Universal, "Top o' the Morning."

INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTORS OBTAIN KREMER PRODUCTIONS

Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate announces that it has obtained for immediate release the entire output of Victor Kremer productions, starring such artists as Crane Wilbur, Lina Cavalieri, Zena Keefe, Violet Hopson and others. The company, which has been operating with offices in the Loew's State Theatre Building, has secured the services of Allan Mackenzie, who states that steps are being taken to incorporate the organization at once.

Among the Kremer productions that will be placed on the state rights market are "Stripped for a Million," with Crane Wilbur; "The Handicap," with Violet Hopson; "Mad Love," with Lina Cavalieri and other features.

FILMS CHOSEN FOR MOTHER'S WEEK

The National Board of Review has selected the following features as suitable for exhibition for Mother's Day and Mother's Week, beginning May 14th. They are: "The Old Nest," Goldwyn; "Over the Hill," Fox; "One Man in a Million," Robertson-Cole; "Humoresque," Famous Players; "Homespun Folks," Associated Producers; "Old Oaken Bucket," Wid Gunning, Inc.; "The Good Provider," Famous Players; "Your Best Friend," Warner Brothers; "Turn to the Right," Metro; "Devotion," Associated Producers; "Dollars and the Woman," Vitagraph; "Mother O'Mine," Associated Producers; "Scrap Iron," First National, and "Hail the Woman," Associated Producers.

CABANNE WITH DEPENDABLE PICTURES CORP.

W. Christy Cabanne, who has been making specials for R-C Pictures, has been engaged by Dependable Pictures Corp., to make a production for that company.

Dependable Pictures was recently organized by Morris Kohn, who is also treasurer of Select Pictures. It is expected that upon Cabanne's completion of his picture for Kohn, he will again return to the R-C fold as a producing director.

ACHIEVEMENT TO MAKE SIX YEARLY

Six features a year will be produced by Achievement Films, Inc., of New York. The initial venture was "The Power Within," released by Pathe. J. Searle Dawley has been engaged as director-general. His first picture is "Face Value," now in production at the Talmadge studio. William Dudley Pelley will head the scenario department.

UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Forthcoming Universal releases are:

"The White Tribe," 17th episode of "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine.

"Marooned," eighth episode of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," featuring Harry Myers.

"A Royal Flush."

International News, Nos. 39 and 40.

"Off His Beat," featuring Harry Sweet.

"A Guilty Cause," featuring Tom Santschi.

Benjamin B. Hampton's second release for Goldwyn will be "Golden Dreams."

Barbara Bedford has finished her third consecutive engagement at Universal City, this time opposite Frank Mayo in "Out of the Silent North."

GRIFFITH TO MAKE THREE MORE

David Wark Griffith has three more pictures to make under his contract as a producer with United Artists. Upon their completion his original three-year agreement will have been completed.

During the life of his contract Griffith will have made eight pictures. The first five were "Broken Blossoms," "The Love Flower," "Way Down East," "Dream Street" and "Orphans of the Storm."

United Artists was formed in Delaware in April, 1919. Each of the original members signed for a three-year period.

"The Tailor-Made Man," which Charles Ray is filming for United Artists ran fifty weeks in New York and twenty weeks in Chicago in its stage form.

Within the past fortnight have occurred the birthdays of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd. The last named was given a clock by his studio associates.

Practically all the beaches of Southern California have provided scenes for Universal's chapter play based on Robinson Crusoe's career.

Jules Cronjager, cinematographer, who came to California with Myron Selznick, will be behind the camera for the "shooting" of the Owen Moore picture, "A Previous Engagement," which is now in production. Cronjager photographed for the Selznick productions, "Chivalrous Charlie," "Clay Dollars," "Evidence," "Reckless Youth," "Reported Missing," and others.

The History of Photography

It is an age of pictures! They abound everywhere.

Richard Thomas, the producer who has with this fact in mind recently accomplished a two-reel, educational film entitled "The History of Photography," has prepared the following brief outline upon the subject for us. It has decided interest and the little picture certainly presents possibilities.

The art of photography had its beginning in the distant past before chemistry became a science when alchemists were questing for a method of transmuting base metals into gold. Like many other discoveries photography had its inception in an accident. The first sequence begins with an old alchemist making one more futile attempt to find the philosopher's stone. He put water into a silver crucible or boiling pot and into the water saltpeter with the result that a clear solution of nitrate of silver, hitherto unknown, was produced. When he added salt the solution turned white and curled into a semblance of sour milk. When he brought the material to the light he found that it turned black and further that if a leaf or butterfly was laid upon a surface covered with nitrate of silver before exposing it to the light that that part of the surface underneath the object remained white, presenting an image in some measure of the object.

The next development in this art was made by Daguerro, who constructed a rude camera and attempted to take pictures on tin plates covered with a solution of nitrate of silver. He vainly endeavored to make the impression on a plate visible by the use of different chemicals and was about to give up in despair when he accidentally discovered that the image could be developed by the use of mercury. It was in this manner that the Daguerrotype which was the only sun picture in use for many years came into existence. It required at first an exposure of twenty minutes to get a picture of the sitter on the plate, during which time the victim must have suffered torture trying to keep still and smile for so long a period.

In 1841 Pro. Pretzel invented the double lens, thereby improving the Daguerro process by reducing the time of exposure to from three to five minutes. Not long after this it was discovered that the bromo-iodide of silver would reduce the time required for exposure to four seconds. Scott Archer in 1882 invented the wet plate process and produced a negative using glass instead of a metallic plate. As the colors on the plate came out white, and plain white lines and surfaces came out black, it was necessary for the inventor to discover that he could get correct values only by printing from the plate on sensitized paper by exposure to sunlight. The dry plate process was invented in 1888, which was a great advance because the materials could be produced in factories and shipped to wherever they were desired. About twenty years ago the celluloid film was invented for photographic use and almost at once became extensively employed in kodaks and for moving pictures.

A Social Organization

A local newspaper gives the report reprinted below of the newest actors' body to be formed in Hollywood. The Motion Picture Actors' Association has a sphere of its own in which it will greatly benefit its industry.

"The Motion Picture Actors' Association of California is rapidly gaining membership among the picture players of Hollywood. This is the new organization formed within the past few days, principally for the purpose of affiliation with the Federation of Art. The M. P. A. A., as the new association is termed, does not in any manner conflict with the Actors' Equity Association, which maintains a strong branch in Hollywood. There is to be no rivalry whatever between the two organizations. Many important members of the Equity Association are also members of the M. P. A. A., as well.

"The latter organization is local in its scope and of a social and beneficial character, while the Equity is national in scope, economic in character and is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The M. P. A. A. has no labor affiliation.

"Any picture player of good moral character and known screen reputation is eligible to membership in the new organization, and nominal dues of two dollars per year are to be charged. All such actors and actresses are welcome to join. The Federation of Art, with headquarters in Hollywood, now embraces the four great organizations of workers engaged in the motion picture industry; the M. P. A. A. representing the actors and actresses, the M. P. D. A. representing the directors, the American Society of Cinematographers representing the cameramen and the Screen Writers' Guild representing the writers.

"The new actors' organization was formally admitted to the Federation of Art at the meeting of the Federation's Board of Control held on Friday last, Ralph Lewis and Wedgwood Nowell representing the M. P. A. A. as delegates to the Board."

Film Capital Production Notes

REX INGRAM GOING EAST

"Toilers of the Sea," the next Rex Ingram production, will have an Eastern background. When Mr. Ingram finishes "The Black Orchid," he will leave for the East to make arrangements for filming the Victor Hugo story on the coast of Maine. Alice Terry, Edward Connelly and Ramon Samoniego have been chosen by Mr. Ingram as a part of his cast, and they will go East with him, possibly in June, when he expects to begin operations on his next picture under his new Metro contract.

KEATON FINISHES ANOTHER

Buster Keaton, frozen-faced screen comedian, has completed filming "My Wife's Relations," a Joseph M. Schneck production for release through Associated First National.

A feature of the film is that it is without an ingenue, character actors and actresses being cast in the important roles.

The picture was directed by Eddie Cline and in the cast are Joe Roberts, Tom Wilson, Monte Collins, Kate Price and Harry Madison.

PRODUCTION STARTS ON "UNDER OATH"

Filming of "Under Oath," the first Elaine Hammerstein production to be made on the West Coast, has been started by Selznick. George Archainbaud, who came to California with the company and who directed Miss Hammerstein in "Handcuffs or Kisses," "Evidence" and several other productions, is directing.

EDWARDS IN FEATURES

Ted Edwards, who is co-starred with Billie Rhodes in the new Roy H. Klumb production, "Daddy's Love," will be the star of a series of feature photoplays to be made by this concern. Mr. Klumb will supervise production.

NEW COMPANY FORMED

Walter Hast is planning to make six pictures, one to be filmed in California. The newly organized company will be known as the Halperin productions. The first star engaged by Mr. Hast is Carmel Myers, who was formerly engaged in making a serial for Vitagraph. She will play the leading role in a picture tentatively titled "Goblin Point." The story is by Victor Halperin. William Abrahamson, a brother of Ivan Abrahamson, has been engaged as technical director, and Charles Clary for a leading role in the first Halperin production.

MOTION PICTURE EXPOSITION IN AUSTRALIA

Australia is to have a motion picture exposition. It will be held in Sydney, June 7, 8 and 9, and preparations are being made to make it an event of importance. The proceeds will be donated to the various hospitals. Autographed photographs of the stars have been requested to be sold at the booths to help the cause of the exhibitors and swell the funds collected.

WOODS TO STAR MARION DAVIES

Marion Davies is returning to the stage. She is to be starred by A. H. Woods in a comedy to be written for her by Avery Hopwood. It is expected that the play will be ready for the stage by early Autumn.

LINCOLN STORIES FOR MASON

Joseph Lincoln, author, visited the Gerson Studio in San Francisco recently, in connection with the use of one or more of his stories as feature pictures for Dan Mason, character actor, now being featured in the "Plum Center" series of comedies.

Mr. Mason, who will be remembered as the Skipper in the "Toonerville Trolley," two reel comedies, is to begin in the very near future on his first five or six reel feature story under the banner of the Gerson organization.

MACDONALD STARTS NEW ONE

Katherine MacDonald and her supporting company, including Bryant Washburn, Mitchell Lewis, June Elvidge and others, have just finished the production of "The Woman Conquers" for Associated First National under the direction of Tom Forman.

Production on "White Shoulders," by George Kibbe Turner, and the scenario by Lois Zellner, which will serve as Miss MacDonald's next starring vehicle, will be started this week at the Louis B. Mayer studios, where future Preferred Pictures productions for First National will be filmed. President B. P. Schulberg has re-engaged Mr. Forman to direct.

PENDEXTER NOVEL SECURED BY UNIVERSAL

John C. Brownell, Universal scenario chief, has announced the acquisition of "Wolf Law," a story of the Ozarks, from the pen of Hugh Pendexter. The novel will be made into an out-of-doors picture and it is probable that Frank Mayo may play the leading role. The story will be put into continuity form presently and all preparations made for its early production.

CLIFTON MAKING TWELVE-REELER

"Down to the Sea in Ships," Elmer Clifton's first picture for the Whaling Films Corp., will be in twelve reels and will be released in September.

SCRIPTURE FILMS CHANGE OFFICERS

The Scripture Film Corp. recently elected a new roster of officers with Francis Engel as president; vice-president, Rev. H. B. White; secretary and assistant treasurer, Dr. Alfred Graham; treasurer, Edward R. Schmitz.

GOLDWYN GETS ELINOR GLYN STORY

The Goldwyn company has purchased "Six Days" from Elinor Glyn. Miss Glyn was in conference with the scenario editors at Goldwyn for several days previous to the date she sailed, giving her ideas on how this story should be filmed.

FOX TO SAIL IN JUNE

It is understood that William Fox will go abroad in June in connection with the preparation of the scenario of "If Winter Comes" with A. S. M. Hutchinson, the author. This will be one of the 1922-1923 Fox specials, for which some scenes will be shot in England.

Current Reviews

"THE RULING PASSION" California

George Arliss proves himself to be as entirely fascinating in screen comedy as he has always been in heavier subjects with his work in "The Ruling Passion," Distinctive Productions' latest Arliss starring picture. It is a Forrest Halsey adaptation of the original Earl Derr Biggers story. The well-developed photoplay is always interesting, is rich in simple humor and lacks no desirable romantic element. The Arliss personality dominates the whole, but it has a background of excellent support. Particularly clever are the spoken titles which greatly assist in the characterization. Harmon Weight apparently overlooks nothing in the direction which leads the play smoothly along to a happy climax.

As James Alden, an energetic millionaire "worker" who finds enforced retirement to be well nigh killing and thereupon secretly resorts to a small business as the cure, Mr. Arliss is the same superb artist who interpreted "The Devil." This time, of course, he is wholly sympathetic. His comedy is at once straightforward and subtle. His tenderness is a thing of beauty.

Playing Angelica, John's beloved daughter, Doris Kenyon, appears to better pictorial advantage than usual, and in fact, leaves nothing to be desired in the jolly, independent girl who loves her father and his poor partner.

Edward Burns does that partner, one juveniles Bill Merrick with an equally pleasing result while other high lights in the cast are Ida Darling and J. W. Johnston, who enact respectively Mrs. Alden and Peterson, a crooked rival of "the partners."

Ernest Hillard, Harold Walldridge and Brian Darley complete the list of players in this charming photoplay.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" Kinema

To the lovers of all that is delicate and sentimental in romance, there awaits a soul satisfying treat in "Smilin' Through," Joseph Schenck's current Norma Talmadge presentation for the Allen Langdon Martin play, has been made into the most graceful cinema drama of the year by Director Sidney Franklin and his assisting organization. Set in an attractive, old English garden and its adjoining home are interpreted two exquisite and closely connected love stories of one household. In handling the situation so that each holds great fundamental moments, accomplished sincerely without hysteria or rudeness, Franklin displays a mastery that defies criticism while creating one of the screen's most beautiful hours.

His four principal players are seen each in two positions and their various attitudes are always nicely clearcut. There are many tears for the audience in "Smilin' Through," but their succession by happy spiritual unfoldment leaves behind no morbid touches.

Charles Rosher's harmonious photography blends the dramatic material into a realistic, celluloid illusion much easier to appreciate than to eulogize.

Miss Talmadge has never seemed lovelier than in her interpretations of Moonyeen, the hoop-skirted maiden of the most graceful old school, and Kathleen, the former's modern niece, so perfectly her counterpart.

Neither has this talented actress carried greater conviction in her work. Moonyeen, who dies for her love, and Kathleen who lives and sacrifices for hers, these are beautiful impressions, cast and played in a manner rarely witnessed.

Nor does a single supporting artist permit the quality of his work to suffer from contrast with that of the gifted star. Wyndham

VIRGINIA FOX
As "Jerry," the Newsboy, in the Joy Comedy Company's first production

Standing gives one of his most pleasurable performances in John Carteret, Moonyeen's handsome young lover and Kathleen's bitter old uncle. Especially is his work as the aged man a remarkable achievement for the actor. His lonely memories of a lost love, his hatred for all the kin of the man who killed her, lightened only by his affections for the spirited Kathleen and his faithful friend, Dr. Owen, render him a pitiful, ancient figure not to be disliked even in the midst of his selfish prejudices.

No less touching is the portrayal of the sympathetic, broad-minded doctor by Alec Francis. We catch but a few brief glimpses of him as the charming young friend of John and Moonyeen, but he comes into his own a little later in the picture when the faster aged Carteret finds in him his greatest support. The quarrel of the old cronies is as pathetic a moment as the death of Moonyeen or the sacrifice of Kathleen. Better team work of the kind is not within our remembrance.

Harrison Ford also excels his ever satisfactory standard in Jeremiah Wayne, the jealous jilted suitor who intends the murder of John and accomplishes the act for Moonyeen upon her wedding day. Ford has never previously shown the fire required by Jeremiah Wayne, but it is given in full measure. The young actor also plays Kenneth Wayne, the nephew of Jeremiah Wayne and Kathleen's sweetheart, a contrasting character, who cannot fathom old Carteret's hatred for him. He is an excellent young soldier and foil for the capricious Kathleen.

Others in the cast are Glenn Hunter, Grace Griswold, Miriam Battista and Eugene Lockhart.

"Smilin' Through" is a marked come back for Miss Talmadge, whose recent vehicles have been much too stereotyped, too ordinary for her art.

First National distributes the Schenck product.

"FASCINATION" Loew's

The impudent, peppy, dancing charm of Mae Murray which has so often been expended upon dazzling but misjudged show girls, is diverted in her latest production to an equally impudent, peppy, dancing flapper descended from the aristocracies of old New York and older Spain. The title of the picture is "Fascination," and every instant of it spells that title in capital letters. The Edmund Goulding story is not the type of thing that may be weighed with any logic or too much of the human element on the balancing scale. Its high degree of utterly beguiling entertainment value, its confusion of the exotic and brilliant production lend it quite enough to crowd the senses of the most jaded without resorting to stupid practicalities. The triumphant career of a Broadway maiden in colorful, enticing, passionate Spain is an exceedingly easy thing to follow with absorption.

She plays Dolores de Lisa, the light of all masculine life that she meets and the ban of her rigorous old Spanish aunties' existence. She trips through excitement, suspense and royal good comedy, a merry or petulant little minx, who finally justifies her woman's soul in unselfishness. Her dances are original, her costumes unique. Fascinating describes the remarkable Miss Murray adequately.

Vincent Coleman is pleasing in the not very active male lead, Ralph Kellog, an American.

A striking piece of work on the other hand is offered by Robert Frazer in Carrita, the matador. This actor not only rivals but threatens Valentino's best Latin form. He is as attractive as the popular Italian, has more of eagerness, more of youth. We consider him a much better thespian. His willful, tempestuous Carrita is worth the picture.

Helen Ware is vivid in Parola, the bull fighter's mother, while Creighton Hale, Charles Lane and Emily Fitzroy as Dolores' brother, father and aunt are perfectly placed.

Courtenay Foote in an old roue and Francis Puglia are otherwise placed.

Robert Leonard directed this lively subject which was beautifully photographed by Oliver T. Marsh.

Metro releases "Fascination."

Carl Girard and Dwight Crittenden are included in the cast of "Under Oath," with Elaine Hammerstein, which is in its first week of production at United under the direction of George Archainbaud.

Lon Chaney playing "Fagin" and Lionel Belmore, another strong role in Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist," completed their services for that production this week.

Theodore Kosloff is interpreting a principal role in "To Have and to Hold," co-starring Betty Compson and Bert Lytell.

Sada Cowan is at present on the continent working on an original story, based on historical episodes, for Dimitri Buchoweyzki, a Russian director.

SUPPORTING HUSBAND

Kathryn Perry (Mrs. Owen Moore) is enacting a role of consequence in "A Previous Engagement," the current Owen Moore photoplay under production at United.

George Cowl and Walter Trimble are included in the cast of players in "Pink Gods," which Penrhyn Stanlaws is directing for Famous Players.

Frank Alexander, formerly of the Larry Semon comedy company, is cast in Jimmy Aubrey's current two-reel comedy for Vitagraph.

Little Richard Headrick, child actor, who was featured in John M. Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me," a First National release, is a member of Katherine MacDonald's supporting cast in "White Shoulders," which recently went into production at the Louis B. Mayer Studios.

LEDERER ON SPOKEN STAGE

Otto Lederer has left the screen temporarily and is appearing in the character role of Solomon Levy in "Abie's Irish Rose." The company is on a tour which will finally take it to Chicago.

GUY BATES POST

DONOVAN COMPLETES ADDED SCENES

Jack Donovan, who served with the colors of Uncle Sam in the late war as an army aviator, has just completed some added scenes for "Hurricane's Gal," the most recent Dorothy Phillips starring vehicle, in which Mr. Donovan appears opposite Miss Phillips in the role of Lieut. Commander Gordon Grant.

Mr. Donovan is at present negotiating with Hobart Bosworth to play the juvenile lead in "The Beloved Unknown," the forthcoming Bosworth feature, by Ethel Gillette Whitehorn, to be filmed at San Mateo.

PERSIAN EXPERT FOR TULLY PRODUCTION

A recognized authority on Persian manners, customs and arts, has been engaged to assist producer Richard Walton Tully and art director Wilfred Buckland, in maintaining the correct detail of the costumes and settings in "Omar the Tentmaker," the forthcoming Persian film.

IN SUPPORTING CAST

The supporting cast of Mary Pickford's new version of "Tess of the Storm Country" includes Jean Hersholt, David Torrence, Forrest Robinson, Danny Hoy, Robert Russell and Mme. Boadamere.

J. J. Pasztor has been engaged as cinematographer for the Frederick Reel, Jr., Productions.

Niles Welch is playing opposite Elaine Hammerstein in the Selznick picture, "Under Oath."

Harry Lonsdale and Sidney D'Albrook are enacting prominent roles in William Duncan's latest Vitagraph photoplay.

Sylvia Ashton and Edythe Chapman are among the players in Cecil B. de Mille's latest all-star cinemagraph now under production at Lasky's.

Carolyn Rankin has been cast for an important part in "Kentucky Days," now being produced by Fox.

It is announced that Chester Earle, formerly of Vitagraph and Robertson-Cole, has been appointed General Sales Manager of the Roy H. Klumb Productions.

Louis Dresser and Jacqueline Logan have been added to the cast of George Melford's next production "Burning Sands," based upon the novel by Arthur Weigall.

Gloria Hope will appear in support of Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country," which is starting production at the Pickford Fairbanks Studios on Santa Monica boulevard.

Two more players, Alice Howell and Arthur Hoyt, have been engaged by Myron Selznick for supporting roles in the Owen Moore production, "A Previous Engagement," which is being directed at the United Studios by Victor Heerman.

PERSONALITIES OF THE WEEK

Frederick Reel, Jr., at the age of thirty-three, is one of the pioneers of the film industry on the coast, beginning in the early days when Edendale was in its inception.

He began his career in New York as a journalist, later becoming a critic, and working into dramatic direction and production with Ernest Lacey. He followed story writing, criticism and play writing from the time of college graduation until he entered the moving picture field.

Much of Mr. Reel's experience was obtained under Stuart Paton. While yet a young producer, the former has developed several stars that have gotten far beyond him now, and in his new work as producer of all-star pictures from famous plays he hopes to develop more.

Upon completion of the filming of a series of specials, Mr. Reel will get back into his old line of picture making, which is the out-of-doors type, a portrayal of the far north country, and vehicles of adventure.

INSURE MOVIE SET FOR "HER MAN"

In the world of motion pictures, everything from an eyebrow to a star's life is insured to protect the producer in his investment.

Marshall Neilan—in the production of "Her Man," his newest First National picture—recently took out $50,000 worth of insurance on the contents of a movie set for twenty-four hours.

The set represented an elaborate boudoir, Louis Fifteenth design, and contained priceless antiques rented for the occasion. While the amount paid for the renting of materials used in this scene was reasonable enough, yet if the set had been damaged by fire or had any of the valuables been stolen, it would have cost the producer a nice penny.

In order to protect itself, the insurance company assigned a man to watch the set during the life of the policy.

And they say that producers are poor business men!

DANCER ON FILM ROW PROGRAM

Frances Fink, thirteen-year old dancer, will be one of the features at the Film Row Dance to be held at Knights of Columbus Hall on Saturday night, May 13th.

Miss Fink has danced at a number of private affairs and has been the featured artiste in plays and other entertainments staged by members of B'nai Brith Temple.

CHRISTIE STAR APPEARS AT GRANADA THEATRE

Dorothy Devore, Christie Comedy star, appeared in person at the Granada Theatre, San Francisco for the week of April 23d in connection with the showing of the Christie Comedy "Fair Enough."

MOVIE STARS TO HAVE DAY AT GOLD RUSH SHOW

Noted film personages will hold forth on May 27th at the Days of '49 Celebration in Sacramento. It will be Movie Star Day. Special features have been arranged, including the entrance of movie riders in the $10,000 wild west contest.

ACTORS' EQUITY MEETING HELD

The regular monthly meeting of the members of the Actors' Equity Association was held at 6412 Hollywood Boulevard Monday evening, May 1st. That the hall was not filled to overflowing was most regrettable as those attending enjoyed a most delightful musical treat in addition to discussing important business affairs of Equity.

JAMES BOWEN

Miss Constance Balfour, prima donna soprano, rendered three numbers to the accompaniment of a Knabe-Ampico furnished by the Fitzgerald Music Company. Mr. Lester of Fitzgerald's gave an interesting demonstration of the reproducing and tonal qualities of the instrument.

Miss Balfour chose Cadman's "Land of the Sky Blue Water" as an opening song. This was followed by an aria from "La Tosca." As an encore she sang "Will-o'-the-Wisp," with delicacy and humor. The players applauded Miss Balfour most vociferously.

William P. Carleton awakened reminiscences of "Floradora" with his splendid rendition of "The Shade of the Sheltering Palm." Mr. Carleton was formerly one of the stars of Floradora in its heyday. As an encore he sang a delightful bit of blarney entitled "Eileen Asthore."

Wedgwood Nowell gave his own compositions, "Spread Hollywood's Fame with Music," and "The Progress of Womankind," in pinologue form, and was splendidly received.

J. Frank Glendon, well-known actor who is president of the Progressive Business Men's Club, delivered a stirring address, urging the players to individually and collectively take an active interest in all civic and community affairs. He impressed upon his hearers the importance of registration as voters and capably outlined the relationship of municipal, state and national political affairs to the local players.

Secretary Ernest C. Joy reported to the membership that conditions are rapidly improving throughout the industry and pointed out that Equity is ever alert to adverse legislation of any character. Furthermore Mr. Joy announced that the local branch has to date collected over $14,000.00 for its members from picture producers and theatrical managers defaulting in proper payments for work performed by players.

Chairman De Witt C. Jennings spoke of the work accomplished by Equity in New York and Washington legislative bodies. Mr. Jennings also explained Equity's situation in regard to the Federation of Art. He pointed out that it had been impossible for the New York Council of Equity to sanction the idea of the local Equity branch joining the Federation of Art as a body, due to the fact that Equity affiliates with the American Federation of Labor. Nevertheless, Mr. Jennings asserted that he was personally in favor of the Federation of Art affiliation on the part of the local picture players.

It is understood that on account of Equity's position in the matter of the Federation of Art, the local picture actors and actresses have found it necessary to form a new organization. The name of this organization is Motion Picture Actors' Association of California. Dues are to be two dollars yearly and its temporary headquarters may be reached by telephoning Hollywood 2415. All who are interested in the Federation of Art may register for the new association in this manner. The M. P. A. A. is in no way an "opposition" to Equity. Wedgwood Nowell is acting as temporary secretary of the new organization.

ROACH STARLET ON SONG PROGRAM

"Sunshine Sammy," eight-year-old Hal Roach starlet, made a "puhsuhnal" appearance this week at the Philharmonic Auditorium when a chorus of 200 trained colored singers presented a program of jubilee and plantation melodies. "Sunshine" was provided with an "act" and sang some songs.

RETURNS HOME

K. J. Fritsche of the Transocean Film Co. of Berlin, who brought to the states "Destiny" and "Othello," has returned to Germany.

Arthur Hoyt is enacting a supporting role in "A Previous Engagement," starring Owen Moore.

"The Closed Road," featuring House Peters and Barbara Tennant, is being revived at the Hippodrome this week.

Carolyn Rankin is receiving the sympathy of the film colony over the death of her father, who passed away at her home, Thursday, April 27th.

Charles Ogle will have an important role in "The Old Homestead," which will start production presently under the direction of James Cruze.

Baby Muriel MacCormac is playing in support of Agnes Ayres in the star's forthcoming picture, "Borderland," which Paul Powell is now directing at the Lasky Studios.

PICKFORD-FAIRBANKS NOTES

Mary Pickford has started production on her new version of "Tess of the Storm Country," the picture in which she starred nine years ago. According to W. W. Kerrigan, her studio manager, the revival will require at least seven reels for the unfolding while the old film was only five reels in length. John S. Robertson is directing from the scenario by E. Lloyd Sheldon. The first scenes are being made at Chatsworth Lake, near Los Angeles, where a complete fisherman's village has been erected under the supervision of Frank D. Ormston, art director. This 1922 version of "Tess of the Storm Country" will be released under the title of "Tess."

Jack Pickford will bring to the screen "Garrison's Finish," F. B. M. Ferguson's race track novel, as his first United Artists release. Jack, accompanied by his director, Arthur Rosson, and a cameraman yet to be decided upon, will leave Los Angeles on May 7th for Louisville where they will make scenes at the Kentucky Derby, after which they will go on to the Belmont track, near New York, and film several scenes of the Manhattan Handicap. Elmer Harris, former scenario editor for Realart, is supervising this production, and Mary Pickford will aid with the editing and titling, and will probably act in an advisory capacity during the course of production. This picture marks Jack Pickford's return to the screen after an absence of several years. Since leaving the Goldwyn fold, Jack has been directing his sister Mary. His last work was as co-director with Al Green on "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Miss Pickford's last production.

More canvas is being used most every day to cover the castle banquet hall "set" being used by Douglas Fairbanks in his elaborate version of "Robin Hood," now being filmed, than the largest circus in the world has ever used for their biggest tents. About 24,000 square feet of this canvas is required to properly diffuse the light, while certain scenes are being enacted in this huge room and the largest of the circus big-tops seldom contain more than 6,000 square feet of such material.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

A contract has just been concluded between the Christie Film Company and Educational Film Exchanges, through which the Christie Comedies are distributed, under which Christie will make twenty two-reel comedies for the season of 1922-1923. The Christie scenario staff has been enlarged to include Frank Roland Conklin, Walter Graham, Robert Hall and Royce Alton as regular staff writers, and no more stories from outside sources are being considered. Plans for these first pictures of the new series call for the same principal stars in featured parts as have been in the stellar roles of most recent Christie Comedies. They are Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Dorothy Devore and Viora Daniel.

Robert C. Bruce, whose first series of Wilderness Tales, combining outdoor playlets with scenic beauty, are now being distributed by Educational, is touring California by automobile making scenes for his second year's series of Wilderness Tales. Mr. Bruce returned to the Northwest last month to begin the summer's production work, making his headquarters at Portland. The Bruce party started south from that city a few days ago, and are now traveling along the California coast. Mountain, desert and seacoast scenes are to be made in California, and will probably keep Mr. Bruce in that state for about two months. In the Bruce party is Mayo Methot, who will be remembered for her work in "And Women Must Weep," the first of the Wilderness Tales, in which she made her screen debut, and who will be seen in the new series.

Julian Ollendorff, creator of Sketchographs, is sketching the news of the day for Educational's news reel, Kinograms. Sketchographs, in which this artist's impression of various human interest news items is portrayed, appear now in every issue of Kinograms, which is published twice weekly.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

A little over a reel of the current Harold Lloyd comedy is now being assembled. Mildred Davis is playing opposite the comedian having made her entrance in the scenes this week.

Harry "Snub" Pollard has finished the prologue to his new production which features theatrical life in a small town. The company has been on locations that include Edendale, Palms, Griffith Park and the beaches. Supervising Director Charles Parrott is directing. Mr. Pollard's last one-reeler, "The Dumb Bell," a satire on motion picture directors, was previewed this week at the Studios and will be shipped shortly to New York.

"Paul" Parrott has started on a new comedy with Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker in support. J. A. Howe is directing.

"His Rascals," engaged on the third comedy which Bob McGowan is directing, are taking scenes for the opening of the picture at Palms. "Sunshine Sammy" and Jackie Condon are chief actors, while "Bill" the bulldog, "Cork," the pony and "Dinah," the mule, are the featured animals. Tom McNamara, who has been co-directing this week, is working on the next vehicle.

Hal E. Roach has added "Billy" Dale, who recently arrived from New York, to the scenario staff for "Snub" Pollard and "Paul" Parrott as "gag" man. Mr. Dale is author of various songs, sketches and scenarios. His "Spirit of Seventy-Sixth Street" was recently enacted by Morton and Glass.

CHRISTIE NOTES

Neal Burns is being featured in a new comedy which recently went into production under the direction of William Beaudine. It is a farce written by W. Scott Darling. In the new picture Vera Steadman again plays the lead with Burns.

Frank R. Conklin, scenario head of the Christie Comedies, left the studios this week and will sail for France presently.

C. H. Christie has returned from New York after spending three days in the eastern metropolis and a few days at West Baden, Indiana.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Ruth Roland, Director Ernest C. Warde and the company that is appearing in the Pathe serial "The Riddle of the Range" will leave for Catalina this week for three weeks' location work.

A. B. Barringer is completing the script of his original screen story, "The Vengeance of the Deep," which will be produced and directed by J. L. Frothingham for Associated First National.

No location scenes will be required for the filming of the Selznick productions of "A Previous Engagement," starring Owen Moore, and "Under Oath," starring Elaine Hammerstein.

MAYER STUDIO NOTES

With the selection of Percy Hilburn as chief cameraman and Walter Mayo as assistant director, Reginald Barker this week began assembling the working staff for his first independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer. Mr. Hilburn worked with the director for several years prior to joining him at the Mayer Studios. Mr. Mayo was Rex Ingram's assistant in the making of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

John M. Stahl is in the midst of preparations for his next picture for First National.

"The Fast Mail," produced by Fox with Charles Jones as star, will be one of the Fox fall specials.

Production Notes

AT LASKY'S

Cecil B. de Mille and a portion of his cast for "Manslaughter," including Leatrice Joy and Jack Mower, are at San Francisco this week, making special scenes for this picture. The company will be back the latter part of this week.

"To Have and to Hold," the George Fitzmaurice production in which Betty Compson and Bert Lytell have the featured roles, is progressing, although Miss Compson has not yet begun work in the picture.

Director Sam Wood is now in New York on a vacation but will combine business with pleasure and shoot a number of scenes of an ocean liner leaving port for his next picture, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," in which Gloria Swanson will star on her return from Europe.

Irvin Willat and his company filming "The Siren Call," featuring Dorothy Dalton, will go to Yosemite Valley this week for a fortnight in this natural wonderland of the West. There, some exterior views representing scenes in Alaska, will be made.

T. Roy Barnes has acquired a dog which will work with him in his role of Happy Jack in "The Old Homestead," which will be produced under the direction of James Cruze, with Theodore Roberts in the Denman Thompson role. A corp of writers is engaged in preparing the version of this classic. Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank E. Woods are making the adaptation, continuity is by Julien Josephson and the supervision by Walter Woods.

Rodolph Valentino, star of the picture, "Blood and Sand," which is nearing completion, left for San Francisco this week to take part in the program of the Citizens Committee to raise funds for the entertainment of the Veterans at the convention, June 26-30, of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. The show takes place May 5th, at the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco.

AT VITAGRAPH

"The Gamin Girl" will serve as Alice Calhoun's forthcoming starring picture. The scenario is by Bradley J. Smollen and David Smith will direct. "Blue Blood," Miss Calhoun's latest picture is being cut and titled under the supervision of director David Smith.

James Aubrey started this week on another of his two-reelers. John Smith is directing, assisted by Mort Peebles. Helen Kesler is leading woman.

Earle Williams is expected to start production presently on a South American story by O. Henry.

Larry Semon's last two-reel comedy, which followed "The Show," is rapidly being put into final shape for shipment east.

INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTORS NOTES

E. B. Hanscom, president and general manager of Independent Distributors, announces the appointment of Isador Morris, a local attorney, as counsellor for his organization.

A crew of film salesmen left the offices in the Loew State Building recently for territories in and bordering on California. They are expected to return to headquarters in about six weeks.

Bobby Mack is playing "Rake" in "Under Two Flags," with Priscilla Dean, at Universal.

COLVIN JOINS SHIPMAN

"Billy" Colvin, who recently returned from Italy with the negative of "Sant Ilario," made in Rome by Henry Kolker, has signed a contract with Ernest Shipman as manager of productions. He has left for Ottawa, to arrange details in connection with "The Man from Glengarry," and "Glengarry School Days," and from there goes to Sault Ste. Marie to arrange for the production of "The Rapids."

PATHE GETS NEW PRODUCT

Pathe will distribute "Nanook of the North," a feature produced in the Arctic regions for Rebillon Freres, by Robert Flaherty, leader of five-Sir William MacKenzie expeditions into the North.

NOVELTIES IN THE INDUSTRY From Film-Express (German)

The Decla-Bioscop is preparing a serial of films titled "King Arthur's Round Table;" Thea von Harbou and Fritz Lang have written the scenario dealing with King Arthur and Ginebra, Merlin Gawan Lancelot, Tristan and Isot, Percival and Lohengrin.

"The Woman of Yesterday" is the title of a scenario, having been written by Wolfgang Geiger and Dr. Johannes Guter for the Decla-Bioscop.—Ludwig Berger is preparing for Decla-Bioscop a big costume comedy, the scenario of which has been written according to Scribe's "A Glass of Water."

The firm has just finished the film, "Dr. Mabuse, the Gambler," (Director: Fritz Lang, scenario arranged by Thea v. Harbou). At present the film "Phantom" is being made, the scenario of which has been arranged by Thea von Harbou, according to the latest novel of Gerhart Hauptmann. Murnau is directing the film.

The 200,000 M. prize competition for scenarios will be decided on June 15th, six weeks having been stipulated for the examining; apart from the prize winners, the next best scenarios will also be bought by the Richard Oswald Konzern.

The concern has been considerably increased lately by being joined by the new Conrad Veidt Co., Ltd., the Heinz Ullstein Film, the Carl Mayer, Ltd., and the Nina-Lizza-Film. The next great production of the Oswald-Film will be "Lucrezia Borgia," Conrad Veidt Co., Ltd., putting out the Paganini film.

The Terra-Film A.-G. has acquired for its 1922-23 production the scenario of a great society film "Passion" (according to Alphonse Daudet). Helga Molander is playing lead.

The firm has just successfully produced the film "Tingel-Tangel," the scenario of which has been written by Friedrich Sieburg; Gisela Schonfeld and Friedrich Kuhne are playing lead.

The last years of Russian history have been realistically put on the screen by the Orient-Film in its six reeler, "The Tragedy of Russia in Three Epochs," showing the revolution, the abdication of the Czar, Kerenski, Lenin, Trotzki and Bolshevism.

The representatives of the firm, about which we are willing to give information, are in Berlin at present, Hotel Ziegler, Friedrichstr. 76.

The "Sachsische Kunstfilm A. G.," the general meeting of which is on the 25th of March, is going to put out a new big film, "Madame de Recamier," 2 part, the scenario of which has partly been arranged by W. Buckau, the managing director of the film. The film will be ready in June.

The "Film fur Alle," Ltd., had a good success last season with the film "Die Zauberpuppe," which is quite a new kind of film, invented by Richard Hutter, a funny conferencier apostrophizing the film.

Eric Sanden and Hans Wolzogen are finishing at present a scenario, "The Riddle of Robertson House," which will be produced by Max Landa-Film A. G. in the course of this year, Max Landa playing the detective.

Rex-Film is preparing a winter film, "Syrvester," the scenario having been written by Carl Mayer (the author of "Caligari"). Lupu Pick is director of the film.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE TRUTHFUL LIAR" (Paramount-Realart)

"Miss Hawley as an emotional actress is really capable! In fact, we were agreeably surprised.

"The story seeks to send home the lesson that the young wife who thinks only of having a good time is heading her matrimonial bark toward the rocks. This 'sermon' is well put over. It never becomes 'preachy.' We believe this picture to be quite the best thing Miss Hawley has done for the screen . . . Here is a feature, however, that has a real interesting plot that holds the attention well throughout.

"The picture shows some fine directing for which Thomas N. Heffron deserves credit. The settings, interior and exterior, are good. Photographically, 'The Truthful Liar' leaves nothing to be desired."—Motion Picture News.

"Particularly noteworthy in 'The Truthful Liar,' starring Wanda Hawley, a Realart feature distributed by Paramount, is the dramatic construction, the picture starting out at a leisurely pace and the tempo constantly increasing until the finish.

"It is the manner in which the author and director have developed the action which makes this production one of the best in which Wanda Hawley has appeared."—Moving Picture World.

"Wanda Hawley will please her admirers in the role of Tess Haggard and she is assisted by a capable supporting company with E. A. Warren, giving the outstanding performance as Peter Vanetti, the Italian."—The Film Daily.

"THE MAN FROM HELL'S RIVER" (Western Pictures Exploitation)

"James Oliver Curwood's story, 'God of Her People,' has been adapted to make the picture called 'The Man from Hell's River,' which stars Irving Cummings, who also directed the production.

"The picture has a great dog in it, Rintin, a north woods huskie. His role assumes the same prominence as that of the star and he does his part of the entertainment with sure-fire results. Mr. Cummings is the leading man as well as director and he does all his role calls for it in the way of acting, but he may be complimented especially for the manner in which he has staged the picture."—Moving Picture World.

"It contains fine action, good dramatic punch, heart interest and the usual, though quite requisite, romantic touch besides a wealth of fine atmosphere that is vividly brought out in the beautiful locations selected as backgrounds. The picture has been filmed in Yosemite National Park at a time when it fully supplies all the demands of the 'frozen North.'

"An outstanding feature of the offering is the performance of Wallace Beery as Gaspard, the Wolf, and villain of the story.

"The direction is quite satisfactory. Besides providing a fine pictorial appeal, Cummings has handled the story first rate."—The Film Daily.

"THE LYING TRUTH" (American Releasing Corporation)

"'The Lying Truth' is an ambitious subject, not lacking in entertainment value, but somewhat lacking in finesse. The fault lies mainly in its conception, which shows a loose combination of romance, comedy and sensationalism, the greatest stress being laid upon the last. Romance is not essential to the progress of the story and the comedy has the effect of having been inserted rather than developed naturally. At times, however, the picture, which is at all times sincere, is completely satisfying and the faults seem unimportant."—Moving Picture World.

"Well directed compelling melodrama, good story, capable cast, pleasing photography. 'Lying Truth' is a dramatic animation illustrating the injustice of condemnation upon circumstantial evidence."—Motion Picture News.

"WITHOUT FEAR" (Fox)

"'Without Fear,' featuring Pearl White, is a modern drama of society and finance. It furnishes the star with ample opportunities to please her devotees . . . the story offers material for discussion on both sides as to whether the newly rich should be given entree into old and established society.

"All of the scenes are clear and well lighted. The exteriors are attractive and the interiors appropriate. Continuity fairly smooth and the direction is satisfactory."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"This is one of the weakest stories they ever picked for Pearl White. There is no sustained interest and situations are almost entirely lacking. The one mild situation which it does contain is padded beyond endurance and with such unsubstantial padding at that, that it resolves itself into a continual stalling and waiting around for the ending.

"The titles contain errors which should be corrected."—The Film Daily.

"Stories on the survival of love despite the strictest of social barriers are always popular with a large class of patrons, and 'Without Fear' is based on such a theme. Pearl White's adaptability to roles in society dramas, however, is as much of a question as ever. Her personality and technique are still reminiscent of her work in serials, and to place her in conventional features seems to rob her admirers of the entertainment in which she has proven beyond all question her success, and at the same time to subject her to unnecessary criticism in connection with her new endeavor."—Moving Picture World.

"The age-old conflict between democracy and aristocracy forms the background of Pearl White's latest feature entitled 'Without Fear.' It is worked out fairly well and develops some interesting moments.

"The producers have provided some effective sets and the director has paid particular attention in building his scenes so that the utmost sympathy is extracted. Miss White has a few emotional opportunities of which she takes advantage.

"The theme is sufficient to interest seven out of ten spectators."—Motion Picture News.

"A WONDERFUL WIFE" (Universal)

"This story has been ground through the fiction and movie mills so often that it fails to intrigue the imagination insofar as building a vein of interest and suspense . . . Somehow the story doesn't ring genuine. It is theatrical in its important scenes and climaxes. And the characterization is of the machine-made variety. In its favor is a fairly colorful atmosphere.

"Perhaps had Miss du Pont invested the role with suppressed emotion the story would carry more sincerity . . . Pictorially the picture is well lighted and offers some adequate sets and locations."—Motion Picture News.

"'A Wonderful Wife,' starring Miss du Pont, portrays rather pleasantly the life of an English army officer and his wife at a post on an island off the coast of Africa . . . It furnishes fairly good entertainment and offers a new variety in scenery.

"The interiors are well done and at most times a realistic atmosphere prevails. Some of the jungle scenes, however, present the appearance of a nice picnic spot. A good bit of finesse has been successfully used by the director and has greatly helped the picture along."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Universal seems to be having difficulty getting suitable stories for Miss du Pont. 'A Wonderful Wife' gives her only a fairly adequate role and although she makes the best of what little it affords, still she is quite handicapped.

"Miss du Pont is always well photographed and wears some becoming clothes . . . The photography is good and the locations usually appropriate. The jungle scenes are not especially realistic."—The Film Daily.

"THE FIRST WOMAN" (R-C Pictures)

"The Spectator is pretty nearly ready to vote 'The First Woman' a dull bit of entertainment when along comes a surprise ending and redeems it to a good extent.

News From Broadway

By Hank

They say on the Gay Rialto that Samuel Goldwyn is to start a new company of his own.

"Ham" Smith is making a feature called "The Isle of Doubt," with Wyndham Standing starred. Carle Fleming is doing one up in the Northwoods. Bert Seidel has sailed for Germany to "shoot" some foreign features. Photographer Bert Cann will follow.

The news that Marshall Neilan will become a Goldwyn producer was somewhat of a shock to Broadway. They say a few more are to join Goldwyn forces on the West Coast. The names we don't at the moment care to mention.

"Sisters" is in its fourth week at the Cameo Theatre. Ray Smallwood's "My Old Kentucky Home" opened at the Central to good business. The story is by Anthony P. Kelly and stars Monte Blue. It is released by American.

J. Stuart Blackton's natural color picture took the press here by storm. They all praised it skyhigh. It is a novel achievement and sure to go over.

J. Searle Dawley has signed with Achievement Films a new outfit. He will make six features a year in the East.

Marion Davies is to be starred in a play by A. H. Woods at the completion of her present feature "When Knighthood was in Flower," which we hear is her last production. It will be six months in the making yet before completed at a cost said to exceed $2,000,000. Some money!

Well, things in general are very blue looking at this end of filmdom. No one working but all living in hope that they may be soon. Those on the coast are fortunate, and should be contented. Here there is nothing at all doing. Several new outfits announce that they will start and I suppose they will some day in the distant future, but that is all.

The "Fatty" Arbuckle ban by Will Hays seems to have pleased the press in New York very much. They say that it is up to Arbuckle to redeem himself by good behavior. At any rate Roscoe is in hard luck for the time being. It seems Will Hays is going to let out a few more stars of movie land in the next few months, or rather ban them for a time. Some of those stars are said to be of national reputation. We wonder who they are?

Arbuckle is still popular, don't forget that much. Ten to twenty fans write the papers daily criticizing Hays for his punishment of Arbuckle, but of course this does no good. One theatre here advertised one of his comedies and they had to call out the police reserves to handle the people, though the picture was never exhibited after Hays made his decision.

"Smilin' Through," with Norma Talmadge, is in its second week at the Strand. This is her best picture to date. The press and fans like it immensely and that is all that is necessary. "Reported Missing," with Owen Moore at the Criterion, is doing fair business. The papers did not take it so kindly and the people are not breaking their necks to get in to see it, though it is an excellent comedy.

Business in the theatres is bad just now. The Strand and Capitol are about breaking even. The rest don't appear to be doing so well. Good pictures are hard to find. That is the cry here, anyway.

Frank P. Donovan is about to start work on a Bulwer-Lytton story, in which Doris Kenyon is to be the star. It will be released by American Releasing Corporation. --As last picture, "Silas Marner," from George Eliot's book of the same name is being released this week by Arthur Kane of Associated Exhibitors as a special with big exploitation given it. Associated Exhibitors also are releasing the King Vidor features starring his wife, Florence Vidor, who is fast becoming a popular screen star.

Miss Jean Girardin, former "Follies" beauty and Sennett bathing girl, who played one of the star roles in "Silas Marner," and who has posed for Howard Chandler Christy, Montgomery Flagg, Sargent, Williams, Johnson and other illustrators of note, has several tempting offers to go to Europe and one with Famous Players to go to Los Angeles. This girl is a comer and a find for someone. She is a second Madge Bellamy in type and we consider Madge one of the best ever. So does everyone else, for that matter.

Billie Dove is to be a Metro star. She has played about in features in New York and was a stage beauty previously. Marcus Loew is to star several new "finds," we understand, to make up for those he lost, perhaps.

Rex Ingram is due here this week with his latest screen effort, which recalls a day a few weeks ago in the Claridge Hotel when Marcus Loew said that Lewis Stone played the most wonderful role he had even seen in his life in "The Prisoner of Zenda" special.

We overheard him say this to a friend magnate.

By the way, where is Harry Myers keeping his little self these days? Harry used to be one of the highlights of Broadway and is missed awfully. He was always "just a big overgrown boy" and is liked everywhere, especially in dear old Gotham. We never knew Harry in his heyday at Universal in Fort Lee to refuse an actor work or financial assistance. When he couldn't use them, he dug down in his jeans and slipped them greenbacks and never said it was a loan. Such real men deserve success.

Well, one thing is certain, and that is that Los Angeles is the city of flowers and movies. New York is done gone and forgotten. Fort Lee is like a deserted village and it used to be the big place once upon a time. The studios here are being renovated for other lines of business. They couldn't exist, that's all.

The Biograph Studio is housing two companies, those of Dick Barthelmess and Robert Leonard and Mae Murray. The other studios will be used for morgues in a few months from present indications. Cosmopolitan is using the entire studio for the Davies' feature and the other directors are laying off with the exception of Frank Borzage, who is up in Canada, doing exteriors with interiors to be shot in Los Angeles.

Since news is scarce, there is little to write about. No use yelling calamity all the time, but what can you do otherwise? Things are rotten and there is no other word that expresses it so well. Los Angeles has all the work that is being done and those players fortunate enough to be there should remain for sometime to come. At least there is one consolation in one real releasing outfit. It is the American that F. B. Warren controls. This, at least, assures producers revenue on their productions, and revenue spells money.

Yours till we meet again. Hank!

"Mildred Harris fulfills requirements satisfactorily and to those to whom the role of the actress seems plausible she will probably convince them that she is a good actress." —The Film Daily.

"The First Woman" shows considerable novelty in the conception of its plot, and it is likely that the picture's greatest appeal lies in this.... It is fanciful and somewhat far-fetched, but the improbability is of the type that is diverting to most fans.

"Mildred Harris seems not entirely free from affectation—probably her director could have obviated this effect, at least to some extent." —Moving Picture World.

"Very ordinary is this story of a chorus girl who tricks a wealthy playwright into giving her the leading role in his play. The comedy finish is all that saves it.

"Poor lighting and poor photography do not help it any." —Exhibitors Herald.

"Numerous followers of motion pictures have expressed their desire to see the effect of unbecoming garments upon the

Scenario Market

Universal Film Mfg. Co. is in the market for stories for five-reel productions to be used for both star and all-star features. Scripts should be directed to the Scenario Dept., Universal City, Calif., and if unsuitable they will be returned within ten days.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.; and also unusual stories with big theme for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

David Butler Productions, Hollywood, Los Angeles, is in the market for either original or published stories submitted in synopsis form for star who plays small town or country roles. Scripts will be returned as soon as read.

Chester Bennett Production, United Studios, require stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.

The following studios and production companies are not in the market for stories at present: Talmadge Productions, Frothingham Productions, Louis B. Mayer Productions, Realart Studios, Selig-Rork, Christie Comedies and Jackie Coogan Productions.

Kel-Pine Production Co., 410 Court St., is in the market for two reel country to city situation comedies at once for girl or boy star. If unavailable, script will be returned in ten days.

Infidel,' a First National production, starring Katherine MacDonald, is the fact that the story is different from the usual run of photoplays and provides the star with an unusual role, that of a woman who through force of circumstances denies the existence of a higher power, but is finally brought to a different realization.

"There are some excellent storm and sea scenes combined with excellent photography, and the picture ranks well up among this star's productions . . . Taken as a whole, however, the production is one that should satisfy the average audience."—Moving Picture World.

"The Infidel' doesn't contain anything very much that makes for suitable screen entertainment. The idea in itself is not at all new, the regeneration of a non-believer, and the development does not succeed in convincing the spectator.

Camera!

I am chosen spokesman for a club of New York and Brooklyn girls—to our joy, one discovered an old copy of a Camera!, in it was an invitation to "Vox Populi" to respond. I hope we are not too late for we have a terrible lot of grievances.

We used to be enthusiastic fans but our ardor is dwindling. To see a popular picture we are compelled to sit through horrors of black and white tads and mutt things, so called comedies that nauseate, people falling down and running in and out doors, etc., vaudeville in many houses that would wear out the patience of Job, and lastly we've seen several personal appearances that were like a wet blanket,—so lacking in grace, presence and manner—we concluded some one must be substituting the star or else the credit of a success belongs entirely to the story, director and above all the photographers.

By the way Agnes Ayres is certainly beautiful but she was badly dressed and poorly photographed the last time we saw her in "Bought and Paid For," and she ought not to wear ear rings. We are so sick of stars, especially males,—do you really think any human being wants to look at one person from different angles for a whole hour is all we can stand in comfort, after that we generally wish we were dead.

Of course there are exceptions—Mary Pickford, and our own particular idol, Pauline Frederick, and besides, these stars don't occupy the whole stage. We saw Wallace Reid not long ago and in every scene the cast was bunched against the scenery and the hero stood gorgeously alone. We dread to see Rodolph Valentino as a star, of course, we have all been desperately in love with him ever since "The Four Horsemen," and now I suppose he will be as tiresome as the rest. We've had many disappointments—last year we rushed to see Elinor Glyn's "The Great Moment," and it was not particularly interesting and the much advertised star was a horrible disappointment—where on earth does Gloria Swanson get her queer clothes, they seem so much in the way and her hair dressing suggests a burlesque, how did she become a star? She must have relatives in the business. We saw "The Affairs of Anatol" and compared with the other actresses she can't act. I suppose they can't all look distinguished and aristocratic as Pauline Frederick, Alice Terry, Florence Vidor, Leatrice Joy and others, but surely we want pretty stars, females anyway, and are half the stars midgets? Their screen relatives and friends look like giants with them and if society girls ever acted as silly as Viola Dana and some of her type that always at some phase have their legs gracefully draped over the hero's arms, sometimes the poor hero must carry her left handed, to keep her limbs to the audience while he bears her aloft or somewhere. We have not seen the like of these things in life and we represent a good bit of the populace.

We love a good story like "Hail the Woman," fine acting like Conrad Nagle's, de Brulier's, Sills', Jack Holt's and scores of others. The supporting people are generally superior to the stars. Is there no way of starting a crusade against the stars that are killing the people's interest in the silver sheet? There are moving picture machines in many homes here and among the younger set especially it is a fad. People are trying to get in their private amusements what the public theatre is ruining.

We suppose this ebullition of the populace will go to the waste paper basket, but really somebody ought to do something and we know what's the matter. Cut out the stars and trash, unless the stars are great enough to stand close and natural comparison with their companies, and give us a real story.

Very truly,

NEMO.

MAYER SIGNS HAWKS AS MANAGING EDITOR

J. G. Hawks, for three years managing editor and supervisor of production at Goldwyn and for five years previously, associated with C. Gardner Sullivan at the Thomas H. Ince Studios, has been appointed by Louis B. Mayer managing editor of all his productions.

Mr. Hawks is already preparing the stories for both Mr. Stahl's and Mr. Baker's next pictures. His duties will also include the purchase of stories and co-operation with the directors in the cutting and titling of their productions.

Mr. Hawks' latest work is the adaptation of "The Christian," which Maurice Tourneur will direct. While at Goldwyn he wrote the scenarios for all Reginald Barker pictures, excepting the Geraldine Farrar series, and adapted the Rex Beach and Katharine Newlin Burt stories which that company filmed. He also collaborated with Gouverneur Morris, Leroy Scott, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Rupert Hughes, Basil King, Alice Duer Miller and others of the Eminent Authors in preparing their stories for the screen as well as personally writing the scripts for "Scratch My Back" and "Hold Your Horses."

Over twelve years of stage experience are behind Mr. Hawks, three years being spent with David Belasco as stage manager and actor, and the balance as stage director for other producers and for a number of stock companies. ●

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' NOTES

Eugene De Rue is co-directing with Eddie Lyons and is also directing a series of comedies starring Bobby Dunn.

Pete Gerald, secretary of the Assistant Directors Association, has rented the clubrooms to Oscar Van Der Steyn for a dancing school.

Joe McDonough is half owner of the G. and M. print shop.

Scott R. Beal is assisting John Griffith Wray in the filming of the Ince special, "Someone to Love."

Virgil Hart is helping to make comedies on the Fox lot.

Gordon Hollingshead has turned his attention from drama to comedy and is at present aiding one of the Fox directors.

William Crinley is busy assisting Irving Cummings.

Claude Camp, who is outside man for the Service Bureau, isn't too busy to attend the regular meetings.

Rhody Hathaway expects to start any day with Director Bruce Mitchell.

Leo McCarey is working night and day at the "U" aiding Director Browning in the making of "Under Two Flags."

Robert McGowan is making "kid comedies" at the Hal Roach Studios.

It is rumored that Sandy Roth is to assist Clarence Badger, who will direct Wesley Barry in his next picture which will start production at the Warner Brothers Studios presently.

Fred De Silva, Joy Morley and Joe Dominguez are cast in William Duncan's current production for Vitagraph.

SELZNICK RETAINS COLORED COMEDIAN

Douglas Carter, ebony-hued comedian, who will be remembered for his work in the Owen Moore production, "The Poor Simp," has been signed on a long term contract by Myron Selznick.

Mr. Carter is now engaged with Director Victor Heerman in the making of some comedy scenes in the new Owen Moore picture, "A Previous Engagement."

ANDERSON ENGAGES AYE

Maryon Aye is playing the leading feminine role in G. M. Anderson's first comedy-drama being made at Universal City. Miss Aye negotiated with Mr. Anderson for the role when she found she would have time prior to beginning work opposite Bull Montana for Hunt Stromberg.

KEL-PINE PRODUCTIONS TAKE OVER McPARTURN ORGANIZATION

Kel-Pine Productions has taken over the entire interests of the McParturn Productions under the management of Mr. Harry Pariser.

Having finished "shooting" their first picture entitled "Hose and Heroes," featuring Marjorie Androus and Mars V. Corne under the direction of Thomas Morgan, Kel-Pine Productions, will start on its second picture on or about May 10th. Manager Harry Pariser is now casting. Thomas Morgan will again handle the direction.

UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Forthcoming releases are:

"Kissed," featuring Marie Prevost.

"Out of the Dark," eighteenth and final episode "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine.

"The Jaguar Trap," ninth episode of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," featuring Harry Myers.

"His Prehistoric Blunder," featuring Roy Atwell.

"The Trap," featuring Lon Chaney.

International News Nos. 41 and 42.

"The Little Rascal," featuring Baby Peggy.

"Never Let Go," featuring Reginald Denny.

ALEXANDER TO STAR RITCHIE

Ethel Ritchie, featured in "Come On In," lately completed by Co-operative Producers, Incorporated, has been signed by Director Edward Alexander to play leads in a series of semi-western pictures to be produced for release through Producers Security.

Miss Ritchie's first starring vehicle will be "Inner Fires," by Margaret Kingsley Smith, a story with an Arizona locale. Mr. Alexander will direct the series. The studio work will be done at Clune's.

"Snitz" Edwards, screen comedian, who lately played in "The Prisoner of Zenda," "A Lady's Man," and "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," has been engaged by Myron Selznick for a supporting role in the Owen Moore photoplay, "A Previous Engagement," now under production at the United Studios.

Lasky has secured Fritz Ridgeway to play the part of "Ricketty Ann," in its forthcoming production of "The Old Homestead."

I will run your picture once in Camera! and insert your card for 3 months at an unusual price.

Independent producers are busy; introduce yourself to them through Camera!---the only medium of the profession.

The Salvation Army Motion Picture Industry Division Campaign Committee

To Our Friends and Co-Workers in the Motion Picture Industry of Los Angeles, Calif.

We are making a systematic campaign during the month of May to raise a substantial sum as a gift to the Salvation Army of Los Angeles, in recognition of their great and humanitarian activities in the past, and to provide them with sufficient funds to carry on the work which they are doing in our city.

We are counting on every one in the Motion Picture Industry of Los Angeles to help us meet this urgent call for funds, with a fine demonstration by the men and women of the industry proving to the public-at-large our readiness to help a worthy cause.

Every dollar given puts sunshine thru the door that is always open to the poor, the hungry and the weary.

MARY PICKFORD
Chairman

Mary Pickford as chairman of the Motion Picture Industry Committee, receiving from Frank Wiggins, Secretary of Chamber of Commerce the first check starting the Salvation Army Campaign. Brigadier C. R. Boyd is a witness at the ceremony.

You all know what the Salvation Army did in the Great War. It is doing the same thing today. Let's get behind them and make our fund a fine tribute to their unselfish and tireless work for the uplift of humanity.

Thanking you for your assistance and co-operation, we are Respectfully,

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY COMMITTEE

By Lincoln Hart, Sec'y

Send all communications and funds to The Salvation Army, 502 Chamber of Commerce Bldg.

The above appeal speaks for itself and should bring unlimited returns. This is the Salvation Army's week in our journals and upon our streets. It has fairly won our every consideration.

BAGLEY TAKES OVER ASTRA STUDIOS

The Astra Studios in Glendale, comprising twenty-six and one-half acres of ground, have been taken over by Fred L. Bagley, formerly assistant general manager for Charles Chaplin and four years comptroller at Universal.

He has one company now producing and declares that several more units will be quartered there shortly. To a Camera! representative this week he said: "The studios will be completely remodeled, the name 'Astra' will be discarded; a reservoir now on the grounds will be made into an artificial lake and the plant otherwise beautified.

"If our plans for production materialize, this studio will soon be one of the most active on the West Coast."

ERNEST SHIPMAN'S CANADIAN ACTIVITIES

Henry MacRae, director of "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" and other Ralph Connor screen productions has been the director selected to produce "The Man from Glengarry." Among the artists in leading roles of this photodrama are Ralph Faulkner, Anders Randolph, E. L. Fernandez, Harlan E. Knight, Pauline Garon, Marion Swayne and William Colvin.

"Glengarry School Days" will follow "The Man from Glengarry" with the same director and technical force, but with a different cast of players.

"The Rapids," a story of Sault Ste. Marie is now being put in scenario form. The actual shooting on it will begin in June. "The Chivalry of Keith Leicester" will be made at a later date in and about the city of Vancouver, B. C.

Ernest Shipman is disposing of some of his foreign holdings in order to give his personal attention to these Canadian activities, and expects to have a large number of Canadian productions ready for fall release.

William Colvin, who managed the Italian production of F. Marion Crawford's "Sant Ilario" in Rome for Mr. Shipman has been signed as producing manager of his Canadian film productions.

STAHL TO START PRESENTLY

John M. Stahl's next production for First National release will be based on an original story by the director, according to announcement from the Louis B. Mayer Studios. The scenario for the new film is now being prepared and will probably be ready for shooting within a week or two.

RETURN TO STUDIO

After traveling with Howe's Circus for one week during the filming of scenes for the Ince feature, "Someone to Love," Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis, Noah Beery and Vernon Dent, and other members of the company, have returned to the Ince Studios

John V. DeLacy states that he will shortly produce "The Little Gray Lady," by Channing Pollock in the Peerless studio at Fort Lee, N. J., and that in August he is going to Italy to direct a ten-reeler.

HUGHES RENEWS CONTRACT

Rupert Hughes has renewed his contract with Goldwyn under the terms of which Hughes will write, direct, title and edit his own pictures. The author will begin presently on "Souls for Sale," which has been running serially in the Red Book Magazine.

WILLAT TO FILM NEW SERIES

C. A. "Doc" Willat left recently for New York where he intends to remain for some time to complete releasing arrangements for another series of special productions to be directed by his brother, Irvin V. Willat, at their Culver City studio.

Irvin Willat's present arrangement with Famous-Lasky includes another picture which will be completed early in July and it is the intention of the Willat brothers to resume production at their own studio at that time.

Mr. Willat will return to the coast by way of Florida, where he will make a survey of the various organizations in that state, which are bidding for motion picture production.

BARTHELMESS AS "THE BOND BOY"

Having completed the filming of "Sonny," which will be Richard Barthelmess' third appearance as a star, Inspiration Pictures announces that the young screen artist will be starred in George Washington Ogden's story, "The Bond Boy," for release through Associated First National.

Henry King, who directed Mr. Barthelmess in "Tol'able David," "The Seventh Day" and "Sonny," will again be Mr. Barthelmess' director.

"ANNA ASCENDS" FOR ALICE BRADY

When Alice Brady returns to the screen after an absence of some months she is going to have a vehicle with which she is familiar. Jesse L. Lasky has purchased "Anna Ascends" for her return to the screen. Miss Brady will come to Hollywood to make the picture. Her director and cast have not yet been chosen.

"SHEIK" TRAVESTY AT CHRISTIES

Neal Burns and Viora Daniel will be featured in "The Son of a Sheik," about to start production at the Christie Studios under the direction of Scott Sidney.

A new series of films of the fairy type, especially for children, is to be made at the Thomas H. Ince Studio beginning with "The Pied Piper of Hamelin." The pictures are to be in two reels, and a woman, Frances Ellington, is one of the promoters of the George Arliss is at present working on "The Silent Voice" at the Whitman Bennett Studio in New York. This play was produced on the stage some years ago. It will be Arliss' third picture for United Artists. Harmon Weight is directing.

Current Reviews

"THE BACHELOR DADDY" Grauman's

A wholesome, censor-proof and at the same time highly enjoyable screenplay is Paramount's newest starring vehicle for Thomas Meighan, "The Bachelor Daddy." The simple film play revolves about the adoption of five little orphans by a millionaire bachelor, and is largely composed of his devoted struggles to keep up with his charges' pranks. It was taken from the original story by Edward Peple and effectively scenarized by Olga Printzlau.

Director Al Green has made the whole thing live spontaneously, avoiding cheap, conventional sentiment and creating hearty laughs at each opportunity.

The star has a characteristic portrayal in Daddy Dick. He works naturally and gracefully with children, a quality possessed by few male players. His "taking" of their points proves of inestimable value in this picture.

Leatrice Joy and Maude Wayne control the feminine interest with their renditions of Dally, Dick's sincere little secretary, and Miss McVae, his sophisticated fiancée. They contract effectively.

This photoplay's main attraction, however, centers in the orphans themselves, five little troupers, of whom the screen should be proud. Each in a distinctive, finished performance is a delight to observe. Composed, round-eyed Bruce Guerin, a cherub of whom we may well expect great things, sympathetic Charlotte Jackson, the mischievous de Briac twins in the precocious Donald and Davy, and demure little Barbara Maier make a juvenile troupe that creates a desire for more of such entertainment. It has been said that any child can be starred satisfactorily, but that it takes extraordinary talent for one to support with success. There are five of them here. Take your choice.

Laurence Wheat, Adele Farrington, J. Farrell MacDonald, Doc Bytell and little Mickey McBan complete the cast in minor parts.

William Marshall photographed, "The Bachelor Daddy."

"BEYOND THE ROCKS" Grauman's Rialto

The current Lasky, long-run release is a Jack Cunningham film version of "Beyond the Rocks," a story by Mrs. Elinor Glyn. Indeed it is exceedingly Glyn from every standpoint, a fact which brings the concentrated effort of a good cast and an elaborate production to very little value. Using coincidence entirely to both introduce and develop a characteristically fervid, if somewhat tasteless romance, the authoress unwittingly provides pronounced comedy for the audience in the Alpine rescue incident. The scenarist or Director Sam Woods should have saved its hysteria from attaining the burlesque, but somehow neither did and any serious aspect for the photoplay is forthwith demolished. Aside from this fatal error, we must decide that the adaptation and direction accomplishes an unusual amount of satisfaction with the material at hand.

Gloria Swanson, the star, plays a typical Glyn heroine, grown from naive childhood to sophisticated maturity over night, as it were, and as quickly married to a grandfatherly millionaire. Theodora is rescued from various dire deaths by the young Lord Bracondale and in an unchallengingly feminine manner thereupon quite originally falls in love with her protector. We see nothing new of Miss Swanson in this role. Elaborate costuming and her usual poise bolster the part, but scarcely humanize it. The exotic Swanson and the ambitious Glyn do not mix with any notable success. The former is rather cheapened by the latter.

LES BATES

Playing Dugan in "Belle of Alaska"

Rodolph Valentino is graceful and patently fascinating as Bracondale. An Italian grandmother is casually mentioned as an excuse for his type.

Alec Francis in Captain Fitzgerald and Robert Bolder in Theodora's uninteresting but sympathetic husband render the two characters far more valuable than the remainder.

Edythe Chapman, F. R. Butler and June Elvidge complete the cast in minor parts.

Al Gilks photographed "Beyond the Rocks." It is distributed by Paramount.

"HIS BACK AGAINST THE WALL" California

Julien Josephson's screen version of John Frederick's "His Back Against the Wall," is a mildly entertaining comedy featuring Raymond Hatton. Goldwyn produced the picture—a flimsy vehicle, in an enthusiastic manner which is lately rather characteristic of that organization with such material. There are perhaps two genuinely amusing situations in the scenario and not enough of either romance or sympathy to fill it out. Such action, as there is, has been well directed by Roland V. Lee, in whose hands the filming was accomplished. Max Fabian's photography is standard; some of the sets are obviously faked.

Hatton makes a picturesque character out of Jeremy Dice, the cowardly tailor who almost overnight finds himself a bad man of the West with all a bad man's terrifying responsibilities. Nevertheless, this featured role lacks much of the enjoyment which we have found in many of his minor parts. It is something hard to distinguish between intended comedy and pathos. All around this actor is at his best advantage in vivid things. Jeremy is a bit colorless.

Virginia Valli makes an attractive heroine although she is called upon for very little effort.

Gordon Russell, Fred Kohler and Jack Curtis do the horrible bandits with whom the simple minded Jeremy is dragged in contact, while Will Walling and W. H. Bainbridge fill other positions.

The chief dissatisfaction in "His Back Against the Wall" is its great lack of meaty screen situations or even possibilities.

Interesting Personalities

VIRGINIA FOX

To figuratively be precipitated into the "movies," to photograph and act like an old "trouser," to become leading lady to one of the screen's most popular comedians, and within two years' time to become the star and featured player of a motion picture company are the brief high-spots in the career of Virginia Fox.

Miss Fox, while out visiting in California, was a spectator one day on Mack Sennett's lot and when that director saw Miss Fox he asked her would she like to become a member of his company. She started work the next day. Following about six months' work with Sennett, Miss Fox was engaged to become the leading lady opposite Buster Keaton with whom she continued until Billy Joy, brother of the new Paramount star, Leatrice Joy, became a director and producer.

Looking about for a suitable type, Mr. Joy decided that Miss Fox possessed the desired qualifications to a greater degree than any one else that he knew in the profession. Owing to the fact that she was engaged by the Keaton company, he could not secure her for full time, so he made arrangements whereby Miss Fox would be loaned to him "in-between-pictures." With the Joy Comedy company Miss Fox will occupy the stellar roles and the parts which she is engaged to enact will particularly meet her personality.

When Miss Fox was asked concerning the goal towards which she is working, she replied that inasmuch as she had been practically slipped into the motion picture profession her sole intent and purpose was to work as hard and as assiduously as she possibly could, until she had reached the greatest heights possible to her, and then when she had attained this—well, a little "grey home in the West," a pretty garden, lots of flowers, books and a dog, and above all, her mother, father and grandmother, to whom she is exceptionally devoted.

Henry Hebert and Oliver Hardy are playing important parts in "Dicky," starring Earle Williams under the direction of Robert Ensminger.

MAYER SIGNS LEWIS STONE

Lewis Stone was this week engaged by Louis B. Mayer for the leading role in the next John M. Stahl Production, preparations for which are now under way. This will be Mr. Stone's second picture under Mr. Stahl's direction, having appeared in "The Child Thou Gavest Me" some months ago. He will start at the Mayer Studio as soon as he completes his part in "The Black Orchid," which Rex Ingram is now directing at the Metro Studio.

FORSAKES FILMS

Magda Lane, leading woman in motion pictures, has embarked on a business career, having become the Hollywood representative of the Motor Service Corporation. Miss Lane was at Universal for four years. She played opposite Herbert Rawlinson in "Smashing Through," "The Man Trap" and "The Crookedest Man in the World." She also appeared in numerous serials and two-reel pictures.

MILLER AT VITAGRAPH

Patsy Ruth Miller has been chosen to enact the feminine lead opposite Earle Williams in "Dicky," which recently went into production at Vitagraph.

HALL WITH CAREY PRODUCTIONS

Geo. Edwardes Hall, long associated with Herbert Brenon as production manager for such pictures as "The Lone Wolf," "War Brides," "Daughter of the Gods," and others, and who has made several pictures abroad, is at present continuity and title writer for Harry Carey at the R.-C. Studios.

PERCY AND EDDY AT UNIVERSAL

Eileen Percy and Helen Jerome Eddy will have the principal feminine roles in "The Flirt," to be filmed at Universal City as a Universal-Jewel all-star production from Booth Tarkington's epic of small town life.

DIX GOES TO ENGLAND

Richard Dix, Goldwyn leading man, has been sent to England to play the leading part in Goldwyn's production of "The Christian," which is to be made under the direct supervision of the author, Hall Caine.

ALDEN WITH BARTHELMESS

Mary Alden has been signed to play the part of Richard Barthelmess' mother in his forthcoming production of "The Bond-boy."

The cast of Glen Hunter's current starring vehicle, "Second Fiddle," includes among others Helenka Adamowska, Leslie Stowe, Kenneth Murchinson, George Mirchell and William Nally.

In Jack Pickford's party, which left for Louisville, Ky., early this week, were: Art Rosson, director; Edward Brophy, assistant director; J. D. Jennings, cinematographer; Jockey Wilson and Donald C. Thompson.

The Pickford party will be away from Los Angeles for at least six weeks.

MYERS OPPOSITE WALTON

Harry Myers, star in the recently completed serial, "Robinson Crusoe," has been signed to play opposite Gladys Walton in "Top O' the Morning," Anne Caldwell's Irish play which Edward Laemmle is directing.

MARY ASTOR WITH HUNTER

Mary Astor, who recently starred in the series of paintings made by Triart, started work recently at the Glendale Studios, N. Y., in "Second Fiddle." She will interpret the leading feminine role opposite Glen Hunter, who is starred in the subject.

DENNY IN "THE SUBURBAN"

Reginald Denny, British actor, star of "The Leather Pushers" series, will play the leading masculine role in Charles T. Dazey's "The Suburban," the filming of which is about to start at Universal under the direction of King Baggot.

Wadsworth Harris is playing Captain Wayne in "The Call of Home," at New Pantages.

Natalie Johnson, formerly with the Ziegfeld Follies, has been engaged for Christie Comedies.

Paul Hurst has taken up the directorial reins for the Jack Hoxie Co. which is producing a series of western dramas.

Marion Feducha, child actor, has just returned from a four-weeks engagement with the Victor Schertzing Productions at Santa Barbara.

It is rumored that Claire Windsor, who recently completed a picture for Goldwyn, will make her next appearance under the Fox Banner.

George Nichols and Tom Kennedy are members of the all-star cast of "The Flirt," the forthcoming Universal-Jewel production which Hobart Henley is directing.

Joseph Girard has been engaged to play a heavy role in Universal's historical chapter play, "Perils of the Yukon," in which William Desmond is starring.

Frank L. Smith, of Pathe, has arrived here from the East to assist with the continuity of the Ruth Roland serial now in production at the United Studios.

Mary Foy and Townsend Martin, who were seen with Glen Hunter in his first picture, "The Cradle Buster," are also included in the cast of Mr. Hunter's current production, "Second Fiddle."

Renee Adoree returns to the screen having been engaged by Rowland V. Lee to play opposite William Russell in "The Self Made Man." Miss Adoree is the wife of Tom Moore and has played opposite Mr. Moore in several productions.

"The Wrong Party," which William Watson is directing at Universal City with Neely Edwards in the stellar part, has Florence Gilbert, Bert Roach, Alfred Hollingsworth, Billie Latimer, Gloria Davenport and Jerry Mandy in supporting roles.

Johnnie Walker, juvenile of the Fox feature, "Over the Hill," has just returned from the big tree country making "The Malamute," directed by Cliff Smith, Bill Hart's former director. Mr. Walker stars in this Curwood story with Ruth Clifford opposite.

Pickups By The Staff

INCE ADDRESSES CONVENTION

Thomas H. Ince, the producer, attended recently the first big gathering of American motion picture producers in convention at Washington to urge "Truth in Advertising" for the entire motion picture industry.

That the screen has reached a point where absolute truth concerning pictures from production to public showing, and every element of public interest connected with them, is necessary to hold the following of pictures as greatest of entertainment and educational medium of all time, was the declaration of the pioneer producer. Unless organized industry insists that all producers, distributors and exhibitors follow such a course, serious loss of public confidence will result, he declared.

NEW CLUB TO ASSIST FILM GIRLS

Half a hundred leading women of the films, with Mary Pickford as President, are organizing a club promising to put its stamp of disapproval on all members of the sex who do discreditable acts. It will also assist film girls who are out of employment.

"FOOLS FIRST" AT WASHINGTON CONVENTION

One of the features of the big national convention of motion picture theatre owners of the United States to be held in Washington this week will be the presentation of "Fools First," Marshall Neilan's newest First National picture at a trade showing there.

J. R. Grainger, Eastern representative for Neilan, will be in charge of the presentation.

CHARGES FILED

John Sinoupolou, manager of the Orpheum and Tom Boland, manager of the Empress of Oklahoma City, Okla., have been charged with violating the child labor law because of the personal appearance made by Wesley Barry at their theatres.

Ralph Talbot of Tulsa, Okla., was also fined $10.00 and costs for violation of the child labor law, in allowing Wesley Barry to appear at his theatre.

BRAUN OPENS OFFICES

Ted Braun, vaudeville manager and producer, has opened offices in the Superba Theatre Building, Los Angeles, for the purpose of arranging vaudeville and personal appearance tours for recognized screen stars. Mr. Braun, who has been identified with theatricals for the past ten years, is western representative for Max Hart, New York vaudeville manager.

"TROUBLE" AT KINEMA THEATRE SOON

Jackie Coogan's latest photo-production titled "Trouble," will make its Los Angeles bow at the Kinema theatre the week of May 20th. It is an original story and was directed by Albert Austin, who for many years was "official gag" man for Charles Chaplin.

Wallace Beery and Gloria Hope lead the supporting cast for this forthcoming Coogan release.

Ollie May Baker, auditor of the Jackie Coogan company, is to start shortly on the first vacation she has had in three years.

Doris Deane, Clyde Cook's leading lady, is the possessor of a tall gold and silver loving cup, won recently in a dancing contest at San Francisco. Lee Dolson, the vaudeville actor, was her partner.

HELEN DUNBAR

"FRECKLES" BARRY BACK HOME

"Freckles" Barry arrived home recently from Washington where he met President Harding and delivered to the Chief Executive a message from Mayor Cryer together with a basket of California oranges from the people of Los Angeles, and a copy of "Penrod" bound in Harding blue leather.

After meeting the President, "Freckles" was taken on a tour around the government buildings and then to the Walter Reed Hospital where he entertained the disabled war veterans.

Co-starring Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, "North of the Rio Grande," a Paramount production, will come to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, beginning Monday, May 15th.

Alma, the seven-year-old daughter of Frank Lloyd, director of Jackie Coogan's forthcoming production, "Oliver Twist," made her film debut recently playing a role in support of Jackie.

Tom Wilson is appearing in person this week at Tally's in a revival of his black-face singing and talking act in conjunction with his performance in "Reported Missing."

Gilbert Warrenton, cameraman to Alfred E. Green at Lasky's, has invented a new periscopic finder which is a great assistance in "setting up" for the shot and also saves much time and annoyance.

PRODUCER CHAMPIONS PICTURE WITH APPEAL

Some motion picture producers in Los Angeles have recently predicted that the film of the future is the "big" production, made with large numbers and at heavy outlay. That not all the movie leaders think that way is shown by the expression of King Vidor, director of "The Turn in the Road," "The Jack-knife Man" and other smaller successful pictures.

Said Vidor: "Those who express such sentiments wholly misread such signs as we have to guide us. They do not take into account the very important factor we call by the little word 'appeal'."

"What has lived on the stage? Not the sumptuous, extravagant spectacles. They have had their fleeting moment and passed out of memory. What one can be mentioned with Joe Jefferson's simple comedy 'Rip Van Winkle,' with its record of nearly half a century?"

"To take a more modern instance, the outstanding piece of our national stage is 'Lightnin',' Frank Bacon's simple homely play of trivial production cost.

"The most popular film of recent years is 'The Miracle Man,' which was produced at moderate cost, and others of great artistic and commercial success which cost comparatively little could be cited. A modest picture with a beautiful dog as its star has broken all theatre records in Los Angeles.

"Some pictures costing not over $30,000 have swept large fortunes into the pockets of their makers. The big spectacle has its market, but the smaller picture with that elusive thing, appeal, will never be passe."

Frank Lloyd has returned from a week-end stay at Catalina Island.

A radio receiving set is in use at the Lasky Studio with a radius of more than a thousand miles.

Jackie Coogan will not go to Europe until fall. His current picture, "Oliver Twist," is nearly completed.

By order of the Secretary of the Navy, Harold Lloyd's picture "A Sailor Made Man," is to be shown to 50,000 men in our marine fighting force.

Cullen Tate, assistant to Cecil B. De Mille, recently made a trip to New York to gather data and technical details regarding the woman's prison of New York, to be used in "Manslaughter."

Theodore Roberts, character actor, has been elevated to stellar rank with the assignment to him of the role of Josiah Whitcomb, which he will enact in Paramount's production of "The Old Homestead."

The Universal company has sent a large body of actors and technical men to Kentucky to film "The Suburban," one of the old-time melodramas of the stage which has its locale in the blue grass state.

Lionel Belmore, Gertrude Astor, Kingsley Benedict, Emmett King, Bert Woodruff and Bert Tracy have been chosen to portray principal parts in the next King Baggot photoplay for Universal entitled "The Suburban."

Production Notes

AT UNIVERSAL

Harry Pollard, director of "The Leather Pushers," starring Reginald Denny, has begun work on his second feature starring Hoot Gibson. Actual "shooting" on this production will start in a day or two. The story is Ralph Cummins' "The Cherub of Seven Bar," prepared by George Hively. The preceding Gibson-Pollard effort was "Trimmed and Burning."

Production has commenced on "Top O' the Morning," Gladys Walton's next starring vehicle.

A company of 241 people accompanied the unit directed by Tod Browning when Priscilla Dean left for desert scenes at Oxnard for "Under Two Flags," the screen version of the story by Ouida. One sequence to be filmed requires 750 extras. The picture is half completed and probably will be finished in two months.

The specials "The Storm," and "Human Hearts," featuring House Peters, are practically ready for the exchanges, while Priscilla Dean's starring vehicle, "That Lass O' Lowrie's," is being put into final shape.

The productions, "Under Two Flags," starring Priscilla Dean and "The Flirt," an all-star venture, are under way, while King Baggot is directing race track scenes of the Kentucky Derby, in the actual derby atmosphere in Kentucky, for "The Suburban."

Taking final form in the hands of Arthur Ripley, film editor are "The Black Bag," starring Herbert Rawlinson, "The Trouper," with Gladys Walton, "Trimmed and Burning," starring Hoot Gibson, "Afraid to Fight," with Frank Mayo and a series of dramas in which Art Acord, Reginald Denny and Tom Santschi star.

About every star is busy on new productions.

METROPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS NOTES

The Brentwood Studio is now the home of Metropolitan Productions, Inc. Clifford S. Elfelt, president and general manager, announces that stage and office space will also be leased to other independent producers.

Preparations are under way for an extended location trip to Victorville, where the cattle ranches and Mojave Desert will serve as background for exterior scenes of the forthcoming five-reel special, "Flaming Hearts," in which James B. Warner is featured.

Edythe Sterling has been signed by Mr. Elfelt to play the lead opposite James B. Warner in a new picture to be called "Crimson Gold," which will be filmed upon the completion of "Flaming Hearts." The supporting cast includes: Jay Morley, Martha McKay, George Berrell, Jack Pierce and Robert Burns.

Clyde DeVinna has been engaged as head photographer, and Jack Pierce, formerly with the Antonio Moreno and the Tom Santschi companies, as assistant director.

Frederick Reel, Jr., is considering some Far East stories for production prior to his series of snow pictures.

Buster Keaton smiled for the first time in years when he sat in recently at the Hollywood Arena fights with Joseph Schenck, Sydney Franklin, Millard Webb and others.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver, upon the completion of their engagement with the Pantages Circuit, will begin on the production of the third of the series of Ben Turpin Feature Comedies for release through Associated First National Exchanges. F. Richard Jones, who has finished with the direction of "Suzanna," Mabel Normand's latest starring vehicle under the Sennett banner, will direct this next Turpin special.

Buster Keaton is in the middle of production work on "The Electric House," a Joseph M. Schenck production. Buster's father is cast in the role of the father of the ingenue.

INDEPENDENT DISTRIBUTORS NOTES

As a part of a service plan to be extended producers, whose pictures it is releasing, Independent Distributors announced this week that a casting office has been established in its headquarters in the Loew State Building and that talent for the producer's pictures will be furnished from the names on file in its offices.

Twelve two-reel comedies featuring Billy Franey and Bob O'Connor have been obtained for immediate release on the state rights market.

Three pictures in the series of five-reel western dramas starring "Ranger Bill" Miller. "With Naked Fists," "Guilty?" and "The Fighting Ranger," are said to be the pictures ready for distribution on the state rights plan.

"Wolf Law," by Hugh Pendexter, has been purchased by Universal. It will probably be a summer release.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Two days' rest will be taken by Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore following the completion of the productions on which they are now working. Edward Montagne is writing Miss Hammerstein's next vehicle, while Mr. Moore's is also in the course of preparation.

J. L. Frothingham is organizing the staff that will assist him in the production of "The Vengeance of the Deep," which he will personally direct. Camera work will commence in about two weeks.

Director Frank Lloyd and Irene Morra of the Coogan organization are rapidly completing the cutting of Jackie Coogan's latest starring production, "Oliver Twist."

A Chinese street and a large Chinese sailing vessel are being constructed for the Constance Talmadge production of "East is West."

Mildred Early is in charge of the Nazimova offices during the absence of Mme. Nazimova and her director, Charles Bryant.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS SYNDICATE NOTES

Patricia Palmer, who was starred for two years in Christie comedies, has formed her own producing company under the banner of Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate and will shortly start work on the first of a series of six five-reel rural stories in which it is said she will appear as star. A supporting cast is now being assembled and the company is negotiating for the services of a director.

Earl LeGard, who recently arrived in this country from Sweden where he was featured in comedies and feature productions by a foreign film organization, has joined the forces of the above distributing syndicate and will be featured in a series of short reel comedy dramas to be produced by the organization.

Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate announces that it is in the market for feature productions that can be sold on the $20,000 basis and two-reel comedies that can be sold on the $5,000 and $6,000 basis. This company will consider pictures now in the making or those already completed. Directors, stars and others who can produce pictures economically are asked to communicate with the company with offices located in the Loew State Theatre Building.

NEW UNIT TO MAKE FILMS IN ATLANTA

Two motion picture corporations plan to make Atlanta, Ga., the center of their activities. The companies are the Southern M. P. Corp., a Delaware incorporation with a capital stock of $1,000,000, and the Atlanta Studio Corp., likewise a Delaware unit with a capital stock of $2,500,000.

The first company will finance production and the second make them here. It is understood that this last named corporation has secured a distributing contract for twenty-four pictures to be financed by the Southern M. P. Corp.

COMING WESTERN PICTURES RE-LEASES

Western Pictures Exploitation Co. expects to have thirty-six pictures for release during 1922-23. Of that number twenty-four will be Westerns in which will appear Lester Cuneo and Dick Hatton and the other twelve will be special productions.

In the latter class will be "Flesh and Blood," already completed under the original title of "Fires of Vengeance," directed by Irving Cummings and "The Eyes of Truth," an Elinor Glyn story.

SANFORD PRODUCTION NOTES

Pete Morrison has been engaged to play the lead in a new series of eight semi-western five reel features, to be produced by the Sanford Productions of Hollywood. The first release, the working title of which is "Iron Heart," is already in its second week of production.

Marcel Perez, French Director, and Frank S. Mattison, formerly of the Reelcraft, are writing the stories for this new series. Mr. Perez, who will also direct them, formerly worked with both Eclair of Paris, and Ambrosia of Italy.

Pete Morrison was previously starred by Universal in some fifty-four two-reelers, and has since starred in a number of five-reel features, including "Heading North," "Dangerous Love," and two more recent productions, "Crossing Trails" and "Daring Danger," produced by the Cliff Smith Productions.

Dorothy Woods, formerly leading lady with Hoot Gibson and Art Acord at Universal, is playing the lead opposite Mr. Morrison in the first production. Some interiors have already been taken at the studio in Boyle Heights, and the company is now on location at the Inceville ranch beyond Santa Monica.

Sanford Productions has leased the old Morris Schlank Studios on Sunset Boulevard, where it will also produce a new series of twelve two-reel Tweedy comedies, the first of which entitled "Fire! Fire!", is entirely completed. "Take a Tip," its second, is rapidly nearing completion.

PRODUCERS SECURITY CLOSES NEW DEALS

Three new contracts were recently closed by Producers Security Corp.

One with the Sunburst Pictures Corp. calls for six comedy dramas to be made in the East. Jack Wells will make six for Producers Security in Australia. Wells is the producer of "Queen O' the Turf" which R-C is handling. The Syracuse M. P. Corp. is now preparing to make the second of a series of six with Wyndham Standing as star. The first, "The Isle of Doubt," starring Standing, has already been finished under the direction of Hamilton Smith.

The future output of the Hollandia Film Co. of Holland will also go through this organization.

ARCTIS FILMS ON PRIZMA PROGRAM

Earl W. Rossman and Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt, Arctic Explorer, left recently for a seven months' hunting and exploration trip to Alaska, Siberia and Arctic regions. A specially constructed yacht will carry the party from Seattle to the Arctic regions, where a picture record will be made of geological, geographic phenomena of the Far North. The best of the color subjects will be released on the Prizma program.

PLAN OUTDOOR FEATURES

Three former Famous Players employees have formed a company known as Trail Pictures, Inc., to make outdoor features.

The company is headed by Frank S. Beresford, president; Humphrey D. Howell, treasurer and Louis A. Sarecky, secretary. Their last work with Famous Players was in connection with the post office picture made for Will H. Hays.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

Lloyd Hamilton, Mermaid Comedy star, who is in New York on a vacation, with his business partner, Jack White concluded an agreement recently with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, whereby he will produce six special comedies under his own name for Educational release in the 1922-1923 season. Production on the first Hamilton Comedy will begin some time in June, and it will be ready for release in the early fall. The Hamilton Comedies will be made under the direction of Hamilton and Hugh Fay. Irene Dalton, who has played opposite Hamilton in each of the six Mermaid Comedies in which he has been featured in the current season, will continue as his leading lady.

Jack White will supervise the production

LILLIAN KIMBALL KNOX

Author of "Bindweed"
"Motherhood" and "Superwomen" of twelve Mermaid Comedies, to be made with all-star casts.

Hamilton Comedies and the new Mermaid Comedies will be made at the United Studios, where additional space has been taken over by Hamilton-White.

Hamilton completed his last picture of the current Mermaid series just before starting East, and the final Jack White production in this group was finished about the same time. The Jack White picture is "Treasure Bound," while Hamilton's latest is titled "Poor Boy!" Other comedies of the year in which Hamilton starred have been "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," "The Vagrant," "Rolling Stones" and "The Rainmaker."

Al Christie has finished the current picture which features Dorothy Devore. It has been titled "Mile-a-Minute Mary." "Bucking Broadway" with Vera Steadman and Neal Burns, is the latest Christie Comedy delivered to Educational for release.

"My Country" will be the next of Robert C. Bruce's Wilderness Tales. It is an appreciation of the Pacific Northwest.

Warner Brothers have purchased film rights to "The Beautiful and Damned," a "flapper" story by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

"FOOLS FIRST" RELEASED MAY 21ST

Marshall Neilan's newest production, "Fools First," featuring Claire Windsor, Richard Dix and Claude Gillingwater, has been scheduled for public presentation throughout the country commencing the week of May 21st.

Practically all the interiors for this picture were staged in original settings in Los Angeles and San Francisco, few stage sets being used. The picture will receive its national premiere at the Strand Theatre, New York, on May 14th.

BRITISH COMEDIES HERE

Dan W. Fish, at one time connected with Paramount in this country and later with Allied Artists in Great Britain, is in New York with a series of Lupino Lane comedies, produced by Globe Films, Ltd., in England. He has seven two reelers and two one reelers. Lane is at present producing for William Fox in Hollywood.

STROMBERG AND MONTANA IN NEW YORK

Hunt Stromberg is in New York where he is arranging distribution of the Bull Montana Comedies.

"Fifth Avenue," second of the series of Montana Comedies, will be made in the East.

BRITISH COMPANY MAKING HISTORY ROMANCES

The British and Colonial Kinematograph Company of London, England, is making a series of twelve one and two-reelers of historical romances.

The first, "Mary, Queen of Scots," is already completed.

Godfrey Tearle and Miss Jose Collins will appear in the series.

LILLIAN GISH TO DIRECT

Having once put aside a directorial crown as too burdensome, Lillian Gish, the Griffith star, will don it again and direct the production of "Three Wise Fools," the romantic comedy of the stage.

MACLEAN CONTRACT COMPLETED

It is understood that Douglas MacLean has completed his contract with Thomas H. Ince and has only his present vehicle, "The Sunshine Trail" to finish.

LEVY GOES TO EUROPE

Bert Levy, cartoonist, has sailed for Europe, where he will make a new travelogue which will be sent to New York weekly to be shown at the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" UNDER PRODUCTION

The W. M. Smith Productions of Tulsa, Okla., has started work on "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It will be in eight reels and is expected to take four months to make.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS INCLUDES NEILAN

Marshall Neilan was recently elected a member of the Board of directors of Goldwyn.

Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., of Great Britain, has purchased English rights on "The Jungle Goddess" from Export and Import.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

William Duncan has just about finished a Canadian mounted police story in which he and Edith Johnson (Mrs. Duncan) went through some exciting moments. William is nursing a sore arm from one of the mixups.

Morris R. Schlank returned recently from New York City where he represented local interests affecting a number of companies who make anything from animal comedies to feature productions.

Carter De Haven, while talking about gags in comedies and stories proper, let loose the following: "Gags are too hard to get and I wouldn't trust my best pal with an inkling of what I am trying to put over, fearing some one would beat me to it." Only reasonable to suppose that there must be pirates along comedy row as well.

George Stanley, for years an actor on the silent and spoken stage, is going to retire in favor of a commercial life.

Norman Taurog is as mysterious as the Japanese movement about our grand and glorious land, and he is just as hard to get to talk about his future, or that of his star-boss Larry Semon. However, he does admit that he will be shouting "camera" within the next seven days.

Robert McGowan and Scott Sidney were seen exchanging ideas the other evening in front of the American Legion boxing stadium. They appeared to be on friendly terms. They appeared to be on friendly terms third man—no, not the referee.

Babe Hardy is working in the Earl Williams feature at the Vitagraph Studios and looks like he really belongs in drama.

Harry Weil is taking a much needed rest after going through two costume plays in which he handled the position of assistant director.

Arthur Delmore is casting director at the Douglas Fairbanks Studio.

Bobby Vernon is doing a prizefight picture and was seen at the fights Friday night getting a lesson or two from the padded knights of the squared circle. The comic that tries to swap punches with Robert better watch his step.

Fat Karr has just completed a western character in "High Stakes" a Metropolitan production.

Lee Garmes is photographing the De Havens for R-C.

Noel Smith, who directs Sid Smith in the Hallroom Boys comedies, says that the boys will be back in harness within a few days, which ought to wake up mourners' row along Sunset Boulevard.

Dorothy Vernon just completed a part with the William Duncan company at Vitagraph, Miss Vernon, Billy McCall and Chas. Dudley, who are all recruits from the comedy field, are going in for drama.

Danny Hoy is supporting Mary Pickford. He put his name on the dotted line for a ten-week contract.

William S. Campbell is soon to have his own releasing unit and will have enough companies working to make some of our biggest companies sit up and take notice. He plans to produce everything from feature pictures to one reel subjects.

William Bertram is directing Franklyn Farnum for the Phil Goldstone Company at the Beechwood and Sunset Boulevard studios.

HARRY BURNS

Joe Rock is now in the East where he is attending business affairs with the Federated Corporation and also representing some other factions locally.

Alf Goulding just finished a burlesque on Robin Hood with Baby Peggy and a Century cast.

Vic Potel is working at Universal City with Hoot Gibson and from present reports he stands a good chance to become a star in his own right soon again.

The T. R. Coffin Company, which has been producing Jack Richardson Crescent Comedies directed by Bruce Mitchell, has moved over to the Cosmos art studios, where it will start producing some time this week.

Frank Alexandria is working opposite Jimmy Aubrey at the Vitagraph studios in a two-reel comedy which is being directed by John Smith and M. Peebles.

Henry East and his dog, "Buddy," have just finished a picture at the William Fox studios, directed by Tom Buckingham.

Billy Franey is working with Erle Kenton at the Fox studios.

Little Napoleon, the famous chimpanzee, is playing vaudeville under the guidance of Prof. Andre Anderson.

Vin Moore, 'tis said, will soon be shouting "Camera!" for a well known producer.

Ed Kennedy is directing Chester Conklin at Fox.

Wallace Worsley is directing a feature production at the Warner Bros. studios and has Dick Sherer assisting him.

Jimmy Adams is the latest comedian to desert the acting field for a directorial position, having cast his lot with the Century studios.

Harry Edwards is directing Baby Marie Osborne and is being aided by Rhody Hathaway. The company is working at the Astra studios in Glendale.

Grover Jones is once more directing Richard Talmadge. He severed his connections with the Al St. John Co. at Fox to return to his present place of employment.

Sam, The Monkey Man, has joined the Billy Joy comedies with his pride pet and bread-winner.

Eddie Laemmle says he is to finish the Gladys Walton feature and depart for Germany for the Universal organization. It was only a short time ago that Edward was directing two-reel westerns, which shows how fast some people climb the ladder of fame these days.

Walter Wilkinson is working with the Victor Heerman Co. at the United studios. Heerman is directing Owen Moore for the Selznick Corp.

Vera White is working at the Century studios with Director Alf Goulding.

Bobby Furher is working at the Vitagraph studios with the Jimmy Aubrey Co.

Reggie Morris and Gilbert Pratt are signing Universal checks as directors of a comedy company. They are alternating in directing Roy Atwell who has made a leap from the vaudeville stage to a one-reel comedy contract and then in to the two-reel class.

Brick Enright is aiding Director Arvid Gildstrom at the Century studios acting in all sorts of capacities from chief advisor to cutter for the fun-films that Gildstrom is making.

Chas. Chaplin was a late comer at the bouts Friday night. The way the famous comedian expresses his sentiments of the fistic doings is worth a million dollars if he would only allow a camera to register them for screen presentation. He was more interesting than some of the scraps.

Harry Lamont just finished a lengthy engagement with the Lasky-Famous Players studios.

Alice Howell is working with Owen Moore at the United studios under the direction of Victor Heerman.

A Writer, and a Writer's Point of View

BY RAOUL RODRIGUEZ

I had thought that an interview with Lois Zellner would have to be a dreary round of bombarded questions and monosyllabic answers. Even when I had entered the trim room with the fire, the davenport and the cat and dog, this impression was strong. But when, after a few introductory questions she suddenly shot out, "Now, here is something I want to say," I tumbled to my misapprehension.

What she wanted to say was, in effect, "Why, with so many talented screen writers, and with so much screen material on hand, must the producers turn to dramatists, and short-story writers for their screen material? The logic is the same that would send a buyer to a man with a reputation for making cakes for a loaf of bread. No doubt some of these stories and dramas make very good screenable material, but the fact remains that they have to be made screenable. And I fail to see the logic, except from an advertising point of view, of using this adapted stuff in preference to real screen writing. The fact is that the writer does not get enough publicity, enough of a share in the credit for the production to enable him to compete with the better advertised "outsider."

Although Miss Zellner is not a fighter for the "rights of the writer as against the producer and the star" it struck me that this was one conclusion one might draw from her emphasizing the point of advertising the writer. And indeed it seems reasonable to expect that the writer receive more publicity and more of an acknowledgment of his or her efforts toward the finished product than he or she has been receiving. Some glimmering of a fair return seems to me apparent in the treatment of John Emerson and Anita Loos, who have large publicity, although they have never risen above the "higher than average" story.

The only training Miss Zellner has received was garnered from her experience as an advertising writer, and through the reading of one short book on technicalities which she obtained at the public library and kept two days. With her marriage and consequent retirement from advertising, she says she found it impossible to "just settle down and be a wife," so she took up screen writing, because, she says, she loved the screen and felt that it was her medium of expression. Her first efforts were five or six one-reel comedies, not slapstick, but situation comedy, which she produced during two months. The producer to whom she took these, two of which she sold immediately, advised her that she was wasting her time at one-reelers. She therefore began five-reel comedy drama. That was six years ago, approximately, and since then she has stuck to it and the measure of her success lies in the twenty-six successful scenarios that have come from her hand in that period.

Among her favorites, she lists Charles Ray's "Bill Henry," and Enid Bennett's "Happy Though Married." She expressed a preference for Thomas Ince as a producer, because he very seldom changes scenarios. What a God-given thing is a man who leaves the author's work untouched, or at least whole, and how much Chopin would have rejoiced to have at his reach a pianistic Ince!

Visualization, and imagination, Miss Zellner ranks as the capital requisites of a successful scenario writer. On the screen especially, and more than ever in the writing of continuity, one must be all the characters in one's play in order to impress his audience with the message of each. Here, she pointed out, lies the basic fault of the various scenario writing schools, or rather of the amateurs who pin their faith exclusively on them. For all the training in the world can do no good if one has not the God-given spark of creation, which Miss Zellner possesses to such a happy extent. Many people, not only among the uninitiated, but among the producers themselves, rank actions, rather than action, as the sine qua non of a good scenario. The aid of this spark is indispensable in making situations rather than fights, and suspense rather than boistrousness; "I keep," she said, "a little list of nutshell characterizations at hand while shaping a story, and in making the continuity. It consists of the names of my characters and some little phrase which gives me a complete key to what every action in every case would be. In that way I can make my characters actually live, instead of being reduced to the status of badly managed marionettes."

"Have you ever thought of other branches of literature as mediums of expression?" I asked.

"No," she answered, "although I think that an acquaintance with the stage and the drama gives one a better footing in screen-writing; I have often thought of writing a play, but I feel that my natural medium is the screen and I intend to stick to it. I have several ideas for a play rolling around in my head, but they have not yet worked out on paper. Perhaps they shall, perhaps not, but if they do not, I think my writing will be complete without them. I love the screen primarily."

She mentioned the great elasticity of the screen as regards not only physical motion of the characters, but also characterization. Using the novel, one must wade through a great amount of words in order to do unsatisfactorily, and subject to the receptivity of the reader, what one can do in one moment, one glance on the screen, which is intelligible to all.

I mentioned other things. Painting, sculpture, music.

"My garden," she said, "is my nearest approach to the arts. I wonder if you can call it an art. You can see for yourself."

I looked down through a window at a bank of hill covered with gorgeously-colored flowers of every kind, bathed in early moonlight, such as sinks into the heart like a cool, soothing lotion of the Orient, and decided, within myself that when all Nature conspired thus to rest the soul of man, it is the highest art, because it comes from our great mother Earth.

Sitting again to resume my duties, a great yellow golden cat sidled by my chair and seeing that I noticed it, without the slightest warning turned on its side and pawed frantically at my pencil. This was sufficient for another lamentable digression, this time to discuss the primary passion of cats, that is, their inherent independence of body and soul, which renders them the targets for so much unsavoury criticism from dog-lovers, who class the fawning, soulless, selfless, entirely altruistic devotion of those animals so far above the honest, healthy, primeval egoism of the cat. I was reminded of Dinah Mullock Craik's essay on the Cat, a monument to the lovely feline.

As we stepped out on the tiny porch of the beautiful little house on the shoulder of the hill, the full beauty of the moon shone out like midday.

"This garden," said Miss Zellner, "is made up of flowers given me by friends whom I esteem. So I call it my memory garden, and it serves to keep in my mind the good qualities of its makers."

As I walked down, I had the first chance to look and see what impression I had of Miss Zellner. Frank, open, sincere, and a hard worker.

From other sources it appears that Miss Zellner has had five recent offers for continuity-writing from large concerns and from some independents.

"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME"

Pyramid Pictures

"This is the sort of old-fashioned melodrama which can usually be depended upon to win favor with a majority of motion picture patrons for the sufficient reason that it entertains without subjecting the on-lookers to excessive mental strain.

"The horse race scene is uncommonly well done, vibrant with color, dash and dynamic action warranted to stir the blood of the most blase spectator. The love interest both as regards mother and sweetheart, holds sway throughout, and that there are oceans of sympathy for the hero in his gallant fight against heavy odds goes without saying."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The production is a melodrama dealing with an innocent young man who is railroaded to prison, and upon being freed and returning home, hides his shame from his mother and sweetheart.

"There is considerable heart interest in the production and several good humorous touches, and as a whole it should prove satisfactory for audiences who like this type of photoplay . . . The most effective scenes are those showing the horse race which forms the climax of the story. This is well done, but at no time does the action really grip you. The action follows familiar lines and uses familiar types."—Moving Picture World.

"A strong racing story, containing good story interest and an appealing love theme. A really pleasing photodrama of smugglers, crooks who determine to 'go straight,' and a most exciting horse race.

"There is good story interest and a strong love story, besides a number of good racing scenes. And the picture contains a certain touch of genuineness and atmosphere of the South in keeping with the spirit of the tale."—Exhibitors Herald.

of Zenda,' for several big features, but Rex Ingram kept them carefully knitted together and as a result has welded a splendid box office, sure fire picture which Metro will release for the coming season. Ingram, certain in his direction, has spent considerable money on this production. Particularly lavish is the coronation scene, where huge masses of people throng the cathedral. This is one of the finest sets ever built and peopled in this country. It is exceptionally worth while. Ingram has carefully held to the text of the story and play, even to the extent of refusing to place the usual clinch at the finish, and having the lovers separate."—The Film Daily.

"THE GLORIOUS ADVENTURE"J. Stuart Blackton

"J. Stuart Blackton's production is important in that it gives to the picture going public the first full length feature picture done entirely in colors. This in itself is sufficient to give the film a distinctive place in the year's releases, and of course, establishes a precedent.

"In scenes where not more than three or four characters appear the effect is very good and the coloring usually quite natural. But where there are many characters employed the general impression is one of confusion. The people are not outlined and it is difficult to distinguish between players and settings. Other scenes suffer from too much coloring and are not at all natural. Yet again there are some individually picturesque scenes that are genuinely beautiful.

"The producer has used a historical background for his story which develops into out and out melodrama with the famous London fire playing an important part in the climax. The plot is rather slight and not particularly impressive, and suffers from a poor continuity.

"Lady Diana Manners, an English noblewoman, makes her film debut in the stellar part. She has a pleasing manner and a good deal of grace, but she is neither beautiful, nor does she display talent in the role of Lady Beatrice. She is decidedly lacking in emotional ability. There is a large cast and nearly everyone does fairly good work."—The Film Daily.

"Laboring with a cast, few of whom seem to be capable of portraying their respective roles, J. Stuart Blackton, pioneer in America, has given us a novel production in 'The Great Adventure,' featuring Lady Diana Manners. The cast is not particularly strong, the best work being done by Cecil Humphrey as Roderick, the villain, and Flora Le Breton as Rosemary.

"The story is a bit confusing, too many characters being introduced, many of whom really are immaterial to the main plot."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Lady Diana, who makes her first appearance on the screen in 'The Glorious Adventure,' is found to be strikingly beautiful of feature and of the type that lends itself especially well to moving picture photography. Her acting will stand improvement, but her appearance covers up to a great extent what she lacks at the present time in screen technique . . . The Color photography has given many of the scenes much beauty, especially so as the period of the story was in a time when vivid costumes were the fashion. But at times there seems to be such an amount of coloring that the onlooker becomes rather bewildered.

"The story, which is of the swashbuckling romantic type, is rather intricate, but it has been so skillfully worked out that there is never a moment of confusion. Also it has been handled with good attention to dramatic construction so that the interest is in crescendo."—Moving Picture World.

"THE TRAP"

Universal

"This is Lon Chaney's first starring vehicle for Universal and in it exhibitors have a good bet. It is about as good a story as has come along for some time and was written by Chaney himself. It tells a direct, simple story of French-Canadian people, of a big hearted man, disappointed in love and robbed of his property, who waits seven years for his revenge—and then forfeits it. The picture was made for the most part in the open, at Bear Lake, and is beautifully photographed."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Judged from the double standpoint of artistic achievement and commercial value, 'The Trap' registers 100 per cent. It is a most unusual picture, altogether out of the beaten track, replete with pathos, the mad passion of revenge, the wistful love of a little child, the torture of a human heart soured and wrung by injustice, yet capable of the supreme sacrifice for the object of its affection—as strange and poignant a mingling of emotions as the screen has ever shown.

"There are absolutely no conventional angles in the picture . . . The interest never flags, the action never slackens and the audience is held spell-bound from the first to the final reel."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE FIGHTING STREAK"

Fox

"Tom Mix gives his admirers the type of entertainment that has proved successful many times in the past, in 'The Fighting Streak.' He has a part that calls for plenty of action and stunts—not the stunts that are inserted for merely sensational effect without direct relation to the plot, rather the kind that are the outgrowth of events, and come as a legitimate part of the story. Because of this, they are far more thrilling.

"There is some spectacular riding over picturesque settings and a fall backward down the rocks that help to stamp the picture as one of the star's best."—Moving Picture World.

"'The Fighting Streak' isn't as good as the last one, 'Up and Going,' because it hasn't as many situations nor does it offer as much variety in the way of stunt opportunities.

"The romance in this one is rather slight, but there are the usual number of fights and daring escapes with one rescue getting the picture off to a fairly exciting start.

"The development is somewhat anti-climactic but the director has managed to hold the interest pretty well nevertheless. The photography is good and some more fine western locations are to be found in the picture."—The Film Daily.

To You

For perhaps the first time in her two and a half years as editor of this publication, the writer intends to become entirely personal with her readers. This once she feels fully justified in so doing, as the following few lines must suffice for a public goodbye to the many supporting and receptive friends who have consistently rendered her post a privileged field for expression during the past months. This abandonment with seeming suddenness of a line of endeavor which has occupied her concentrated energy for so considerable a space, is merely an acceptance of the face that all progress and achievement are built upon constructive change and while it necessitates real courage to take leave of the kindly influences and following which has made any man's success, each and every striving individual must fairly meditate upon the future and recognize its demands if he would heed universal advancements.

The resigning editor of Camera! has considered these things and has submitted to the knowledge that there is other and more vital work for her at this time and that there are satisfyingly competent hands ready to receive and carry on the effort that has been hers in this honest little magazine.

Both Ted Taylor and Miss Ruth Wing, who will hereafter prepare Camera! editorially for your weekly consumption, have already proven to the profession the much of value that they have for it in other branches of picture work. Their immediate success in this venture is certain. The remainder of the former staff will continue as before with renewed energy in your behalf.

One thing is assured! Camera! will always be the professional man's and woman's champion and humble instructor.

Although she is severing her present connection, your most cordial and always grateful friend, the writer will never cease to be proud of your activities, your sincerity and your loyalty. She will never at heart be separated from your interests and problems, for the feeling is present that much of the meaning of these two and a half years is yet to be revealed in the contrasts and comparisons met in every adventure.

Maybe once in every little while she will come back for a chat with you through these familiar pages that she may tell you all about it. Meanwhile accept the heartiest wishes for the continued prosperity in progress of the humanest, best balanced and most satisfactory class of people in the world, from your obedient servant,

F. R. (Fanchon Royer).

Mock Fame

Many are called stars, but few are real.

Once upon a time, imitation was considered flattery. But that was before the day of the cinema.

Now it is annoying, irritating, to see loved screen players mimicked.

The parasite's hardest work in getting his makeup perfected enough to look 'just like' such a star. Then the most disgusting part follows—his acting, posing, and mugging after the fashion of the star he has chosen to imitate.

Probably conscious imitation began with the first recognition of Chaplin. His parodists hoped to "steal" his popularity. Did they? Chaplin's position as acknowledged genius of the screen today is the answer. And he's still being imitated.

Well, the fellow that persists in imitating Chaplin is no piker anyway. If he must be a fizzle, he isn't doing it on any small scale.

But any one dumb enough to think he is making a success at parroting is likely to think he is giving poor Chaplin a hard run for honors.

Next follows Mary Pickford. Imitated on and off the screen is little Mary. Well, it is easy enough. Any hairdresser will sell one the curls, and all there is left for the sweet young thing to do is pout, flit about in an enchanting way and there she is—not!

She might look 'just like Mary'—as the brag usually goes, but—a Woolworth diamond will only make a Tiffany look the brighter.

And next, perhaps most recent, is a certain small boy with freckles that has won fame at an early age. Wesley Barry, idolized by the public, has a double. And some wildcat producer is promoting this carbon copy, and with carefully duplicated poses in his stalls is exploiting him.

It's easy to stand still and look like the other fellow. Let him try to make over his own personality into our favorites! A flop usually follows.

We can hardly flatter another shadow by mentioning Jackie Coogan's imitators, because to mention them in the same breath would be sacrilege.

And there are as many others as there are celebrities. All of them are merely carbon copies of the original—and carbon soon rubs off.

KLUMB DISTRIBUTING POLICY

Chester Earle, general sales manager for Roy H. Klumb Productions, formerly with Vitagraph and Robertson-Cole, has just left Los Angeles on an extensive tour of the country in the interests of establishing a closer relation between the producer and the exhibitor. Beside exhibiting the Klumb pictures, Mr. Earle will interview the distributors in the principal cities of every state.

Among the pictures to be shown by Mr. Earle are two features: "Daddy's Love," and "The Bear Hunt on the Roosevelt Trail."

"Daddy's Love" is the Klumb production co-starring Ted Edwards and Billie Rhodes recently previewed at the Ambassador Theatre.

"Bear Hunt on the Roosevelt Trail," is a scenic which showed at the Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles recently.

Two other features, "Judge Her Not" and "Wolves of the Range," have been sold throughout the eastern territory.

A series of slow motion pictures have been contracted for and are being exhibited by Mr. Earle. These were produced on the special slow motion camera and will be released one each week.

Among the short subjects are three western dramas of two-reels each, entitled "Winning Claim," "Breaking In" and "Red Blood of the West," the latter featuring Fritzie Ridgeway.

"Gasoline Trail," "Fly Time," "Throbs and Thrills" and "Tom's First Flivver" are one-reel comedies featuring the mannikins, Tom and Jerry. These will be released one each month.

ABBE TO PRODUCE

James E. Abbe, whose activities have been confined mostly to portraits of prominent stage and screen stars, is about to take up motion picture production.

Roland Young, remembered for his performance in the stage play, "Rollo's Wild Oat," is interested with Mr. Abbe in his plans, and will act in the series of pictures.

Little Miriam Battista will be jointly starred with Mr. Young in the first picture, a stage story called "Big Time" from the pen of Polly Platt, formerly of the "Greenwich Village Follies." Others who will be seen in the Abbe company are Marjorie Peterson, Kirk Glover, Marion Allen and Fay Marbe.

It is expected that the pictures, all in two reels, will be released under the trade name of "Abbe Classics." They will deal in the most part with theatrical life, and all the productions will be made in the East.

WALSH JOINS GOLDWYN

It is understood that Goldwyn Pictures has signed R. A. Walsh and that his future productions will be released through that organization.

Walsh will be remembered for his productions, "The Oath," and "Kindred of the Dust," although the latter has not yet been released through First National.

Niles Welch will portray a principal role in "Rags to Riches," starring Wesley Barry, about to start production at the Warner Brothers Studio.

NEW PRODUCING COMPANY

Pauline Starke is to be starred in a series of four feature pictures to be produced by Stater-Starke Productions. Work will commence on the first about June 1st at the Balboa Studios.

WEDDING PRESENTS FILMED BY CLIFT

The honor of making all arrangements for the filming of Princess Mary's wedding presents has fallen to an American producer in the person of Denison Clift. Mr. Clift will be remembered as a scenarist and director for the William Fox Company.

By His Majesty's express desire, a film record of the presents has been made through the Dean of Windsor, and for the first time on record motion picture cameras have been allowed within the sacred precincts of St. James' Palace.

Under the direction of Silvano Balboni, two motor lorries were installed near the palace, which supplied the light for two sunlight arc lamps and a series of powerful spot-lights.

One entire section of the film is devoted to the jewels which were sent as wedding gifts to Princess Mary from all parts of the world.

It is worthy of note that during the making of the film both Princess Mary and Lord Lascelles visited the Palace.

Before the film is seen by the public, it is to be exhibited at His Majesty's express desire at the Palace. After His Majesty's approval has been granted, copies of this historical record will then be distributed to the four corners of the globe. The ultimate profits on this world film will be devoted to the restoration of the Chapel Royal at Windsor.

MOROSCO TO RESUME SCREEN ACTIVITIES

It is understood that the film activities of Oliver Morosco soon are to be resumed. Arrangements now are being made to start soon on the picturization of Edward E. Rose's "Rose of the Ghetto." Following that another Morosco production will be put under way here. This latter picture will be an adaptation of a New York stage success.

The first two features completed under the Morosco banner, "The Half Breed" and "Slippy McGee" were recently delivered to the New York office of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., for release through that distributing agency.

Contrary to publicity reports, Mr. Morosco further advises that his film production activities will continue in Los Angeles.

GETTING MATERIAL FOR NEW SERIES

James A. Fitzpatrick recently sailed for the continent and will make a three months' tour of Europe for Charles Urban, visiting England, France, Germany, Spain and Italy.

While abroad Mr. Fitzpatrick will gather material for a series on great European statesmen and another on the old masters of art and music, who have made continental history, both to be released by Kineto.

It is understood that the Southern M. P. Finance Corp., of Atlanta, Ga., will make fifty-two features a year for W. W. Hodgkinson Corp.

Gregory LaCava, cartoonist and motion picture scenario writer, is working with Johnny Hines, the screen "Torchy," preparing comedy situations and continuity for the Educational-Torchy Comedies.

Current Reviews

"MONTE CRISTO" Mission

Little did Alexandre Dumas dream that the glory of his Count of Monte Cristo would be recorded on the silversheet in such vivid reflection.

Emmett Flynn's conception satisfies the most critical, including those who know Dumas and have visualized his story in their own way. At all times has Mr. Flinn held the characters to a suppressed emotion, giving the production smoothness and depth seldom witnessed on the screen. His handling of Monte Cristo has put him in the class with Griffith.

Jack Gilbert brings to life the immortal Count de Monte Cristo. Despite current comments he is ideally cast. No actor has more poise—nor realizes dramatic values as does Gilbert here. The opportunity was worthily given, and he rises above expectations. From a youth of twenty to the maturity of forty, Mr. Gilbert lives the vivid Monte Cristo. Always adhering to character, Gilbert winds our interest about his fingers, picking our emotions up and making us hate those he hates.

From his Monte Cristo role Mr. Gilbert will win recognition of talents he has for some time possessed.

Next in line toward the success of this super-feature is the filming itself.

Lucian Andriot, an artist ("cameraman" here is a misnomer) has emphasized the beauty of the twelve reels by giving new lightings—some soft, still in focus—and some under water stuff so clear that it is nothing short of marvelous.

Then there is the two-tone coloring, so done that yellow tones pick up the lightings—outlining the players in glorious radiance.

Estelle Taylor is Mercedes and has little to do. She is still a bit stagy.

Virginia Faire is a picture and adds beauty to the production, if not acting.

It is hardly necessary to comment on George Seigmann. He is even better than usual here.

William V. Mong is especially well cast. His is the only part that smacks of the comic.

Renee Adoree has a small part, but she is dainty and winning.

Spottiswoode Aitken, who teaches the Count of Monte Cristo the ways of aristocracy, is splendid. He, too, seems always dependable for a good performance.

Robert McKim, well cast, plays his role convincingly.

Many other recognized screen favorites equally good are not given screen credit.

"GRANDMA'S BOY" Symphony

Unlike most five-reel comedies, "Grandma's Boy" lacks padding, has a plot and noticable characters other than the star.

Harold Lloyd is doing his share in making better films. It is hard to believe that "Grandma's Boy" is a five-reel film, so quickly does time fly while witnessing this clean boy comedian.

It will take keen competition to bring comedy standard up to the level of Lloyd's latest.

Harold is getting away from slapstick and is tracking along in the footsteps of comedy-drama, with more substantial plots and larger casts.

As a pampered boy, afraid of his own shadow, Harold gives a joyous performance. Grandma has broader ideas for her boy, the unfolding of which is screamingly funny.

Laughs are continuous throughout the five reels, but at times episodes reach a super-height of humor.

The characterization of Grandma is a dear. She makes "her boy" into a man by making him believe in himself.

KATHLEEN O'CONNOR
Just Been Signed to Play in
"The Old Homestead"

There is human interest there, too.

Harold has taken a step forward by winning the public's sympathy in his characterization. We (fans) pity him through tears of laughter. But in the story Harold wins out finally—just as he is winning hearts the world over.

Mildred Davis supports him in her own sweet little way. Our only kick is that she is to be taken from Lloyd's films. But we shall soon see her starred.

Charles Stevens fills out the cast capably as the heavy.

There is a prize windup scene that gets one of the biggest laughs of the feature.

"FOOTFALLS" The Mission

Footfalls, the Fox special, is a good example of a good story made uninteresting by director and star. Estelle Taylor is starred so the posters say, but she makes no impression, she is merely uninteresting.

Tyrone Power's interpretation of the blind cobbler listening year in and year out for the footfalls of his son's murderer moves all of us to tears. But the unnatural contortions Powers indulges in snaps us out of it at the height of our emotions.

Tom Douglas would have been very good left alone that is, not prodded into overacting. The boy has a pleasing personality and at the right opportunity will go ahead fast.

Gladden James, the slick city feller, and incidentally the murderer, is very good. He retains the art of suppression in all his work, from his first picture days up to the present.

Director Charles Brabin could have used the scissors to another thousand feet of the feature and have a better and less draggy product.

Wilbur Steele gets the credit for the story and most of the credit for the picture itself. It is a case of the story being dragged down by the producer rather than the producer having to work with a poor story as is so often the case.

Footfalls is an eastern made picture.

"A PROPHET'S PARADISE" Hill Street

"A Prophet's Paradise," Selznick's latest starring vehicle for Eugene O'Brien, is indeed wrongly titled. It should be captioned the Film Cutters Dilemma, such a hodgepodge of oriental scenery and actors as it turns out to be.

Eugene O'Brien must have made this film to win a bet.

No one knows what it's all about, but a good guess would be that the company took a camera out and shot everything they could aim at, stuck it all together and there you are.

INTRODUCING THE FIRST SCREEN PRODUCT

By Raoul Rodriguez

"A juvenile who barely reaches to Mr. Meighan's kneecap toddles into a decided screen triumph with a wide range of facial expression and a gift for comedy that is equal to Jackie's own in this feature."

With this eulogy, made the more so because of the reputation for plain dealing boasted by the paper that made it, the New York Morning Telegraph greeted the debut of little Bruce Guerin, the newest juvenile, who had such a prominent part in Thomas Meighan's latest release, "The Bachelor Daddy."

Young Mr. Guerin can be said to be about the first screen product as Mr. and Mrs. Guerin, although both possessed of a rich stage experience, have for the last eight years been exclusively screen people, and the young gentleman has been born in the profession. The honor he does his antecedents can be judged from the fact that at the tender age of three years, he is handed such a lovely bouquet by such a paper as the one quoted.

Besides the impression of a rounded actor that he makes on the press, this youngster impresses his interlocutors as one in whom the acting blood runs, who shows the love and the capacity for acting that is so necessary. His every motion partakes of the intangible something that one notices in the experienced comedian or man of the boards. He has that swagger, that ease and freedom of motion that immediately brings down houses, and listeners. As we walk into the parlor, we are met by Mrs. Guerin, who, being told of our errand, calls "Bruce, Bruce!"

Enters immediately a business-like, grave-faced little gentleman, and shakes hands, brings himself a tiny piano stool out of a

Where to Find People You Know

GOLDWYN SIGNS TWO NEW ONES

Eleanor Boardman and William Haines were placed under contract recently by Robert B. McIntyre, casting director of Goldwyn.

These young people will not be heralded as screen "finds," but will be given an opportunity to develop and show their worth. They will be placed in minor parts at first, but will be instructed by the directors, and given better roles as they learn.

W. K. HOWARD WITH GOLDSTONE

William K. Howard has been placed in charge of production of the melodrama, "Deserted at the Altar," a Phil Goldstone special. Howard has just completed his contract with the Fox Film Corporation, where he directed productions starring Charles "Buck" Jones, Johnny Walker and Edna Murphy.

ROACH SIGNS RAYMAKER

Hal E. Roach has added Herman C. Raymaker to the directorial forces at his Culver City plant. Mr. Raymaker is at present handling the megaphone for Harry "Snub" Pollard who is at work on his second two-reeler. Mr. Raymaker entered the film world in 1916 and since that has directed many comedians including Ben Turpin, Charles Murray, Louise Fazenda and others.

Jack McCready has just finished an engagement with William Duncan at Vitagraph.

William Condon, child actor, is playing an engagement with Katherine MacDonald at the Mayer Studios.

Mai Wells has been engaged to play a mother role in Constance Talmadge's current picture, "East Is West."

Eugenie Ford is playing in support of Earle Williams in his latest starring vehicle for Vitagraph entitled "Dicky."

Rowland V. Lee has added Otto Hoffman, formerly with Ince and Harry Gribbon to the cast of "The Self-Made Man," starring William Russell.

Merritt B. Gerstad is in charge of the photography for Elaine Hammerstein's first picture at the United Studios with George Archainbaud directing.

Another member of the cast selected to support Gladys Walton in "Top o' the Morning," is little Doreen Turner, recently featured in Campbell comedies.

William Orlamond has been selected to portray an important role in "Broken Chains," the Goldwyn $10,000 prize story, which Allen Holubar will direct.

Charles Van Enger, cinematographer, has been selected to photograph the Goldwyn production of "The Christian," Hall Caine's story, which Maurice Tourneur will direct in England. Mr. Enger recently photographed "The Doll's House" and "Salome" for Nazimova.

W. H. Davis is appearing in the role of a fisherman with Mary Pickford in "Tess," now being produced at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios in Hollywood.

May Allison is in Porto Rico making scenes for a new Associated Exhibitors picture.

Bill Crinley will assist Director Irving Cummings in the production of a series of feature films at Universal.

Dick Rush has finished assisting Director Cliff Smith in the making of a series of Oliver Curwood stories at Fine Arts Studio.

George Webster is at Lone Pine with Tom Mix Productions for a three weeks' sojourn.

Virgil Hart has started with Director Earl Kenton in the direction of Sunshine Comedies at Fox Studios.

Charles Hubar has just completed an engagement with Director Niblo at Lasky Company.

Nat Ross selected "Doc" Joos to assist him at Universal in the production of a number of Northwest Mounted Police stories featuring Art Acord.

Jack Sullivan has been installed as a member of the A. D. A. Sullivan has been working in New York City the last year.

Charles Woolstenholme returned Friday from a fishing trip at Mona lake.

Sandy Roth is leaving this week for a visit to his mother in San Francisco.

Irving Luddy returned recently from Denver where he has been with an Educational Film Company.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Howland have returned from a seven months' tour of Europe and Africa.

James Whipple has just finished the continuity of a seven-reel picture for Director J. P. McCarty, which will go into production very soon.

Jack Proctor has just returned from a vacation at Catalina.

Director Harry Burns, who guides the destinies of the young Simian, "Little Napoleon" for Morris R. Schrank, has previewed "Monkey Cop," the first of a series of three films.

Geraldine Condon, child player, is supporting Owen Moore at the United Studios.

Russell Simpson is among the cast of players in "Rags and Riches," a Warner Brothers production starring Wesley Barry.

Richard Tucker, Mathilde Brundage, James Gordon, and Helen Raymond will be seen in support of William Russell in "The Self Made Man," which Rowland V. Lee is directing.

Pickups By The Staff

SYMPOSIUM OF MOTION PICTURES

The Goldwyn Company is completing and will shortly publish a symposium on the motion picture, by various members of the organization. The subjects treated are, "The Motion Picture Industry," by Abraham Lehr, Vice President in charge of the studios; "The Author and the Movies," by Rupert Hughes; "The Changing Technique of the Scenario," by Paul Bern, Editor-in-Chief; "The Critic and the Movies," by Clayton Hamilton; "What About the Director?" by E. Mason Hopper; "Scenic Decorations," by Cedric Gibbons; "Casting the Movies," by Robert B. McIntyre; "Motion Picture Photography," by Lewis W. Physioc; "Costuming the Pictures," by Sophie Wachner; "The Art of Make Believe," by Helene Chadwick, and "The Stage Actor and the Screen," by Richard Dix.

"FRECKLES" ON VACATION

Following his personal appearance tour in which he visited practically every large city throughout the country, "Freckles" Berry, star in Marshall Neilan's "Penrod," is taking a vacation.

During Mr. Neilan's absence abroad, "Freckles" has been loaned to Warner Brothers, for whom he will start work shortly.

FIDLER TO WRITE TITLES

Announcement comes from the Joy Comedy Company that James M. Fidler has been engaged to write the titles for "Whose Little Girl Are You?" the current two-reel comedy starring Virginia Fox. The picture is being rushed to completion and Director Billy Joy hopes to have it cut and titled before the first of June.

OLD PICTURE REVIVED

"A Fatal Marriage," supervised by D. W. Griffith, will be reissued by R-C in June. At the time Griffith made it, it was sent out to the theatres under the title of "Enoch Arden." Lillian Gish and Wallace Reid are the featured players in the picture.

CHADWICK VISITS NEW YORK

Helene Chadwick, Goldwyn leading woman, is in New York for a three weeks' vacation.

Miss Chadwick has appeared in nine photoplays since her last trip to New York nearly two years ago.

Ruth Renick has been engaged to enact a principal role in support of Wesley Barry in "Rags and Riches," about to start production at the Warner Bros. Studios.

George Seigmann and William V. Mong have been secured by Goldwyn to interpret principal roles in the next R. A. Walsh feature, "Captain Blackbird," which will start production shortly at Goldwyn.

Fred Weller is enacting a part in C. B. DeMille's latest picture, "Manslaughter," now under production at Lasky's. Mr. Weller recently played in Penrhyn Stanlaws' "Over the Border," soon to be released and in "The Man Unconquerable."

LECTURER SEES PICTURE-MAKING

John Cowper Powys, lecturer and critic, recently glimpsed for the first time the art of picture-making at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios, where he watched Douglas Fairbanks and his supporting company "shoot" scenes in "Robin Hood."

PATRICIA PALMER

Who has formed her own company under banner of Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate.

"MICKEY'S" HOME AS LOCATION

In Marshall Neilan's new production, "Her Man," for First National, Mr. Neilan used his Hollywood home as a "location," both for interior and exterior scenes. Among the players who took part in the scenes were Leatrice Joy, Matt Moore, Raymond Griffith, Helen Lynch and Josephine Crowell.

Phyllis Haver, for a long time with Mack Sennett, has been added to the cast of "The Christian."

Harriette Underhill is to title "Married People," Hugo Ballin's next picture for Hodkinson.

Frank Howard Clark, who is writing most of the stories and all of the scenarios for Metropolitan Productions featuring James B. Warner, is a short story fiction writer.

Virginia Brown Faire has returned from San Francisco where she played one of the principal roles in Robert Thornby's "Wreckage," for R-C, and is now at United Studios preparing to play the principal feminine role in Richard Walton Tully's "Omar the Tent-maker," in which Guy Bates Post will be starred.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE PLANNING CAMPAIGN

The directors of the Lord's Day Alliance of New York have decided to demand a more stringent enforcement of the existing Sunday laws and to that end have pledged themselves to renew their campaign against all Sabbath sports and amusements which are conducted for commercial purposes. Sunday baseball and Sunday motion pictures are on the banned list.

The Alliance is extending its activities to all parts of the country and in the summer campaign will be preparing for a new assault on the Legislature which meets next winter.

GOLDWYN SENDING EXHIBIT

Goldwyn is sending a consignment of exhibits showing different phases of production to the motion picture exposition to be held in Sydney, Australia, June 7-9.

CHANGES NAME

Ramon Samaniegos, who plays the role of Rupert of Hentzau in Rex Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda," has altered his latter name to Novarro.

Marian Skinner is mourning the loss of her mother who passed away recently.

The New York Photodramatist Club reports its members have sold seven scripts to producing companies.

Miss R. Marguerite Mansfield, casting director for the Roy H. Klumb Productions, is leaving Los Angeles shortly on a two months' business trip through the east.

Lois Zellner, who has many original scenarios and adaptations to her credit, made the screen version of "White Shoulders," the new Preferred Pictures production in which Katherine MacDonald is the star.

The "Charles W. Morgan," an old whaling vessel, is being used for deck and cabin scenes in "Down to the Sea in Ships," an Elmer Clifton production with Raymond McKee in the featured role.

Ruth Stonehouse, who for the past nine months has been making a personal appearance tour of the playhouses of the East and Middle Western states, is completing a two weeks' engagement in Denver.

The Cosmopolitan production, "The Good Provider," opens locally at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday, May 28th, succeeding the engagement of "Beyond the Rocks," the current feature at that house.

The cast of the film includes Vera Gordon and Dore Davidson respectively the mother and father in "Humoresque."

Jousting was a popular sport among the knights of the twelfth century and the re-enactment of such a contest is one of the features in the forthcoming Douglas Fairbanks version of "Robin Hood." One thousand players participated when these scenes were "shot" recently at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios on Santa Monica Blvd.

AT LASKY'S

"The Old Homestead," Denman Thompson's classic, will go into production at the studio next Monday, under the direction of James Cruze. Three characters still remain to be filled. Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank E. Woods adapted the play which will be supervised by Walter Woods and the continuity is being written by Julian Josephson. The first work will be in the studio on the homely interiors suitable to the story.

Report comes from Yosemite Valley, where Irvin Willat is making his production, "The Siren Call," with Dorothy Dalton featured, to the effect that he will return shortly to the studio to complete the film. Mitchell Lewis has a prominent part and David Powell is leading man.

"Borderland," starring Agnes Ayres, will be completed this week.

The attack on Jamestown by the Indians was filmed last week at the Lasky Ranch for "To Have and To Hold," the George Fitzmaurice production in which Betty Compson and Bert Lytell are featured. W. J. Ferguson plays the interesting character role of Jeremy Sparrow.

After having secured desert shots for "Burning Sands," George Melford is now working in the studio on interior scenes.

Brush Canyon has been the scene of a number of important episodes in "Pink Gods," the new Penrhyn Stanlaws' production in which Bebe Daniels, James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hutton, Adolphe Menjou and others appear. The company is now in the studio, making interiors.

"The Man Unconquerable" is completed and Joseph Henabery is preparing to go to New York to direct Alice Brady. In the meantime Jack Holt, star of the picture, is resting for a brief period pending the start of a new photoplay in the very near future.

"The Ghost Breaker," with Wallace Reid and Lila Lee, was started last Monday under the direction of Alfred Green. Walter Hiers will be the funny negro servant in the picture. Arthur Carewe, J. F. Macdonald, Helen Dunbar and Snitz Edwards are other members of the cast of this picture which Jack Cunningham adapted from the play by Paul Dickey and Chas. W. Goddard.

Gloria Swanson is expected back in Hollywood around the first of June, when she will start on her new picture, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," a Sam Wood production for Paramount. Miss Swanson is still in Europe.

AT VITAGRAPH

Alice Calhoun has started production on "The Gamin Girl." The story is by Gene Wright and the scenario by Bradley J. Smollen. David Smith is directing.

Theodore Roberts and Sylvia Ashton appeared in a cast this week in the making of a picture for the Board of Education. Vitagraph contributed and dressed the sets.

President A. B. Cass, of the telephone company, was directed by W. S. Smith, General Manager of Vitagraph, in several hundred feet of film recently. The telephone president is to appear in a film depicting life as it is carried along in the telephone companies.

AT THE CHRISTIE STUDIO

While Al Christie is away in Europe, production is humming along at the studios, with directors William Beaudine and Scott Sidney on the busy list.

Beaudine has already started a comedy which will feature Bobby Vernon in a college and prize fight story called "Pardon My Glove," which was written by W. Scott Darling. He is now filming fight arena scenes. In addition to Vernon there are in the picture such well known players as Vera Stedman, George Pearce, Ward Caulfield, Tommy O'Brien, Harry Burns and "Zack" Williams.

Scott Sidney is casting "The Son of a

TRUMAN VAN DYKE

"Sheik" which will start in one week with Neal Burns and Viora Daniel playing the leading roles. "The Son of a Sheik" it is said, is the fourteenth Arabian desert picture to go into production in Los Angeles this spring, only this will be different in that it is a two-reel comedy and will find the funny side of romantic Sahara Love.

Dorothy Devore is taking jockey riding lessons for the first comedy she will appear in after Christie's return early in July. George Stewart will play opposite her.

NEW CASTING ASSOCIATION

The Reliable Photoplay Association has recently been organized to supply the motion picture industry with experienced talent. This will be a non-commission association, the members paying no fees for work obtained through the organization.

The services of Ed. Yeager, as manager, formerly connected with the Photoplayers Equity, have been secured.

The office is located on Sunset Boulevard opposite the Fine Arts Studio.

J. E. Williamson is back in New York from the Bahamas where he secured material for an undersea film for use in a future production.

It is expected that Viola Dana will start work within a week or so on the first picture on her new contract with Metro. Harry Beaumont will direct.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Increased activity at United Studios is indicated in the announcement of President M. C. Levee of the production schedule of the producers and stars who are tenants of United. Constance Talmadge has commenced work on "East Is West," the Norma Talmadge production of "The Mirage" will be underway shortly; Richard Walton Tully begins work on "Omar the Tentmaker" with Guy Bates Post as star within a week; J. L. Frothingham is practically ready to begin "shooting" "The Vengeance of the Deep," which he will personally direct; the next Jackie Coogan picture will be announced as soon as Sol Lesser returns from New York; the two Selznick stars, Elaine Hammerstein and Owen Moore, are finishing their current productions and will rest but two days before resuming activities; Ruth Roland is in the middle of a serial which she is making for Pathe; Allen Holubar will return to United to make another Dorothy Phillips production as soon as he completes a special picture at Goldwyn's, and the Hamilton-White units will return from New York and resume production early next month.

Miss Hammerstein's next Selznick starring vehicle will be laid in the Southwest and in Mexico. Edward Montagne is finishing the story and George Archainbaud will direct.

Ruth Roland and the company that is supporting her in her current serial, "The Riddle of the Range," have gone to the top of Mount Wilson for several days.

The Western street set is being used by Harry Carey for his R-C production of "Combat" and Earle Williams is using the Mexican village set for his Vitagraph production, "Cabbages and Kings," an O. Henry story.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Five new sets have been constructed on the dark stage for scenes that will be taken the coming week for Harold Lloyd's current comedy. Mildred Davis, heading the support, Eric Mayne, Norman Hammond, John T. Prince, Florence Mahon and Joy Winthrop are appearing in the scenes.

Harry "Snub" Pollard will start the coming week on a new comedy, his most recent picture having been completed Saturday.

"Paul" Parrott will exploit baseball in a comedy, production of which commences presently. Jobyna Ralston will play opposite the comedian with Eddie Baker as "heavy." Shots will be taken in the baseball park belonging to the Culver City High School. Jim Davis will direct.

Work on the current production of the comedy unit, "His Rascals," is about completed and photography will commence in about a week on the new script which Bob McGowan will direct. "Sunshine Sammy" and Jackie Condon are the principal children in the comedy and the same featured animals will be used.

J. J. Pasztor has been engaged as cinematographer for the Frederick Reel, Jr., Productions.

Russell Simpson has been engaged by Victor Schertzinger for his second picture which will be made in Santa Barbara.

William V. Mong will play a principal role in the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Vengeance of the Deep," which is in preparation at United Studios.

E. K. Warren will play the role of Lo Sang Kee in "East Is West," Constance Talmadge's vehicle of the Orient and Occident.

GERMANY MAKING HISTORIC FILMS

"The Film Express" (German) predicts a season of historic films for Germany.

Two productions based upon the life of Goethe are under way and will be made by Koop-Film and the Dea companies.

Victoria-Film has three historic pictures under way, "Mignon," "Oberon" and "Undine." Decla also announces three for next season based upon themes of the Nibelung, King Arthur and Agnes Bernauer.

WILSON TO SUPERVISE PRIZE WINNING PRODUCTION

Carey Wilson has been assigned as supervising editor of the production of "Broken Chains," winner of the $10,000 first prize in the $50,000 Chicago Daily News-Goldwyn scenario contest. The story was written by Miss Winifred Kimball of Apalachicola, Fla. Mr. Wilson, who joined the Goldwyn staff as author, was recently made associate editor.

FILM EXPOSE BOOKED BY KEITH

Following the decision rendered by Justice Delehanty in favor of Weiss Brothers' Clarion Photoplays, Inc., in connection with the injunction sought by Horace Goldin against the film expose of "Sawing a Lady in Half," the distributors of this film recently signed a contract with the Keith booking offices for one hundred days showing at their vaudeville theatres.

FOX SCHEDULE

Fox will have seven star series in its 1922-23 schedule. There will be fourteen specials and the usual complement of short reels.

The star groups will be as follows:

William Farnum in two pictures.

Tom Mix in eight pictures.

John Gilbert in eight pictures.

Charles Jones in eight pictures.

Dustin Farnum in six pictures.

Shirley Mason in eight pictures.

William Russell in three pictures.

There will also be three Lupino Lane comedies, three Clyde Cook comedies and eight with Al St. John. There will also be twenty-six Sunshine comedies, twenty-six Mutt and Jeff cartoons and the regular bi-weekly issues of Fox News.

R-C TO RELEASE "PLUM CENTER" SERIES

R-C recently closed a deal to distribute twelve two-reel "Plum Center" comedies, in which Dan Mason will appear. The series is being made by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corp. of San Francisco.

SHIPMAN FILM NEARING COMPLETION

The forthcoming feature picture, "The Grub Stake," which Nell Shipman is filming in the Northwest wilderness, is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that it will be ready for cutting within a few weeks.

Monumental Film has purchased "Catherine the Great" for the United States and Canada.

That the star system is losing some ground may be inferred from the action of Louis B. Mayer, who has parted with his last star, Anita Stewart. He is to hereafter stress story and production quality.

WILL BURN FILM TO PROTECT ASSOCIATES

Sol Lesser, vice-president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., on his recent trip East, contracted for and bought outright, the old negatives of "Oliver Twist."

The print is twelve years old and could well be regarded as an antique in film circles today. Lesser states he made this deal to protect exhibitors throughout the land from film pirates releasing the old Twist prints in opposition to the new production which Jackie Coogan has just completed under Frank Lloyd's direction. The old negatives of "Oliver Twist" which starred Nat Goodwin, will be burned at United Studios.

FRANK LEIGH

LATE PATHE RELEASES

Recent Pathe releases are:

"The Cry of the Weak," starring Fannie Ward, new Pathe playlet re-edited to three reels from a former photoplay. The cast appearing with Miss Ward in the playlet includes Frank Elliott, Walt Whitman and Paul Willis. The picture was written for the screen by Ouida Bergere and directed by George Fitzmaurice.

"On Danger's Highway," the seventh episode of the new Pathe serial, "Go-Get-'Em Hutch," produced by George B. Seitz, starring Charles Hutchison.

"Why Pick on Me?" current re-issued one-reel comedy starring Harold Lloyd, in which he is supported by Bebe Daniels.

"Do Me a Favor," latest Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard.

"Love at First Sight," new animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables."

A Gloege, formerly independent exchange manager, has been appointed business manager for Independent Producers' Distributing Syndicate.

The title of "The Man Who Smiled," the latest J. L. Frothingham production for First National release, is to be released under the title of "The Woman He Loved."

Buddy Weller has started work in Cecil B. De Mille's latest production entitled "Manslaughter."

CINEMA MERCANTILE CO. TO SERVE PROFESSION

The Cinema Mercantile Company is the handiwork of the leaders in the Motion Picture Industry. More than a year ago a general feeling arose among the producers that they could eliminate the paying of retail prices for their supplies and the use of properties which in many cases appeared exorbitant.

In order to overcome this condition the producers themselves organized and incorporated the Cinema Mercantile Company. The first detail of the organization was to secure a suitable location with ample storage space and manufacturing facilities. After this had been accomplished sufficient capital was immediately made available and furniture, draperies, floor covering, electrical appliances, etc., were purchased direct from the manufacturer.

The enterprise has expanded during this lapse of time. It now occupies a spacious warehouse on North Spring Street. Railroads deliver cars intact to our back doors, and now almost every class of home furnishings pass through the organization.

The execution of this policy has brought about a saving of thousands of dollars to the producing companies, and the organizers have decided to give everyone connected with the industry the privilege of making transactions through the company.

The strict adherence to one policy will be our plan, "One price to all, and that at a minimum profit."

The privilege is not accorded the general public and is restricted to those connected with our industry. It is a broad gauge policy of Motion Picture People for Motion Picture People. A policy that will give service and saving. It will meet with your approval upon investigation.

While at the present time the stock is limited to home furnishings there are no limitations to the many articles upon which we can save you money, if you buy through the organization.

TERWILLIGER JOINS PYRAMID

Pyramid Pictures, Inc., has signed George Terwilliger to direct its fifth picture, "The Flapper," by Eugene Walter.

J. Grubb Alexander and Harvey Gates collaborated in the writing of "The Belle of Alaska," a Chester Bennett production.

It is reported in Paris that Sarah Bernhardt may again appear in a film to be made this summer.

Charles Case has finished his first picture which will be released under the name of "You All Know."

Edward Burns has been signed to play opposite Constance Talmadge in the picturization of "East Is West," which will get under way at the United Studios early this week, for First National release. Burns will be remembered for his work in the George Arliss picture, "The Ruling Passion."

Work on the first subject to be produced by Patricia Palmer, who has formed her own company under the banner of Independent Producers' Distributing Syndicate, will commence as soon as her supporting cast is assembled.

The negative of "High Stakes," the first of the series of Metropolitan Productions featuring James B. Warner, was shipped to New York early this week. The picture will be released by Franklyn E. Backer through East Coast Productions as soon as the finished prints are available.

Contemporary Criticisms

"WATCH HIM STEP"

Phil Goldstone Productions

"'Watch Him Step' is an appropriate title for most anything that Richard Talmadge does. This light comedian of the fearlessly reckless knockabout type is due, and don't be a bit surprised if one of these fine evenings you find his name sparkling forth from some electric sign prominently displayed from some rooftop on Broadway.

"And his liveliness, recklessness and daring seems to furnish all his pictures, and particularly this one, with an atmosphere that is peculiarly refreshing, for he does give his audience something different. Perhaps, the stories are not new, but the way Dick and his players tell them is different, for injected into them are new and original stunts that appeal to the grown-up as well as the youngster."—Moving Picture World.

"As a 'stunter,' Richard Talmadge surely 'steps.' The main title refers to the amount of territory he can cover in speedy bounds.

"Richard Talmadge deserves better material than the shallow story known as 'Watch Him Step,' only a vehicle plainly improvised to show off the star's ability in hair-raising stunts, without offering his audience anything to balance the excessive presence of the athlete. Very good photography helps, and a pleasing ingenue lead, but clever acrobatic accomplishments and otherwise good elements in screen entertainment are lost in the shallowness of a story unnecessarily far-fetched. — Motion Picture News.

"THE WIFE TRAP"

(Paramount)

"Principal interest in 'The Wife Trap' centers in the sets, some of which are above the average. The picture, which was foreign made, gives every evidence of having been cut either for the purpose of shortening it or to eliminate scenes that did not come up to the high moral standard that the industry adheres to in this country. But as it stands now it is not plausible, and the spectator must shut his eyes to a good deal of improbability if he wishes to force upon himself the idea that he has enjoyed the production."—Moving Picture World.

"This may be drama in Germany, but it sure is comedy in America. . . While the offering is intense drama throughout and would probably be received as such in the hinterland, we Yankees will be reminded of the first motion pictures made in the land of the free and ever and anon smile up our sleeves at the amateurish 'emoting' of some of the characters in this 'eternal triangle' story.

"'The Wife Trap' has one redeeming feature. Its exterior settings are really beautiful, several being laid along the Riviera. Those in Egypt, however, are far from convincing in their realism and many of the interiors are extremely overdone in seeking an air of luxury. The sets are too crowded. The photography is poor in many of the interior scenes. The direction in this picture is jarring on one's nerves, after one has become acquainted with the work of the artists who preside at the small end of the megaphone in this country."—Motion Picture News.

"THE SPANISH JADE"

(Paramount)

"The reaction of an American audience to 'The Spanish Jade' will upset tradition if it is favorable. The picture is poorly constructed, tells a flimsy story in ragged continuity and frequently childish subtitles; in short, falls far short of the standard set by American producing units working abroad.

"David Powell and Marc McDermott are badly handicapped by story and support. The large cast is made up of strangers, apparently foreign, who display considerably less ability than is commonly observed in importations."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Here is something different. An entertaining picture staged in Spain with a wealth of attractive exteriors which are a decided relief from our own California locations. The entire company which acted this story was taken to the vicinity of Seville, the actual locale of this Maurice Hewlett dramatic romance. . . It's all really a treat to the eye which has become jaded with artificial backgrounds and Hollywood-made settings. 'The Spanish Jade,' from a photographic viewpoint is a thing of beauty for which Roy Overbaugh, who presided at the crank, must be given credit.

We are given an insight into life in the land of the senoritas, fandangoes, castanets and love—we have all heard of Spanish love. The native fair is a riot of color. The fights are all thrilling. We recommend this picture as a welcome addition to 'different' features."

"WESTERN SPEED"

(Fox)

"A full share of villains, sheriffs, fights and horses come with 'Western Speed,' Charles Jones' latest picture. Lots of action takes place, but it does not vary materially from the usual offerings given in stories of this type. The plot has numerous intricate situations that necessarily call for much shooting up.

"Exteriors and interiors are good and lend the proper atmosphere to the picture. Continuity smooth, action fast and direction good."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Relying upon a good display of characteristic action which is taken out in the open country, fulfilling the demands of its romance, and giving Charles (Buck) Jones the opportunity to flash his horsemanship and other heroic talents; 'Western Speed' will get by as an average picture of cowboy life in the wild and woolly places."—Motion Picture News.

"Action for action's sake is an abundant factor in this Charles Jones feature. Evidently the chief purpose has been to live up to the title; in other words, to thrill by an effect of continual skirmishes and physical feats. The pursuits and fights are of the type usually found in Westerns, only that the hero probably has more enemies than customary, and consequently the struggles are more frequent.

"There are a number of thrilling rides against spectacular backgrounds."—Moving Picture World.

"THE MAN FROM HOME"

(Paramount)

This screen version of the Tarkington-Wilson stage play offers less comedy and a larger proportion of garish melodrama than did the original plot.

"As a scenic attraction the feature leaves nothing to be desired, but in point of real human interest it drops 'way below zero mark."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Booth Tarkington's and Harry Leon Wilson's famous play, 'The Man from Home,' reaches the screen in a production made in Italy by George Fitzmaurice.

"The Famous Players-Lasky Company recently working in England went down to the Italian sea coast at Sorrento and made the picture under Mr. Fitzmaurice's customarily expert direction from a smooth running scenario written by Ouida Bergere.

"The villas of two Italian noblemen were loaned for the screening, and the formal gardens and the views of the surrounding mountains and sea coast have seldom made more beautiful settings. Some of the scenes have smoking Vesuvius as a distant background.

"The film translation is remarkably faithful, the original theme being bolstered up with a little more drama than it contained when played on the stage. It has general appeal."—Moving Picture World.

"SECOND HAND ROSE"
(Universal)

"'Second Hand Rose' is a human-interest story, one requiring no lavish sets nor extravagant ensembles. . .

"This picture will amuse, particularly, the Irish and the Hebrew, but is sufficiently equipped with human interest touches to entertain all other picture goers. It is clean, full of innocent fun, and incorporates an interesting escapade of the second-hand man's own son, as well as a romance of the daughter."

—Motion Picture News.

"Another feature picture based on a well-known song has reached the screen. This one is 'Second Hand Rose,' produced by Universal and starring Gladys Walton. The implied pathos in the title has been carried through the story and the 'second-hand' idea followed throughout.

Like several other recent pictures, there is considerable of Hebrew home life shown, and the picture is strong in heart interest, with comedy touches here and there."

—Moving Picture World.

"HATE"
(Metro)

"Even though there is a map drawn plainly for the spectator interested in this picture and he knows the ultimate climax that the electric chair even when he passes through the little green door, there is so much melodramatic suspense revolving around the attempt to save him which coupled with crisp incident, gives this offering an appeal, which makes it satisfying entertainment. . . Even with events working out satisfactorily for the accused you catch the electrifying action because it is so tense."

—Motion Picture News.

A SCREEN EXPONENT OF THE SPIRIT OF YOUNG AMERICA

By Raoul Rodriguez

He impresses you with the atmosphere of the North, of Rex Beach and of James Oliver Curwood, of Jack London, but most of all, of Harold Mills. Tall, broad-shouldered, smiling, easy-going, the man one always thinks of meeting in the bar, or the hotel-lobby of a mining camp in the North. He is the type of young American, caring little of the solemn trifles one calls "life," if only he can go through his smiling, with his right hand out, ready to shake yours.

As a man's life as seen in this moment is the sum total of all his past moments, and as this nation is the result of the fusing together of all the nationalities, with their rich, long trains of history in which dark textures and light are intermingled to make This Day, so is Harold Mills of today the product of all the Harold Millses of yesterday. And how many there are of them!

The first one is an eight-year old cantata member, taking part in a successful performance of one called "The Shepherd's Dream." The success of his part in this production so consumed him, that it proved fatal to the stability of life so praised and desired by so many of those sedentary philosophers whose brains always sit and never arise to sing and dance. The years between his virgin effort and the end of his college career, important ones in a man's life, were not enough to still this restlessness for success. His actor soul found solace in a stock company, in which he did everything, from juvenile, all the way to old men's parts. He was in stock when, with so many others of our nation's best, this husky chap was called, and answered.

After the war, in the West, those two fascinating noises, the click of the camera and the hum of the projection machine, burned him, and he entered the pictures, refusing, in order to do it, a handsome offer made him by Florence Stone, to play stock in that most discredited of cities, since 1918, Milwaukee. On the west coast, he supported many of our bright lights of the screen, with such success, that Frederick Reel Junior, looking for a virile type for the productions that he will soon begin to release under the Robertson-Cole banner, lost no time in signing up Mr. Mills as a star. His first starring vehicle will be called "The Great White Darkness." It is a northern story, and very well suited to Mr. Mill's exuberant, virile personality.

corner, and sedately sits down, crosses his legs, and begins to talk. In all this, no behindhandedness, no embarrassment, no inness, or put-on hilarity. This young person receives interviewers as though he had done it all his life, (and he has, practically), as though it were part of the day's work and meeting it as a business proposition. Immediately you are impressed with his candor and with a feeling that it will not be necessary for mother to urge him to talk, or to give him candy, or show him birds.

As he is in his parlor, so he is in his play, and so he is on the lot. His audiences have felt the contrast between this nonchalant boy and of the stiff bits of marionette-like pantomime handed us by so many of our present "boy stars."

All this is natural, however, in a purely screen product such as this. He can well say that he is the first actor "born on the silver sheet."

SECOND-HAND CRIMES NOT WANTED

By Roberta Lynn

For the benefit of those people who consistently and persistently refuse to see any good in the movies, it might not be untimely to mention that where there may be a casual concern willing, and seeking, to make capital of sensational crime, there is an overwhelming opposition among picture men who not only do not stoop to that, but are only too glad to swing their weight to any movement which will discourage such enterprises.

Further, I might add that any piece of fiction, however presented—printed, played, or pictured—which is built around a series of melodramatic facts, or around the personality of one or more of the principal participants therein, never really gets over. A few such make their morbid bow, struggle for breath, gasp inarticulately—and are junked.

All which seems to sum up to the conclusion that it is hardly worth while to get violently exercised about the screen's portrayal of the Hamon case, or the Stillman case, or the Obenchain case.

When people tell you that the drama—be it photo or stage—will prostitute itself to any idea, they imply that it is not only willing but anxious to pander to the sordid, the unworthy, the vicious. Anything, they amplify, to keep the box-office busy. But to this unfair and unscrupulous defamation, you can reply most truthfully that neither facts nor figures will bear them out. And you can reflect, too, that there are always with us a few agitators who will sacrifice anything to making sweeping manifestos.

As a whole, motion picture executives need no more defense than any other class of men—else I am blind and deaf and mute. And the high principles among the majority of them so far outshadow the deleterious commercialism of the few who have sought to more intimately acquaint us with Clara Hamon, Fred Beauvais and the husband of Madalayne Obenchain, that this brief comment would be superfluous, except that it analogizes the passion some people have for refusing to believe that all dogs are not black because one is.

Incidentally, it is poor business indeed on the part of those would-be promoters who attempt to foist that sort of stuff on the public, not to be able to see that such pictures are bound to fail. In point of truth, most such enterprises fail before they are well launched. What became of the Hamon film? Have you ever heard of anyone attending the Beauvais immortalization. And the next for the block will be "The Man in a Million" farce.

Reviewing in my mind all the many films I have seen, I can only recall three others which approach this type in the possibility of their putting a premium on crime. And they were all rank failures—rank in the sense of artistic appeal as well as financial. Though two of them guaranteed, in the photographic recounting of the well-known exploits of two real bandits, to turn all venturesome little boys definitely away from the fascinating pursuit of train robbery, they were at best mighty poor entertainment. I went—under protest. And—without protest—they flickered out after a brief run.

The young person featured in the third picture evidently did not win either herself or her backers a fortune, for I have not heard of her since, except for an item in her home-town paper to the effect that she had attempted to commit suicide to escape the pressure of several of Gotham's persistent bill collectors.

So, rather than waste breath thundering anathema against this type of film and their

WELCH LOANED TO WARNER BROS.

Myron Selznick has loaned Niles Welch to Harry Rapf for one of the principal roles in the screen version of "Rags to Riches," which is to be produced on the West Coast with Wesley Barry. Welch is under contract to Selznick and has just finished playing one of the leading roles in the Elaine Hammerstein picture, "Under Oath."

promoters, really all one needs to do is let the bunglers go ahead, spend a pile of coupons on their offerings to false gods—and then smile when they drift back to oblivion.

At most there is nothing in this scandal-screening to alarm any one. Both patrons and producers are safe, as long as the artistic output includes such satisfying entertainment as Frank Keenan furnished in "The Bells," Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs," Bryant Washburn in "Skinner's Dress Suit," Charles Ray in "The Pinch Hitter," Kathlyn Williams in "Conrad In Quest of His Youth." And these are but a handful of the many good pictures.

Why worry because an occasional promoter seeks to commercialize an occasional crime? No, people want their sensations first-hand.

with a new crime angle stirs deep interest here, in this Alice Lake feature. The conventional plot twists have been avoided, and the result is an ingenious development of a quadrangular love affair with just enough uncertainty to make it fascinating.

"It affords a relief from the obviously moral picture with its sharp delineations of the good man and the bad man. Each one of the girl's suitors is a human composite of weakness and strength, and the shifting of sympathies is one of the several proofs of realism."

—Moving Picture World.

"DON'T WRITE LETTERS"
(Metro)

"Don't Write Letters" starts out by being advice, but merges into pure entertainment that steadily increases in heart interest. While the theme is one that has been made possible by the war, there is no unwelcome emphasis upon war scenes, but for the most part, only a lingering sympathy for the doughboy who didn't have a sweetheart, or worse, for the one who lost hers during the war. The subject has been developed naturally and interestingly, with just enough humor to make the pathos effective."

—Moving Picture World.

"Suggesting a delightfully romantic idea which actually occurred during the war, the plot of this picture is appealing enough to score with picturegoers the world over. It may not be overly humorous as the theme suggests, but it carries such a fanciful flight of romance that the youth of the land will respond to its highlights.

"It is an idea which leaves the orthodox channel. It suffices for five reels because of some adaptable incidents. . . . Its sentiment is appealing without becoming sticky."

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Lon Chaney is seriously considering an offer to go to Europe to make "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," backed by local capital. Plans which have been under way for some time past should be completed very shortly.

Henry Lehrman, dame rumor has it, is soon to start another picture at the Century studio.

Henry Walthall is playing the role of villian for the first time in years. He and Charles Le Moyne are proving excellent trouble makers for Harry Carey in a western drama that is laid along the border across from Mexico. Walthall is working in his last motion picture for a long spell, as he is going to join the vaudevillians who entertain theatre-goers on the spoken stage.

Vera Stedman and Tommy O'Brien, who will be remembered for their performances in Charles Ray's picture, "Scrap Iron," are playing similar roles in the Bobby Vernon comedy at the Christie studios.

'Tis said Gale Henry is intending to do a come-back stunt, once more becoming a star in her own right, with her own company.

Clyde Cook ventured out to the fights Friday evening on crutches, which leads one to believe that the Fox funster is getting along nicely and should be back in harness shortly.

Bess True, previously with Fox, is considering an offer to go north and co-star with a well-known comedian, who is at present working in one of the southland studios.

Fred Fishback resigned from the Century studios in order to make his own pictures, and general talk along film row has it that he is to move over to the United Studios.

Hughey Mack, just finished an excellent part with Rex Ingraham at Metro.

It is said that Nat Ross, whom Universal recently promoted to directorship from the assistant director class, will soon be given a series of Jack London sea stories to do with Reginald Denny as star.

Max Asher is playing a character part at the Century studios.

Hap Ward is busily engaged with his dog, Camisol putting fun in the funny films that are daily making at the Century studios.

Ben Kline is cameraman with the Sanford productions who have established their headquarters at the Horsley studios.

Harold Beaudine is assisting his brother William at Christie's in the production of "Pardon My Glove."

Alf Goulding, Jr., made his bow in one of his Daddy's comedies on the Century lot, in which Baby Peggy is the star.

Tom Buckingham no more than finished his picture at Fox than he returned to his first love, directing comedies for the Century studios, and there he intends to stay for some time.

Craig Hutchinson, who recently went north for a vacation, is to return to Universal and direct Roy Atwell in a one-reel subject, and then either Reggie Morris, Gilbert Pratt or Craig will draw Roy Atwell in his next story which is to be a two-reel subject.

Charles Hockberg is putting the final touches to the William S. Campbell Comedies that are to be released on the Educational program. Cecil Meyers is photographing the scenes while Charles is doing the shouting of "camera" and "cut."

Florence Murth is playing a part in Earl Williams vehicle at Vitagraph.

Johnny Fox, Jr., is making his bow as a star in his own little way at the Century Studios. Jimmy Adams, erstwhile comedian, is directing.

Eugene Cori has just finished a part with Agnes Ayers at the Lasky Studios.

Jean Temple is now connected with the Film Daily in the offices of Harvey Gausman who is local representative for that periodical.

Harry Keaton, who was injured some time ago, has entirely recovered. Keaton, it will be remembered, was hurt while working in a Larry Semon comedy at Vitagraph.

Gus Leonard and Tom Dempsey, old timers along film row, are working at the Christie studios.

Fred Caldwell will soon write "fnis" to "The Night Life in Hollywood," a seven-reel feature, which he expects will do much to enlighten the four corners of the globe of the truth about Hollywood.

R. A. Walsh is expected to arrive in L. A. about the tenth of next month, and will work at the Goldwyn studios.

George Walsh, we are told, is soon to take a flyer in vaudeville.

Lou Howland is once more acting in the capacity of press agent for the Assistant Directors Association.

Stanley Laurel is working on the Universal lot under the direction of Gilbert Anderson (Broncho Billy).

Little Frankie Lee is soon to start a series of two-reel dramas in which he will be the featured player.

Ted Slomann is dickering for the rights of a story which he expects to produce at the Pacific Studios, San Mateo. His unit will be the first to reopen activities at the Northern Harry Fowler is taking a two weeks rest before "shooting" again for the Frederick Reel, Jr., Co. at the R-C studios.

Hold the Mirror Up to Motion Pictures

BEFORE the Wampas last Monday Adela Rogers-St. John advanced an interesting theory for the apparant non-response of the public to stars of motion pictures.

Since the war, people seem less liable to make idols, and more liable to tear them down, she declared.

This condition is aggravated by a mistaken tendency on the part of many players and directors—and more particularly of executives of the studios.

The tendency that has harmed motion pictures in the eyes of the public is that of exploiting utter drivel, and of suppressing facts that had to do with legitimate news—from the newspaperman's viewpoint.

Miss St. John is right.

The prejudice that many journalists feel towards cinema people is undoubtedly due to:

1. The reams of carbon-papered, mimeographed, or galley-proofed bunk that flood desks of editors daily;

2. The denials, subterfuges or stony silences of film folk and their representatives when information, concerning news occurrences the public is entitled to know about, is sought.

The writer knows. He pleads guilty on both counts. He has written reams of bunk. He has suppressed facts that might have been printed. With regard to the latter, these facts are almost invariably such that their publication would cause less harm than their suppression. You don't have to answer questions if you don't care to, but you can't prevent anyone from using his imagination.

As Miss St. John pointed out, no individual or corporation yet has succeeded in gagging the newspapers.

It has been tried, it being tried, but it can't be done.

Facts are bound to come out, sooner or later.

The later they come, the more damaging they are likely to prove in effect.

Frankness pays. The public has a right to know what it wants to know. The American press has made it its business to give the public its rights.

If facts are not available for public consumption, that great, news-greedy maw swallows fabrication.

Everyone is born, lives, loves, hates, suffers, dies. There is nothing to be ashamed of; nothing to conceal.

Misfortunes of many kinds occur to the best people; the public is ready to sympathize if it can understand. It cannot understand denials, untruths, haughty silences.

Motion pictures have suffered much from misrepresentation.

Some of that misrepresentation resulted from our own attitude.

Let's hold the mirror up to movie life.

Let's make Truth the rule.
—T. T.

CHICAGO Vs. HOLLYWOOD

While attending a dinner in Chicago recently, Rupert Hughes, eminent author, was confronted by a sweet young thing in abbreviated gown, who lisped, "Oh Mr. Hughes, tell us about wicked Hollywood." To which Mr. Hughes replied, "Madam, I'm going back there to get my mind cleaned up and learn to live quietly again."

Here's a Good Anti-Censor Argument:

DES MOINES.—Dr. Gustave A. Briegleb of Los Angeles advocates before the Presbyterian general assembly legal elimination of motion picture scenes showing:

Women in abbreviated costumes;
Drinking by men or women;
Smoking by men or women;
Triangle situations;
Inharmonious home life;
Crime or the underworld;
Death agonies.

Film Capital Production Notes

NEW BIBLE FILMS IN PRODUCTION

Sacred Films Inc. of Burbank, started this week on the production of the eleventh Old Testament story, "Ishmael." As soon as this story is finished, Sacred Films will launch a production campaign for the summer at which time the Egyptian sequences will be filmed. The stories which will be transcribed from the Scripture to the screen during the ensuing summer months will be as follows: "Jacob and Esau," "Rachel," "Return of Jacob," "The Reconciliation," "Joseph, the Boy," "Menephtah," "The Exodus," "Sinai and Pishgah." Upon the completion of the episodes which are now being released throughout the world, Sacred Films will announce future production activities which will be in the nature of feature films, that is, productions of multiple reel length.

TAKING AMERICAN COMPANY TO HOLLAND

Elsie Cohen, manager of the Hollandia Film Company, after spending two months in this country, is taking an American company with her back to Holland. Miss Cohen has chosen Evelyn Greeley and Carlyle Blackwell, with Oscar Apfel as director.

Joseph Farnham has written the adaptation from a well known play, the name of which will not be divulged until a latter day. The first production will be made in Harlem—that is the interiors—while the exteriors will be made in France, Austria, and possibly Russia. The Producers Security having been made American representatives for the Hollandia company, will make all distribution arrangements in this country.

"JOHN JACKSON" TO BE FILMED

"John Jackson, Detective," who has flourished through many issues of the New York Sunday Telegraph, is going to continue his work by becoming a screen actor. Irving J. Lewis, author of these short stories, has sold the motion picture rights to Hoey Lawlor, who is making a series of one-reel pictures with John Jackson as the hero. Work has already been started on the first picture. There will be twenty-four single reels in all.

"THE DANGEROUS AGE" NEXT STAHL PICTURE

An original story entitled "The Dangerous Age," will furnish the theme for the next John M. Stahl Production, for First National release.

Frances Irene Reels, who wrote "The Song of Life" and "The Woman in His House," is the author, and J. G. Hawks and Bess Meredyth are collaborating with the director in the preparation of the scenario.

C. B. C. PRODUCTION SCHEDULE

Harry Cohn, Joe Brandt, and Jack Cohn of C. B. C., will handle a series of six melodramas the first of which "More to Be Pitied Than Scorned," on which work is well under way, has in its cast Rosemary Theby and Alice Lake. Edward Le Saint will direct. Second is "Only a Shopgirl," and others on the list are "Sidewalks of New York," "Pal O' Mine," "The Lure of Broadway," and "Forgive and Forget."

BEATTY MAKES SPECIAL FILM

While Jerome Beatty was in Hollywood he was engaged at the Lasky studio in producing "A Trip to Paramounttown," a special picture showing intimate off-stage shots of stars and directors and scenes for some of the fall productions in the making

JOHN STEPLING
Supporting Viola Dana in "Glass Houses"

SEMON SUIT SETTLED

Larry Semon will hire his own company and make his own comedy productions hereafter at his studio at Vitagraph. It is understood that Semon will receive a specified lump sum for each picture, and will be responsible for all expenses incurred in production.

Semon's suit against Vitagraph for $1,000,000 alleged damages to his career, and Vitagraph's suits against Semon for $395,000 alleged loss on "The Suitor" and $210,000 alleged waste on five later comedies have been dropped.

CAMERAMEN RESTRICTED

A number of American cameramen were in Oberammergau when the Passion play was given its first public performance in ten years. They were restricted to the taking of street scenes, however.

"WINE" TO BE FILMED BY SELZNICK

Myron Selznick has purchased the motion picture rights to the story, "Wine," by William MacNarg, which originally appeared in Hearst's International magazine. "Wine" will be produced as a special feature with an all-star cast. In the schedule of production "Wine" will follow "The Easiest Way" and "Rupert of Hentzau," which are soon to be made at United.

CHEROKEE PRODUCTION CO., Inc.

The Nighthawk Keetooah Society, having its origin in the days of the seven council fires of the Iroquois and composed wholly of full blooded Cherokee Indians, are going to produce a series of two reel pictures using Indian legends for the story material and the cast to be composed of full blooded Indians. There will be twelve two-reelers in this series, after the completion of which the production will commence on a ten-reel historical picture depicting the contemporary history of the red and white man since the colonization of America. Continuity and direction will be under the supervision of John Paul Jones.

FILMING SONG

The Mission Film Corporation, which has just released the production, "Science—or God?", is now producing a short screen version of the song, "The Ninety and Nine." Clarence Geldert is directing, and Nigel de Brulier is portraying the role of the Shepherd.

The picture is being made on the Melone ranch, in the Napa Valley, near San Francisco.

Leon Rice, tenor of note, is assisting Mr. Geldert in preparing it for the screen. He is working in collaboration to time the action of the film to correspond with the words of the song so that it may be used as an illustrated song number. Gordon Pollock is cinematographer.

AUERBACH TO CONFER WITH SELIG

Louis Auerbach, vice-president of the Export & Import Film Company, Inc., is expected in Los Angeles presently for a conference with Col. Wm. N. Selig.

Export & Import Film Company recently contracted with Selig for the world rights of his entire output for a period of three years. "The Jungle Goddess" serial was the first production to come through under this contract.

Auerbach expects to remain on the coast about a month at the end of which time it is understood the Selig Studios will again be bustling with activity.

ELFELT CASTING

Clifford S. Elfelt, president and general manager of Metropolitan Productions, is now assembling the cast for the company's next picture, "Flaming Hearts," in which James B. Warner will be featured. The actual "shooting" on the picture will be started immediately upon completion of "Crimson Gold," now in the final stages of production. The story is by Frank Howard Clark. Clyde De Vinna will be in charge of the photography.

GOODMAN BUSY

"What's Wrong with the Women," is the title of the first picture which Daniel Carson Goodman Productions, Inc., will present to the public. The settings have been provided by the Tilford studios and the Equity Picture Corporation will distribute it.

Current Reviews

"THE MAN FROM HOME"

Grauman's

They couldn't freshen up the former story much, so they took "The Man From Home," across the Big Pond, and gave him a set of real foreign backgrounds, such as suffering palaces, terraced villas beside the sea, dippy mountain sides, Mediterranean sunsets and a Mount Vesuvius with a stationary column of smoke.

The entire result is a satisfactory production, for the story is that good, old, sure-fire one about the Yankee abroad kidding the monocles. Jim Kirkwood is it—Dan Pike from Kokomo, and he surely is the breezy, likeable native product from the ground up. He foils second-hand royalty and rescues Anna Q. Nilsson from the clutches of adventurers. Anna is very sweet about everything; playing victim or the rescued.

And, any gent who sports a pedigree but needs the money, should study Norman Kerry closely in this production, if he expects to steal an American heiress from her Kokomo lover. Kerry has a way all his own.

But the histrionic honors are stolen by someone else. One, Jose Rubens, a stranger to us, we regret, carries off two of the most difficult situations ever given an actor to face. And Annette Benson, as the Italian flower girl, registers strongly, even in her "bit."

Director Fitzmaurice proved a wiz in the selection of the beautifully balanced cast. It includes such competent and convincing persons as Dorothy Cummings, Geoffrey Kerr, John Milner and Clifford Grey. The foreign backgrounds and locations are striking at all times.

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW"

Loew's State

Cast, story and direction are admirable in William Christie Cabanne's latest production for R-C pictures release, "Beyond the Rainbow."

Cabanne still adheres to the old Griffith methods of production. The only fault—if one can call it a fault—one can find with his productions is that he includes so many motion picture favorites in his casts that it is hard to concentrate on any one of them as to their merits.

Lillian "Billie" Dove is featured in "Beyond the Rainbow." Considering this is her first big play, she carries off many honors. Not only is Miss Dove beautiful and graceful, but she has poise as well.

Harry Morey need not be introduced here. He "heavies" for the picture in a most satisfactory manner while Walter Miller, another heavy, forms one more link in this strong cast.

Then George Fawcett, best-loved of character men, fathers many of the cast, with Helen Ware playing capably the role of his wife. What chance has an old fellow in a picture with such charming daughters as Diana Allen and Clara Bow?

Miss Bow, playing a sub deb role, starts all the trouble in the story. She is cute and unaffected, and new to the screen.

Huntley Gordon, appearing opposite Miss Dove, fills his role acceptably.

Marguerite Courtot playing Esther, a character left somewhat in the dark as to her object in the play, is very good.

Macy Harlan, the pseudo-count, adds a brilliant touch.

Rose Coughlin, William Tooker, Edmund Breese, Charles Craig and Virginia Lee all work toward moulding the plot.

RUTH ASHBY

SECOND HAND ROSE

Superba

The title "Second Hand Rose" is the best thing about this Universal production. The popular song by that title has acted as a forerunner and paved the way for a mediocre picture. It is unfair to a little star with the ability of Gladys Walton to give her a story of this kind, for it will hurt her professionally.

Miss Walton, in previous pictures, had a promising outlook but to bind her hand and foot with this commonplace vehicle is unpardonable.

In "Second Hand Rose" she struggles along doing the best she can with the part of the little girl who lives in second hand clothes, has a foster father and handed down brother. But like all program pictures of this sort, the saccharine ending comes along to the great joy of the anxious fan.

The lighting and camera work are poor and do not do any of the cast justice. However, Miss Walton can stand bad lighting and photographing and still have charm.

George B. Williams as Rosie's adopted father, is a splendid character. His demonstrative role is a different one, and he handles it well.

Eddie Southerland, Rosies' brother, that causes all the difficulties in the story, is an appealing figure and decidedly well cast.

Jack Dougherty plays opposite Miss Walton and gives a creditable performance.

Lloyd Ingraham has done the best he could in the direction of a flimsy plot.

THE PALEFACE

Kinema

The difficulty in setting a high mark in comedy is living up to it, as Buster Keaton has no doubt found out by this time.

The latest Keaton comedy has less slapstick than his previous productions, consequently there are laughs in milder form throughout.

Keaton has made a slight transition in his type of comedy, or maybe he had no better material than "The Paleface" at hand. He only pulls a few gags and the laughs all depend upon whether or not the audience is in a responsive mood. Indeed this is Buster's off-day picture and let it be said, the first one that has fallen below his customarily high standard. At that this comedy production is far above the average and good clean amusement as well.

PARTED CURTAINS

New Pantages

"Parted Curtains" is at least two years old and shows such players as Henry Walthall and Mary Alden to poor advantage. Director Bertram Bracken was evidently not overly experienced when he made this production, for he has allowed his characters to walk through one scene after another in automaton fashion.

Walthall, since the making of "Parted Curtains," has recovered his looks and it is a shock to see him as he appeared two years ago.

Margaret Landis, probably new to the films at that time, was rather stiff and mechanical.

Mary Alden does the best she can under the circumstances. Her schooling in screen technique enables her to get along well with very little direction.

The story, however, is one of ancient vintage and shows its wear and tear.

"YELLOW MEN AND GOLD"

"California"

Gouverneur Morris has Captain-Kidded "Yellow Men and Gold" into a treasure island thriller. The strength of the story rests on the author's name.

Irvin Willat pilots it capably over stormy seas. He makes the scenes more breath-taking and colorful than the fiction story.

Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick take the defensive in the dash for treasure. Dix's fights cause many a fear in feminine hearts. But "our hero," as always, is invincible.

Helene Chadwick shows a bit of versatility in climbing ropes on board the treasure-seeking vessel as well as when she dives in to save the doped hero. But later he saves her—so that's that.

Rosemary Theby gives a first impression of being a villainess, but has a change of heart. She does justice to her role.

Richard Tucker's personality is wasted on the small part given him.

Harry Barrows creates dislike of the character he so well portrays.

Fred Kohler, Henry Herbert, William Moran, Goro Kino, George King, William Carroll and R. T. Frazier complete the cast.

Where to Find People You Know

DRYDEN WITH PATIO PLAYERS

Wheeler Dryden is at present associated with the Patio Players, an organization composed of actors, authors, musicians, playwrights and other members of the Hollywood and Los Angeles dramatic, artistic, musical and literary colonies.

Under the sponsorship of Alfred Hollingsworth and Joan Warren (Mrs. Hollingsworth), the Patio Players are holding periodical soirees at the Hollingsworth residence, which is fitted with a miniature theatre, called The Patio Playhouse, where several "little theatre" productions have already been presented and will continue to be produced in the future.

Mr. Dryden has been elected to the Production Committee.

UNIVERSAL ACQUIRES KENYON

Charles Kenyon, author and writer for the screen, has joined the group of authors at Universal City. Kenyon is Universal's latest literary acquisition following the engagement of George Randolph Chester, creator of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

"Kindling," "Husband and wife," and "The Claim" are among Kenyon's stage plays.

ROBERTS ADDED TO CAST

Edith Roberts has been added to the cast of "The Sunshine Trail," the Douglas MacLean comedy vehicle now in production at the Ince Studios under the direction of James Horne.

DEMPSTER WITH GRIFFITH

Carol Dempster will have the principal role in the new D. W. Griffith picture for United Artists, which is starting production in New York.

DOUGHERTY SUPPORTING DARMOND

Jack Dougherty is supporting Grace Darnmond in "The Wheel of Fortune," which Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke is directing at the Fine Arts Studios.

Phyllis Haver will have a prominent role in Goldwyn's "The Christian," about to start production in Europe.

John Cossar recently completed an important role in "The Self Made Man," with William Russell at the Fox Studio.

St. Elmo Boyce, formerly with the Maurice Tourneur Company, and the William Fox Studios, is finishing his fourth production with Douglas MacLean at the Ince Studios.

Dr. Horace R. M. Maddock has been engaged as Oriental expert and consultant for the serial, "The Riddle of the Range," in which Ruth Roland is starred for Pathe.

Master Ben Alexander has just finished a five weeks' engagement with Fox in "Puppy Love." He will also be seen in a new Robertson-Cole photoplay, "The Midnight Call," not yet released.

BURNS ASSISTING PEACOCK

C. French Burns, who has been writing and directing in France for the past sixteen months, has recently returned to Hollywood and is at present assisting Capt. Leslie T. Peacock at the Fine Arts Studios.

HARRY LAMONT

Who recently completed an eight weeks' engagement as a Spanish toreador in "Blood and Sand," a Lasky-Niblo production starring Rodolph Valentino.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS NOTES

At the bi-monthly meeting of the A. D. A., which was held recently, there were ten vaudeville acts to entertain the members and invited guests.

Eugene de Rue has just finished the fourth two-reel comedy featuring Bobby Dunn and is now making a series of twelve comedies under the Eddie Lyons contract, as well as co-directing with Mr. Lyons at the Berwill Studio.

Gordon Hollingshead is assisting Director Ed. Kennedy on the third feature comedy starring Chester Conklin at the Fox Studios.

Scott R. Beal has returned from Boulder Creek with the John Wray Productions and is now shooting at the Ince Studios.

Charles Stallings, former Assistant with Reginald Barker, and until recently Location Manager at the "U," has been appointed Production Manager in charge of the companies featuring Frank Mayo, Reginald Denny, Art Acord, Hoot Gibson and Bill Desmond for Universal.

Evelyn Selbie has been cast for the part of "Zarah" in Richard Walton Tully's production, "Omar the Tentmaker," which James Young will direct.

STONE IN STAHL'S NEXT

Alan Forest, James Mason and Andree Tourneur are supporting Shirley Mason in "Lights of the Desert."

Charles Ogle has an important role in "The Old Homestead," which James Cruze is directing at Lasky's.

Eileen Burdette has been signed by Billy Watson to play a comedy lead opposite Neely Edwards at Universal.

Mary Lee Wise has been engaged by Lasky to play Queen Anne in "To Have and To Hold," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Gilbert Warrenton, who has been working with Ed. LeSaint by special arrangement on a super-production, has rejoined the Famous Players-Lasky forces and is en route to New York to photograph the forthcoming Alice Brady production.

Ramsay Wallace has been selected by Vitagraph as leading man for Alice Calhoun in her production of "The Gamin Girl," which David Smith is now directing.

Bryant Washburn and Nigel Barrie will play principal supporting roles in "White Shoulders," the new Katharine MacDonald starring vehicle for Associated First National.

Helen Kesler and Frank Alexander, who rendered support in Jimmy Aubrey's recently completed comedy, will be with Aubrey in his new one, which is starting production at Vitagraph.

Lewis Stone has been signed to enact the leading role in the next John M. Stahl cinematic production for Associated First National.

Pickups By The Staff

GANTVOORT DISCUSSES CAMERA ANGLES

"The principal difference between acting before the camera and on the stage in a matter of space," says Carl Gantvoort, recently recruited from light opera by Benjamin B. Hampton to play the leading male role in his production, "Golden Dreams," which Goldwyn will soon release.

"On the stage, the range in which to act is not limited, but in motion pictures, I soon discovered that there are camera 'angles.' When I first acted before the camera I was accused of running out of the scene."

Mr. Gantvoort related how at one time the cameraman photographed only his nose.

"Of course, it hinders progress for a while, but it just means adjusting oneself to a new medium of expression. I have since learned that the camera's vision is limited whether in a close-up or in a long shot."

"Golden Dreams" makes Mr. Gan'voort's sixth appearance on the screen.

GOLDWYN VISITOR

Lady Priscilla Annesly of England, who has been visiting in Los Angeles, made a tour of the Goldwyn studio recently as the guest of Mrs. Abraham Lehr, wife of the Vice-President. Lady Annesly saw Rupert Hughes directing "The Bitterness of Sweets" and E. Mason Hopper making "Brothers Under Their Skin."

Anita Stewart is expected to leave for California in about a month, arriving in Los Angeles in time to attend the opening of her next Louis B. Mayer-First National release, "The Woman He Married," which Fred Niblo directed.

Five hundred extra people were used this week in support of Earle Williams' current Vitagraph production, "Dicky."

Clarke Irvine, writer of "Studioland," was recently appointed correspondent of the Evening Star in Shanghai, China.

Hereafter Fred Lancaster will be known on the screen as Fred F. De Silva.

Upon the completion of "The Self Made Man," with William Russell, Director Rowland V. Lee will take a three weeks' vacation.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Sweeney, director of telephonic communication at the Ince Studio, and William Francis Burke, assistant auditor, will take place on June 1.

Antonio Moreno made his debut on the stage in "Two Women," a Rupert Hughes play, starring Mrs. Leslie Carter.

Four women musicians are working with Constance Talmadge on the production, "East Is West."

Herbert Fortier, Frank Crane, and Oliver (Babe) Hardy have been cast in Alice Calhoun's Vitagraph production of "The Gamin Girl."

Edna Murphy, Wallace MacDonald and Jack Curtis are in the cast of Frank Mayo's current outdoor special at Universal.

A. M. P. A. HEARS OF HOLLYWOOD

Robert L. Sherwood, motion picture editor of Life, who has been looking into Hollywood conditions, addressed the A. M. P. A. of New York recently. His subject was "In Darkest Hollywood."

PHILIPPE DE LACEY

ACTRESS HAS MONKEY PET

Actresses of Paris have nothing on Buddy Weller, pretty motion picture actress, when it comes to setting styles in pets.

Miss Weller has been taking her pet monkey, Lady Diana, about with her for three years, and now we learn that the fair damsels of Paris have just taken up the fad.

Dick Smith and Buddy Ross have been playing vaudeville dates in the Southland as are also Billy Bletcher and George Fox.

William de Mille says: "The best argument against censorship which I have heard for some time is Dr. Briegleb's list of what he would compel us to eliminate from the films."

In the cast of "Under Oath," the lately completed Elaine Hammerstein starring vehicle, are Niles Welch, Mahlon Hamilton, Wallace MacDonald, Carl Gerrard and Dwight Crittenden.

Miss Carmelita Geraghty, daughter of Tom J. Geraghty, supervising director of Famous Players-Lasky, has returned from New York where she enjoyed a four weeks' vacation. Accompanying Miss Geraghty is Miss Elizabeth Cobb, daughter of the humorist, Irvin Cobb.

R. C. Ceder has once more joined the Eddie Lyons forces after a brief lay-off, taking Robert McGowan's place.

Frank Whitson, Milton Ross, William McCall and Arthur Travaras are among those cast in "Dicky," Earle Williams' next cinemaplay for Vitagraph in its first week of production.

PLAYING TAG WITH RHINOS

By William E. Wing

A large and very healthy appearing fellow slipped into town recently, carrying a husky appetite and a large package under his strong right arm.

He slid in so quietly that the first to discover his presence was the official cat at a laboratory. The gentle stranger deposited his goods, removed his coat and called in some hired help. The staff then proceeded to do a death grapple with a hundred miles of film, more or less.

The mysterious stranger was Henry A. Snow, and his name is going to slip around the globe in much faster time than the owner formerly slid bases in a bush league.

For Henry A. Snow had returned from a three year's hunt in the wilds of darkest Africa, with camera and gun, during which trip he travelled 50,000 miles by land and sea, to the tune of the clicking "box."

A little private showing was sprung a few days ago. K. C. B. borrowed lunch money and, after treating the writer royally at a hot-dog joint, chaperoned the same to the projecting room.

What we witnessed there is responsible for the above prediction regarding friend Henry. Both had witnessed the Rainey, Roosevelt and other jungle pictures, but despite the fact, were entirely unprepared for the sensational 10 reels of jungle dangers which rushed at us from the screen.

Lions were seen in the game of trying to "get Henry before he gets us." Five rhinos charged Snow and his men with two tons of death behind each ugly horn. Wild elephants pursued Snow's blacks, literally mowing down a small forest of trees in their mad rush. One monster tusker, which would have made Jumbo look like a lap pet, dashed directly up to the camera and, as we discovered in a following scene, straight over the instrument.

Thousands of strange animals, many of them never even photographed previously, were filmed feeding, at water pools, running, and in remarkable close-ups.

There is an individual of that expedition who cannot be denied worthy mention. He is the man who stood behind that frail camera and cranky away until the jungle beasts in their death rush were right upon him. He is Sidney Snow, a sturdy replica of a brave father. One can easily visualize the rush, the awful nearness of that crushing force, and then—what we do not see—the swift leap to safety, timed to a second, it would seem.

If we had the nerve of both Henry and son combined, we certainly would see that our life insurance was on straight, before trying just one of those cute little camera-rush tricks pulled so many times by the Snows.

If the impression made upon our group of reviewers is a criterion, Henry A. Snow's jungle special is going to zipp into the theaters of the world. We are just recovering from a severe case of gooseflesh, while K. C. B. hasn't been able to overcome his involuntary pompadour.

Alice Brady will resume production for Famous Players in June at the Long Island Famous Players Studio.

Production Notes

AT LASKY'S

Cecil B. DeMille took a portion of his company to Santa Barbara this week for scenes in "Manslaughter," his latest production.

The building of a ship to represent one of the vessels in which the colonists were conveyed from England to Virginia in the old days, has been a task for the Lasky craftsmen. The ship is for George Fitmaurice's production, "To Have and To Hold."

Mary Miles Minter will start in the near future, with Tom Moore, in a production of "The Cowboy and the Lady," Clyde Fitch's play which offers a new angle on the boundless West. John Robertson is to direct the picture.

On completing "The Siren Call," in all probability this week, Irvin Willat, will begin preparations for his next production, "On the High Seas." The new picture will have Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt in the featured roles. Mitchell Lewis will again appear in the cast in an important part. "On the High Seas" is by Edward Sheldon and is his first original screen story. He will be recalled as author of "Salvation Nell," "The Song of Songs," "Romance," etc. E. M. Ingleton is adapting the original.

Sam Wood, on his arrival from New York, will proceed with his work on his next production, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," with Gloria Swanson. While in New York Mr. Wood obtained some scenes, including shipping, street and other views. David Lisle wrote this story which Percy Heath adapted.

Alfred Green recently took his company, making "The Ghost Breaker," to Big Bear Valley to film Kentucky mountain scenes.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Myron Selznick is assembling the cast which will support Elaine Hammerstein in her next starring vehicle the title of which has not been announced.

Owen Moore will complete this week his current Selznick production, "A Previous Engagement."

Richard Walton Tully and Director James Young are selecting the cast for the second Guy Bates Post starring vehicle, "Omar the Tentmaker."

Lloyd Hamilton, Jack White, General Manager E. H. Allen and Lloyd Bacon of Hamilton and Mermaid Comedies, will return to the studios from New York around June 1st.

AT VITAGRAPH

James Aubrey this week finished a two-reel comedy and immediately started another.

"The Fighting Guide" is the final title selected for William Duncan's latest photoplay.

Bradley J. Smollen is preparing a new script for Mr. Duncan's next production.

RE-ELECTED OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Urban Motion Picture Industries, Inc., the officers and directors were re-elected. The officers are Charles Urban, president; F. R. Minrath, secretary, and M. E. A. Tucker, treasurer, and the directors, Charles Urban, E. St. Elmo Lewis, William Gettinger, M. E. A. Tucker, F. R. Minrath, Henry Siegrist and John Mason.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

John Griffith Wray expects to complete "Someone to Love," C. Gardner Sullivan's circus story, before June 1st. This feature will be an Ince special release for next December.

Bradley King is preparing an original screen story for early production.

Director Ward Lascelle has started production on the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "Affinities," with Colleen Moore in the leading role. The first scenes will include many water locations in the vicinity of Balboa.

JACK DONOVAN

SENNET OFFERINGS

The newest Mack Sennett comedy featuring Billy Bevan with Mildred June in the leading feminine role and directed by Roy Del Ruth will be completed, cut and titled, and on its way to New York for distribution through the exchanges of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., before the middle of June. This latest two-reel special, produced under the title "Such is Life," has been renamed and will be released with the title of "Oh, Daddy!" Supporting Bevan and Mildred June in this new comedy are Dot Farley, Kewpie Morgan, Jim Finlayson, Kalla Pasha and Teddy, Mack Sennett's wonder dog.

Ben Turpin's next picture for First National release will be known as "The Frozen Trail."

HAYAKAWA IN NEW YORK FOR SETTLEMENT

Sessue Hayakawa is in New York from Los Angeles, where it is stated that he hopes to reach some sort of a satisfactory basis under which he will continue with R-C until August 1st, when his agreement ends. If an amicable settlement should be reached Hawakawa will make two more pictures for the company.

The Granada Theatre, Hollywood, is the setting for the first scenes of the comedy, "The Son of a Sheik," which Scott Sidney is starting this week. Neal Burns and Viora Daniel are featured in this comedy.

AT UNIVERSAL

Frank Mayo, Gertrude Olmstead, Lambert Hillyer, director, and other members of the company working on Mayo's forthcoming production, have returned from Sonora, where they have been on location for a week.

Two episodes of "The Perils of the Yukon," the chapter history of Alaska with William Desmond and Laura La Plante, are being shipped to exchanges.

Starring vehicles for Herbert Rawlinson, Marie Prevost, Gladys Walton, Frank Mayo and Hoot Gibson, are in the final stages of editing.

Von Stroheim is busy preparing his forthcoming production. The entire back ranch stage with offices and dressing rooms, has been turned over to him and is being altered for his use. He will film a continental story.

Carl Laemmle has ordered the production of a scientific serial based on the wonder of the age, the radio. The Chapter will be called "The Radio King." Robert Dillon wrote the story and Robert F. Hill, who directed "Robinson Crusoe," will direct.

"That Lass O'Lowrie's," in which Priscilla Dean starred under Hobart Henley's direction, has been retitled "The Flame of Life."

Independent companies leasing space at the studios are: Irving Cummings Productions, Campbell Comedies, Herbst Productions, Phil Goldstone Productions, Warner Brothers, "Broncho Billy" Anderson and Sunset Productions. Harry Myers is the Warner Brothers star. Franklyn Farnum and Richard Talmadge, the Goldstone stars, and Jack Hoxie, the Sunset star.

R-C PICTURES RELEASES

Forthcoming R-C releases are: "Such is Life in Monte Carlo," third of the Hy Mayer TraveLaugh series.

The second Carter DeHaven two-reel comedy, "Christmas," "The Understudy," the latest Doris May comedy drama.

Starland Revue No. 3, the third of the series of novel short subjects now being offered on the R-C short subject program.

Pauline Frederick's latest production, "The Glory of Clementina."

MAYER STUDIO NOTES

Louis B. Mayer is enroute to New York for a business conference with his associate and counsel, J. Robert Rubin, and his sales manager, Paul C. Mooney.

With the scenario of "The Dangerous Age" practically completed, John M. Stahl is now assembling the cast for this future Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction.

BRABIN FORMS BRABIN PRODUCTIONS

Charles J. Brabin is one of the incorporators of the Brabin Productions, $50,000 company. The other incorporators are A. L. Raboch and N. April.

NEW WHITE UNIT

The Jack White Corp. has been formed with a capitalization of $200,000. The incorporators are: E. Krachie, A. Skillman and H. G. Liese.

This company will produce the 1922-1923 series of Mermaid comedies for Educational.

William Fox has issued orders that whenever the Nazimova version of "Salome" is shown, the Fox picture starring Theda Bara and made three or four years ago, shall be exhibited simultaneously.

Graf Productions, Inc., have moved to their new offices in the California Commercial Union Bldg. in San Francisco.

THE FELINE RETURNETH

SUPPRESSING the moot subject of what the public wants, seems to be about as successful as discouraging a pre-Volstead thirst.

That cat still is returning.

It mews plaintively, this time, on the pages of a trade journal, in an interview emitted by one of our own citizens, while he was otherwise engaged in guarding his personal effects during a visit to the eager and alert suburb of New York.

But, it is his conclusions as to the reason for the slump which really should interest authors. Concretely, he fears that screen writers have catered too exclusively to women, thus driving the male populace from the theater into more arid regions.

As many persons of the stern sex are unmarried, and some husbands have money also, the theater owners necessarily feel the concussion followed by the vacuum of their absence.

If it is true that the craft is crowding the boards with so much "misunderstood wife" stuff that the crude male is taking to the tall timber, it also must be true that to write "up to" man exclusively will cause a stampede of the roll-down-your-owns also.

Therefore the problem before the screen writer becomes a bit complex, as the gent said when he found it would cost him $10 to rescue a ten-dollar gold piece he had dropped in the bay.

But there is help in sight. Someone seems to have recognized truth in the analysis of the interviewed, for we are confronted with the most startling compromise production of the day, upon the advertising pages of the same trade journal.

The solution occurs in announcing a new release, so arranged that it first will appeal to the women, next the men and last the gallery—all in a single five-reel gasp.

Read it brethren, and get wise:

"See Glorious Gloria in forty amazing gowns! See the spectacular cabaret scenes!

"See the fight with the wildcat in the lost forest!

"See Gloria on horseback leap over the precipice with a hundred bandits in pursuit! See the thrilling fight on the stairs!"

And, we might add, write one of these Duke's Mixtures yourself and see if you can sell it.

FULLER AYER SAYS:

"We're thinkin' uh startin' an skenario contest, offerin' Umpty Thousand dollars fer th' first prize, an' reg'lar rates fer th' next 1,000 winners. Our reg'lar rates is 80 cents per."

ENTERTAINMENT VALUE

The matter of tomorrow's needs, is the most serious question confronting the photoplay writer. It is a greater problem than ever in the past, for an evolution seems upon us which is making its demands in a new, universal language which few have mastered.

In writing, as in any other line of professional endeavor, the motto "safety first" still applies. And, to play perfectly safe, one must play the sure thing.

Seven years ago a cry of anguish was heard from the conductor of a writer's department in a certain publication. He emitted his yowl because a certain author was trying to "spill the beans," for the sake of "having a little fun."

The author who raised the tempest had calmly announced that "theme" was all right, but that any story which carried 80 percent entertainment value could totter along very well without a theme. He wanted nothing more than a nice story for a foundation; a tale which was sufficient to carry the load of entertainment.

Today the yowler is silent, for the woods are full of successes which travel upon a mighty thin trail, but which send the audience away "feeling good."

The outpouring of almost rabid praise for one of these thin ones alone should bring comfort to the brain-fagged writer. Listen to the outbursts following the appearance of just one: "excellent entertainment," "a delightful skylark," "leaves one with a chuckle in one's throat," "an ingenious piece of work," "an example of what the screen can do for real entertainment," "whimsical and altogether delightful," etc., etc.

Yet, "theme" is all right. But, when the theme is sex, sex, sex, and ecetera, ecetera, until the cows come home, can one blame an ennuied public from gathering up wife, twins and other offspring, and shaking the dust off the family feet in making a grand departure away from there?

The world is tired of thinking all the time. Let it recreate when visiting the picture theater of the future.

NO JOKE

Director—But you have no comedy in your scenario.

Author—Oh, you will supply all that when you begin changing my continuity.

"MOVIE STUFF"

The valiant critic who has sighed, chided and endeavored to guide the destinies of the motion picture so many years, has adopted a phrase which seems to roll under his tongue as smoothly as a man-sized "chaw" between the jaws of a western sheriff.

He has begun bouncing on the writer's bean the taunt "movie stuff." Humble word slingers of the studios have been laboring under the impression that "movie stuff" was the real stuff for the pictures. But the critics know better.

Therefore it behooves the erring screen scribe to write stuff that is not "movie," whatever that is.

Perhaps the undaunted critics will tell us.

SPLIT SCENES

Are they laughing with us or at us?

Timely subject: "Where's Our Iceman?"

Printers' ink still possesses an uncanny fascination for the studio editor, but the original screen story still is given the Third Degree.

We would like to see a Canadian story in which the hero struggles along without surrounding himself with one of those gorgeous sunsets called a mounted police uniform.

A censor is a perfect lady or gent who shudders delightfully through the private showing of a picture, and then tells the rest of humanity to remain at home and play with the cat.

Certain companies are "saving money" by making the director write his own stories and continuity. There also was an esquimo who carried home a gas jet with which to illuminate his igloo.

The short-reel comedy story is in hard luck. Studios will not pay anything like a price for that class of goods, and most concerns are devising their own as they go along. And many of them look it.

The writer with a penchant for incorporating children and domestic pets in his screen tales seems to have the right of way. Even the purveyors of rapid-fire comedies, as a surcease from copying, have turned to kids and animals.

Lots of folks ate mush from childhood up, but they wouldn't pay cover charges now to get it in a cafe. They once got all their excitement from strawberry socials and stereoptican entertainments, but most of 'em wouldn't pay a nickel for the combined treat today. It is up to the author to invent new recreation foods, and teach them to like it.

"Westerns" still are going, but action pictures demand somewhat different backgrounds. Canadian woodlands stories, semi-westerns and lumber-camp tales are going rather good. Outside of cheap production, the demand in melodramatic stories is for bigger themes than in the past.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE BEAUTY SHOP"

Paramount

"In adapting Channing Pollock's and Renold Wolf's musical comedy, 'The Beauty Shop' to the screen, Cosmopolitan played wise and placed the bulk of the story telling on the subtitles and not on the action in the picture. In doing this they have given the screen a boiled down musical comedy without the music and chorus that will probably get by on its humorous subtitles."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"There is absolute truth in the statement that this picture carries all the earmarks of a musical comedy plot.

"It is all much ado about nothing, the plot skipping along on one cylinder most of the time telling of some eccentric beauty doctor who inherits a rich estate in a mythical kingdom and going after it dressed up in a circus uniform. The scenes and incidents which brought amusement upon the speaking stage do not register any too well here.

"Hitchcock is fairly amusing after a fashion. But Hitchy needs his voice."—Motion Picture News.

"Designed as entertainment of the lightest kind, 'The Beauty Shop' fulfills its purpose of amusement. Raymond Hitchcock has always been funniest when he can use his peculiar voice or his method of pointing a joke, but he contributes as much humor as possible under silent restriction with a performance embracing all of his familiar comedy mannerisms."—Moving Picture World.

"A musical comedy adapted to the screen is about as successful as a musical comedy would be minus the music, and it holds true in the case of 'The Beauty Shop.'

"It does contain some clever ideas, but they are not strong enough to hold up for six reels without a great deal of padding, and it is this superfluous footage that makes 'The Beauty Shop' a rather uninteresting and slow-moving picture."—The Film Daily.

"SHACKLES OF GOLD"

Fox

"Somewhat restricted in its scope, 'Shackles of Gold,' deserves praise for its style rather than the material. It is an ambitious treatment of a conventional story.

"A less compelling actor than William Farnum would have been somewhat eclipsed by this material.

"The lack of originality is most evident at moments when important crises are pictured."—Moving Picture World.

"An intensely dramatic and interesting story of the stock market. Adapted from Henri Bernstein's famous play, 'Samson' and directed by Herbert Brenon.

"William Farnum is particularly well fitted for the role of John Gibbs, the main character in this screen play. The story has plenty of suspense and grips one from the start. It is artistically produced and convincingly told."—Exhibitors Herald.

"The latest William Farnum release isn't an attractive offering in spite of the fact that Henri Bernstein's play provides a good role for the star and one that he handles very well. It is a stilted society drama with situations neither original nor conclusive. It may be that they are true-to-life, but they do not succeed in convincing you that such things are probable.

"The story is such that you cannot help but be annoyed with the characters and the things they do."—The Film Daily.

"'Shackles of Gold,' adapted from the play 'Samson,' presents good material for William Farnum. It is by no means an offering of any striking originality, but to devotees of the star it should prove to be thoroughly enjoyable."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES"

"The producers of this picture have spared no expense in making it distinguished from the general run of offerings. Technically, it is a feature which is almost perfect.

"Looking at it for story interest, one discovers that the action is marred considerably by a profusion of subtitles and a continuity which has emphasized the mystery element to the total elimination of logic.

"The picture relies for its strength upon its incident. John Barrymore succeeds in carrying out the demands of the role even if his appearance does not suggest the character. It is a finely imaginative performance."—Motion Picture News

"'Sherlock Holmes' is one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Coming during a season that is marked by superlative productions of all kinds and nationalities, that statement has more than ordinary force. Its value may be summed up in one phrase. It has everything.

"'Sherlock Holmes in the flesh! Think of that. As Barrymore plays the character and looks the part it is one of the most vivid interpretations of a man out of literature it has been the pleasure of the writer to encounter.'"—Moving Picture World.

"The star's work is distinguished by his usual skill and the ability to play any part convincingly. He is not given to any emotional acting in this but he makes the shrewd, crafty Holmes everything that Doyle intended him to be.

"Director Parker has plainly endeavored to make the production a very worthy work and, so far as bringing the greatest detective character in fiction to life is concerned, he has succeeded, but the production nevertheless has its faults. It is too long and it is not easy to follow the story.

"The adventures of the detective furnish plenty of thrills and excitement for those who like it regardless of the improbabilities. The exteriors are splendid and there are numerous familiar scenes that are very interesting."—The Film Daily.

"DEUCE OF SPADES"

First National

"While Charles Ray has had stronger vehicles, this adapted Charles E. Van Loan story, 'The Weight of the Last Straw,' provides him with a role altogether pleasing and containing many amusing situations. There is a slight love theme, but no heavy love-making and the story is clean and full of human interest."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Charles Ray has done better pictures and has done some worse than 'The Deuce of Spades.' For wholesome entertainment his latest is quite acceptable. Some of the situations are humorous, but on several occasions there is too much visible evidence of padding. The story is sufficiently good to bear up under these little differences and no doubt will bring in its share of laughs."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"This is by far the poorest picture that Charles Ray has ever turned out. The story in this one might have served adequately for a one or possibly a two-reel picture, but wherever they got the notion that it would do for a feature is inconceivable.

"Once more Ray directs and it serves to prove further that he had much better stick to acting and do one job at a time and do it right. There is little or no variation to the settings and they are certainly far from pleasing to the eye."—The Film Daily.

"The typical Charles Ray punch is late in coming, but when it does come in 'The Deuce of Spades,' its good enough to leave you with the impression that you've seen a good picture. There is too much stress upon characterization, too much of the hick and his peculiarities, too much description and not enough action."—Moving Picture World.

"THE REFEREE"

Selznick

"A man's picture. Fast moving, logically developed story of the prize ring, based upon a 'Red Book' story by Gerald Beaumont.

"If any story or picture should persuade those opposed to prize fighting that the game is clean, this Conway Tearle vehicle is the one to do it."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Put this down as a neat little fight picture—one which is established upon a foundation of heart interest and carrying a pleasant romance to give it balance. There is a humanity about the story which appeals to all classes, particularly those who like to read about self-made men—whether their profession is prize-fighting or making mouse traps.

"All power to Ralph Ince in producing the story so that the atmosphere of the ring is ever dominant.

"A simple little story, one perfectly obvious, but ringing true all the time."—Motion Picture News.

"STEP ON IT" Universal

"Step on it is right. They open the action throttle wide in this Hoot Gibson western, giving you plenty of gun-play, dashing horsemanship, some snappy humor and the balancing love interest. It is a picture which carries all the distinctive flavor of the West.

"The atmosphere, settings and photography are first rate, and the acting up to requirements."—Motion Picture News.

"Here is a satisfying offering that is rather unlike the average westerns that flood the market.

"The chief situation has to do with cattle rustlers and while this in itself is not original, there is a new twist and a clever touch in the method employed by the thieves to cover their tracks.

"The picture is short but a good live number that should particularly please admirers of westerns."—The Film Daily.

"Superior to many Westerns which, like this, have more than average action, 'Step On It' is convincing as well as entertaining and succeeds in making time pass quickly—which should indicate that it fails to bore at any moment."

—Moving Picture World.

"HIS WIFE'S HUSBAND" American Releasing

"The story has been well handled in all departments of production. The result is that the spectators' interest is obtained early and held throughout. Even taking into consideration that it is what might be called a thrice told tale."

—Moving Picture World.

"There isn't a great deal that is different in Anna Katherine Greene's novel, 'The Mayor's Wife,' from which the photoplay has been adapted, but good direction, a more or less capable cast and one or two fairly new twists makes a satisfactory offering of it."

—The Film Daily.

"'His Wife's Husband' is an adaptation for the screen from the novel, 'The Mayor's Wife,' by Anna Katherine Greene. The story offers mystery, pathos and numerous complications in unraveling a plot that hinges on bigamy. The story is keenly interesting and contains many moments of suspense."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"QUEEN OF THE TURF" R-C Pictures

"It's a good racing drama—much like others that have gone before—but the racing season is about to open north of the Mason-Dixon line and this picture, therefore, has the value of being exceptionally timely.

"Fair direction is reflected on the screen. The photography is not the best we have seen. The settings are adequate."

—Motion Picture News.

"At times the continuity is not good or perhaps the irregularity is due to the cutting which the film has undergone in preparation for the American market. At any rate the characters are jumped from place to place without indication of their going or coming, or a reason for their so doing.

"The race is the big event in the picture and is particularly effective and furnishes a real live thrill that is unmistakable."

—The Film Daily.

"LADY GODIVA" Associated Exhibitors

"The picture was made in Germany under the careful direction of Hubert Moest, who has handled the story in fine taste at all times. Many of the settings are artistic and

JOHN BROWN

Just finished with William Russell in
"A Self Made Man"

there are several large sets in which many extras are employed. . . . The famous ride of Lady Godiva is another instance of splendid judgment.

"The photography is not up to our American standards, and the lightings vary between good and bad. The acting is very good.

"In adapting Lord Tennyson's famous poem to motion pictures, Wistaria has given the screen a production that will, in all probability, soon be ranked as a classic. It has been splendidly done, and done in such a manner that it holds sustained interest throughout the six reels. There is nothing in it that will offend even the most straight-laced reformer. On the contrary, it appeals, and one of its most appealing points is the ride of Lady Godiva through the streets of Coventry in a nude condition. It has been a long time since we have seen anything that has the sheer artistry or carries the suspense that this portion of 'Lady Godiva' does."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE MAN WHO MARRIED HIS OWN WIFE" Universal

"'The Man Who Married His Own Wife,' gets the spectator's interest in the beginning with a gripping scene and the story is good enough to hold it throughout.

"Particularly noteworthy though is the scene at sea in the first part of the production with a schooner plowing heavily through a rough ocean into which sheets of sleet are falling, while from another direction races a millionaire's yacht, also battered by the elements. The two boats crash in the night, both go down, and some extraordinary photography graphically illustrates the disaster amid the raging of the waves and the sombre sky."—Moving Picture World.

"This latest picture of Universal's, starring Frank Mayo, starts out like a house afire with a swift moving story that keeps up the pace for the full first reel, then it stops a bit short and slumps slightly while some titles endeavor to create an atmosphere of mystery.

"Otherwise the direction is first rate and the story moves along at a good pace toward a satisfactory conclusion.

"The storm scenes in the opening reel are splendid and usually thoroughly realistic even though miniatures are used. The rain effect is especially fine."

"IN SELF DEFENSE" Swedish Biograph

"Especially interesting because it touches on the revolutionary condition in Russia without laying enough stress on it to be harrowing or morbid at any time, 'In Self Defense' is different enough from the ordinary run of features to be striking. The foreign atmosphere registers because it actually is foreign and carries realism to a remarkable degree. Based upon a theme that because of its intense humanness will be universally appreciated, this production made by the Swedish Biograph Company should prove a decided success."—Moving Picture World.

"This latest production from the studios of the Swedish Biograph has for its main asset the very fine acting of the star and villain and a capable supporting company generally. Also the direction at times is very good, but beyond that the picture does not measure up to some previous offerings that have come from the Swedish company.

"Many times over the same plot has been worked out in American pictures. There is no particularly new twist to 'In Self Defense' to lend any distinction to it and there is much that is unconvincing.

"Some of the dramatic moments are very well handled and the director has made a sincere attempt to put force into the drama, but the shortcomings of the story he had to work with were too great a handicap."—The Film Daily.

MORE HINTS By Edward J. Montagne

(Selznick Scenario Department)

Don't send a desert story to Western companies. Try the East. Some director around Times Square might like the trip and your story will give him his excuse.

Don't write sex stories. No one likes them—except the public.

Don't steal other people's ideas. Bound to get caught. Look at Shakespeare, Dumas, Aristotle, Belasco, all accused of plagiarism. Think of the disgrace.

Don't have anything happen until the fifth reel. You may disappoint your spectators who expect to sleep through the first four.

Have a marriage ceremony performed without an interruption. Give the gray-haired sexton a chance. He's the only one who hasn't rushed down the aisle shouting, "Stop that marriage!"

Don't use a typewriter. Use your worst scrawl. Someone may think it is a fan letter and read it.

Don't pay any attention to the critics. They can't sell their stories either.

Don't write a story without at least five changes for the star. Contract says that company pays for wardrobe and the star feels the story must be awful if she can't nick the boss for a fur coat, evening gown, sport suit and riding habit.

Don't write any hints for scenario writers.

NOTES FROM BROADWAY

By Hank

Atlanta, Ga., the place where many a picture has been produced, has made a strong legitimate bid for recognition in the world of films. The local men have pooled $2,500,000 to build studios and make pictures for release, we understand, through Hodgkinson. They want to put Los Angeles off the map in other words. Well, we offer them our best wishes, but Los Angeles was never stronger than it is now.

Constance Binney is to leave Famous Players. She is now drawing salary weekly until her contract expires.

Monte Blue is playing again with Mae Murray and then goes with Griffith. Dorothy Gish, we understand, can be secured for a picture or a series of pictures. Producers, wake up.

Alice Joyce is out of Vitagraph, which will be news to all. She is open to offers also, salary and percentage in pictures, we hear on good authority. Another tip for producers.

Edgar Lewis is in town. Dallas Fitzgerald is on Broadway. E. H. Griffith is directing up in Canada.

We hear Pearl White will return to Pathe to make a serial, her first love in the movies and her best place, her most successful as well. Eddie Polo is producing a serial here with Burton King directing.

Doris Kenyon will be starred in a series of features in New York. Anna Q. Nilsson will also make a series with a new outfit. Things look promising just now. Seven new outfits started the past week.

"I Am the Law," will play the Strand Theatre in June. This is an Ed. Carew feature made in L. A. by Bennie Zeidman and Bernie Fineman with C. C. Burr as distributor. Papers speak highly of it, and it is being advertised all over New York City.

F. B. Warren has placed all his product with the Keith Circuit of theatres in Greater New York and they are being extensively exploited as well. Broadway has taken everything he has released so far. Some record!

"Silas Marner" is playing the Loew Circuit of Theatres. This is an Associated Exhibitors release with all star cast. Arthur Kane can feel proud of this one.

Frank Gillmore is up for election as president of the Green Room Club. Frank Bacon was the last head of this old theatrical organization, and is still a member and loyal.

The Brooklyn Vitagraph Studio has one company working—Corinne Griffith with her hubby directing her. Biograph has Henry King and his troupe, and a few newcomers. Famous Players Studio is housing the Marion Davies troupe and Arthur Smallwood and his brother, Ray, filming a picture with an all star cast. George Terwilliger also is working at this studio. Famous will shoot one picture there this summer themselves. Arliss and Henry Kolker started this week.

England will not place a new tax on American films which should be good news to producers.

F. B. Warren has come out for the abolition of the deposit scheme that the exhibitors have had to contend with from distributors. He made his announcement recently at the Convention in Washington. Thos. Ince also spoke against censorship and more co-operation.

The New York exhibitors are not keen for Sidney Cohen, who was re-elected their president.

Vic Nuremberg has written the song, "The Isle of Zorda," for the Pathe release of the same name.

R. C. Cole, formerly of Robertson-Cole, will make pictures on his own, we learn.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower," the Hearst production, is being made entirely indoors. Costumes were imported from Europe as well as fancy trick riders for this picture which Robert Vignola is directing with Marion Davies as star.

The M. P. D. 'A. made the exhibitors a proposition in Washington to sell direct to them, the exhibitors to select the stars, directors, stories, etc., and the proposition is being taken under consideration. David Hartford made the proposition. We will have more details later on. This would eliminate the distributor entirely.

Will Nigh started shooting a picture called "Notoriety" and Famous has announced a picture of the same title for early Fall release.

D. W. Griffith is going to England to film a war picture for the British Government, we hear. It will be used as a record of the past events of that conflict. He is being financed by English capital. Monte Blue will go with him.

Hamilton Smith has completed "The Isle of Doubt" and preparing to shoot another. Wyndham Standing is featured.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Another Harry "Snub" Pollard two-reeler has started production with Herman C. Raymaker directing, and Director General of Comedies Charles Parrott in supervising capacity. Marie Mosquini and Noah Young are playing in support.

The current "Paul" Parrott comedy is being made on location in the vicinity of Palms. Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker are chief support with J. A. Howe directing.

"His Rascals," the kiddie-animal company, were launched this week in a new vehicle. In addition to the regular featured animals, a monkey and cat will appear in the scenes while the same children will have leading roles. Tom McNamara, who wrote the story, is now engaged on the next one. Bob McGowan will direct.

Film editing by T. J. Crizer is proceeding on two Bolland comedies, the first being nearly completed.

Harold Lloyd week was observed in Yokohama, Japan, recently, when twelve of the comedian's pictures were shown as follows: "Nothing but Trouble," "I'm on the Way," "Don't Shove!" "Crack Your Heels!" "He Leads, Others Follow," "A Sammy in Siberia," "Going! Going! Gone," "Ask Father," "Get Out and Get Under," "Haunted Spooks," "Number, Please?" and "High and Dizzy."

C. H. Roach, secretary and treasurer of the studios, has returned from a six weeks' trip.

BELASCO PRODUCTIONS TO PRODUCE ALASKAN STORY

Edward Belasco, president of the Belasco Productions, Inc., of San Francisco, recently signed a contract with Esther Birdsall Darling to film her book, "Baldy of Nome."

CUBAN ACTOR IN NEW YORK

Marco Antonio Gonzales, who is starred in the three pictures, "Blood Will Tell," "Cruel Dreams," and "The Monster," made by the Compania Gloria Film, of Havana, Cuba, is in New York to arrange for the showing of the pictures there.

INSTALLS L. A. DISTRIBUTING BRANCH

Another Los Angeles independent motion picture producing concern has renounced its eastern distribution affiliations and has added a distributing branch to its local headquarters.

The latest concern to break away from New York is the O'Connor Productions, producers of a new series of Billy Franey comedies. These productions, of which the first six have already been completed, will be twenty-six in number of two reels each, to be published bi-monthly and delivered direct to the state rights exchanges throughout America from the O'Connor offices at the Caswell studios, Hollywood.

F. E. Samuels, former manager of the local Clune exchange, is general sales manager. He will arrive in the east the first week in June to establish a branch office in New York.

Billy Franey's principal feminine support in his latest series consists of Gale Henry, Vera Reynolds and Ena Gregory.

Robert O'Connor is head of the producing concern bearing his name, while Gus Schumacher is general manager.

Vic Potel is working with Hoot Gibson.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Glen Cavender, for years at the Fox studios where he has appeared in both comedy and dramatic photoplays, has moved himself bag and baggage to the Century Studios where he is being directed by Norman Taurog.

Ray Gray is assisting Richard Jones at the Sennett Studios.

Eddie Sutherland is working at the "U" in the current Hoot Gibson starring vehicle.

James Davis, directing Paul Parrott, rented space recently at Universal to film some scenes on the New York street set. Besides the star there were Jobyna Ralston, Gaylord Lloyd, Wallace Howe, Eddie Baker, Earl Montgomery, Harry Gerstead and others.

Louise Lorraine, Blanche Payson, Jerry Mandy, William Irving and Jack Henderson are working for Henry Lehrman.

Gordon Griffith is sharing his services with Jack Ford at Fox's and Edwin Le Saint at the Hallroom Studios.

Fred Hibbard has started on his first comedy at the United Studios and has cast Fay McKenzie and Eddie Barry for some important scenes. Hibbard up to a short while ago made Century Comedies with Baby Peggy, Brownie, and others.

Ida May McKenzie recently completed an engagement with the Jack Ford Company.

Frank Lanning is playing a Chinese part in "East Is West," starring Constance Talmadge, which S. A. Franklin is directing at United.

Bessie Love is at present drawing a Fox Studio check.

Eddie Laemmle has completed the Gladys Walton picture at the Big U and is busy cutting same.

Jay Marchant is leaving the last of the week for Mt. Rainier, Washington, to get some snow scenes for a Universal serial.

Jess Robbins, besides cutting his last feature, is preparing a new story for probable production at the Fine Arts Studios.

Jack Cooper intends to have his own producing unit within the next four weeks making two-reel comedies in which he will be the star.

John McDermott after finishing his picture at Fox's sailed for the continent.

H. J. Howard is casting at the Herbst Productions studios at Culver City, where they are featuring Big Boy Williams.

Bud White, owner of John Brown, the 600-pound bear, has an offer to go to Honolulu for the big fair, and may take his charge over there to fill the date.

John Rounan is still in New York City, where he attended the Federated meeting. Rounan has four of the Chester Snookey comedies to be released on the Federated program.

Eric Von Stroheim will be shouting "camera" within the next two weeks on the Universal lot.

Doc Joos is assisting Nat Ross at Universal in the direction of Art Acord in a Canadian Northwest Mounted story.

Truman Van Dyke recently finished playing an important role with Florence Vidor.

Jack Hoxie is about to start another western feature.

George Marshall has started on the first of the Tuttle stories at the United Studios, with Hugh McClung photographing the scenes.

Nick Cogley is working with Owen Moore at United.

Frank Lawrence, who edited and cut "The Hearts of Humanity," is doing the same with the latest Allen Holubar feature recently completed with Dorothy Phillips in the stellar role.

Dick Smith, Billy Franey, Charles Conklin, and a small colony of funsters who belong to the old school of comics are holding down the main batting spots on the daily lineup on the Fox comedy lot.

I Want a Tough Proposition to handle RIGHT NOW!!

"ISLAND WIVES"

Junior Orpheum

It isn't the wisest thing in the world to show a picture like "Island Wives" while the gentle reformer is at large for the self-appointed ones would only see the worst, completely overlooking the beauty of the film. The actual production is beautiful, but the story is not elevating in the least.

The plot deals with the eternal triangle, with salacious touches that lose weight in that the situations are not taken seriously.

Like another "wife" story this also has sketchy subtitles.

Corrine Griffith gets by with her beauty and gowns. There her talent stops. In stresses of emotion she resorts to the ten-year-old trick of clutching at her face.

Webster Campbell is responsible for the direction, which proves to be old-fashioned in spots and commonplace the rest of the time.

Rockcliffe Fellowes, heavy and lead, takes all the male honors in the picture.

Ivan Christy does well, but his type of character is most repulsive.

Edna Hibbard as Puala, a little native girl, is very pleasing.

Filling out the cast are Chas. Trowbridge, Norman Rankow, Peggy Parr, John Galsworthy, Mrs. Trowbridge and Barney Sherry.

OF course we do not sell the cheap, poorly constructed and inferior type of furnishing, but in that moderately priced class of desirable furniture such as is suited to the great and average class of American homes we have a very interesting collection which is offered to those connected with the industry only.

Each transaction with us means a saving to you.

Furniture can be both artistic and practical.

When buying we have been ever mindful that the housewife wants furniture combining both art and usefulness.

"BETTER" PICTURES

With new companies starting work and new individuals entering motion pictures with the same old bromidic generalities about "fewer and better pictures," "special feature productions," and the array of imitations touted "better-than-such-and-such," it may be timely to discuss this "better" stuff.

Every artist, artisan, business or professional man and woman is constantly striving for improvement. If they don't they drop behind. So we'll take the desire for better pictures for granted.

Now, what will make pictures better?

Acting?

Some of the best acting in the world is done for motion pictures. Also some of the worst. But placing the screen in comparison with the stage—stacking best against best, average against average, and inferior against inferior—the screen excels by far. No, not acting.

Stories?

The average story is as good as can be expected. Note "average." There are few masterpieces. People who don't sympathize with motion pictures say there are none. But the run of screen stories is above the grade of the popular magazines, small credit though that be. And there is constant improvement here. No one expects perfection all at once. So it isn't stories alone.

Direction?

Cinema direction, in the main, is handled by men really striving to fulfill some ideal. Many of them are held in check by other things—lack of authority, of funds, etc. And there are averages here just as elsewhere. But there is a goodly band of directors who are accomplishing things, and to whom motion pictures should give due credit for progress. It's not directors we're after here.

Motion photography has reached the point where it is pictorial art of the highest type.

Design and construction of settings is in general as near satisfaction as possible.

Other production details appear developed to a point approaching perfection.

There are three glaring exceptions.

They lie in laboratories, production offices, and distributing organizations.

They are the evils of too-mechanical developing and printing, of arbitrary "efficiency" in production schedules, and of routing pictures of one general appeal to a public of one general type.

As each of these is overcome, the motion picture will take successive steps towards its rightful place among literature, art and drama.

These are three things to think about, to talk over. They won't be solved tomorrow. Nor the next day. Maybe not next year. Remedies and suggestions will be branded impractical, visionary. They will continue to be so branded until some one goes ahead and proves them otherwise.

Rex Ingram had a laboratory man constantly on his set when he filmed "The Four Horsemen." That's what every unit making any pretense towards artistry should do.

Griffith takes as much time as he has need for in producing his pictures. Every director demonstrating ability and responsibility should be able to work under such conditions.

The Cameo theater in New York caters especially to shoppers; the Strand theater, Watertown (N. Y.), caters especially to children; it is possible with the array of films now on the market to cater to almost any class of persons. There should be several class-catering theaters in every city.

These are mere sketches of suggestions of what is meant by things to think and talk about.

These are things that will improve pictures and interest new sections of the public in them.

Ted Taylor.

Film Capital Production Notes

FOX TO DIRECT FEATURE

Finis Fox, writer, director and producer, has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Film Company to direct "The Bishop of the Ozarks," an original story by W. M. Howard, congressman, lecturer and author.

Production is expected to start as soon as Mr. Fox finishes the continuity.

McCARTHY TO RESUME PRODUCTION

John P. McCarthy has secured the film rights of the Frederic Remington works, and will produce a series of features suggested by these paintings. The story and continuity for the first one have been completed and production is expected to begin at once.

Associated with Mr. McCarthy is R. Holmes Paul, formerly art director with Thomas H. Ince, and James C. M. Whipple, who will act as assistant director.

YOUNG TO START SHORTLY

"The Hands of Nara," Clara Kimball Young's lately completed starring vehicle will be released in September through Metro. Miss Kimball is expected to start work shortly on her next offering which is in preparation. Harry Garson will again direct Miss Young.

W. E. Keefe, formerly associated with D. W. Griffith, has been engaged to title and edit "Night Life in Hollywood," the initial De Luxe production recently completed under the direction of Fred Caldwell.

Hubert Win, Goldwyn cutter, is cutting the picture. It is expected that the film will be ready for release around June 10th.

"NERO" IS RELEASED

"Nero," the spectacle which J. Gordon Edwards produced in Italy, is now showing in New York at the Lyric. While most of the scenes in "Nero" were photographed in Rome and its vicinity some were taken near Naples and a few in the Alps. "Nero" took nearly a year to complete and includes in the cast Jacques Gretilat of the Theatre Odeon.

COMING FOX RELEASE

Roger Lytton, veteran of the stage and screen; Florence Billings, Peggy Shaw, Ernest Hilliard, Robert Agnew, Adelaide Prince and Niles Welch have the principal roles in "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," a special production which is to be released by William Fox next season.

KIRKWOOD TO RETURN TO SPOKEN STAGE

It is rumored that James Kirkwood is to return to his first calling, the footlights, after he makes two or three more films. 'Tis said he is to have a featured role in a stage play from the pen of Bayard Veiller, which A. H. Woods is to produce.

UNSELL COMPLETES FOUR

Eve Unsell, scenario chief at the R-C studios, has completed four continuities. Among them is one of her own original stories, tentatively titled, "The Man of God," which is to be made into an all-star special.

United Stars Productions, a new company, chartered at $1,000,000, states it will construct a studio in Oakland, Calif. N. J. Whelan, Peter N. Toscano, Lawrence A. Hughes and Eugene A. Perry, the latter former manager of Loew's State, constitute the board of directors. It is understood that Arthur Rosson will be director-general.

GRAF STARTING AT SAN MATEO

Graf Productions, Inc., are the first to renew studio activities at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo. "A Modern Madonna," starring Milton Sills, will start production June 7th under the direction of James Horne.

SHIPMAN BUYS LUPORINI INTERESTS

Ernest Shipman has purchased the interest held by Mario Luporini in the Ultra Productions, the F. Marion Crawford Productions, and the series of Pina Menichelli features.

GRIFFITH OUTLINING "AT THE GRANGE"

D. W. Griffith's current comedy-drama is being rehearsed under the working title of "At the Grange." The story is by a Kentucky authoress, Irene Sinclair.

STRAUSS PREPARING "APHRODITE"

Malcolm Strauss has completed arrangements to film "Aphrodite," to be released through W. W. Hodkinson Corp. Alan Crosland will direct the story, based upon an old legend.

FRENCH COMEDIAN WITH ALLIED

Max Linder recently completed arrangements to make a series of comedies for the Allied Corporation, the new subsidiary of United Artists. He may produce some of his future pictures in Paris.

Edward Burns and Warner Oland are supporting Constance Talmadge in her special production for Associated First National, "East Is West."

Buddy Boyle is included in the cast of "Goblin Point," under production at Fine Arts studios under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Current Reviews

"THE GOOD PROVIDER"

COOL, bubbling waters rushing forth into a land of thirst; a delightful current of fresh air into dust-choked places; "The Good Provider," a soothing balm among the ailments of sez, sluch and social mush.

Yea; the good firm of Hurst, Borzage, Davidson & Gordon has returned, with no change of trademark, and once more bringing home the goods. Fanny Hurst's homey and humble tale of father's efforts to live up to the title, has been translated to the screen by Director Borzage with such faithfulness as to fairly rival his former success, "Humoresque."

This second production, along lines of the first, emphatically and finally establishes Mr. Borzage as a master director in his chosen field. He needs fear no rival upon this, his own stamping ground.

The Hurst story once more is one of those bits of life which seem drawn from a little niche somewhere but, when fully presented, expand in the mind of the spectator until one finds that, after all, he has been witnessing a panorama of life itself.

Father's innings are presented by Dore Davidson, who battles his way from poverty to the upbringing of his family to discover that, while he, the father, thinks FOR his offspring, the mother thinks WITH them.

Just what this combination does to father, must be seen to be appreciated.

Mr. Davidson's remarkable interpretation of this role hardly can be done justice in words.

Vera Gordon is the same wonderful mother as in the past. She is a supreme actress in the role.

Willie Collier, Jr., young, boyish and likeable upon the screen, wins much credit as the son.

Vivienne Osborne is the acceptable daughter.

Miriam Battista, a clever juvenile; John Roche, Blanche Craig, Ora Jones, Edward Philips, Muriel Martin and Margaret Severy make a glove-fit of the minor roles.

"THE FIRE BRIDE"

If "The Fire Bride," made in Tahiti of the South Seas, was intended solely for a scenic picture then it is a success. But something about this production arouses suspicions that someone has tried to weave a story into the beautifully picturesque footage. That "something" is a more or less well-known cast and a couple of stage sets that fail to match up with the real exteriors. Each player dashes about in a circle all his own until they are all killed off, leaving the hero and heroine the only white people on the island. And then she has to propose to him, which is rather different after all.

Arthur Rosson directed "The Fire Bride." The only credit due him is the way he handles the natives, working in their customs and dances. He should continue directing educational.

Ruth Renick deserves better treatment than this. At the climax of her own little corner of the picture she becomes stiff in action due to lack of direction.

Edward Hearn is included in the cast and that it about all. No doubt he was kept in the dark as to his action also.

Walt Whitman is good at all times, even here.

Fred Stanton, the heavy, has the heavy work

"STEP ON IT"

(Reviewed by Camera's office boy)

Dear Editor:

I did not like the picture "Step on It" starring Hoot Gibson and Barbara Bedford, the story as a whole was onley fair and the acting was no better.

The scene in the opening where hoot was driving to a wedding with his mother was poor lighting and the wedding was very poor. the sluice gate scene was no good the minute they opened the gate the river was to go dry which could not be as it would have been damp afterwards. the fire was pretty good and the love scene was not up to much as hoot gave her to passionate a kiss which she did not return.

Miss bedford did not play her part good as an actress might, it seems as if she did not put any skill into it. Hoot played his part to perfection.

Me for better pictures

CRIS.

of the picture. That is, the largest part of action, which he handles quite well.

Two island natives play parts without the least animation.

"GLASS HOUSES"

GLASS Houses" is a tired business man's picture. A fast moving comedy this, full of improbable complications all to be laughed at while the picture runs and to be forgotten the next minute. There is no depth to the story at any time but the director has followed out the situations with good results.

Viola Dana has her own way of doing her scenes. Her cute mannerisms, are constantly coming to the front and many laughs are due to a moue or wrinkled nose. Her usual debutante role gives way to a character wearing horn-rimmed glasses, slicked back hair and a missionary smile. One trembles with fear lest this get-up scare away the leading man whose other name is Gaston Glass.

And speaking of Gaston, credit must be given him for carrying a big share of the acting honors for this production.

Mayme Kelso "aunties" for handsome Gaston, in true-to-life fashion.

Helen Lynch, the older sister (who looks younger than Viola) pleases in the short time she is seen.

Shannon Day has only a bit but she has an individuality that steals the scenes in which she appears.

Claire DuBrey has an opportunity but shows no personality to back it up.

John Steppeling, the family lawyer, is right "there" with his jovial air serving to brighten things up.

The Japanese servant furnishes quaint comedy.

Ellsworth Gage completes the cast as one of those things called a fiancée.

"THE MAN OF STONE"

Every now and then they ought to remove the game laws on an adapter or director and give the poor author a chance for action.

In the case of the production "The Man of Stone," it is likely that Conway Tearle, the lead, also would plead pitifully to be handed a gun and to join in the fray.

The picture hardly could be hashed or injured more than as presented.

The reviewer has seen poor productions, but all of them must grovel much lower in the dust in abject surrender to this production.

Conway Tearle is a highly reputable screen artist. To subject him to such an ordeal as this release is very unfair. Martha Mansfield is badly miscast and misdirected pitifully in the melodramatic scenes in the desert. Betty Howe's scenes could have been made strong. Instead she is directed through them like a tame cat searching for a soft pillow.

The production throughout impresses one as very artificial and unconvincing.

"OVER THE BORDER"

Direction, cast, and photography are good in Sir Gilbert Parker's "Over the Border," from the original story, "She of the Triple Chevron." Though the story shows the wear of years it furnishes good entertainment and proves a satisfactory vehicle for an all-star cast.

The last half of the film is dragged out by losing several of the characters in snow-drifts and rescuing them.

The psychology of showing a snow picture in the summer time adds to the attractiveness of the feature. The photography is beautiful, and the blizzard enough to convince one of the difficulty in filming the storm scenes.

Penrhyn Stanlaws, always the artist, has arranged the action in scenes to start or terminate in groups that form living paintings. His direction may be rough in spots but he makes his players true to life.

Betty Compson is charming and talented, indeed. She has no gowns nor odd head-dresses to rely on to get her over, her role depending entirely upon her skill.

Tom Moore, though playing an ordinary type part, goes through it with smoothness and will please his followers.

J. Farrell MacDonald attracts a greater part of the attention by his skilful action as the smuggler and without realizing it one's attention becomes focused on his work.

Casson Ferguson was rather unfortunate in being cast as a character that has no vital connection with the story.

Jean deBriac, one of the newer faces to the screen, is most appealing and gets as much as possible out of his role.

Sidney D'Albrook is a picturesque person as an Indian spy. His facial expressions are excellent.

The other members of the cast, L. C. Shumway, Edw. J. Brady and Joseph Ray as officers of the Northwest Mounted, are adequate.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS NOTES

Fifty-five members and eighteen guests recently attended the Second Quarterly Smoker in the Association Club rooms and were entertained by Oscar Van der Steyn and pupils of his Hollywood School of Stage Dancing.

Everett Sullivan has just finished assisting Director Wesley Ruggles in "Over the Wire," starring Alice Lake.

Billy Tummell and Director Vekroff who is directing Bill Desmond in a serial for Universal are now in Truckee shooting final scenes.

James Kilgannon leaves for Balboa with Director Fitzmaurice this week.

Sandy Roth is scheduled to start as gag man with Al St. John at Fox Studio in a series of comedies.

Fred Tyler is assisting Director Dave Smith in the production of "The Gamin Girl," starring Alice Calhoun at Vitagraph.

Sidney Algiers who has been with Director John Stahl for the past twelve months will assist him in the production of "The Dangerous Age."

Virgil Hart has been engaged to assist Howard Mitchell at Fox in the production of a William Russell film. The company is preparing to go to Yosemite.

Gordon Hollingshead and Director Ed Kennedy spent last week at San Pedro Harbor using Submarine "L 8" with Captain Kruger and crew.

Tod Browning and his assistant, Leo McCary, have completed "Under Two Flags" at Universal.

The Brown children, Winfred and Julia, are working with Director Franz on the Fox lot.

E. K. Lincoln recently completed work on "A Lady by Luck," the initial film of Genius Film Corp.

Peggy Hyland will produce and appear in a series of two-reel comedies with Gibson Gowland as leading man in England.

Muriel Frances Dana left recently for San Francisco to play a part in "The Modern Madonna," a Max Graf Production.

We hear that Tom Moore is to be featured opposite Mary Miles Minter in "The Cowboy and the Lady," Clyde Fitch's play.

Joseph Bonner, Jack Duffy and Pete Soso are among those cast in the new Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "Affinities," starting production at the Ince Studios in Culver City.

Carmel Myers will portray the leading feminine role in "Goblin Point," the new photoplay for Halperin Productions which Lloyd Ingraham is directing at Fine Arts studios.

Henry King has renewed his contract with Inspiration Pictures, Inc. King has directed Richard Barthelmess in all of his pictures for that company.

Miss Dorothy Hall, star of "The Quest," a Blake-Coyle production, has signed with the Blake-Coyle Productions, an Eastern company, to make a series of fifty-two two-reel features.

AVIATRIX MAKES CHARITY FLIGHTS

Andree Peyre, French aviatrix and stunt flier, who is playing an important role in the Ruth Roland serial, "The Riddle of the Range," has been making exhibition flights on Sundays for various charitable affairs. Last Sunday Mlle. Peyre flew for the benefit of the French War Orphans at a fete given by the Societe de Charite des Dames Francaises; the preceding Sunday she took part in an aviation demonstration given by Army and Navy aviators to Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam, and next Sunday she will do a number of air stunts at the annual festival given by the French League.

WRAY RESTING

John Griffith Wray, who recently completed the Ince feature, "Someone to Love," with Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis and Noah Beery in the cast, is vacationing in the mountains in the Big Bear region and will not return until his next story is ready for production.

NAZIMOVA GOING EAST

Mme. Nazimova expects to go to New York soon to join her husband, Charles Bryant, director of "Salome," who is busy with the distribution plans for the picture as well as with preliminary plans for the presentation of the next Nazimova photoplay which will be made sometime in the fall and probably at United Studios.

PRIZE WINNER

Charles Ray, whose latest production, "Alias Julius Caesar," is scheduled for First National release, is proud of his wire-haired terrier, "Whiskers." This pup recently won one first prize, two seconds and a fourth prize at the dog show of the Los Angeles Kennel Club.

JACKIE GIVES FILM TO SCHOOL BOARD

Jackie Coogan this week donated to the Board of Education a propaganda film which shows the dire need of new schools and additional room to take care of the thousands of kiddies who have to sit three in a seat to gain their knowledge.

Douglas MacLean, accompanied by Henry Sharp, Bogart Rogers and other friends, left during the week for a sojourn in the Sierras following the completion of the MacLean Picture, "The Sunshine Trail." This picture, which was directed by James Horne, makes four MacLean pictures which will be released during the coming season.

Ruth Stonehouse has returned to Los Angeles after nine months of personal appearances throughout the eastern and middle western states.

Elaine Hammerstein, who just finished "Under Oath," at United Studios, is having her first glimpse of San Diego and Tia Juana.

NORMAND READY FOR EUROPE

Mabel Normand's mother will accompany her on her European jaunt, and we also understand that Raymond Hitchcock and his wife, Flora Zabelle, will add their party to Miss Normand's.

FARNUM COMING WEST

William Farnum is enjoying a final rest at his Sag Harbor home before coming to the West Coast. He is about to star in a new picture at the Eastern studio under the direction of Herbert Brenon, and upon its completion will leave at once for California. He has opened his Hollywood home and will not return East again until some time next spring.

Monday evening in their clubroom in the Brack Shops, the Photoplaywrights will be entertained.

Mrs. Marguerita Stevenson, a writer of stories, will read her work, "The Defender of His Kindred."

Other stories will be heard and matters of vital importance to the club will be discussed. All members are requested to be in attendance. The meeting is open, and readers of Camera! cordially invited.

Expounding a theme of "father love," Fannie Hurst's and Frank Borzage's "The Good Provider," featuring Vera Gordon and Dore Davidson, will open its second week Sunday, June 4th, at Grauman's kialto.

The technical staff of "Affinities," which Ward Lascelle is directing at the Ince studios consists of Guy Frum, assistant director; Abe Scholtz and J. Miehle, cameramen; Carl Shillinger, film editor, and Harry Jackson, scenario editor.

CHIT, CHAT AND CHATTER ABOUT SOUTHLAND FILM FOLKS

By Harry Burns

Nate Watt has opened up a radio apparatus store on Hollywood Boulevard. So he's through with movies for a while.

"All Wet," Al. St. John's latest comedy, was previewed recently at Rosemary Theatre, Ocean Park.

Vester Pegg, who just finished with Harry Carey at the R-C studios, will be in the next cast with the same star.

Ray Rockett has returned from Washington, D. C., where he has been gathering data concerning the life of Abraham Lincoln, which he will use for a forthcoming production.

Fred Jefferson is working at the Century tury studios.

It is announced that Hampton Del Ruth will be the supervising director of the Balboa Studios, to be known in the future as the Long Beach Studios. A. J. Thorine will continue as General Manager.

It is understood that "Thelma" is the title of the next Chester Bennet cinemoplay starring Jane Novak.

Eddie Lyons will soon go to New York City where he is expected to sign a new contract with the Arrow Corp. to release his comedies and some other units.

Dorothy Vernon has been working for Henry Lehrman at the Century Studios for the past week.

Morris R. Schlank dropped in to see the boxing bouts the other evening at the American Legion Stadium.

Lex Neal expects to start working with Lloyd Hamilton about the first of next month as scenario writer and gag man.

Syd Chaplin was a guest of honor at the A. D. A. meeting held recently at their club rooms.

Hank Mann, 'tis said, is soon to have his own producing company backed by Northern capital and will make a series of two-reel situation comedies.

Margaret Fitzroy (Cullington), who played Maggie in the "Bringing Up Father" series, has been cast for an important part in the Neal Burns burlesque on "The Sheik" at Christie's.

The next Cosmopolitan production to be released will be "The Young Diana," by Marie Corelli, starring Marion Davies. Two directors will be credited in the billing of the picture, Robert G. Vignola and Albert Capellani.

It is understood that Erich Von Stroheim's next production will be titled "Merry Go-Round," and that there is a possibility that Von Stroheim will take his company to Vienna to film part of the production.

METRO ANNOUNCEMENTS

Definite announcement of the resumption of normal production activities at the Metro studios in Hollywood was made recently by Joseph W. Engel, first vice-president and general manager of productions for Metro Pictures Corporation.

Four companies will be at work before July first and a fifth unit will commence actual filming early in July. This number will be continued indefinitely, according to present plans.

Rex Ingram will remain at Metro for some time, finishing "Black Orchids," his newest production. Upon its completion he will go to New York to film several feature pictures which require east coast locations.

Viola Dana's company will be the first of the new units to start actual production. The little star who has recently returned from a personal appearance tour extending over a period of more than four months will commence work next Monday.

Harry Beaumont again has been signed by Metro to direct Miss Dana. He handled the megaphone for five of her recent pictures. "Page Tim O'Brien," a story by John Moroso, for which J. G. Hawks prepared the continuity, has been selected as her new starring vehicle.

Billy Dove, who was featured for several years by the Ziegfeld Follies, and who was recently signed as a Metro star by Marcus Loew, arrived here a few weeks ago to start work on her initial picture.

Emile Chautard has been engaged to direct Miss Dove in "Country Love," which will be her first story. It was written by Hurlbert Footner and prepared for the screen by Edith Kennedy.

Sawyer and Lubin, who have made a number of special productions under the S-L banner for Metro, have renewed their agreement for several more pictures. Arthur Sawyer is at Metro studios at present, completing plans for the filming of the forthcoming production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Clarence Badger has been engaged by Mr. Sawyer to direct this picture. Bernard McConville is preparing the continuity upon which production will commence within two weeks.

AT UNIVERSAL

Starring vehicles for Herbert Rawlinson, Marie Prevost, Gladys Walton, Frank Mayo and Hoot Gibson are in the final stages of editing and each star is busy on new ventures.

Short dramas with Art Acord, Reginald Denny and Tom Santschi are being put into shape, while active progress is being made with comedies starring Roy Atwell and Neely Edwards.

"They're Off," starring Marie Prevost, just finished by Stuart Paton, has been retitled "The Married Flapper."

Thirty reels of "The Kentucky Derby," the all-star Jewel special directed by King Baggot, are in the editorial department. Reginald Denny, Lillian Rich, Gertrude Astor, Lionel Belmore, and Kingsley Benedict are included in the cast.

Two episodes of "Perils of the Yukon," the chapter history of Alaska, are being shipped to exchanges.

Gladys Walton's next starring vehicle will probably be "Melisse."

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

J. D. Williams, general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., accompanied by Mrs. Williams, arrived in Los Angeles recently. In addition to conferences with Joseph M. Schenck regarding future production plans for Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton, Mr. Williams will view "The Eternal Flame," Norma's recently completed picture; "Hurricane's Gal," Allen Holubar's sea thriller just completed; Mack Sennett's drama of early California, "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand; Katherine MacDonald's "White Shoulders," her most ferences with Charles Chaplin, John M. Stahl, J. L. Frothingham, Richard Walton Tully, Charles Ray, B. P. Schulberg, Larry Trimble and several other producers, Mr. Williams promises some announcements regarding First National's future plans. During his visit Mr. Williams will discuss with officials of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., Messrs. A. and M. Gore, Sol Lesser and Adolph Ramish, Southern California franchise holders of First National, the plans for Ramish's new First National Theatre, plans for which are now under way. Mr. Williams' business headquarters, during his stay, will be at the office of John McCormick, western representative of First National.

Katherine MacDonald's next starring vehicle is to be "The Lonely Road," an original story from the pen of Charles Logue, who has written two other MacDonald film stories. The picture will be directed by Tom Forman, who was responsible for the direction of "The Woman Conquers" and who is now completing "White Shoulders," the Saturday Evening Post story by George Kibbe Turner.

The negative and masterprint of Allen Holubar's "Hurricane's Gal," are now enroute to an eastern laboratory where release prints are to be made.

Charles Chaplin is now making his eighth

First National two-reel comedy, as yet untitled.

John M. Stahl is casting for "The Dangerous Age," an all-star Louis B. Mayer production, in which Lewis Stone will play one of the principal roles.

"The Crossroads of New York," Mack Sennett's latest super-feature which recently opened at the Capitol Theatre in New York City, will have its Los Angeles premiere on June 16th, which date has been selected for its opening at Miller's Theatre for an indefinite run. Directed by F. Richard Jones, its cast includes such players as George O'Hara, Kathryn McGuire, Noah Beery, Ethel Grey Terry, Billy Bevan, Charlie Murray, Mildred June, Robert Cain, Dot Farley, Eddie Gribbon, Herbert Standing and James Finlayson. Mr. Jones, director of Sennett's "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand, is to direct Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver in the next Turpin special, "The Frozen Trail."

Buster Keaton is engaged in making his latest two-reel comedy, temporarily titled "The Vision."

Joseph M. Schenck is selecting Norma Talmadge's next starring vehicle, which will follow the release of "The Eternal Flame."

"Fools First," Marshall Neilan's latest production for First National release, is soon to have its western premiere at the Kinema Theatre.

AT UNITED

Director Victor Heerman has completed the script of the original story which will be Owen Moore's next Selznick vehicle.

Lloyd Hamilton of Hamilton-White Comedies will resume production on June 15th, when he will start work on the first of six special comedies. Jack White will also start at that time on the first of a series of twelve Mermaid Comedies.

Constance Talmadge has begun work on her first seven-reel special production for First National, "East Is West," in which she plays "Ming Toy." Sidney Franklin is directing. Frances Marion is responsible for the screen adaptation of this Samuel Shipman play. Interest is attached to this "East Is West" picture, because it marks Constance Talmadge's departure from the type of picture in which she has been appearing.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Semon, who returned lately from New York, announces that he plans to begin shooting next week on a comedy called "Golf." Hereafter, Mr. Semon will attend to all production detail of his pictures and will use the studios recently erected for his special use.

About ten days of cutting and titling remain to be done on "Dicky," starring Earle Williams.

"The Prospector" is selected as working title for Jimmy Aubrey's new two-reel comedy.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"Paul" Parrott's next vehicle will have the working title, "The Tail of a Shirt," which J. A. Howe will direct, with Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker playing in support. Parrott is now finishing work on a tenement story which Jim Davis is directing.

Mickey Daniel has been added to the array of juvenile talent for "His Rascals" in the new vehicle, "Lady Bountiful" story which has gone under production. "Sunshine Sammy," Jackie Condon, Peggy Cartwright and others including a pair of twins will be among those present. McGowan is directing with Tom McNamara, author of the script, on the set.

WHEN GENIUS WALKS

The ease with which writers may sell really good stories has been the good old subject fallen back upon by the studio editor everytime he has been called upon to write a few lines upon the market subject.

It certainly makes good reading. Just get a novelty idea with new and original twists and gallop right down to the studio with it. Then watch the mail for your check.

You will get that acceptance, so glowingly announced by the same editor—excepting under these circumstances—quoted:

"You have written a good story, but it doesn't fit any of our stars."

"We did a story last year somewhat along the lines of your photoplay."

"You play up a male star. Our present needs call for a feminine lead."

"Our needs are not along the line you have written."

"Our exhibitors desire a different kind of story."

"This type of story used to go, but we must find something different now."

"We will not be in the market for stories for several months."

Or—

Merely your manuscript returned with an enclosure of deep, mournful silence.

One of the more recent articles from an editor refers to the "unerring" pounce of the story searcher upon the good story. Just let him glimpse it once and it is as good as in his larder. Nothing can escape his eagle eye, and no corker ever gets past him.

Well, getting down to facts near the ice, allow us to gaze around upon what has happened and what is happening.

What has occurred to the really corking story?

We know of one which pelted around and pestered in and out of studios for a year. By that time the author began to have suspicions that he had fooled his agent but no one else. Finally someone who was not so darn unerring, but who wanted a strong story, put it on and it went over big.

At this point more than 100 good and true men of the pictures are going to recall a similar story which suffered about the same experience.

One well-known author sold a story to a certain studio. When it appeared an indignant editor of a big institution demanded to know why the author had not given him a chance at it.

"That story was in your studio two weeks and then was returned without a line of comment," was the reply.

Another studio of much pomp and reputation rejected two knockouts in a year which cleaned up within a year afterwards—for someone else.

Deep within their hearts several prominent editors know that if "The Old Nest," "Humoresque," "Come On Over," "The Four Horsemen," as adapted, had been offered to them they would have rejected all, as well as certain other stories which have cleaned the boards in the market.

The editor may be unerring, but the fact is that a studio system stands between him and his prey. "Miracle Men" may come and "Clansmen" may go, and he never may know that half a million dollars have been kicking up their heels within the studio walls.

For most studios still adhere to the old system of readers first.

And, unless the reader has story genius within him, some of the best efforts will continue to beat a retreat without ever meeting the eye of a single person of authority.

What occurs when everyone in the studio knows that a good story has arrived? In most cases, whether the studio manager was butcher, baker or candlestick maker previously, it must suit his peculiar desires or temperament to be given further hearing.

Many times the director next can cast his ballot or his brickbat. In case both are interested and willing—yea, even anxious—some star still has the power to weep, growl or grow stubborn, and to take such a violent opposition to the story as to send it back to the waiting author.

It is said that this power is being wrrenched from the star's clutch in many places. Let us hope so, for heaven help a market which is filled with the sole likes and dislikes of leading men or leading women.

The cry today is for a reading system within every studio which is imbued with genius rated more than $25 a week. To grasp full values of a story, to read between the lines in examining the written page for screen possibilities, and to write a synopsis review of such stories which will convey to the editor full values of the manuscript, demands much the same imagination and creative ability as that of the successful writer.

At the best, the views of a single person are not unerring and, many times, are incorrect. The fiction world is filled with tales of famous writers who ran the entire gantlet without missing a rejection, only to be "discovered" by some humble editor. Therefore a reading system which will give the story its chance at two or more hands, undoubtedly would wipe out much of the grief caused by observing the other fellow clean up on something we once had loafing around the old desk.

There are good stories in the market today; and there will be more in all the tomorrows. There are studios and editors who do purchase these stories but, these facts do not overcome the fault which allows many worthy manuscripts from drifting about unrecognized many weary months, some of them undoubtedly never to be produced.

STORIES WANTED

The scenario market is in the same condition that it always has been.

The studios need stories.

The need is greater than ever in the past, although production is somewhat limited.

Many of the foremost stars are delayed because of the lack of vehicles.

The only trouble existing seems to be that the management is looking for stories which "suit," but cannot convey much accurate information to writers as to that which is suitable or desired.

Therefore it is largely up to the author to get into this guessing match and try until he lands.

The majority of stories which seem to please, are those which virtually are of humorous composition but which carry, hidden away, a worth-while story. These might be termed as straight comedies, were it not for the fact that a few sober moments are provided in which heart-interest creeps in.

But, in such offerings, it matters not how many "high spots" are necessary, the major portion of the action must be of that "smiling through," "delightful" stuff which always gathers the cosmopolitan audience within its soft arms, and sends the crowd away feeling that it has been delightfully entertained.

Sometimes it is called comedy drama. But "comedy" is the wrong word. Rather let it be known as bubbling humor, with a mingled sigh and tear, and there you have the story "they" will buy.

SCRIPT MARKET

Rural dramas and comedy-dramas seem to be in favor. The De Luxe Film Company needs one.

Graf Productions, Incorporated, first to renew activities at San Mateo, is in the market for light comedy and melodramas. The company does not go into detail. Ask them for yourself.

Universal still is asking for stories for Hoot Gibson, Gladys Walton, Marie Prevost, et. al. Inquire for details at the studio. Our guess probably would be a poor one.

Other editors who desire to attract the attention of writers, should send in their dope. We are not a mind reader.

SPLIT SCENES

Slapstick comedy seems to be getting a slap in the face.

If we are trapped in a theater again where one of those infernal-triangle productions is running, someone is going to get trampled upon when we leave.

It seems as if legs had so surfeited the public, that nothing but the legitimate will bring the people back.

Contemporary Criticisms

"I AM THE LAW"

Edwin Carewe-Affiliated Distributors, Inc.

"I Am the Law" is an Actic thriller with an unquestionable box-office appeal. It has the bigness and freedom of action that is usually associated with the successful James Oliver Curwood production, only to a much more striking degree than is common. It has beauty. Wide, snowy expanses, the reflection of a dull sun or fir trees, the hot breath of the sleigh dogs—these are sights and sensations which have been made intensely vivid.

"Such scenes have more than pictorial value. They afford a cool relief from the strenuous emotional and physical combats which are almost inseparable from all the interior scenes. This is a picture where the conflict is continual.

"The cast is one of the principal reasons why the picture is entertaining. Six distinguished performers, Alice Lake, Kenneth Harlan, Gaston Glass, Rosemary Theby, Noah Beery and Wallace Beery are seen in the important parts."

—Moving Picture World.

"With a picture revolving around elemental conflict in the Canadian Northwest and the action tense and suspenseful throughout with a cast selected for its adaptability as well as its fitness for interpretation, there is no doubt of the entertaining values concerning 'I Am the Law.' James Oliver Curwood has written another tale of the Mounted but let him be credited with enough imagination to take the spectator by surprise. He has written a story involving a conflict of brother against brother—one who 'comes clean,' the other, a weakling. Both are members of the Mounted.

"The snow is everywhere—in the valleys, atop the mountains. Thus the spectator is placed in an appreciative mood—thanking the director for staging the story so realistically. . . . There is a vitality about this picture which keeps you on the anxious seat. It comes to the screen as an exceptionally vivid entertainment packed with adventure, action, romance, and pathos with no flaws except one or two minor scenes which need a title or two."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE GIRL IN HIS ROOM"

Vitagraph

"Judged as a whole this Edward Jose production should serve as fair entertainment, principally because it is well acted and nicely staged. There is a stereotyped plot, however, with little action or excitement to lift it above the ordinary.

"There is just enough variation of the theme to hold one's interest, although the sophisticated spectator will have little difficulty figuring it out after the first reel."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"This newest vehicle does not call for much more than sitting around looking pretty. This is easy for Alice, but hard on summer seekers of real entertainment.

"The plot of this picture is so flimsy that much padding is required to pull it through the five reels. There are a few 'big' moments, but they have been duplicated before."

—Motion Picture News.

"MISSING HUSBANDS"

Metro

"Missing Husbands' is a novelty, more or less, in that it deals with a mythical kingdom where the King Solomon theory of a thousand wives is found in reverse, only Queen Antinea is only up to her twentieth husband when the story closes, with a prospect of a twenty-seventh. . . . Outside of the idea of Queen Antinea being a vamp, it is different from anything else that has been done. . . . It has not a universal appeal and the strong sex stuff is likely to get it into trouble in censorship neighborhoods.

"The direction is uneven and while there are bits that are especially well handled, there are other instances of quite poor judgment."

—The Film Daily.

"As far as magnificent scenery and elaborate sets are concerned, the production is certainly able to share honors with some of our biggest pictures. The story is purely imaginative, weird and overpowering at times, yet so exaggerated and unreal on other occasions that it scarcely suffices to hold the interest and live up to the expectations that have been created in the early part of the film.

"The photography through the picture consists of some remarkably fine scenes. The desert shots and particularly the mirage are beautifully done."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Missing Husbands' is a novelty. Unique lighting effects that have never been surpassed are employed in depicting an unusual narrative. There is no particular rhyme or reason for the film, other than to entertain, a tale of romantic adventure, cleverly blended with rare dramatic contribution.

It is convincing to the point of almost believing that there is such a place as a mysteriously hidden territory, somewhere in a great desert over which reigns a heartless Queen.

"Photography is exquisite and views necessary to describe the phantom location where most of the action takes place have been well photographed and carefully selected."

—Motion Picture News.

"Missing Husbands' is the applicable title given to the picturization of Pierre Benoit's novel, 'L'Atlantide,' which was awarded the French Grand Prix some years ago. The book became one of the greatest literary successes of Europe, about 2,000,000 copies being sold. Over a year ago a French company produced the moving picture version of the novel, and when introduced it ran for a year in Paris and London under the original title.

"Its pictorial advantages are numerous and have appeal, its fantasy will be appreciated by the many who respond to that sort of thing, and Stacia Napierkowska, as Queen Antinea, has certain attraction, due to her peculiar physical beauty and method of costuming. Men will like her.

"The story, fantastic in the extreme, holds the interest for about three-quarters of the way through the film. It then relaxes its grip somewhat. But firm attention to the film is maintained by the picturesque qualities, which are striking.

"The direction of the action in the individual scenes has been done in a capable, but Continental manner, and the photography enhances the beauty of the settings."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE YELLOW STAIN"

Fox

"Several well drawn character studies and a human and convincing little story makes this a pleasing offering.

"It is conventional in plot but so convincingly played that it holds the interest right through. Director Dillon has made the most of the various dramatic scenes and they have been carefully handled by the star.

"Good photography, adequate sets and well sustained interest make this a satisfactory offering."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"Here there is a theme of the type that is never too old to inspire enthusiasm. For this reason and also because the theme has been handled in a strong way, 'The Yellow Stain,' concerning the courage of youth's convictions against great odds will have considerable appeal. It is one of those pictures which are said to have moral backbone.

"Because it has character and is, for the most part, free from any cheap touches, it is worthy of a less sensational title than 'The Yellow Stain.'"

—Moving Picture World.

"Stories of honest young men who beard crooked lions in their dens and wage a triumphant battle with them are ever popular, and when the scene of action is an average town, you can make up your mind that such a tale carries an appealing quality.

"The Yellow Stain" follows a regulation groove. There is not much surprise in the development of the plot and you know pretty near how it will end.

"The sets, photography and acting are adequate."

—Motion Picture News.

"The Yellow Stain" consists of a 'rich man, poor man' theme that generally can be counted on to satisfy a large class of patronage. It offers some good melodramatic situations without committing too obviously the act of hitting the spectator between the eyes with too much premeditated villainy. There are some fine moments of suspense for those who take their amusement in this form and the whole story is rather pleasingly done.

"The story progresses evenly and interest is sustained throughout."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THEY'RE OFF"

Aywon-Anchor

"They're Off!"

"Right, they are all off in this melodrama. Ye shades of Nickelodeons. Here's the 'mellereest' melodrama this reviewer has seen this year. They hand you everything from a fire to a horse race—and that's some stretch that even the 'dreamiest' dreamers of the turf seldom draw. But there is pep, life and realism in it—a combination that offsets the antiquity of the theme.

"Photographically, the picture is a gem. The double exposure is perfect and a credit to the photographer. The direction was flawless and Francis Ford lost no opportunity and overlooked no bet. The settings are picturesque and a treat to the eye."

—Moving Picture World.

"Probably if there had not been so many pictures with stories so very similar to 'They're Off,' the production would stand a much better chance of going over, but coming as about the hundred and first repetition of the famed 'Checkers' plot, it cannot brag of anything original, and the production isn't big enough to get it anywhere.

"The picture is typical of the 10-20-30's and contains all the earmarks of that class.

"A fair thrill is found in the horse race, but it is such a frequent occurrence in films that it loses force with every repetition. Ford has attempted to create a suspense, but it is not effective. The cast, with the exception of the featured player, who works hard, is poor."

—The Film Daily.

"KISSED"

Universal

"Charming as ever is Marie Prevost in 'Kissed,' her newest starring vehicle for Universal. This, however, is not one of her best productions; the story is very light and several minor incidents have been given undue footage to make it a production of feature length."

—Moving Picture World.

"Marie Prevost's latest release follows along pretty much in the same line as her recent Universal pictures. It is a fairly pleasing offering that serves to exploit the star to the best advantage, and will likely get by with the average audience because it does not tax their imagination, require any strict attention to follow it and at the same time is sufficiently interesting to keep them watching, even though it never grips.

"The story is of an improbable nature with a surprise finish that is effective but not convincing."

—The Film Daily.

"Marie Prevost's piquant personality, her ability to interpret a flapperish type of heroine, her gift of wearing smart clothes, a faint dash of romance, some clever titles and a tasty production—these are the sole assets of 'Kissed,' which travels along on two cylinders with very little gas to keep it going. In fact, the plot is inconsequential

JANE STARR
Supporting Wanda Hawley in
"Bobbed Hair"

and really belongs as the background of a two-reeler. King Baggot, the director, had done wonders, however, in adding enough incident to extend through four reels. The padded scenes are not overdone and they do not grate on one's patience."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE PRIMITIVE LOVER"

First National

"This latest Constance Talmadge vehicle registers as capital farce comedy, full of snap and ginger and safe to make a hit wherever it is shown. It is bully good stuff, alive with rollicking humor, moving at a fast clip and providing the ever popular leading lady with just the sort of role suited to her versatile talents."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The film is a delicious travesty on many a 'man and his mate' story, and the atrocities often perpetuated in the latter are shown up with amusing skill. It is a riot at times.

"One of the best scenes shows the spirited Miss Talmadge being thrashed and paddled by her ex-husband. One wonders after seeing this part of it how many present-day actresses would undergo such handling even for the sake of so amusing a picture.

"The subtitles are an entertainment in themselves."

—Moving Picture World.

"The Primitive Lover" doesn't show a marked improvement in the way of entertainment over the star's recent offerings and although it may get by with her admirers, it is way off the mark set by her recognized winners of two or three years back. "The Primitive Lover" isn't really any worse, but it is no better than the star's recent pictures.

"Director Franklin has not been able to retain an even interest and the result is a picture that is dull for a long stretch, brightens up, gets over a laugh or two, and settles back into a rut until finally another laugh is secured. And then the laughs are not usually the spontaneous kind. Frequently it takes the title to get it. Incidentally, many of the titles are poorly written. "The star photographs pretty well in this and will please her admirers."

—The Film Daily.

"They've got an old established formula as the theme of this picture—one which has served Constance Talmadge before, the slight difference in 'The Primitive Lover' and others which have preceded it being found in a larger vein of drama. The humorous element doesn't enter until the third or fourth reel which of course puts a tax upon the star's emotional capabilities. One is almost inclined to believe that the story in the introductory chapters is more suited to sister Norma.

"Some of the titles are snappy with humor and the later scenes are filled with entertaining comedy well balanced with romance and incident. It is well played by the star after the third reel."

—Motion Picture News.

"GAY AND DEVILISH"

R-C Pictures

"Pleasing light comedy, frivolous, rollicking incidents to take the place of any depth of plot is Doris May's latest picture, 'Gay and Devilish.' . . . The action is livened up with plenty of good, peppy titles, which are, in themselves, able to win laughs.

"On the whole 'Gay and Devilish' is something like a cooling drink on a warm summer evening."

—Motion Picture News.

"Gay and Devilish' is not extra gay nor excitingly devilish. Doris May is pleasing. The comedy has amusing situations and pleasing moments but suffers mainly through lack of character and aimless rambling.

"The story presents little that is new and runs very much along well tried lines. . . . The situations are easily recognized before they are reached.

"Doris May has had a poor lot of stories of late and is forced to work under a handicap.

"Director Seiter has also labored against the aimless story but has achieved some results, especially with the star. He has taken a lot of trouble to show her off to the best advantage under the circumstances."

—The Film Daily.

"It is typical of the entertainment with which Doris May has recently identified herself, only perhaps more so. Grandly described it is a paean of youth, buoyant and effervescent, with Doris May always in short skirts and always scampering, never walking about, in a demonstration of inexhaustible pep.

"The theme has been consistently developed with enough originality in the complications to be stimulating."

METROPOLITAN PRODUCTIONS NOTES

Roy McCray, formerly Studio Manager for Louis B. Mayer, has assumed charge of entire production and leasing facilities of Metropolitan Productions, who recently acquired the Brentwood Studio on Fountain Ave. Mr. McCray is making preparations for the forthcoming production, "Flaming Hearts," in which James B. Warner will be featured.

Most of the exterior scenes for "Crimson Gold" recently completed were filmed on the Verdi Ranch, some of the round-up episodes containing many long-horned cattle as "atmosphere." James B. Warner is featured in the picture with Edythe Sterling playing the feminine lead.

Clifford S. Elfelt, President and General Manager, announces that he will soon have an all-star company under way in addition to the present unit which is making five-reel specials featuring Mr. Warner. Carl P. Winther, Production Manager, is busy making arrangements for the casts and set for this new unit's activities, and it is expected that actual shooting of the picture will be started within the next few weeks.

COOGAN SENIOR PRODUCING INDEPENDENTLY

Jack Coogan Senior has announced himself in the role of producer. Mr. Coogan has created two production units at United Studios, each to make a series of twelve two-reel pictures. They are Rodeo Productions under the direction of George Marshall, former Tom Mix director who will make a series of stories by W. C. Tuttle and the Fred Hibbard Productions which will feature novel comedies. Arthur Bernstein has been engaged as production manager.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

"Affinities," the Mary Roberts Rinehart story directed by Ward Lascelle, is entering production this week. This Lascelle feature will be distributed through Hodkinson.

Leah Baird is working with her literary collaborators on the continuity for her next dramatic feature which will enter production within the next month.

GREEN ROOM CLUB New York City

AT LASKY'S

Alfred Green has brought back from San Francisco his company making "The Ghost Breaker." Scenes at a police station were taken immediately on the return and shortly a big Spanish castle set will be the scene of activities of the company.

William deMille is preparing for his production of Booth Tarkington's "Clarence," which Clara Beranger has adapted for the screen, in which there will be a cast headed by Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, May McAvoy, and Kathlyn Williams.

The company making "To Have and To Hold," George Fitzmaurice's production, are now working at Balboa Beach where a big ship has been transformed into an emigrant vessel of about 1620. Later a number of pirate scenes will also be made at the same location.

Irvin Willat had no sooner completed "The Siren Call" than he immediately jumped into production work on his new picture, "On the High Seas" in which Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are featured with Mitchell Lewis in support. The new picture, by E. M. Ingleton, from an original by Edward Sheldon, the playwright, is a sea story.

Mr. Earle, general sales manager for the Roy H. Klumb Productions, is exhibiting "Judge Her Not" and "Wolves of the Range," two western features, in the west and south, the east having already been sold.

Director William K. Howard of the Phil Goldstone forces has started work on the special production, "Deserted at the Altar," with an all-star cast of picture players.

MAKES ITS DEBUT

"One Clear Call," John M. Stahl's latest all-star production for Louis B. Mayer, made its debut in Chicago recently. Milton Sills, Claire Windsor, Henry B. Walthall and Irene Rich head the all-star cast, with such players as Joseph Dowling, Edith Yorke, Doris Pawn, Shannon Day, Donald MacDonald, Annette De Foe, Nick Cogley, Fred Kelsey, Stanley Goethals, Albert MacQuarrie and William Marion, completing the list.

BARKER TO FILM "TIMBER"

Louis B. Mayer announces the purchase of the Harold Titus novel, "Timber," as the story for Reginald Barker's first independent unit production. The director is now selecting all-star cast for the picture which will go into production within the next two weeks. J. G. Hawks, managing editor of all Mayer productions, is preparing the scenario.

BALLIN PICTURE READY

Hugo Ballin recently completed "Married People," his latest production, the release date of which will shortly be determined. The original story is the work of an amateur writer—Nell Marie Dace—a Chicago stenographer.

A veil of mystery still surrounds the purchase at public auction recently, of the late William Desmond Taylor's automobile. It was at first erroneously reported that an agent of Louis B. Mayer had bought in the car, but investigation proved that the producer was on his way to New York at the time of the sale and that no one from his studio had attended it.

"PRETTY BACKGROUNDS" AND THINGS
An Interview with Maurice Tourné.

By Donald H. Clark

"I've heard a good deal of discussion to the effect that we are going to photograph 'The Christian' in its natural settings in England for the sake of 'realism,'" said Maurice Tourné on the eve of his departure from New York for Liverpool.

"That to my mind is not the important thing at all," he continued. "I believe we have passed through the period of physical conflict and crowds, so far as the screen is concerned. What we are after now is the psychology of the drama—the mental action of the characters.

"Realism has been emphasized too much. I think that most of us would prefer to see Africa through the eyes of the artist, than through the prosaic lens of the camera. The impression is the thing.

"There is such a thing as overdoing beauty in settings. A pretty background is all right, but the background should never be allowed to interfere with the dramatic action. The action should overshadow all else. Pictures must get away from being merely tales portrayed against pretty backgrounds.

"The screen is a better medium than the dramatic stage for getting over psychological effects. We can drive ideas across. For instance, what better way is there to express corruption than to show a close-up of the check with which a man is bribed. It takes much longer to put over a mental state like that in words.

"The company for whom I am making this production, agrees with me that you can get more to the spectators by showing a banging shutter, by indicating the howling of the wind, or the shrieking of a woman, than by numberless words. Motion pictures, first of all, should be impressionistic.

"No artist thinks of his public. If the public likes the results—great! If the public doesn't like the results—too bad, but all right! Better luck next time.

"Perhaps you have found in your own experience that you can't reach any measure of real success if you are trying to please any one except yourself. It's the same old story that if you wish to meet a woman or a man favorably with all of your heart that you generally do the wrong thing and make a bad impression.

"'Let 'em come to you,' is the best motto. Do your best and see what happens. That's what the artist has to do."

It is understood that one of Gloria Swanson's releases for next season will be "His American Wife."

A ten-reel production of "The Bohemian Girl," released in England with Ellen Terry in its cast, was directed by Harley Knoles and cost £60,000.

"The Devil's Foot," is the first of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" to be distributed through Educational.

FROM HOLLYWOOD

Conducted by M. T. O.

(The Educational Screen)

I remember seeing once, on some vaudeville stage, an absurd skit which held up to ridicule the tricks of the theatrical trade. It wound up in a grand flag-waving finale which gave the chief character opportunity to observe sagely, "There's many a bum show been saved by the American flag."

The motion picture producers call that sort of thing—all the old, familiar devices for holding interest—by the all-embracing term "hokum," and as such it holds a definite and important place in pictures. You know by heart the laugh-producers in the average comedy. You look for them, and—you must admit it—when they come, you laugh. You hold your breath during the flitting progress of the melodrama, while the heroine races with the limited train to snatch from death the little toddler on the track. You lean heavily on the arms of your chair while the hero fights six bandits single handed and comes up smiling and in perfect sartorial trim after the fray. You exult with the small citizen behind you—though not so audibly—when through the rifts in the battle smoke you glimpse the Stars and Stripes, infallible sign that we have met the enemy and he is ours!

This sort of thing grips you. It induces, according to its kind, laughter, tears, outbursts of applause. And that is what the producer knew that it would do, for it is "sure-fire stuff," the thing called "hokum."

There are few pictures which do not depend largely on these devices for their popularity. They belong with the traditions of the stage, and crossed over very naturally to a similar place in motion pictures—if the latter may be said to have traditions.

But "sure-fire stuff" is going out of style. You are tired of it. You have been tired of it for some time, but the producers have just discovered what the trouble is. Watch yourself, and see how often your criticism of a picture is, "Oh, it was all right, but it was the same old thing." And notice your own surprised gratification when you see something different. For the truth is that the public—you, that is—is letting producers know what it wants by the efficacious method of staying away from what it doesn't want. It has been a long time about the business, for it had first to make up its mind about what it liked, and during that time the producers handed out whatever they pleased.

The point upon which the future of motion pictures hinges is, as I see it, the question of their "universal appeal." That, it strikes me, is one of the greatest bits of "hokum" in the entire business. No one picture can ever be expected to appeal alike to all classes, and yet that is the assumption upon which the picture makers have been proceeding for all these years. "Hokum," they reasoned, pleases everybody, and from the standpoint of box-office receipts, everybody must be pleased. But the box-office has for some time been registering a falling off of patronage. Producers have been surprised and deeply puzzled, and picture production has been of late in a state of considerable confusion.

Various writers, in attempts to clear up the situation, have insisted that the movies are a popular art—not a fine art, that they are the art of the masses, that their appeal is purely a democratic appeal. One writer puts the movies violently in their place with the implication that at best they are hardly fit for more than a twelve-year-old intelligence. The general conclusion seems to be that the motion pictures will be limited in their achievements, literary, artistic, and histrionic, to just what comes within the comprehension of the literal-minded middle class which supposedly supports them. In other words, the motion picture must be aimed at the average man; otherwise it is out of its class.

If there were such a person as an average man, the theory would be workable, but it takes high and low to strike an average, and what suits the one can never suit the other.

Progressive picture men to whom I have talked are welcoming a change. A few producers and directors who have seen the situation all along are seizing the opportunity to try the public with something different. And so we have had such fine, earnest efforts as "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Miss Lulu Bett," "The Conquering Power," to mention only a few.

ROSE ROSANOVA

One motion picture man, in discussing the present trend, gave me as his idea of the solution of the future of motion pictures, and the ever-present censorship, what he called "selective" production and exhibition. He said the need now is for pictures definitely designed to satisfy certain demands, and advertised for what they are. We need a condition among producers and exhibitors which will permit the person who wants fine, serious drama to be satisfied without being offended by having "sex" stories hurled at him; which will allow the seeker after light entertainment to see what he wants without first having to tax his brain with a problem play. The stage does it; why not the pictures?

The problem is the producer's. The public, after it has signified its approval or disapproval, can only sit back and watch. But the fact that the producers realize that there is a problem, and are striving to meet it, should do much to temper the public impatience with what it terms the shortcomings of the movies.

Paris, in the title role, Paulette Duval, Alexander Salvini, Edy Darleu, Violet Mersereau and some Italian and Russian players. The story is by Charles Sarver and Virginia Tracy.

Paul Powell's Paramount production, "For the Defense," featuring Ethel Clayton and based on the stage play by Elmer Rice, will open Monday, June 5th at the Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre.

Sister Sarah, the ardent exponent of censorship in our town says that, if the police won't interfere she is going to have the prohibition officer on our beat suppress the punch in pictures.

The gods created fire, but man invented the fire engine. Genius invented fiction, then someone cooked up the picture director.

Every time we see a jobless "buddy," with nothing to comfort him but his war injuries, we frenziedly wish that someone would put on a production which would make the government crawl into a hole and blush itself into a state of complete redemption.

Some producers are carrying technique too far. Lots of people still believe that the "heavy" in a play is the fat man.

It seems strange that a nation which reverently closes its place of business once each year to honor the heroic dead, should not have at least its annual photoplay of commemoration.

With signs of the trust cracking and exhibitors threatening to take more independent action, writers should cheer up. The independent market is sure to come, and on a big scale. And such a market means many new, independent production corporations who do not work under the made-by-rule system.

The pale and trembling author stumbled from an excited group, and supported himself upon a telegraph pole.

"What's the matter?" asked a friend; "Get a check for a scenario?"

The frightened author replied:

"No, I was just listening to that bunch of editors telling each other how bad their selections were. If they can't agree, what chance have my stories?"

BREAKING SILENCE

SUGGESTION TO MINISTERS

HOLLYWOOD, May 26. (Editor Camera!) While the ministerial union is resolving about the moving picture personnel, what's the matter with their passing something like the following:

"Whereas: One Arthur Burch stands accused in the courts of our county of the foul crime of murder, and

Whereas: The said Arthur Burch is the son of a minister and the son-in-law of a bishop, and

Whereas: The fact that the said Arthur Burch may eventually be acquitted can have no possible bearing on the attitude of this righteous body, be it, therefore,

Resolved: That the ministerial union hereby expresses its unreserved and unqualified condemnation of an organization, to-wit: the church whose influence on the character of the said Arthur Burch has led to a result so fraught with depravity and bad example. And be it further

Resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent to the head of the offending denomination with a demand that it cleanse itself by the immediate unfrocking of the father and father-in-law of this alleged murderer, regardless of his eventual acquittal!

JUST PEOPLE

FILM folk are as human humans as exist.

For that reason I'd like to see Helen Ferguson publish in book form her genuine, frank, human "Diary of a Movie Girl," which the Los Angeles Record has been printing each Friday.

Miss Ferguson's narrative is real. It's typical of the everyday tribulations and joys of girls of pictures.

It points no moral. In its very simplicity, its day-by-day record of happenings among real people, this diary performs a great service for the much maligned motion picture industry. It shows the people who make pictures as they really are—just people.

Miss Ferguson's diary can do more to straighten out the mental kinks of slovenly thinkers who sneer at Hollywood than all the pure-picture propaganda ideas yet hatched.

Peggy Joyce is in town hoping some film magnate will sign her for a row of close-ups. Guess she didn't read about Clara Hamon, Fred Beauvais and Ralph Obenchain.

The "personal appearance" fad reached its apex with the advertised feature of a New York theatre being the personal appearance of a cameraman.

Exciting news comes from the National association of the Motion picture industry that 8 x 10 lobby cards are doomed, and that exhibitors prefer 11 x 14 cards. Now we can sleep tonight.

SUPERLATIVES

THE New York Telegraph delivers this little editorial to adjective-jugglers under "One Hundred-Foot Flashes":

The motion picture field is the home of superlatives. In no other industry does one find so much that is "greatest," "best," "most stupendous," "most daring" and "most magnificent." Even the circus never had rooters like the motion picture press agents. They go on superlative jags and do their best trying to outwit one another with their phrases and praises.

"It seems to us that this exaggerated praise is making motion pictures a bit ridiculous. The publicity doesn't deceive any one, and it makes the general public more or less derisive. Only recently we overheard a chap who had been reading about "the greatest, most stupendous fight scene ever staged," say to his companion: 'Gee! I'll bet there's a scene in that picture where one fellow taps another on the wrist!'

"To be a success with the public a picture isn't compelled to have more people, more chairs, more fights or more mothers than any other picture ever made. And there is no real reason why the press agents should think all this exaggeration necessary.

"'Over the Hill' only had one mother, but was a success. 'Tol'able David' had only one David, but the public loved it. If the press agents would curb their enthusiasm, throw out the hyperbole and tell about pictures simply and more intelligently it would help the public to believe in the art of the motion picture. One wouldn't acclaim a Rembrandt by saying: 'Oh, boy! the most spectacular, magnificent and perfect picture ever painted by the Wizard of the Brush!'"

Wish Walter Camp would devise a set of exercises for theater patrons cramped up in too-narrow seats.

Film Capital Production Notes

DOYLE SHOWS DINOSAUR FILMS

Credit Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for going Harry Reichenbach, Mike Boylan, Ach Reeve, et al., one better in spectacular motion picture press agent stunts.

Doyle fooled Houdini and a banquet hall full of professional tricksters at the annual meeting of the Society of American Magicians in New York last week.

Dinosaurs and other terrible prehistoric monsters wandered and frolicked in perfect abandon in a motion picture presented by Sir Arthur. Neither titles nor explanation were vouchsafed by the author, who talked solemnly of psychic phenomena and of preternatural photography.

The next day Doyle wrote Houdini explaining that the monsters had "been constructed by pure cinema art," and were used for the picturization of his novel, "The Lost World," which shows prehistoric life upon a South American plateau.

Blanche Sweet and Marshal Neilan were married last Friday, June 9, in New York. Mr. Neilan is 31 years old and his bride is about 26.

Only a few intimate friends attended the ceremony.

Frank Howard Clark, of the Screen Writers Guild, has finished his second continuity for King and Florence Vidor, "Judith the Conqueror," an adaptation of a story by Henry C. Rowland.

Bebe Daniels will play the lead in Konrad Bercovici's story, "The Law of the Lawless," which is to be filmed by the Lasky studios.

King Vidor and his company are making plans to go on location to Catalina to take scenes in his new picture, "Judith the Conqueror." They expect to be there for two weeks.

He expects to return about the first of July, when he will start work on his next picture, "The Shadow," written by James Gaton.

Ethel Grey Terry has just finished working with Harry Carey in the Robertson-Cole production, "Condemned."

ENTRE ART

The cry for "better" pictures has been the inspiration for the organizing of an independent department for the purpose of editing, reconstructing and titling motion pictures.

This will carry an especially strong appeal to the independent producer who desires high-class workmanship in every detail of production, but who prefers not to carry editors and artists between pictures.

Ralph H. Dixon, for several years associated with Thos. H. Ince, holds the position of supervising editor, while the staff of artists comes under the supervision of Ralph McNitt and Carl Schneider, formerly of the Ince art staff.

Harry Carey's production, "Condemned," has been completed at the Robertson-Cole studios. The story is an original by Edgar Forrest, adapted to the screen by George Edwards Hall. The picture will be sent East this week.

AUERBACH REMAINS AT COAST

Los Angeles, Cal., June 9.—Louis Auerbach, vice-president of the Export & Import Film Company, who arrived in Los Angeles last Saturday for a conference with Colonel Wm. W. Selig, will remain here for several weeks, according to his present plans.

Auerbach and Selig are going over fall production plans and it is expected that a program will be announced very shortly. Auerbach is also viewing other independent productions and has announced that his company is ready to purchase the world rights on negatives of merit.

Norma Talmadge's superfeature, which was made under the title of "The Duchess of Langeais," and later changed to "The Eternal Flame," is to be released as "Infatuation."

The new picture Dick Jones is directing, starring Ben Turpin and featuring Phyllis Haver, will be known as "The Frozen Trail."

John M. Stahl is completing preparations for the filming of "The Dangerous Age," his next production under the Louis B. Mayer banner.

Joseph M. Schenck is combing the city for a high-powered man to handle the camera when Norma Talmadge starts work on "The Voice from the Minaret." Frank Lloyd will direct.

Some time ago it was announced by the Lasky organization that Fred Niblo was to direct a series of features starring Rodolph Valentino; among those mentioned was "The Young Rajah." Since that time, however, Mr. Niblo has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to make his own productions.

Eugene Manlove Rhodes, a Saturday Evening Post author, has had three of his stories made into pictures by Harry Carey. They are, "East Is West," "The Wallop," and "Condemned."

Philip Rosen is busily engaged in selecting his cast for his next production, "The Young Rajah." This story is an adaptation by June Mathis from the novel, "Amos Judd," by J. A. Mitchell and will be the second production which Lasky has made starring Rodolph Valentino. Production will start within a few days.

J. D. Williams, general manager of Associated First National, Inc., is now in Los Angeles conferring with producers releasing through his organization. He will remain here several days.

Allen Holubar, director-producer, loaned to Goldwyn, is scheduled to start work this week on the filming of "Broken Chains," the $10,000 prize scenario.

The Kel-Pine producing company has just finished making "Golden Hoofs."

The latest Mack Sennett comedy to be completed, cut, titled and shipped to New York is "Oh! Daddy!," directed by Roy Del Ruth, featuring Billy Bevan and Mildred June.

Thomas H. Ince, who has been in the East for some weeks, is expected to return to his studios at an early date. In the meantime film production is being kept at its peak at the Ince plant.

The Astra studios in Glendale have been taken over by Fred L. Bagley, former assistant general manager of the Charlie Chaplin company. He expects to have several units working at one time.

A new casting office has been formed here under the name of the Reliable Photoplay Association.

Current Reviews

"YOUR BEST FRIEND"

Such a picture to show the peoples after Davidson. With these days of such good ones with Vera Gordon and Dore modern mamas' too, none of them should sit back and let sonny's wife's mama grab onto moneys what took poor dead papa and live mama years and years to save. Mister director didn't seem to know that mamas ain't the poor fishes that before, they used to be. Mama now-days first, on herself puts the fine feathers and then with the leftovers dresses the kids. In "Your Best Friend" mama-in-law with curlpapers and wrinkle plasters stays young. The good mama hasn't enough sense herself to doll up so that is why her sons should take from her the long saved moneys.

Vera Gordon with the good acting is there and for her sons she fights like a house cat for a piece of kafelta fish. Too much it is to ask of such an actress to work so hard nobody will notice that the story got lost.

Dore Davidson, a mean hand swings, when the books he keeps gets low in funds. It is with Miss Gordon side by side that the honors he shares.

Like seeing the funny-papers for all one price it is when Belle Bennett, mama's son's wife, swells around on mama-in-law's moneys.

For Beth Mason it is the same thing. Like ambitious mamas in a paper covered book she is acting all over the place.

Harry Benman, the oldest son to Mama Gordon, such a fine looker he is he should have picked himself out a better wife. Not enough space he is given to act in, but given a room to himself he would do well.

The little boy cried till the last when with a smile he surprised himself.

A wise man is that director. His name he keeps off the screen.

Fay McKenzie, Bob McKenzie's little two-year old actress, wanted to know if that man with the funny ears acted by radio.

Theodore Roberts had his vest buttoned today. Migosh! who's his seamstress?

"BOBBED HAIR"

NOTHING could have been more insipid than the combination hit on in "Bobbed Hair." The cast is balanced in that none of the players do any acting outside of stiffly walking from one scene to another. The story is one of those sickly Greenwich village type, in fact the title quite tells the whole of it. It is somewhat of a mystery what the director is driving at for five reels but the scenery is good to look at and one can't be too choosy these days.

Wanda Hawley gives a most puzzling performance. Why she flounces from one room to another and back again for one reel, acting as though someone insulted her, is beyond a humble reviewer. There might be something deep or hidden here.

Adele Farrington, Wanda's aunt, chases her niece through various sets with marked talent.

William Boyd is a good opposite for Miss Hawley. They work together well. It is great suspense waiting to see which one of them will limber up first and act natural.

A life-sized man such as William Charleton, posing in the robes of Demosthenes, is a trial one's imagination cannot quite grasp.

All these characters are supposed to be seriously considered as representing parallels in life.

Thomas Heffron put the continuity to action.

R. W.

Lloyd Hamilton thinks he can make a song picture now because he visited Sing-Sing.

Will some one advise the writer who Monte Collins, Jr., and Monte Collins, Sr., are? He can't tell which is which.

THE WORLDLY MADONNA

Dear Editor:

I wish to thank you for sending me to see "The Worldly Madonna," starring Clara Kimball Young.

The Picture was very good and the story was one of the best. The Director shure showed His skill in that Picture, and the scenes and settings with elictiril effects could not Have Been any Better.

Clara Kimball Young Played the Dual role to Perfection. Miss Young was Janet Trevor, the Novice in the convent and as Lucy Trevor Head Liner for a cafa on Bdy, N. Y.

William P. Carleton Played the part of John McBride, Politician and was just sooted for the Part.

Richard Tucker came next as allan Graves and Held His own.

George Hackathorne as Ramey the Hunch Back was very Good.

Count De Limur as Toni Lorenz was fair.

The Production was very Pleasing.
CHRIS.

Peggy Marlowe wants a husband. Listen, fellows, don't crowd. It's only for a picture.

"THE TRAP"

THERE is nothing but cast to back up for being shown. And if that cast had "The Trap" and make it excusable not Lon Chaney, the picture would have found itself "shelved" before ever leaving its happy home, the cutting room. Not reflecting upon other players, but the weakness of their parts with all their good work, would fail to carry them through.

Lon Chaney plays neither a cripple nor an apeman here but a straight French Canadian role of a "good" man, which is some change. Enough cannot be said in regard to Chaney's work. One forgets story, (or rather lack of it), and rocky direction, in following the hills and dales of Chaney's emotions. Here is an actor who can tear at heartstrings with his facial expressions. He takes us with him when his heart is breaking and his character is making the transition from guileless one to evil and then back again, showing the struggle to put the good from him.

In startling contrast to Chaney's supreme work is Dagmar Godowsky. She will never be an actress, and forcing her upon such an actor for support is nothing short of sacrilege.

Stanley Goethals is a clever little chap and works well with Chaney. He has a plaintive appeal and winning smile.

Alan Hale does good steady work, playing a heavy.

Spottiswoode Aitken is not seen enough, considering the mark he has made as one of the real actors.

Herbert Standing as a priest, and Frank Campeau, a police sergeant, are appropriately cast.

Irene Rich should have come on the landscape sooner, for she has a pleasing personality, and the story sadly lacked feminine support for the first three reels.

Photography was of the grab bag type. Some of it was wonderful in composition and lighting, while other parts were very bad as to clearness and light.

Robert Thornby didn't make any great mark when he directed this feature. He is quite artless, and without competent actors, he would have turned out nothing but a mechanically animated production.

The least said of the story the better. It is simple.

"FOR THE DEFENSE"

EXTREMELY good taste has been shown in selecting the cast and in moulding the story, "For the Defense." The whole producing unit have worked harmoniously in bringing a picture far above the average to the screen. From the artistic standpoint this production is a masterpiece. The story, while ordinary in text, is effectively carried out in such a manner that it commands one's whole attention and interest and provides plenty of entertainment.

But what chance has Ethel Clayton, though enacting her role with all her clever wiles, and backed up with stage training, when a young miss in the person of Zazu Pitts walks off with all the honors in her homely little part? Miss Pitts becomes an obsession in the midst of the surrounding brilliant cast.

Miss Clayton, beautiful of face and figure, is slighted as to character in her role here. She is lovely but not unusual.

Bertram Grasby is a most magnetic individual, though the "heavy," he carries the picture as far as the male lead is concerned. His realization of screen composition makes his portrayal most artistic.

Vernon Steele plays an ordinary part in an ordinary way.

Mayme Kelso is much talented, in a straight-laced character, and makes a great deal of her plain part.

Mabel Van Buren has little to do outside of wearing swell clothes which she does very well.

Great credit is due Paul Powell in his clever handling of the story. He has "made" it with his direction. He brings out the best in his players and allows them to show their own mannerisms.

The art director has shown deep understanding of his subject in arranging backgrounds for the oriental touches. They are portraits at all times.

The photography cannot go unnoticed. The cameraman was just one more link in the chain to polish off the production.

SHORT SUBJECTS

"A Pair of Kings"

LARRY Semon's comedy "A Pair of Kings" has more story combined with slapstick than his usual output. The most noted improvement in this production is the lack of "mugging" for laughs on Semon's part. He "duals" after the fashion of dramatic actors with good results. More entertainment might have been derived had he kept more to the straight character of the king upon whose head "heavy rests the crown." However, Semon has made a new mark and taken a step higher up with all indications of rising still higher.

Lucille Carlyl is seen in the comedian's support; appearing in a few scenes aided by gowns of imported label.

When they say "Camera" action starts in earnest. So be in earnest and get in the Camera!

Most cameras are run by a crank, except this one, and maybe this one, who knows?

COLD FEET," a Christie comedy, is a beautifully made burlesque on the North West Mounted dramas that have flooded the picture market of late.

Viora Daniel, the ingenue, is pretty and has her own little set of tricks. Her part is only ordinary calling for straight action.

Patricia Palmer has character in role and person and has grasped comedy values. Here she burlesques the simple country maiden, the subject of Harry Edwards' capable cruelty.

Where to Find People You Know

Helen Dale is starting her sixth comedy with Bobby Dunn. This series consists of twelve two-reelers with Miss Dale supporting him at the Berwillia Studio.

Eleanor Boardman and William Haines have been added to the Goldwyn stock company.

Wallace MacDonald has been engaged by Universal to play an important part in "The One Woman May."

Bruce Guerin, three years old, has been engaged for an important part in support of Viola Dana at Metro studio.

Edward Burns is playing opposite Constance Talmadge in "East Is West."

Harry Parizer and A. S. Kingsby are in the cast of the Kel-Pine producing company's comedies.

Molly Mackay and Irene Roberts are engaged to play in the Kel-Pine novelty comedy-dramas.

June Elvidge has been signed to play a leading role in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

Billie Dove has been engaged by Metro as leading woman in "A Temporary Marriage."

Katherine Vidor will go on location to Catalina for two weeks to take a part in the picture, "Judith the Conqueror."

Thomas Holding, former stage star, says that he will never return to the footlights, having once settled in a permanent home. For years Mr. Holding practically lived in a trunk.

Marie Mosquini is engaged to play the role of an heiress opposite "Snub" Pollard in his newest picture.

Noah Young is now playing in Snub Pollard's new society story.

Charles Parrott is directing Snub Pollard in his new production.

Jobyna Ralston is playing opposite "Paul" Parrott as a ranchman's daughter.

Eddie Baker has been engaged to play the "heavy" with "Paul" Parrott's company which is on location at Mt. Lowe.

Colleen Moore is to play the leading role in Ward Lascelle's production of the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "Affinities."

John Bowers plays the hero in "Affinities."

Joseph Bonner, Jack Duffy, Grace Gordon and Pete Soso are included in the cast of "Affinities."

Guy Frum is assistant director to Ward Lascelle.

Abe Scholtz and J. Miehle are the cameramen in the Ward Lascelle production of "Affinities." Carl Shillinger is film editor, and Harry Jackson is the scenario editor.

Rudolph Cameron, the leading man in "Rose O' the Sea," is a much better Romeo in life than he is before a camera. Five years ago he wooed and won Anita Stewart, but in the photoplay he only woos her. The winning is done by another man, a twist of Fate that Mr. Cameron can lay to the scenario writer for he does his best to make his wife look favorably upon him.

Florence Vidor is playing the lead in "Judith the Conqueror," which will be made by King Vidor company.

Nan Carr, a beautiful daughter of a Danish father and a Japanese mother, is to play one of the Oriental bits in Constance Talmadge's "East Is West," which is now being produced at the United Studios.

Claire Adams is scheduled to play the lead in William Farnum's forthcoming production, after which she will star for William Fox.

Little Buddy Messenger is playing under the direction of Hobart Henley in the Universal-Jewel all-star special adapted from Booth Tarkington's "The Flirt."

Ruth Clifford is playing in the John M. Stahl production, "The Dangerous Age."

Edith Roberts, well known as a star in her own right, and Wheeler Oakman, one of the popular leading men of the screen, who commands a large following of motion picture fans, have the leading roles in "The Son of the Wolf." The production called for a number of scenes showing the tribal life of the Canadian Indian and these will be one of the distinct points of appeal of the picture. As a book, "The Son of the Wolf" was among the late author's most widely read novels.

Norman Dawn will be remembered by exhibitors and public for his direction of R-C productions, notably "The Vermillion Pencil." "The Son of the Wolf" is the first of a series of special productions which Mr. Dawn will produce for R-C release. In addition to Miss Roberts and Wheeler Oakman, the cast includes such popular players as Sam Allen, Ashley Cooper, Thomas Jefferson, Fred Kohler, Fred Stanton and Arthur Jasmine.

Douglas Gerrard, director and actor, will create the role of Hassan, the villain of "Omar the Tentmaker." Gerrard is remembered for his direction of many Metro and Universal pictures. His most recent engagement has been in the photodramatization of Ibanez's "Blood and Sand."

Evelyn Selbie plays the role of Zarah, the confidante and protectress of Shireen, in "Omar the Tentmaker."

Boris Karloff will be the Imam Mowaffak, in "Omar the Tentmaker." He achieved considerable prominence on the English and continental stage. His best remembered film roles were in "The Infidel" and "The Woman Conquers."

Patsy Ruth Miller will be little Shireen, in Tully's production of "Omar the Tentmaker." This role will mark her first characterization in other than American types.

Leslie T. Peacocke has practically completed the seven reel production of "The Wheel of Fortune" which he is filming at Universal. Grace Darmond, star of the picture, has already left for New York.

Pickups By The Staff

MARION FAIRFAX "The Lady on the Cover"

A daughter of a philosopher, initiated at an early age to the teachings of Confucius by her father—truly a mortal gifted by the gods!

One can understand Marion Fairfax has the wonderful insight into life which, combined with poise, has placed her on the pinnacle of success.

Miss Fairfax early in life contracted the "writer's itch," and soon the pen and she were close friends. But she wanted the "children of her brain" to materialize, so when an offer came from Charles Frohman to join one of his companies she accepted and started her theatrical career with the humble sum of two dollars. The journey ate up one-fifty. No return fare. She burned her bridges. Miss Fairfax had to find success.

Miss Fairfax's next production will take up the cudgels for those who went "Over There" and who must not be forgotten. Miss Fairfax's "bete noir" is injustice. Her play in town this week deals with a mighty problem, circumstantial evidence, which she treats in a skillful way, blending "melo" with a trace of comedy. For life, she thinks, is a blending of both and the wisest thing to do is to accept it all with a smile—her smile.

Kate Lester, seen as "Lady Maggie" in "Rose O' the Sea," can trace her family back in unbroken line for over five hundred years. One of her ancestors, Sir William Butts, was physician-in-chief to King Henry VIII and is represented in Shakespeare's play in the character of Dr. Butts.

COMEDY GIRLS RETURN

Dorothy Devore and Vera Steadman turned up at the Christie studio after their automobile vacation trip along the coast.

After horseback riding and swimming for three days at Wheeler's Hot Springs, the comedy stars drove to the Oliver Ranch near Monterey, where Miss Steadman was born some twenty-one years ago.

Eugene A. Vogt, the well known subtitle writer, received a telegram from his son, Louis Calhern, announcing the latter's engagement for next season as lead opposite Doris Keane in "The Czarina." Lou has just closed his engagement with Olga Petrova in "The White Peacock." He will spend at least a month in a New York hospital undergoing an operation and treatment for a slight muscular dislocation caused by a ten-hour hike with his old battery while playing with Madame Petrova in Washington, D. C.

Rowland V. Lee the director, his brother, and Sol Wertzell have just returned from Sacramento having gone there to attend the celebration, "Days of 49."

Ruth Stonehouse has just returned to Hollywood after completing a personal appearance tour with her number, "The Dixie Syncopaters."

"The Woman Who Walked Alone" will open at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre next Monday.

It has remained for the Milton Bradley Company, book publishers of Springfield, Mass., to make a book from a photoplay. A new edition of "Lorna Doone" is now on the press, illustrated with reproductions from scenes of Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone," which has just been completed. This book will be known as the "Madge Bellamy Edition."

ED LAEMMLE

FILMS "IVANHOE" IN VIENNA

Edward Laemmle will go to Vienna to compete with Ernst Lubitsch on his own grounds. He will film Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" for Universal. He takes his photographic staff with him, but will use native actors.

Scott Sidney, director, says that Neal Burns, who is featured in the picture, "The Son of a Sheik," will enjoy one of the most unique experiences in motion pictures.

It is this: Because of the fact that Burns is so enthusiastic about riding horses, he rode not only his own scenes but changed his make-up and rode with the other horsemen who were chasing him. Because of the continuity of the story, some of which takes place in a motion picture theatre, Burns may now sit in a theatre and see himself sitting in a theatre watching a picture of himself, chasing himself, fighting himself, capturing himself, escaping and doing it all over again.

Mabel Normand, star of Mack Sennett's "Suzanna," has left for Europe. She will be gone until August 15th when she is scheduled to begin her next Sennett picture.

"I Am the Law" is the title of the production in which Pat Harman, a former officer on the Venice and Vernon police forces, plays the leading heavy role.

TITLE WRITER JOINS PHIL GOLDSTONE

Max Abramson, title writer who has titled Jackie Coogan's "My Boy" and "Trouble" and Allen Holubar's "Hurricane's Gal," has joined the Phil Goldstone forces. He has started work titling the Richard Talmadge production, "Putting It Over." Upon the completion of this picture Abramson will title the Goldstone special production, "Deserted at the Altar."

An added sequence has been made for the Jackie Coogan production of "Oliver Twist." Several members of the cast were recalled for the additional scenes.

James Young has "spread himself" in engaging musicians for the Richard Walton Tully "Omar the Tentmaker" set. He has replaced the customary small organ with a harp and has completed his ensemble with three violinists and a 'cellist.

Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Affinities" will be distributed through Hodkinson.

"Billy Franey Week" is scheduled for the week of November 5th of the current year. F. E. Samuels, general sales manager of O'Connor productions, is credited with conceiving the "week" stunt as a sales' help.

MADE IN GERMANY

Mabel Normand had a dog,
It's hair was so and so,
And everywhere that Mabel went
That mut thought he must go.

It followed her to work one day,
Which fractured every rule
Of Jones' idea of discipline—
"Keep off this set, you fool!"

They shouted, "Back, you Belgian pup—"
"Andle pronto—quick!"
"You'll spoil the scene—you'll spill the beans!"
"You'll make F. Richard sick!"

They spoke in every language,
They called in every tongue;
But still he came with eyes aflame,
This great big canine bum.

'Til Mabel told his secret;
He was German to the core.
She yelled aloud, "Raus mit dem Hund!"
And from the scene he tore.

Rowland V. Lee has completed the editing of his latest William Russell production, "The Self-Made Man," the print of which will be shipped to New York within a few days.

Jack Coogan, Daddy of the famous Jackie, had a car he did not like. He decided to sell it. The following advertisement was ordered inserted in the papers and Jack Senior sat back to await returns:

For Sale: Beautiful car, etc. Owner not going east and don't need the money, but will make sacrifice.

Signed, Jack Coogan.

They say Marshall Neilan is to marry the "Sweet Woman."

Studio Notes

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is nearing completion of his comedy, there being three week's work more on the photography. The scenes are being staged on his new sets at the studios.

Hal E. Roach's home in Berkeley Square is one of the exteriors to be used in the new production of Harry "Snub" Pollard.

J. A. Howe is directing a new comedy which he wrote for "Paul" Parrott.

"His Rascals," the kiddie-animal comedy unit, are taking scene this week in the new sets at the studios. Tom McNamara wrote the script.

The third two-reeler of a series for Pathe is now being cut and assembled at the studios.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Rodeo Comedies and Fred Hibbard Comedies have finished their initial production and have started on two more. Leslie Goodwins is assisting Fred Hibbard.

Frances Marion has completed the script of the Robert Hichens story, "The Voice from the Minaret," and Norma Talmadge will commence work on the production within a few days. Frank Lloyd will direct, with Harry Wile as assistant.

Lloyd Hamilton and Jack White, of Hamilton-White Comedies, will resume production next week. Hamilton is to make six specials under his own name, and White will supervise twelve Mermaid Comedies.

As soon as improvements at the Caswell studios in Hollywood are completed, Robert O'Connor, producer and distributor of the two-reel comedies featuring Billy Franey, will commence production of a feature-length motion picture.

Gus Schumacker is general manager and owner of the Caswell studios.

Like the Billy Franey comedies the O'Connor feature will be produced for independent distribution.

Buster Keaton's two-reeler, "The Vision," is nearing its final shooting stages at the Keaton studio.

NEWS FROM BROADWAY

By Hank
(Special to Camera)

Madge Kennedy is to start on a series of features here in New York and is now getting cast and director lined up. No distribution announcement as yet.

Glen Hunter in the American Release "The Cradle Buster", is rated here by press a second "23 and Half Hours' Leave," that fine comedy by McLean some time back. Glen Hunter looks like a comer. Playing at the Cameo this week.

"Nero," the Fox special, takes New York by heart. Picture is a fine one and looks good for a long summer run. J. Gordon Edwards directed this in Italy.

Hamilton Smith started another feature with Wyndam Standing, his first, "The Isle of Doubt," well received by critics. Ham appears to have put one over—big. Our best wishes.

Caryle Fleming, that blonde director chap that keeps the Green Room Club in such good old fashioned humor, is back at the club after shooting a Northwoods story that those in the know claim is a corker and a credit to Curwood. Caryle always was a clever chap and we feel pleased that he has demonstrated his ability. Ed. Roseman, the actor who has played with them all, says Caryle is the best ever. Ed should know.

"Wild" Bill Haddock, one of the oldest megaphone men in our "infant" industry, is at work up in Maine we learn. Bill is secretary of the N. Y. M. P. D. A. and a popular chap.

George Sargent, a former Westcoaster, is about to announce a new affiliation. George Terwilliger is to make one picture for Pyramid. Ray Smallwood is starting another this week for same company. They release through the American Co.

JACK STRUMWASSER

Dale Henshaw blew into town the past week, about fifteen pounds heavier than when he went to Los Angeles, which speaks well of the climate in California. He expects to direct some two-reel comedies. Though he is now working with National.

Frank Mattison of the Tweedy Comedies in Los Angeles, writes to say Hello! Frank is an ex-New Yorker you know, and just cannot help thinking about Broadway and 42nd street, and for that matter who can? Frank has a few unplayed cards up his sleeve we deduct from his letter and the Coast will benefit. More later.

Six new companies started this week which augers well for the future. Capital is loosening up in Wall Street and streets nowhere near that place. But the Coast has the majority, and the majority rules.

The New York exhibitors have quit the national body and in the future will play alone. Other organizations are thinking of following suit. A little bird whispered that over three hundred thousand iron men was spent freely in Washington at the exhibitor convention to break this body up. It is a shame if they start fighting amongst themselves, for the industry is bound to suffer and the exhibitor will get a raw deal.

"You can't handle the crowds," say the theatres when they play a Valentino. Everyone wants to see him. Such is fame.

They arrested a man in New York, who they claim knows all about the late Taylor murder. We thought this case was ended. Just starting again.

All the Loew Theatres are playing "Silas Marner," the Associated Exhibitor's special, directed by Frank P. Donovan. Ten Loew houses a day are running it. Pretty good, we think.

The old Thanouser Studios in New Rochelle, are no more. They are being remodeled for a factory. What a famous old place this was with Jim Cruze, Marguerite Snow, Mignon Anderson, Earnest Ward and the others. Gone but not forgotten.

Julius Singer, New York manager of the Pacific Films, is a busy youngster. One day we hear he is in town and the next day he is in Chicago. Some jumping Jack we think, and he is a bear at getting State rights men to put their John Henry on the dotted line for Pacific Pictures. Julius is an oldtimer in this game.

While speaking of bears we must not forget Frank Mattison in getting film buyers to listen to reason and parting with their yellow men. We saw Frank in action many the times.

Sidney Olcott, president of the N. Y. M. D. A., is out of town closing a big directorial deal we glean. Charles Giblyn has just gotten out of the hospital where he successfully underwent an operation.

Chas. Brabin is to start work on a series of Theda Bara films here in New York in about two weeks' time. You know they are husband and wife.

Doris May is a popular girl lately with fans. Her last few releases thanks to Bill Seitter, her director, have put this girl over big. Another that is well liked in N. Y. is Leatrice Joy.

We noted in Camera! recently that Billy Joy, brother of Leatrice, is now a director. Funny world this—the last time we saw Billy he was an army major in New Orleans, his home town, and by the way, a crack dentist. He played in a comedy down in that old town for Frank P. Donovan, the place where sister Leatrice also had her first movie start. Perhaps Billy Joy remembers Donovan and the Diamond Comedies and the Gruenwald Hotel, and those poker games, eh Bill! Dem were the happy days.

Every time we mention someone's name in Camera! some other folk in New York send it out to the Coast to the persons. Frank Mattison is still getting clippings from Camera! and we only mentioned his name once. There are more Camera! readers in Gotham than you suppose dear Hollywooders. And how is the baby, Frank? Talk yet?

Mack Sennett's "Crossroads of New York" proved a hit at the Capitol. Mack always makes hits. His old side kick Charlie Murray is in vaudeville, and doing fine. Mildred Harris is also doing two-a-day, with Bessie Barriscale, Howard Hickman, Constance Binney, Alice Brady and others.

"The Streets of New York" is for sale, that is the story. Great box office title for a feature. Protected by copyright and a real title for getting the dollars. Can be secured very reasonable. If interested address Frank P. Donovan, Green Room Club, New York; he owns it. We think $500 will take it. More next week. Thanks.

HANK.

The Screen Writer's Forum - Conducted by William E. Wing

A BLOW TO PICTURES (Special Correspondence)

BLUEMONA, June 9.—Our town is about done with movie pitchers. Yes sir. We've bin fooled fer the last time, and none of them smart elicky skenario writers and sech is goin' to put over any more of their cute tricks on us.

It all begun last week when some posters appeared in the most thickly digested district of Bluemonia, screamin' in red ink about a pitcher entitled "Tangled Wives."

Almost immediately at once the whole town was in a uproar. Deacon Dolittle lost his teeth denouncin' this invashun of the devil, and Sister Sarah lost her back hair. Everyone said somethin' ought to be done. The Wimmins' society for suppressin' almost everything said somethin' would be done.

So when the show opened, everyone tried to leave their children with someone else, to go and get evidence against the pitcher and the reprobate which runs the show.

The house was so crowded with the richly indignant and reformers, that mighty few of the ungodly got in atall.

Say! Would you believe it? There wasn't a gol dern thing wickid in the whole pitcher. No sir. It was so tame a innocent infant, peekin' in at the winder, went back home after the first reel, and plaid with her dolls.

And there sat the whole town a quiverin' with indignashun, and achin' to suppress somethin', simply fooled out of their time and valuable money. It spoiled the evenin' fer everyone.

Still we are a pashunt and perseverin' people. So, when another one came called "Love Me, But Ask No Questions," all our reformers and good people outpoured once more, determind to whip the devil and show the whole world that manslaughter, shockin' movies and swimmin' on Sunday is suppressed with a firm hand in Bluemonia.

Fooled agin! Jest a mushy love story and a old mother goin' around doin' good. Well sir, Deacon Dolittle was so mad he stood right up and made a speech denouncin' everyone connected with sech fraudulent pitchers, w'ile Sister Sarah called for the constibule to arrest the proprietor. But the constibule, who smokes a pipe and otherwise clashes with our virgin spirit, wouldn't do it. Everyone stomped home, madder than a wet hen.

Next day our slectmen framed a bill a settin' forth that every show that comes to town has got to live up to expectashuns, but it can't become a law for Thirty days.

They is another pitcher announced rer to-nite called "Adam and Eve," but none of us is goin'. We all know there is a ketch in it somewhere. Dollars to cents Eve will come a traipsin' out with clothes on.

"A South Sea Romance," is one of the best Westerns we have seen in a long time.

Mountain regions of the Sunny South are just as menacing and dangerous today, in a feudal sense, as ever in the past. Why not leave the old trail and range for a siesta down there?

A friend claims he prowled around in the property room one day and saw so much odd stuff it gave him the lead for a new story. Stranger inspirations than that have pulled one out of the old chest.

ALL FIXED

The censors all cried it was shocking,
A gell without even a stocking;
So they hung a nightie
Upon Aphrodite,
And now you couldn't drag even a deacon into the art gallery to see the darn thing.

GUY BATES POST

THE STRANGE PET

ONCE upon a time, Before Volstead done an original thing in his life, fol- (Bless 'im), a rancher who never had low'ing sedately in the footsteps of his forefathers, became strange imbued, after inhaling certain liquids.

Thereupon he went out and gathered unto himself a wildcat, which he added to his domestic flock and herd. The result around the corral and coops, was quite effective—and different.

We have been wondering if this rancher did not discover a great principle for the novice scenario writer.

The "first story" hardly ever varies, so far as its familiarity is concerned. It is the flock and herd which have gathered around the old ranch door since Noah let down the drawbridge, and sallied out into a world that still was wet.

Many times "the strange pet," entering into the domestic or other scene of the ages, plays havoc with the old order of things, but does so interestingly. The odd character, who, in his or her obsession, creates the erratic, the unexpected; that is the "pet" that puts over the somewhat familiar tale.

The moral seems to be, if you cannot be original in your story, take a cup of strong tea and dig up an odd, outstanding character. Then give this character somewhat of a dominating influence in the movement of the unfoldment, and he or she should steer you over new courses.

THE ONE-PAGE SYNOPSIS

TO the writer who knows his business, the one-page synopsis is about as inviting as a forced conversation with a speed cop.

The chances of putting anything like the value and zip of his long story over in a few words is so negligible as to have him hanging to the ropes and yelling for the sponge in the first round.

Naturally, there are some stories which hinge upon some peculiarly pat and clever idea that the single situation can be put over in 250 words, and might prod the editor into consenting to read the complete synopsis.

But mighty few lords of the manor would have been highly interested in a commonplace one-page condensation of most of the really big screen successes of the past.

Why? Because volume, rounded out in every sequence, gradually and grandly expanding into bigness, and provided with so many unique angles and twists as those which go to make the special production successful, cannot be made even impressive on the single page.

And yet some managements are demanding just that—a gaspy hint of the story. If it is not asked from the writer of the story, it is demanded from the staff of readers who are not writers, in most cases.

Can you imagine a non-writer reader bestowing the bigness and VALUES of "The Clansman," "Miracle Man," "Orphans of the Storm," et al., in twenty-five lines of typed manuscript, when the professional himself would fail in great part?

And yet that is what is occurring in certain studios where the manuscripts of anxious authors go for "consideration."

The natural and logical defense of the studio editor is that it is impossible for him to read all the manuscripts which flow in from the market, and he is right.

But the screen writer, a somewhat different proposition than the ambitious citizen, will tell you that his stories deserve a full reading at least. He is in the business of writing photoplays, and turns out work which can be screened.

Whether his stories are adaptable to the studios he submits to, is something else. But these writers who have scored and who have good knowledge of the art to which they have set themselves, declare that their manuscripts are heaped with the offerings from the public, from canning factory to the college graduate; shuffled with the deck, subjected to the same treatment; read by $25 genius and rejected with the same careless abandon which marks the return of the motorman's vivid epistle.

Just why the work of the recognized writers are not given the eagle eye, in a studio world which is resorting to some mighty thin plot material to keep up programs, again is something about the industry which is something strange, if not astonishing.

Snitz Edwards announces his engagement. Don't get excited. He is not going to Mexico. He is engaged to make a picture.

Billy Weber blew into town Announcing himself a vod-e-vil clown. He bought himself an ad in this sheet And got a job that couldn't be beat.
—Longfellow Murphy.

Contemporary Criticisms

"TROUBLE" (Sol Lesser)

"Jackie Coogan does the best work of his career enacting the orphan whose indomitable spirit will not deny . . .

"Albert Austin, the director, has done a fine piece of work and has injected a constant series of little touches that do a great deal in making the appeal stronger . . .

"Wallace Beery and Gloria Hope are practically the only ones who have parts larger than bits. Beery is great as the rough neck plumber. Miss Hope is appealing as his long suffering wife . . . A young negro boy, whose name is omitted from the cast, furnishes many laughs, and deserves to have his name displayed."

—Moving Picture World.

"Coogan is a fine little actor and an intriguing personality throughout and is entitled to the great credit that certainly will be his. But the able efforts of Director Albert Austin should not be overlooked. Austin has executed many situations and bits of action in this production that constitute real commercial screen art."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"The story, a model of simplicity, possesses a world of pathos without being unnecessarily 'gushy,' and plenty of delightful comedy . . .

"The scenes in the orphanage are irresistibly funny, Jackie and his faithful dog doing splendid team work.

"Exteriors and interiors are well filmed, the lighting is good, unbroken continuity prevails and the action moves swiftly throughout the entire five reels."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'Trouble' is Jackie's best picture . . . He has the audience with him from the moment the cop discovers him hiding with his dog under a barrel . . .

"There is no false sentiment. It's all human and genuine. The direction is highly commendable in the manner in which the kid stuff is employed. Wallace Beery . . . contributes another sterling performance."

—Motion Picture News.

"FOOLS FIRST" (First National)

"Marshall Neilan . . . displays an unusual fertility of imagination . . . Neilan's adroit handling of the story brings out every ounce of suspense value, which is considerable.

"The development of the story is perfectly clear despite its various ramifications . . .

"Richard Dix . . . gives an excellent portrayal of a crook who would reform. Claire Windsor . . . is pretty and natural all the way through and never overacts. Claude Gillingwater . . . gives a most excellent portrayal . . . The minor crooks and character parts are all exceptionally well cast and well played."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"Marshall Neilan . . . has given to screen literature another masterplay . . .

"'Fools First' is a page from life itself. The director has put on the screen scenes as they really are in the underworld

"The picture has been suggested by a Saturday Evening Post story from the pen of Hugh McNair Kahler . . . Marion Fairfax has transferred the tale into screen form in admirable manner . . . The moments when we are with Claude Gillingwater and our old friend Robert Brower are delightful ones . . . Some of the exteriors are game of photographic art . . .

—Motion Picture News.

WADE BOTELER

"THE CRADLE BUSTER" (American Releasing Co.)

"'The Cradle Buster' can easily be classed as one of the best juvenile comedies that has been put on the screen recently. . . . The picture is bound to have a wide appeal. . . .

"This picture is the first starring vehicle of Glenn Hunter. His portrayal . . . is delightful and natural. . . Marguerite Courtot . . . is very pleasing to gaze upon and also does some good acting. Each member of the supporting cast gives fine assistance.

"The photography . . . is splendid. . . Continuity easy and full of action. Direction, O. K."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A Booth Tarkington slant on the theme of misunderstood youth, with the popular mixture of humor, romance and tragedy is the effect which the writer of this screen story has attained. This fact, and adaptability of the star, Glenn Hunter, to this type of role should be remembered in presenting the picture. . . .

"In its gay moments the picture is most successful. . . But when the melodramatic note enters, the effect is not so smooth."

—Moving Picture World.

"The cast is quite suitable. In one or two instances more appropriate types might have been secured."

—The Film Daily.

"THE CROSSROADS OF NEW YORK" (Mack Sennett)

"Mack Sennett set himself a too high standard when he made 'A Small Town Idol.' . . .

"'The Crossroads of New York' . . . is amusing in itself and will be the inspiration of many a good hearty laugh when they are wise to what Sennett is driving at. And in addition to the humor there are numerous well founded thrills.

"Special mention should be made of Charles Murray and Mildred June, both of whom, however, play the smallest kind of roles. Though they do but bits, they remain in the memory as two of the strongest highlights of the picture."

—Moving Picture World.

"The only objection that could well be found with Mack Sennett's latest production, 'The Crossroads of New York,' is the name. 'The cast is so well balanced it would be difficult to single out any one of them without slighting the others.

"The photography is not of the best, appearing to be slightly out of focus in places. The direction is excellent, and it is very seldom that sub-titles are seen that contain as much humor or carry the story forward as pointedly as those in 'The Crossroads of New York.' They are of the best."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The main argument for the picture's success is its typical Sennett hokum. Apparently there wasn't much of a continuity to work with.

"The feature carries all the earmarks of having been conceived on the spot, one scene added to another as it appeared to the parties in charge . . . 'The Crossroads of New York' is—a type of slapstick which depends upon exaggerated comedy for its punch.

"It's well played by comedians, heavies, vampires, and bathing girls."

—Motion Picture News.

"'The Crossroads of New York' touches on about as many elements of entertainment and includes abstracts from as many plots as have found their way to the screen . . .

"There is a tendency to burlesque the whole thing, even the melodramatic episode that follows.

"The production is fast moving. . . Director Jones has succeeded in maintaining a comprehensiveness with but one or two choppy stretches breaking into the general smooth run of things. It is quite apparent that the film has undergone a good deal of cutting, particularly in the early reels where rather an abundance of sub-titles are used to explain the missing links. . . .

"Ethel Grey Terry does very well in her effort to put over the badger game on hero George O'Hara. Noah Beery would have been a much more appropriate villain than Robert Cain, and their roles might have been reversed to advantage. Others who give good performances are Kathryn McGuire, 'Dot' Farley, Eddie Gribbon, and Mildred June."

—The Film Daily.

Contemporary Criticisms

"NERO" (Fox)

"A spectacular production of compelling magnificence and beauty that has been done in Italy. . . .

"The story qualifies in every respect as high class entertainment. . . The colored effects in the burning of the city, the fires of victory and lighted torches are beautifully done.

"Perfection seems to have been the keynote of this production."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The production . . . was produced by an American, J. Gordon Edwards, who deserves the plaudits of the multitude. . .

"In the intimate scenes the action has been well staged and in the mass scenes Edwards has handled the crowds in such a way that they give you a thrill regardless of their relation to the story. The photography is superb and some unusual results of great beauty have been accomplished with panchromatic film and tinting.

"Jacques Gretilat does not merely play Nero. He seems to be . . . the greatest of the Caesars. His performance will be marked down as one of the real screen achievements."

—Moving Picture World.

"J. Gordon Edwards has had sufficient experience with a camera and spectacular achievements to do the right thing by the present production. . . All designs and effects are truly recorded. Edwards has used the symbol of the cross as his main argument for dramatic appeal. . .

"The actual scenes of Rome and vicinity give the picture a genuine authenticity. The cast is composed of foreign players, with one exception. All enact their roles with feeling, although the hot Italian blood in a few of the principals causes them to express their enthusiasm too heroically. . . A historical spectacle, massive and sumptuous and deserving a niche of its own."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE TRAIL OF HATE" (Frederick Herbst)

"Cut according to the usual pattern for Westerners, this latest 'Big Boy' Williams' story, 'The Trail of Hate,' has nothing new in the way of story, but because of plenty of action and good photography it holds attention.

"A picture that will go over in houses where they like Westerns, and there seems to be more of a fondness for such yarns than for the society stuff."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"'Big Boy' Williams, as in his previous productions, proves to be entirely satisfactory in the leading role. A strong point in his favor is his naturalness and realism. . . Molly Malone is attractive and capable in the opposite role, while Andree Tourneur is capably cast as the hero's sister. Gordon Russell is a sufficiently villainous heavy, and the remainder of the cast is satisfactory, although Maurine Chadwick as the vamp is inclined to overact."

—Moving Picture World.

"The plot is so simple that doubtless the director was forced to proceed carefully else he might reach the conclusion too quickly. Perhaps the outstanding highlight is the scenery.

"This type of photoplay is here to stay, but the story must show some other incident besides driving a herd of cattle across some boundary line. 'Big Boy' . . . takes advantage of his opportunities in the accepted Bill Hart-Tom Mix style. Molly Malone makes an attractive heroine. The villains are colorful."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE ANGEL OF CROOKED STREET" (Vitagraph)

"Alice Calhoun is a very essential factor. Without her, the plot would lose individuality and the scenes charm. . .

FRED GAMBLE
Who has just returned from New York

"Scott McKee is an outstanding figure, both from the standpoint of type and acting."

—Moving Picture World.

"The story follows the life of a girl who has unjustly been sent to prison and upon her release seeks vengeance upon her accuser.

"Alice Calhoun . . . has very good support from the other leading characters in the story.

"The lighting is well taken care of and continuity of the story easily followed. Direction, O. K."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Good direction keeps it from being strikingly hackneyed. Through careful attention to detail and reasonable by-plot the interest is splendidly sustained, and the picture holds your attention all the way through.

"The opening reels immediately create a strong sympathy for the heroine and an effective small town atmosphere is established.

"Alice Calhoun is a pretty heroine and handles the part capably, although she never really looks as though she intended carrying out her plan of revenge. She is refreshing and has a pleasing personality. The crook types have been selected with thought as to their suitability, and the cast on the whole is a good one."

—The Film Daily.

"SILVER WINGS" (Fox)

"'Silver Wings' is a good picture, even if it is not a great one. It possesses the quality that will hold an audience and at times move it. . .

"The outstanding factor . . . is that its star is the Mother of 'Over the Hill'. . . The role of Anna Webb is played by a real and not an imitation mother."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'Silver Wings' seems to be as nearly true to life as a picture of this sort can be. . .

"Mary Carr . . . is a portrait of real human nature at all times. She emphasizes the emotion without ever overacting. . . A remarkably fine performance is given by Knox Kincaid. . . The continuity is smooth. . . And one of the outstanding features in promoting the naturalness is the atmosphere created by appropriate settings."

—Moving Picture World.

"The picture does not measure up to 'Over the Hill' in its breadth of humanity. There are moments when the plot becomes stretched to the breaking point to allow a melodramatic flourish. . .

"There are too many subtitles. . . It has been well staged and there is no doubt that with feminine audiences it will score a decided hit.

"Percy Helton gives a good performance . . and Knox Kincaid . . . tugs at the heart with the fine burst of emotional talent . . . The forewoman is played with a dash of color by Dorothy Johnson. . . Jane Thomas is well cast as the daughter."

—Motion Picture News.

POST'S STELLAR SUPPORT

The cast which supported Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader" will be surpassed in the quality of this distinguished star's company for "Omar the Tentmaker." Producer Tully has surrounded his star with the best cast obtainable.

Nigel de Brulier, whose success on the screen came with his portrayal of the "Stranger" in "The Four Horseman of the Apocalypse," will play Nizam, the friend of Omar in "Omar the Tentmaker." He also created the part of John the Baptist in Nazimova's "Salome."

Rose Dione, character player of French extraction, will be the Shah's mother, in "Omar the Tentmaker." She studied at the Paris Conservatoire where she won the grand prize for tragic acting. At the age of fifteen she made her debut with Sarah Bernhardt in "Les Mauvis Bergers." Soon thereafter she was starred with her own company. Her most recent engagement was in "Salome," where she played Herodiade.

Joe Murphy is slopping around like a bottle of ink and is passing out blotters hoping some director will take him up.

Josef Swickard and Marguerite Marsh have roles in Will Morissey's summer revue, "The Hollywood Follies," now at the Playhouse, Chicago. The show burlesques motion picture folk.

Without warning, Frank Atkinson, cutter; Charles Stumac, cameraman, and Tenny Wright, assistant director, were called into the head office at Universal and told to pack their trunks for Europe. They will go in their respective capacities with Edward Laemmle, who will film "Ivanhoe" in its original locale.

Gloria Swanson arrives in Los Angeles Sunday from her European trip. After the beautiful star gets all her Parisian finery segregated, she'll don some of it for her next Paramount picture.

How can I get into the movies? I think I can act, etc., etc., and so on. Young man, to be successful in motion pictures, you first have to be a mail carrier, then you work your way up until you are Postmaster General, then the rest is easy. You don't have to know anything about pictures or props. When asked a question all you have to say is "Yes" or "No."

Very simple indeed.

FROM HOLLYWOOD

Conducted by M. T. O.

Cable despatches from London say fashionable women are having their little toes carved off so their feet will fit American shoes.

Speculation as to whether or not we'll be hearing next about the men having their ears trimmed so their heads will fit American straw hats might not be out of order.

This looks like a grand idea—altering customers to fit clothes; and while it's not exactly the same, it may be on the same general theory that motion picture directors are adjusting actors and actresses to their parts these days.

Two instances are fresh in mind. Rupert Hughes in writing "The Bitterness of Sweets," which he has just finished directing had sketched in a heroine who weighed ninety-eight pounds and gained twenty pounds during the action of the story. Then instead of picking a ninety-eight pounder to play the part, he called for Colleen Moore, normal hept one hundred and ten, and told her to trim herself down to ninety-eight. She did. After snapping all the ninety-eight pound views of Colleen he thought were necessary Hughes told her to change herself to a one hundred and eighteen-pounder. And she did that, too.

Next, Maurice Tourneur was looking for some one to play the title role in his forthcoming production of "The Christian." He wanted a thin, aesthetic sort of chap—and picked Richard Dix, six feet, brawny, weighing 178 pounds. After doing the picking, he said to Dix:

"By the way, before you get to England, drop twenty pounds."

Dix had lost ten of the twenty when he arrived in New York. He raised a wavering hand, and said sadly:

"This going without food certainly ruins me. And I've got another ten to peel off, and I'm going to be at sea where I suppose I won't have anything but an appetite to keep me company."

Mae Busch, who is playing the feminine lead in the picture, and whose contours happened to suit Tourneur's ideas of what a "Gloria Quayle" should be, smiled cheerfully, and said:

"You should have seen Richard eyeing the butter and sugar in the diner coming East. It was pathetic. I'm waiting for the sea air to get busy on him. It'll be funny."

What Dix said then has nothing to do with this article, but the fact is he was so happy at the chance to play "John Storm" that he would have been willing to turn himself insideout, or, at least, make a good try at it.

Of course, the reason for this altering of the physique of players in motion pictures, is that the director selects the type that appeals to him as nearest to his ideal of the part he has in mind, and then proceeds to make the type conform even closer to his visualization of the character.

But it certainly does add to the intricacy of acting in the movies.

Chances are that tired business men would be more tired if they had to alter themselves to harmonize with the shapes of their customers. Can you imagine the boss of a wholesale cloak and suit establishment, saying to one of his salesman:

"Jim Goodman will be here from Oshkosh next week. Jim is a bit fat himself and likes fat men. Be wearing a double chin and a nice, fancy embonpoint when he blows in. And after he goes, get ready to rattle your ribs and wave your Adam's apple at Bill Gootz, of Podunk, the following week. Bill is a rail, and hates 'em fat."

Is Jack O'Brien going to make a Biblical picture at the Hollywood studio? Let's hope so, and that he turns over a new leaf after he has studied the subject.

LIKE SLOW DEATH

Is Rodolph Valentino married? Yes, but it won't take effect for a year.

Judge Summerfield is likened to the caller for the old quadrille dance. He says "Change your partners" and "Turn to the Right."

Stories representing successful efforts in business, are very popular with magazines. Why not with the screen?

Hampton Del Ruth is reported to have selected the Balboa Studio at Long Beach so he could get bathing beauties fresh out of the water.

ELVERE ALDEN

Old Buster Keaton and Old Joe Roberts got in an argument about how to raise boys. It will be peacefully settled at the Legion Arena next Friday night between the youngsters. Roberts will have to give weight or something, as he is thirteen months' old, while Keaton is only seven days. The bout is expected to go the limit as Keaton is developing great lung power.

BOW AND ARROW

Eva Novak will shortly become the bride of William Read, a film man interested in production, formerly a cameraman. They have been engaged for more than a year.

Miss Novak has not stated where the wedding will take place, but she declares that she will "be a June bride or none at all."

HARMFUL OPTIMISM

From President Harding down, all political leaders and industrial magnates are constantly preaching and practicing optimism, which in most cases, no doubt, is very necessary and is a life saver for many industrial enterprises in such trying times as we recently had to combat.

In the picture industry, however, optimism seems to be an incurable disease. This optimism went so far that the producer and distributor, in the face of absolute defeat, are trying to fool themselves into believing that they are very successful.

You will meet producers daily who will tell you that they released their picture through certain state right distributors and that their returns were four times the production cost, when in reality they never received half of their cost back.

Distributors will also report wonderful sales in the trade papers and otherwise, when in fact they couldn't sell more than 20% of the United States on their best pictures, and they had to accept percentage releases on most of the remaining territories.

They call this optimism; we call it unfair business principles.

As a result of such very optimistic stories, the unsuspecting producer who is starting to launch a new producing unit, will spend $25 - 30,000 for each of a series of fairly good five-reel western or other outdoor stories, expecting to make big profits, while in reality conditions are such that he may be forced to state right his pictures for one-half or one-third of his actual production cost.

Now then, if he did not rely upon hearsay and tell-tales, he may not have been so extravagant when making his pictures, and being rather pessimistic as to the returns from the sales, he may have used foresight and economy on his productions, and therefore made them sufficiently inexpensive to realize some profit even at such low prices as are now prevailing on the state right market. Every time a picture will be state righted for less than production cost, some outside financier loses money as a rule, and the film industry gains another knocker who will dread to hear the word motion pictures.

The motion picture business already has enough financial black eyes, and we must avoid getting any more. For this reason we believe it is better to preach a little pessimism in this particular line of endeavor, as then the ultimate result will be healthier.

Let us review the actual situation: The Independent producer is forced to sell his pictures at a lower price to the show-man than is paid to the few big fellows who are making "million dollar" specials almost daily.

These so-called "big fellows" own or control practically all first run theatres, while second or third run houses consider them as gravy, and these houses can get the specials and very expensively produced program pictures for unbelievably low prices.

What chance is there then for the independent producers? None whatever, unless they will make pictures entirely different from those being produced by the big companies, and will make them at such low figures that they can stand any competition.

Since the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate entered the field it is utterly needless for the state right producer to grope in the dark, and pictures of types and prices that will be a definite success when released.

This company will give at any time, to anyone, without obligation, and free of charge, any information that they may seek regarding the needs and conditions of the state right market.

A number of producers and stars are already benefitting by the free and very valuable services this company renders, whose only aim is to wipe out the middle man that they call the New York Market, thus eliminating the leaks and marketing pictures direct from producers to buyers. Also, to keep the producers constantly posted as to the actual needs of the film exchanges, and the prevailing prices at any certain time for each type of pictures.

There have been many strange narratives written around the lives of famous men, men who have conquered worlds, men who distinguished themselves in battle, men who have startled the world with their discoveries, and a hundred and one other deeds which have forced them into public light.

The crude little biography which I am about to chronicle is that of a smiling, dapper little fellow who is as well known as the greatest of our men, and whose one and only object is life, so far, has been to defy death. In all probability, and with abated breath, and with nerves tingling throughout your system, you have watched him swerve a powerful racing car around a bend at 110 miles an hour in the numerous auto races held in this and other countries. Then again perhaps you found yourself thrilled beyond comprehension as you watched him laugh at death, as he fearlessly performed some hair-raising stunt in a motion picture drama; and again, with your nerves on edge, you found yourself marvelling at his nerve as you viewed him leap from aeroplane to aeroplane thousands of feet above the ground.

Arthur Peirot, undisputedly acclaimed the world's greatest dare-devil, was born of Franco-Swiss parents, and first saw the light of day on his father's trading vessel while the craft desperately fought a raging storm on the high seas. His parents met a grim fate when the boy was but two years old, and the little fellow was adopted by some friends in New York.

The earlier years of Peirot's life were rather uneventful until, at the age of twelve, he harkened to the call of the wanderlust. From selling newspapers for a living he managed to secure for himself a berth on a Norwegian liner as a cabin boy. The life on the deep fascinated him, and by slow degrees he advanced himself to assistant engineer. He cruised all over the world, lived in China, wandered in Japan, and hunted in India, was a railway engineer on the Manchurian railway, and finally returned to the United States, became interested in automobile construction, and invented numerous devices now being used on expensive cars.

About this time word came that he had fallen heir to the bulk of a legacy from a far-distant relative in Switzerland,—and again the wanderlust beckoned him. Paris, London and Monte Carlo saw quite a lot of young Peirot for the next few years. While in London he met the famous aviator Graham White, who at that time was referred to as the Master of the Air.

Two years later we find him in Buenos Ayres receiving the plaudits of the multitudes, due to his daringness in piloting high powered racing cars to winning finishes, and performing hair-raising thrills in the sky. In spite of being heralded the "man of the hour" in the great South American republic, Peirot returned to the United States by invitation of the daring French flier, Beechy. On his arrival in the United States, Vincent Astor, advised by Beechy to invite Peirot to give a demonstration of the then "new" byplane, solicited his services.

It was during this trial spin that Peirot nearly lost his life. While up some seven hundred feet in the air the motor suddenly went wrong and the plane started earthward at a tremendous speed. Realizing his danger, Peirot climbed from the cockpit, after releasing the straps, and clambered to the tail of the plane, to save himself from being crushed when the plane crashed to the earth, and at about thirty feet from the ground he jumped.

Although he had saved his life by the jump he suffered four broken ribs, a dislocated shoulder and numerous cuts and bruises. After being confined to a hospital cot for over six months, he finally came forth more undaunted than ever, to conquer the air.

Heralded far and wide as the man who knew naught of fear, Peirot found himself listening to tempting offers to enter the realms of the silent drama, and this lure of the "movie" finally succeeded in inducing him to register his reckless, death-defying stunts before the camera. But the dark days of the war soon caused him to abandon the films for the more serious work of helping the Government. A number of his patents were eagerly snatched up by the War Department, and his services were enlisted in teaching new fliers.

Securing a leave of absence he gathered together the foremost dare-devils of the world, who chanced to be in this country, and staged the first World's Congress of dare-devils, whose thrilling stunts succeeded in collecting over $100,000 for the Fourth War Work campaign.

Arthur Peirot is now anticipating the making of his own film story, which is to be a serial of fifteen episode length. In this story he intends performing stunts that have never before been attempted by any living person. One stunt in particular, which Mr. Peirot will perform will not only astound the world at large, but will set the greatest scientists of the age marveling at its conception.

It is needless to say that thousands upon thousands of people who have followed up this little dare-devil's breath taking thrills will gladly welcome Peirot's return appearance on the screen as the reckless star of his own production.

Symbols

THE artist puts his monogram on his drawing. The manufacturer imprints his trademark on his product.

Symbols, both. Monogram or mark, they are concrete designs that the public comes to recognize and associate with the particular artist or maker. They are symbols of his work.

The pen name of the author, the professional name of the actor are also symbols.

The symbol has distinct advertising value if it is unmistakable, unique and easily remembered.

OR are marks and names the only kind of symbols.

Theodore Roberts and an unlighted cigar are inseparably linked in the mind of the motion picture fan. In conversation Roberts is identified as "the man who always chews a cigar."

So with Chaplin and his derby and mustache.

So, Harold Lloyd and his rimmed glasses.

Perhaps it is some personal attribute that forms the connecting link between eyes and brain—Mary Pickford's curls; Doug's twinkling grin; Priscilla Dean's oriental eyes; Von Stroheim's shaven head; Louise Fazenda's pigtailed.

You can think of dozens of other examples off hand.

THE point is this:

Public associates the player with some distinguishing part of his costume or with an attribute of his role.

It does that only in homage to the portrayal; that symbol becomes a part of the player in the public's eyes.

Then the public resents the appearance of its favorite without the expected and beloved symbol.

Just as strenuously it resents imitation of the symbol by another player.

The writer doesn't presume to imply that players should arbitrarily select some eccentricity and emphasize it continually. They should do it only if it is a natural part of them.

Screen folk whom the public remembers and watches for are spontaneous, unconscious of effort, in their characterizations. So their "symbols" draw thousands of friends to see them.

Advertising is a big factor in the life of everyone connected with motion pictures.

A symbol has distinct advertising value.

If you have a symbol in your system, cultivate it.

—Ted Taylor.

Exhibitor-Producer Peace?

RESULTS of the conference between Sydney S. Cohen, representing theater owners of America, and Will Hays, representing picture producers and distributors, should reach California shortly.

Wire services viewed the conference a test of Hays' power to "boss" motion pictures. That he will attempt any bossing outside his own organization is unlikely, however.

While producers are dominant financially, the comparatively long-established exhibitor organization is powerful politically despite its lack of a "big" leader.

Cohen and Hays are discussing three matters: first, reduction in film rentals asked by theater men; second, a contract equitable to producer and exhibitor; third, Hays' much-publicized "clean-up" campaign.

COHEN was re-elected president of the M. P. T. O. by 348 out of a possible 410 votes. New York exhibitors voted as a unit against him.

The eastern film trade press is charged by Glenn Harper of Los Angeles, first vice-president of the national body and secretary of the Southern California theater owners, with favoritism in reporting the election. He accuses them of "distorted and deliberately misleading statements."

Snuffing by other delegates of an attempt by New York exhibitors to usurp the president's rights started trouble. There were also disputes over a new constitution and over credentials of delegates.

* * *

CHAPLIN started something when he wrote a book and got away with it. Now Samuel Goldwyn is writing "The Mirrors of Hollywood," Billy Franey is writing "Keystone Kops I Knew When—" and there is pencil sharpening in other quarters.

James Young threatens to indite the "Adventures of a Barnstormer."

It's all good. Motion pictures has sadly lacked a literature. It's none too early to get the story of the cinema into permanent type. May the best writer win most royalties!

Famous visitor at Famous Players gave vent to this:
"Say," he told the press agent, "if haste makes waste, that fellow must have been in an awful hurry!"
Walter Hiers had just passed by.

The rumor that Buster Keaton II requested an Eskimo pie of his frozen-faced parent was strenuously denied by Harry Brand at press time.

A 20 per cent reduction in juvenile delinquency has resulted in Chicago from the use of motion pictures to teach youths the lessons of good citizenship, Juvenile Judge Victor P. Arnold states.

Film Capital Production Notes

NEW MOVE STARTS

Victor Hugo Halperin, formerly associated with Elbert Hubbard, has started something in the opening up of his producing company now in full swing at the Fine Arts studio.

In back of his idea to make six feature pictures lies a novel idea heretofore not tried out.

Mr. Halperin's idea is starting off with an all-star cast, playing one of his six stories, is, that upon completion of the film, he will take the first story, "What Do We Live For?" and turn it into a stage play. Then he will put his picture cast in the stage production and start it off in Los Angeles. Thus he will accomplish several things. First, every screen player in these productions must have had stage experience, bringing better artist material to the screen. Second, it will be a new angle to turn a screen plot to a "legitimate" play. And third, he is going to make Los Angeles a recognized theatrical starting point.

Mr. Halperin's stage and screen production will be released simultaneously and he will show the world that the original story is still the thing for the screen and that successful screen productions will set the standards for their older sister the stage whom they are fast outgrowing.

Lillian Gish is to appear in a series of her own productions under the supervision of Griffith at the latter's studio.

Finis Fox has started production on the Cosmopolitan Film Company's seven-reel feature, "The Bishop of the Ozarks," at the Fine Arts Studio.

SEMON APPOINTS NEW STAFF

Larry Semon announced this week that he had engaged Tom Buckingham as co-director succeeding Norman Taurog. Joe Basil and Vincent McDermott will be assistant directors.

Semon has appointed Ralph Noble as business manager of his company. Noble has been with Semon for a long time at Vitagraph.

BERMAN JOINS R-C

Harry M. Berman has resigned after five years of management of the Universal exchange system to join Robertson-Cole as general manager of distribution and takes over an interest in the business. He is going on a three week's vacation, starting Saturday.

Although Berman's resignation does not go into effect until June 30, Art Schmidt will assume his new duties on Monday. Until now Schmidt has been general manager of short reels for Universal.

Berman will assume the duties until now filled by Joseph L. Schnitzer at R-C. Schnitzer has been promoted to vice-president.

Special music scores are being written for Oliver Morosco's first two pictures for Associated First National release. The work of tuning the films has been turned over to Werner Janssen.

Janssen is now in New York preparing the incidental music for "The Half Breed," which is scheduled as a June release, and following that will turn his attention to "Slippy McGee."

Larry Semon this week started filming "Golf." Lucille Carlisle will take the part of Semon's sister and also that of a blonde golf flapper.

Following "Too Much Business," Jess Robins has produced another comedy, "The Jinx," which Vitagraph will release.

She came back to where she started, and is now being starred. That is—Carmel Myers made her screen debut on the old Griffith lot, and after many successful screen ventures elsewhere is being starred in Halperin productions.

Carmel used to admire the dressing room Lillian Gish had in the old days. Now she dressed in none other than Miss Gish's former abode.

John M. Stahl has started work on "The Dangerous Age," his next picture for Louis B. Mayer presentation. The story is an original by Frances Irene Reels, and was prepared for the screen by J. G. Hawks and Bess Meredyth.

PLAN KID COMEDIES

Chester and Sidney Franklin have formed a company to produce two-reel kid comedies. They are to be known as Franklin Featurettes and will be made at the Buster Keaton studio.

Actual construction work has started at Universal City on the elaborate sets which will be used by Eric Von Stroheim for his forthcoming Jewel Prod.

John Griffith Wray will shortly complete "Someone to Love," C. Gardner Sullivan's circus story. This feature with Madge Bellamy, Cullen Landis and Noah Beery in the cast, will be an Ince special for release next December.

NEW CASTING DIRECTOR AT METRO

H. L. Kerr is the new casting director at Metro. Mr. Kerr was formerly with Universal.

Fred Niblo now has a company of his own under the Louis B. Mayer banner, producing all-star specials for Metro release. His first picture is scheduled to begin next month. Among Mr. Niblo's latest successes are: "The Three Musketeers," "The Woman He Married," "The Mark of Zorro," and "Blood and Sand."

Tom Forman is editing the film of "White Shoulders," preparatory to its being shipped to New York for distribution.

AT UNIVERSAL

Priscilla Dean's next story will be "Live and Love," a society story by Edward S. Moffat, novelist and screen writer.

Herbert Rawlinson's next picture will be "The Rainbow Chaser," to be directed by Harry A. Pollard.

Herbert Rawlinson's reproduced "Come Through!" is now titled "The Flash Man." It was directed both times by Jack Conway.

KEATON'S LATEST

Buster Keaton has decided to name his next funfilm "Day Dreams." The scenario is from the pens of Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline, who also directed it.

FILM GUILD FORMED

A number of Harvard, Princeton and Yale graduates have formed an organization called the Film Guild which plans to operate three picture producing units.

The new company has been in process of formation for six months and it has made two pictures, "The Cradle Buster" and "Second Fiddle," starring Glenn Hunter. Until now the Hunter company has been known as the Tuttle-Waller Prod. It plans to make six features for next season. Among those interested in the project are Frank Tuttle, Fred Waller, James A. Greelman, Dwight Wiman, Townsend Martin and Osgood Perkins.

Myron Selznick has purchased the picture rights to the story "Wine," by William MacHarg, which originally appeared in Hearst's International magazine.

CLARENCE BADGER AT METRO

Clarence Badger has moved into the Metro studio offices and is preparing for the filming of "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Rex Ingram will be in New York in about a month to start work on "Toilers of the Sea" which will be made on the Maine coast.

Vera Gordon is expected to make another picture shortly for Warner Bros.

"The Ninety and Nine" has been announced by Vitagraph as a forthcoming special production.

Current Reviews

"FOOLS FIRST"

WHEN a producer like Marshall Neilan surrounds himself with a big cast, and scenario writer such as Marion Fairfax, the result ought to be more marked than his latest production, "Fools First."

Neilan has sacrificed story development for thrilling momentary action. He evolves thrilling scenes, even episodes, without furthering the plot.

His crook atmosphere is great and he overlooks no detail when bringing out their human sides.

The story has been changed for the better by Miss Fairfax.

Richard Dix has the best part of his career and he fulfills the opportunity offered him in the most capable manner, as the brains of the gang.

George Seigman is greater than his role, a member of the crook circle.

Raymond Griffith is practically "made" by the suitability of the part he plays, the direction back of him, and the way the story is written to fit him. His ability has been long possessed but heretofore unrecognized.

Shannon Day is not credited on the screen but her bit is noticeable enough for a word of praise.

Claire Windsor is beautiful as a picture and as good to look at, so much so that one is apt to overlook the absence of impressionable acting.

Claude Gillingwater is a splendid character. While before the camera he holds exclusive attention with his mannerisms. He has an individual way of getting over his scenes.

Helen Lynch is another to whom "Fools First" has brought recognition and opportunity. Miss Lynch makes us sit up and take notice that another young lady has become a full-fledged actress.

George Dromgold plays a distinctive bit in a crook part.

"THE LYING TRUTH"

FAST moving melodrama of moderate entertainment value made to reach the greater part of the public is "The Lying Truth," a Marion Fairfax production. Miss Fairfax injects a feminine touch here that makes her story a page from life rather than a mere "movie." Her characters are human, and it is marvelous the way she handles the mobs.

Noah Beery heads a prominent cast but his splendid work gives him most of the acting honors.

Marjorie Daw is just a sweet natural little girl. Her girlishness and delicacy is better brought out under a woman's direction.

Tully Marshall is a distinctive character with a gruff manner that he enacts in pleasing way.

Pat O'Malley carries the laborious work in the production. He puts up a good battle with a mob, and in more romantic episodes of the picture turns Romeo with equal skill.

George Dromgold shows his ability as a real actor here. The part of a dope-fiend was well handled by this young man, and can be doubly appreciated as he is becoming recognized as one of the new faces to the screen.

Charles Mailes, though in a smaller part than benefits him, shows the bluebloodedness of screen talent in his depth of interpretation of role.

Claire McDowell is another of the old reliables of the cinema. We knew she would be good before seeing her, but she was even better than that.

Adele Watson gave a good character touch as a sob sister on a small town paper.

Robert Brower and Wade Boteler filled in the cast satisfactorily.

One player credits himself in a subtitle in the person of Peter Gridley Smith. This young man plays a news-hound and is just the right touch needed to top off the newspaper atmosphere. Mr. Smith shows great promise.—R. W.

"EAST LYNNE"

PERHAPS one of the strangest combinations that ever hit the screen is presented in Hugo Ballin's version of "East Lynne." There is a sacrilegious clash of the ridiculous and the sublime. Art carried out to the finest point intermingled with melodrama that borders on the burlesque. What Mr. Ballin has accomplished in artistic appreciation he has undone in exaggeration of situations.

The old story of East Lynne would have taken more delicate handling to have a result that could be taken seriously. The treatment of the production technically could not have been better.

In spots, the love scenes especially, the picture is beautifully directed.

Mabel Ballin is not only a picturesque woman, out she is an exquisite actress. She has a madonna-like personality that gives force to her role, though she uses a great deal of suppression in her work.

Henry Earle plays opposite Miss Ballin, having responsibility of heavy dramatic work which he handles well.

Henry Sell is a typical "East Lynne" villain. His work tends to give the story an insincere tang by over acting, especially in facial expression.

Two minor roles are handled by Gladys Coburn and Gilbert Rooney in a mediocre way.

—R. W.

"THE WALL FLOWER"

WHAT a blow it must be to the self-appointed to have a man like Rupert Hughes come into the pictures with popular productions which cannot be mutilated by the most rabid of censors.

And, it also must prod the fathers of picturedom a little, to see this stranger within the gates, rippling along so successfully while disregarding all the old rules of the game.

Hughes has done all these things again in "The Wall Flower," which pleasantly entertains. The audience enjoyed it and seemed entirely satisfied. But the production lacks the situation strength of his first offering, "Come On Over." The famous fictionist who has turned to the directing field, is excavating in the same field as the make-by rule ancestor. It must be confessed that he used his new tools a little too much and suffered a slight caveat during the job.

But, despite the fact it hadn't a heavy plot, it went well with the audience because, as usual, it carried honest values, instead of resorting to the artificial to "fatten" the thin places, as practiced since the year One, After Stage.

Hughes is always whimsical, and never fails to fire telling axioms at you when you are laughing and helpless. These little lectures hits the major portion of a mixed crowd. There is true wisdom for the benefit of mother and father in "The Wall Flower," and advice to the rest of us as well.

Colleen Moore was wall-flowered very successfully during a major portion of the story, although it must be a strain upon a leading lady to honestly endeavor to be homely and awkward. She sprouted out very well, as per schedule, although one vaguely felt that some little thing was missing.

As the lover, who entered the picture late but logically—another violation of a rigid ancient rule—Richard Dix acted so much like a natural, normal person, that he didn't rise to the impassioned period at all when falling in love with Colleen.

Gertrude Astor, as the society girl was beautiful as ever and more winning than we have ever seen her. It seems that the "400" does harbor human, loveable females.

Tom Gallery and Rush Hughes, the two college chums who carried much of the preliminary action, proved entirely likeable, and equal to their roles.

Laura LaPlante, Dana Todd, Fanny Stockbridge and Emily Rait helped much to keep the acceptable production upon an even keel.

The handwriting upon the wall still says that the newcomer, "Rupert Hughes, director," is one who is destined to prove a great aid in bringing them back into the picture theater.

W. E. W.

"CROSSROADS OF NEW YORK"

AS much harm can be done by too much cutting as can be by padding a production whose success depends upon smoothness. "Crossroads of New York" appears to be a picture that was overrun with footage and for the sake of shortening the running time, great chunks of story was cut out. This is not the fault of F. Richard Jones who showed a master hand in direction.

The cast is brilliant but too numerous for the great percentage of picture goes to keep track of or to notice the work of any one in particular. To explain each players' role would tell the whole story.

There is the brilliant and majestic Ethel Grey Terry who makes it clear that she is seeking heartbalm. She is a good type and acts the heavy feminine role suitably.

Kathryn McGuire is a striking contrast portraying naivety charmingly.

Greater credit falls to Mildred June for making herself noticeable in the midst of better knowns with only a bit to work with. She is the one that you will remember on your way home when recalling the feminine array.

As a comedienne Dot Farley will wait a long time before she will find an equal to her idea of the boarding house mistress.

George O'Hara, a modest boy, makes his bow to the camera. But it is one you will want to see often after his fine piece of acting here.

William Bevan and Ben Deely form a good team of blackmailers. Many laughs are due to their fake business propositions.

Eddie Gribbon is a good character and works well with Dot Farley.

Noah Beery is distinctive but suddenly disappears from the story with a slipshod explanation, only to appear again for no reason whatever for the final scenes.

Then such players as Robert Cain, Herbert Standing, James Finlayson, Charles Murray and Raymond Griffith that fill the cast most capacity.—R. W.

"HANDCUFFS OR KISSES?"

THE real transgressors of this production do not appear upon the screen.

First should be named the person who selected this fiction story for filming, this chip from the good, old rock of ages. Running him closely for reverse honors are both adapter and director.

Poor Elaine Hammerstein suffers doubly; on the screen for many sins which she does not commit, then at the hands of editor and the man with the megaphone.

Although supposed to be a white-souled saint, nobly suffering unjust prosecution, she is presented as a spineless girl, a coward and a liar. The word "logic" presumably was missing from the Selznick dictionary used at the time this story was put on. Also new and startling methods have been discovered to kill footage, such as a person entering an upper room of a mansion and in one-sixteenth of a second being discovered in change of costume, entering an auto outside the home. When done repeatedly, the "novelty" of this method begins to pall.

Miss Hammerstein is as sweet, competent and capable as ever but, as the subtitles tell the story and she is only called upon to pose or trot around a little in response to the demands of a fool story which could not possibly happen in real life, she cannot be blamed. One must live up to contract, be it ever so painful.—R. W.

Where to Find People You Know

F. Richard Jones is directing "The Frozen Trail," the new Ben Turpin picture.

Virginia Fox plays opposite Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams."

Alfred Hollingsworth is in the James B. Warner feature, "Flaming Hearts."

Dot Farley is on the Mack Sennett lot being featured as character comedienne in a series of Mack Sennett comedies.

Buster Keaton handed the studioites quite a laugh the other day when he stepped out garbed in his latest costume which makes him look like the Boob McNutt of the movies.

Lydia Yeamans Titus has a part in "Flaming Hearts" featuring James B. Warner.

Mollie Mackey will return to the screen, after a lapse of three years. Her present contract with Kel-Pine Production Co. calls for six pictures.

Dick Hatton just finished "Ridin' Through," which has been cut and titled ready to turn over to the powers that be. He will start another picture in about four weeks.

Frank Kingsley is working in the Barbara Bedford production at the Fine Arts studios, under the direction of Nat Deverich.

John Henry, Jr., and Teddy, the trick dog will star in Mack Sennett's new child-animal production, "Bow-Wow."

Richard Talmadge is suffering from poison ivy that he ran into while visiting Grover Jones, his director, up in San Dimas Canyon.

Al Santell has recovered from his operation for appendicitis enough to be up and around the film rialto.

Larry Semon is casting for his next comedy at the Vitagraph which ought to bring joy to mourners' row, where the boys have been hanging out since Larry finished his last picture.

Rex Thorpe is superintending the raising of the roof of the old Balboa Studios, and covering it with glass which will give the new owners of the plant one of the largest covered stages in the Southland.

William S. Campbell gave his final O. K. on the last two-reel comedy that he was contracted to make for the Educational program. He will now get ready for his own producing units which he expects to have well under way inside of the next four weeks.

Lloyd Hamilton is starting his first picture at the United studios, which will be released on the Educational program.

C. M. Franklin will finish his present Chinese story that he is directing, and start on entirely new series of two-reelers which will feature kiddies and animals, at the United studios.

Harry Kerr is now busily engaged as casting director at the Metro studios.

Dick Smith shaved off his mustache so he could play a darky character in a Fox picture, which goes to show what they will do for art's sake.

Erle Kenton previewed his last comedy that he made at Fox's at Ocean Park at the Rosemary Theatre, and is ready to start another subject.

Another young miss is switching from comedy to drama in the person of Laura La Plante.

Josephine Hill has been cast to play opposite Leo Maloney in a series of two-reel western, which is a follow-up series that was recently made by Mr. Maloney for the Pathé exchanges.

Vincent McDermott is assisting Larry Semon at the Vitagraph to start the ball a-rolling. Vincent had to locate a skunk for the funmaker so he could put over a funny situation. It wasn't any fun for Vince to find a skunk, but he did it.

Helen Darling has been added to the cast that is aiding Neal Burns in the burlesque "The Shriek" at the Christie studios.

Viola Daniels is contemplating feature productions after spending a year and a half with the Christies.

Earl Rodney had to drop out of the Neal Burns company cast at Oxnard when he was suddenly taken down with an attack of neuritis. George Burton took his place and finished the picture.

R. A. Walsh no more than arrived in the southland than he peeled his coat and got busy casting his picture that he is to produce at Goldwyn's.

George Hernandez is in the cast of "Flaming Hearts."

S. B. Brennicke, personal representative for E. W. Hammons, President of the Educational Film Corp., left for New York City Wednesday after quite a stay here.

Kathleen Myers is in the cast of the Metropolitan production "Flaming Hearts."

Alma Bennett is playing in "Flaming Hearts."

Frankie Lee is working in "Flaming Hearts."

Joe Roberts has the role of the heavy in the Buster Keaton comedy, "Day Dreams."

Edward Burns is portraying the leading role in "East Is West."

Jim Finlayson is playing in "The Frozen Trail."

Colleen Moore has the leading role in Oliver Morosco's "Slippy McGee."

Jim Wang has been added to the cast of "East Is West."

Sydney Algier will direct John M. Stahl's picture, "The Dangerous Age," for Louis B. Mayer.

Helene Chadwick will play the leading role in "Gimme," under the direction of Rupert Hughes.

George Cooper is playing with Ben Turpin in "The Frozen Trail."

Dot Farley is a member of the cast of "The Frozen Trail."

Fred Warren is playing a Chinaman in "East Is West."

George O'Hara will co-direct with Fred Jackman for Sennett comedies.

Warner Oland has a comedy character in "East Is West," starring Constance Talmadge.

Nigel Barrie has been added to the cast of "East Is West."

Nick De Ruiz is playing in Constance Talmadge's current picture, "East Is West."

Al Kingsley will be seen in the Kel-Pine Production Company.

Irene Roberts has just signed a contract with Kel-Pine Production Co. in their next series of comedies which are now under production.

Jack Mower is working at Universal in "Bitter Sweet," under the direction of Lambert Hillyer.

William Welch has a part in Lambert Hillyer's production, "Bitter Sweet," which is being made at Universal.

Eva Novak has been engaged to support her sister, Jane, in the R-C production, "The Rock of Ages."

Mickey Daniels runs away with the show in "My Wild Irish Rose."

Pickups By The Staff

EXHIBITORS ELECT NEW OFFICIALS

J. S. Lustig and Glenn Harper, president and secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California, attended the convention of theatre owners in Washington and helped re-elect Sydney S. Cohen national president.

Southland exhibitors did not re-elect Lustig and Harper at their election, June 12, in the projection room of Argus Enterprises, 836 South Olive Street.

These officers were elected: President, F. O. Adler, Victoria Theatre, San Pedro; first vice-president, D. B. Vanderlip, Inglewood; second vice-president, C. E. Walker, Princess Theatre, Santa Monica; secretary, J. L. Lazarus (former vice-president), Royal Theatre; treasurer, B. H. Lustig, (re-elected), Dreamland Theatre.

Lady Betty, 3½-year-old blonde candidate for a picture role, is leaving with her mother, Mrs. Fay Bock, to visit relatives in Indiana and Illinois.

Bradley J. Smollen, Vitagraph scenario writer, left this week for a month's vacation in New York and Chicago.

The Long Beach post of the American Legion will give a big dance at the Balboa studios the night of June 30, 1922.

A. J. Thorne, general manager, and Rex Thorpe were in Hollywood Thursday in the interest of the studios.

The old Indian scout and fighter who will arrive here from Oklahoma to make a feature western is no other than Panunee Bill, the owner of one of the largest ranches in Oklahoma.

"Big Stakes" will be the releasing title for the initial Metropolitan Production recently completed under the name of "High Stakes." Based on the American Magazine story by Earl Wayland Bowman, it is a five-reel special featuring James B. Warner. Frank Howard Clark prepared the scenario.

Katherine MacDonald is taking her first vacation in half a year. She is enjoying herself with a round of week-end affairs, golf, and various social diversions.

Vangie Valentine, a Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic beauty, may soon play leads opposite James B. Warner in future Metropolitan offerings.

Edna Wallace Hopper is scheduled for a week's engagement at a local theatre, beginning Monday, June 26, when she will reveal the secrets of "cosmetic surgery."

B. L. James, former foreman with the Selig company, has organized a band of twenty-two members, known as "The Greater Los Angeles City Band."

He has contracted to furnish music every night at Westlake Park, and Sunday afternoon at Exposition Park for sixteen weeks.

Although at least a week more will be consumed in the completing of the cast of "The Dangerous Age," Mr. Stahl is now shooting on location scenes.

A. E. SMITHS SAIL

Mr and Mrs. Albert E. Smith (Vitagraph president, and Jean Paige, star), were among passengers leaving New York for Europe on the Aquatania Tuesday. They will visit relatives in England before returning in a few weeks.

A "bad" man and good actor is Noah Beery. He usually walks off with the picture in which he appears.

BLAMES FACTORY METHODS IN LABS

Scenes that cost hours of artistic patience and hundreds of dollars to record in celluloid are often ruined by factory methods in laboratories.

So charged James Young in his talk before Western Motion picture Advertisers Monday. "The creative brain alone is responsible for the big picture," declared Mr. Young.

"The executive who does not realize the importance of engaging a director of experience is comparable to a business man who permits the first architect that comes along to design a $250,000 office building.

"The failure to appreciate need for individual skilled attention in developing and printing films has ruined untold artistic direction and photography."

Ruth Roland told the Wampas about the consistent publicity campaign she has conducted since her first days in pictures.

Col. A. Y. Tally, managing editor of the Los Angeles Express, said conditions in Hollywood were no worse than in any other part of the United States, and blamed "capitalization of unconventionality" for publicity for the national wave of Hollywood distortions.

One of the largest exterior sets ever constructed on a covered stage is being put up at the Louis B. Mayer studios for the production of the new John M. Stahl production, "The Dangerous Age," a future First National attraction. It covers the floor area or a stage 220 feet long by 130 feet wide.

Nazimova will remain in the East until fall, when she will return to start work on a new picture.

Maurice Tourneur has made such rapid progress filming exteriors for "The Christian" on the Isle of Man that he expects to sail home the middle of the month.

Carl Laemmle of Universal expects to sail for London about June 17th, where he will make an inspection tour of Universal's branch exchanges. He will then go on to Carlsbad for a rest. He will return in September or October.

Ruth Stonehouse is back in Hollywood after a nine months' vaudeville tour.

Locations at Oxnard, Santa Barbara and Catalina will be used for scenes of the Richard Walton Tully production, "Omar the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post. Interiors are being filmed at United studios.

Elinor Lynn has returned from Salt Lake City and is back with Jack White's unit of the Hamilton-White comedies at United studios.

Will Rogers has been signed to appear in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which will be made by the Rare Entertainment company at Tarrytown. Rogers will play Ichabod Crane. The production will be directed by Ed Venturini and supervised by Carl Stearns Clancy.

George Melford will start the first week of July on his new Paramount production of Robert Louis Stevenson's story, "Ebb Tide."

Rudolph Valentino's second starring vehicle is "The Young Rajah."

Mack Sennett's "The Crossroads of New York" has just finished its initial engagement at the Capitol theatre in New York.

Bob Horner is shooting on his western five-reeler with Ranger Bill Miller and Patricia Palmer.

Melburn Morante has returned from New York City and will start producing again for the Morante producing corporation.

Bobby Hunter has started shooting on a five-reel comedy-drama written by Miss Hunter. Mr. Jones will co-direct with her.

"Bull" Montana's second comedy is titled "On Fifth Avenue."

King Vidor will direct "Peg o' My Heart."

Jean Redmond, son of Granville Redmond, landscape and marine painter whose working studio is on the Chaplin lot, was married in Pennsylvania to Edith Cleaver Haas, a non-professional.

Edith Kennedy adapted "Country Love" for the screen.

Billie Dove will star in "A Temporary Marriage" for Metro.

Michael Dark has been engaged for a part supporting Dorothy Dalton in "On the High Seas" under direction of Irvin Willat at Lasky's.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Sessue Hayakawa gave a farewell party Tuesday at his home, and the following day he was to leave for Japan. Upon his return he will go upon the speaking stage.

Louis Fazenda is back in town after making a personal appearance tour, and is to work under the Hamilton-White banner at the United studios.

Tom Buckingham and the Century studios had a parting of the ways the other day. They agreed to disagree.

Harry Brooker is recovering from an accident that befell him at the Fox studios, and hopes to get back to work. His last picture was titled "The Landlord."

Joe Rock returned from New York City where he signed a contract with the Federated Exchanges, Inc. He will work at the Cosmosart studios.

Josephine Adair finished her picture with Alice Lake and directed by Edwin Le Saint for the Waldorf Productions.

Harry Lucenay, owner of Pal, the trained dog, has added a great canine to his troupe dubbed "Pete."

Little Napoleon and his trainer, Andre Anderson, returned from a trip through the Coast theatres. He will get busy making animal comedies.

Lee Moran is going to Europe to make a number of pictures which will just about complete his present contract. England and France are the locales of two of his stories.

Al Christie's return to the Southland is being awaited with anxiety by stars, directors, cameramen and whatnots of the profession.

Frank Hayes is working at Lasky's in "The Old Homestead" playing a leading character in the story.

Rea Hunt is working with the Jack White forces over at the United studios.

Craig Hutchinson, Frank Griffin Del Lord, Hughey Fay so far make up the directorial staff of the Lloyd Hamilton and Jack White units over at the United studios. E. H. Allen is General Manager and Harry Howard Auditor.

Don Avery claims that he has all rights to the next job as Fred Caldwell's assistant director, when the latter starts his next feature production.

James Hogan was about the United Studios the other day looking over locations. He expects to get started on a big feature almost any day. George Bunny, Frank Kingsley and he had their heads together very closely. What's up?

Harry Sweet seems to have bid the Century good-bye. He was giving some of the comedy producers the once-over the other day and seemed to be talking very earnestly.

Henry Lehrman may soon be directing for a well known firm along Sunset Boulevard. Three guesses who is it to be? No, you are all wrong. Guess again!

Alma Bennett signed her last pay check when she finished with the Dick Hatton productions. According to Alma it was a charming engagement. Fair enough!

Lester Cuneo is expected to be back working again on a original script written by Henry McCarthy under the personal supervision of Chas Mack at the Fine Arts studios within the next two weeks.

Baby Peggy Jean is to be featured in a series of burlesques on some of our best fairy tales, which goes to show that some comedies are to be laughed at, even if they must resort to kidding the kids.

Jess Robbins is due to make his next picture in New York City, according to one on the inside, which means that a lot of good actors and actresses will regret very much to learn.

Vernon Walker is photographing the kids and animals for Director Al Herman at the Century studios. He says that the Bruce Mitchell Co. at the Cosmosart studios will start as soon as the financial backer, Mr. Coffin, recovers from his present illness.

Bobby Vernon is spending his days playing golf, while his evenings he is rehearsing for the Studio Review that is to be staged at the Lois Weber studios for the War Veterans.

Bert Bracken is to start making a feature production at the Hollywood Studios.

Eddie Barry is sharing honors with babies and animals in the second Fred Hibbard comedy being produced at the United studios.

Harry Cohn is around with a smile that listens like the "Hall Room Boys" are once more to start promenading along film row. Syd Smith and his director, Noel Smith, will be among those present when the word 'start' is passed along by Mr. Cohn.

George Monberg has left Century and expects to start working at the Fox studio soon with Director Noel Smith.

Dick Smith is doing a blackface comic for Erle Kenton at the Fox studios.

Scott Darling and William Beaudine are busy writing stories so that when Al Christie returns they will be ready.

Richard Talmadge expects to start working on a new feature.

Grover Jones is busy on a script for the acrobatic comedian's next story.

Bob McKenzie and his happy family are helping to put over some funny situations in one of the fun-films at the United studios.

William Craft just finished a sea picture in which George Larkin and Edith Roberts were the principal players; it was produced for the Russell Productions.

Henry Murdock has finished an excellent part with the Neal Burns Co. at the Christie studios, playing one of those small town hicks.

James Ewens is right-hand man to James Young in the direction of "Omar the Tent Maker."

Millard Webb is busier than a bird dog on a trail of some game, for he is S. A. Franklin's right-hand man.

Director Franklin is producing "East Is West with Contance Talmadge.

Arthur Rose is assisting C. M. Franklin at the United studios.

Brownie, the famous Century dog, has been changing directors so often that he can't ascertain which is his master's voice.

Harold Lloyd had a cafe set the other day in which he played a young city doctor. Some restaurants believe in safety first, having a doctor in attendance when they do business.

Nat Ross, being given the opportunity to direct Edward (Hoot) Gibson in a feature, is another fair example of what the Universal thinks of Nat, who was but recently made a director of a two-reel Canadian North West Mounted Police series.

George Marshall is cutting his initial story that he made as a Rodeo comedy from the famous Tuttle stories. He will start another at the United within two weeks.

C. L. Chester returned from New York City and is sporting around a new car, which means that he must have found a rich uncle back in the metropolis.

Larry Semon has hired Tom Buckingham to shout orders at him. That's Buck's business, for he is being paid to direct Mr. Semmon's funny antics in his first special production on his new contract at the Vitagraph.

Tommy Regan is assisting Earle Kenton at the Fox studios on the comedy side, with Chester Conklin, the star funmaker.

The Screen Writer's Forum - Conducted by William E. Wing

DOPING THE DUPE

IT is the writer who must decide whether we shall continue feeding the poor dupe, Celluloid, its ever-increasing rations of dope, or lead the poor patient out into new places where it can get fresh air, and stage a comeback.

Picturedom has pyramided until the top of the ultimate peak has been reached. We have sexed it until immoral unfoldment is beheld by the coming generation with ennui and the calm gorging on peanuts.

We have societied our leading women until Lillian, the laundry linguist, knows more about the inside of the "swell set" than she does about removing wrinkles from a night shirt.

Also our stories and films have out-legged those of any nation upon earth. We started by showing some modest but interesting feminine, pull a carefully rehearsed step-up into an automobile, with the effect of a yard of black stocking.

Many comedy producers looked thereon and saw it "was good." Each outdid the other until the limit was exceeded in each new production. Certain dramatic producers, probably desiring to "enhance" their sex stuff, seized upon the idea and began legging it to beat the cards. Soon the leading ladies grew jealous of all the attention. They discovered that, while they were pulling lots of high-brow acting in "The Chorus Lady" or other revelation production, the breathless audience had its protruding optic glued upon the fatted calf of a prodigal, known as an extra.

Thereupon Milady proceeded to not only lose her stockings, but lose her clothes as well. After the rage got fairly under way, the working title of almost every production on the lot could have been, "Pure but Naked."

"Innocent but Persecuted," "Reunited Across Baby's Sickbed," "Before the Altar," "At the Altar," "After the Altar," "Hubby's Friend," "Going Wrong, but Getting Straight Again on Schedule," neglected wives and husbands, marriage problems which are none of our business; mush, gush and slush; heaven defend us by putting us wise before we enter!

Social productions have been speialed until sets have blotted out the sun and created a ruction in Mars, the planet now said to be wig-wagging its protest. Money has been poured out, slopped out and cloud-bursting upon productions which sometimes, have entertained the audience almost as much as the fair program feature.

In other words, the dupe has been doped until teaspoons have been discarded in favor of the steam-shovel, and the victim still is yowling for the doctor. The audience itself has become so dopey that even the grandest background scenery in the world cannot revive it.

Are the people ready to return to the window in Thrums?

Several recent releases reply that they are. Others bespeak a Thrums livened up a bit. It allows the dwellers to come out into the yard or up on the roof.

Outside of the occasional wierd changes in script, made by the Solomons who direct, the screen reflects the story mind of the writer. That highly privileged creater may put away his dope, for the public has returned its verdict by walking out on the super-ultimate.

We can hear some real mean person utter-

Travelaugs

I never saw a purple moon
Or brooks of reddest glow,
Until my mamma took me to
The moving picture show.

It wouldn't be hard to imagine the stately Gertrude Astor as a princess.

ing sarcasm about this time. He would like to know what this prude would have written for the screen.

We fooled you that time, for we had the goods on hand before firing. We have selected a single sentence uttered by an editor who desires stories for his magazines.

Here they are:

"Stories with a purpose that pull upward, with originality that takes one out of the beaten path, and with a movement that attracts red-blooded young people and their seniors."

There it is in black and white, as plain as a waving limb in a film. Read that sentence by sections and let each condition sink in. There is purpose in every word and value in every verb.

I perceive that the scornful person still scorns. He stiff at the conditions of merely a single editor. It happens that this is not the individual formulae, but the demand of a corporation which issues more than a score of publications read by millions of people.

There is the wisdom of long experience behind that formula. Long years of discovering what the public wants, and gambling heavily to discover the proper recipe, has brought about this final definition of today's story needs.

Are motion pictures ready to drop the dope and follow the prescription which is the life blood of many successful story publications?

The writers may be first to reply.

The Anxious Seat

MILL VALLEY, June 6.—It would be "an act of mrcy" if you could ascertain from the studios just what their needs are. It would save much writing, much mad effort to cater to a need which may change with the setting of that day's sun."

"You reveal an almost uncanny knowledge of studios already. That "setting sun" paragraph certainly divulges the fact that you are right on the trail. We are going to try and operate a market department which will be as close to the mark as heaven and the studios will let us. But discovering editors who 'know what they want' is not always given to mere humans."

CORONADO BEACH, June 8.—Can you enlighten a struggling scribe—is screen playwriting a profession or a disease? Some three years ago I listened to the tempter's lure of fame and fortune, the sad tale of the producers' "dire need" of stories written for the screen. Mentally and morally I rolled up my sleeves and, with high resolve and boundless enthusiasm, dashed to the rescue.

I spared no expense, studied early and studied late. I wrote, rewrote, lived and breathed screen plays.

Perhaps you are young, and still believe in fairies? If so it is sinful for me to write the next chapter.

1922. I am no longer a bright and promising member of my set. My friends look at me with sad, sweet smiles or pity. Some, I suspect, even look for dangerous symptoms. Think you—perhaps there is something in their viewpoint? (Private paragraph about "editors who keep faith.")

As to the done-over, published story vs. the original, I would predict that the future belongs to the play (not story) written for the screen.

But, if it is decided that writing for the screen is a profession, I believe it is time to organize and build up a good sales' organization, as good if not better, than that which the other faction has at present. Can this be discussed in your department?

Some of your epistle wrings tears from our eyes. You have a large number of brethren and sisters. As to your marketing suggestion, it is a mighty good one. If a very strong sales' organization could be brought about, which would handle originals only, and which would be conducted by those who can command real consideration upon the part of studio managements, it would aid strongly in the evolution which must come sooner or later. The done-over, published story is responsible for much harm. A recent mail canvas of 6,000 people, selected from middle classes to the highest, brought a startling number of objections to film productions upon the ground of "sameness of story."—W. E. W.

C. BALLARD: What per cent of the stories written by the public sell to the studios?

Whew! That is an awful query to shoot at a humble conductor who never was in a statistical department. We do not know, but the office boy speaks up enigmatically: "Well, what per cent did Volstead leave in IT?"

JOE MURPHY'S
Sensible Nonsense

It's More Than Likely—
 That after exhausting one's self to get a scene right the cameraman forgot to open the iris.

That Doris May work in December.

That Harry Carey never carried a hod.

That Casting Directors learned their trade in a foundry.

That Jane Novak has a kodak.

That Century Comedies are so named because it takes the audience that long to see their jokes.

That Gloria Joy is Full of Glee.

That the Cosmoart
 Studios will make pictures some day.

That Carter DeHaven will refuse to be interviewed.

That if you go to see
 Fox you will C. A. Bird.

That Julius Sterns enjoyed the visit more than the Rotarians did.

Bruce Mitchell wants to make a series of slap-stick dramas. Scenario writers get busy now. It's never been seen on the screen before and may be your last and only chance.

Husbands who are in need of an excuse to get into the house, after a speak-easy party, should consult a good make-up man.
 Get Cecil Holland. He made one up for me and it worked fine.

Where did they get that motto—
 "One For All and All For One"?

You say, "The Three Musketeers."

"Nope."

You say again, "The Actors Equity Association."

"Nope. From the old roller towel on the back porch."

Yes Sir-ee. It just goes to show. A director once wanted a real Mexican woman who could act. The assistant said he couldn't find one. She was non-existent.
 Tote Du Crow overheard the argument and asked for the job, but was turned down flat.
 It must be a woman and an old Mexican woman at that, nothing else would do.

The next morning Tote got a costume and a little make-up, then got a friend to introduce him as Juanita Gonzales. His broken English satisfied the director, and he was hired and worked the whole day.

After dismissal the director thought of some extra scenes he could work in for this wonderful Mexican actress, so he sent for "HER" to ask if she had some other clothes.
 Tote came on to the set in his street clothes and the director fainted. They revived him by whispering in his ear, "Have a drink."

Al Santell says he can do without his appendix as it don't photograph anyway.

It is perfectly legal to have stills in your possession, when hunting a job.

Yes, they shoot actors every day, but they live to tell the tale, in fact it is hard to shut them up. Some cameras should have bullets in them.

A fade-out starts just before the actor does his best work.

A sub-title explains to the audience that the actor is about to do something.

Very truthfully yours,
JOE MURPHY.

Contemporary Criticisms

"SHERLOCK BROWN" (Metro)

"Bert Lytell . . . has one of the most interesting roles which he has handled for some time. . . The star's characterization gives body and punch to the drama and marks it as something different from the average detective story.

"The action is so continuous and dramatic situations so well managed that one is too absorbed in watching things happen to worry about the implausibility. . .

"Ora Carew and Sylvia Breamer get into the spirit of the drama and are a strong factor in making it convincing."—Moving Picture World.

"The dramatic work is serious and intense while the comedy work is broad farce. The mixture of the two makes a satisfactory entertainment though it keeps one guessing right along.

"Clever titles inserted in the serious sections would have helped greatly to hold the production to a more even level.

"The star has been careful to give his work some intimate touches and some very appealing detail.

"The offering is well directed and ably photographed."—The Film Daily.

"Here's a crackerjack. If you are looking for inoffensive, clean but thoroughly laughable farce, don't miss this, one of the best pictures of its kind ever offered.

"It is the smoothness of continuity, and skillful editing that has brought the humor to the surface, with clever sub-titles photographed on some of the best art titles ever.

"Regardless of the fact that the success of this picture hinges upon comedy situations, it has required an A-1 cast. . . A picture worthy of such favorable competent photographers have been right on the job.

"Mr. Lytell's ease in the role of an amateur detective, the predicaments he gets in and how he gets out can be described as 'highlights.'"—Motion Picture News.

"MY WILD IRISH ROSE" (Vitagraph)

"Scenically 'My Wild Irish Rose' is a thing of beauty.

"It has a good story . . . a splendid cast, the members of which give some fine character portrayals, and it introduces to us Richard (Mickey) Daniels, described as 'the freckledest-faced boy in the world.' We predict for him a brilliant future in screen-dom. Pauline Starke is attractive as Moya, but she is not given much opportunity to display her real ability. Helen Howard . . . James Farley . . . and Henry Hebert are all good.

"David Smith deserves praise for the admirable manner in which he has directed the picture, while C. Graham Baker and Harry Dittmar have given the story a smooth running continuity."—Motion Picture World.

"THE GLORY OF CLEMENTINA" (R-C Pictures)

"An entertaining, well directed picture, delivered by a competent cast of worth while players. The kind of support to which Pauline Frederick is entitled has been employed. A widely read story has been adequately moulded into the kind of screen material needed to encourage picture followers. It should be added, also, that the photography is excellent in places, above the average throughout.

"Whenever Miss Frederick is called upon to dominate a scene, her delivery may be called a highlight, so splendid is her interpretation of a difficult role."

—Motion Picture News.

"There is much about 'The Glory of Clementina' that is admirable. The story is unusual. . . Although at times somewhat befuddling, it carries an intense amount of interest. It is, perhaps, more of a 'high brow' study than most of the stories that find their way to the screen. There is a pleasant sort of satisfaction that runs through it and the story offers some striking examples of human nature. It is possible that the people who have the 'finer' feelings of life will appreciate the picture more.

"This role offers a decided contrast to anything that Pauline Frederick has done recently. Her portrayal wins smiles and sympathy. . .

"The interiors are well lighted and pleasingly furnished."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"It is very likely to have a divided appeal because the director has considerably subordinated everything else to permit Miss Frederick's work to stand out.

"The director has injected an atmosphere of mystery that is vague because you cannot strictly apprehend the reason for it. . . It would seem that the titling is at fault mostly for the somewhat incomprehensible story.

"But Pauline Frederick's work will make the picture a thoroughly interesting one for many. Both in manner and costume she makes Clementina a mighty unusual and engrossing person. Her characterization is excellent throughout."

—The Film Daily.

"SONNY"

"A good story, humorous and poignant in turn, very well done and exceptionally well acted.

"Barthelmess is convincing in each of his two roles, and by his capabilities proves that he would be even so without the aid of his attractive good looks and agreeable personality.

"Mr. Barthelmess has found a mighty good story in 'Sonny,' and he likewise has found an attractive young leading lady, Pauline Garon. . . Other members of the cast also do some excellent acting. . . The success of the picture is the result of the exceptional work by Mr. Barthelmess.

"About the only weak point in the picture is the villain, who appears to be just a little bit too villainous to be real."—Moving Picture World.

"They're going to have a 'good cry' at 'Sonny.' . . And those who lost someone in the Great War will be particularly affected. . . 'Sonny' will rank high with the Barthelmess productions, and it may give 'Tol'able David' a close run.

"The dual role which Barthelmess essays give him marked opportunity for unusual work and he gets away with it nicely. . . The best part of it is that the director has allowed the blind mother of the dead boy to hesitate at accepting as her son the boy who comes home from the war all decorated and the hero of the town. This is very convincingly done by Margaret Seddon.

"At times the story drags, and some cutting might well be used to advantage. . . There are two good dogs used, one particularly who does excellent work when he refuses to accept the pool player as his former master and turns from him. This is unusually good direction."—The Film Daily.

"'Sonny,' however, so far eclipses 'The Seventh Day' that they should not be mentioned in the same breath. . .

"The picture is well balanced with its heart touches. The impressionable spectators are going to smile and become tearful alternately. The ghostly touch is well handled. There is a counterplot which is more or less dragged in by the heels."—Motion Picture News.

"This picture is undoubtedly another big triumph for the star—the versatile Richard Barthelmess. . . The film is a wonderful and refreshing thing—part sunshine, part tears; deliciously human; a high-grade, technically perfect entertainment which is a credit to all concerned in its production.

"There is just enough of warfare in France shown to furnish a pivot for the plot to swing on without laying unnecessary stress on horrors which many people are only too willing to forget if possible. . .

"Richard Barthelmess . . . gives a performance which is bound to linger in the memory of all who witness it. Margaret Seddon is pathetically interesting as the blind mother, Pauline Garon a captivating figure as little sister Florence, and the support as a whole is excellent."—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

WHAT'S WHAT ON THE SENNETT LOT

During the taking of the Mack Sennett-Ben Turpin special, "The Frozen Trail," the cross-eyed comedian met with an accident painful enough to keep him off the set for two days.

With Billy Haughton, a delegation of Rotarians from Dallas, Texas, visited the Mack Sennett Studios to get a laugh.

Mack Sennett is starting out a new company under the direction of Fred Jackman, with George O'Hara in the capacity of co-director, and in which John Henry, Jr., and Teddy, the wonder dog, will share the starring honors, aided by Pepper, Sennett's feline artist.

Roy Del Ruth, directing the Billy Bevan-Mildred June series of two-reel comedies for Mack Sennett, has left with his company for a location two hundred miles outside of Los Angeles, to shoot the opening scenes for the forthcoming comedy special to be known as "When Summer Comes."

Teddy, Mack Sennett's canine star, has started afresh in Sennett comedies, under the direction of Fred Jackman and George O'Hara. The first picture to be released will be known by the title, "Bow-Wow."

Mabel Normand's Mack Sennett photoplay, "Suzanna," which she completed recently, will have its local premiere at the Mission Theatre at the time of the star's return from Europe.

F. Richard Jones is directing "The Frozen Trail," having finished "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand.

George Fawcett has an important part in the James Cruze picture, "The Old Homestead," now being filmed.

Lois Wilson has finished in C. B. De Mille's "Manslaughter."

T. Roy Barnes is working under James Cruze in "The Old Homestead."

Harrison Ford is a member of the cast of "The Old Homestead."

Fritzi Ridgeway has a part in "The Old Homestead."

William Dudley Pelley is the author of "Bitter Sweet," Lon Chaney's next picture for Universal.

Charles Kenyon assisted in the adaptation of "Bitter Sweet," now in production at Universal.

Lila Lee is supporting Wallace Reid in "The Ghost Breaker," which is being filmed at the Lasky Studios.

Jack Cunningham has adapted the Paramount picture, "The Ghost Breaker," from a play by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard.

Kathlyn Williams will start work in William De Mille's production of "Clarence" immediately upon her return from China.

Theodore Kosloff is playing the heavy in the Paramount picture, "To Have and to Hold," directed by George Fitzmaurice.

Conrad Nagel is to play the leading role in the Sam Wood production, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

P the street a widely heralded "picture of the year" has its premiere. The box office is charged by thousands, literally fighting to "see it first."

The star is wonderful; at his best. The girl lead is great; her acting almost steals the picture. The supporting cast appears to have been recruited from the leading ranks. Settings, photography and technical detail indicates that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in making the picture, and yet—the premiere audience yawns its way out—the critics become unkind—attendance wanes and the "masterpiece" is soon stamped as mediocre.

Down the street another picture is showing at its eight-hundredth performance in the same house—and a dog is cast in the star role.

Without a story no picture will go. Advance publicity will pull the opening crowd, but after that the picture must live on its merits, and the story must be as good as the rest of the production.

Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation offers to producers and responsible persons connected with the production of motion pictures, a free daily synopsis bulletin service which briefly outlines the picture values of stories passing through this great clearing house of screen story material. A reading and editing staff of more than thirty men and women with studio and editorial experience is retained for the purpose of discovering and developing great screen stories from the material handled. A letter or postcard will bring you an outline of this Story Synopsis Service and the extensive special services this department offers to you in the selection of screen stories.

ITALY WANTS YANKEE TALENT

ROME.—Will there be American production centers in Italy in near or distant future? At least two producer-distributor companies have made features and super-features in and about Rome. I have completed a two days' inspection of another great studio, which I understand will also make a determined bid for American market.

A great feature being made there will be to some extent supervised by Americans. It is to be known as "Messalina." Studio and grounds where preliminary work is going on is situated within a stone's throw of the Porta Pia and within less than a mile of the city's center. The grounds look to be not less than fifty acres. Director and owner of the establishment is Signor Guazzoni, who produced "Quo Vadis."

If pictures made here under American direction (three of them will be released in the near future) please the American public, I am sure there will be a call for more American directors and more American cameramen and more American studio electricians and more American playwrights and continuity writers.

Only those who have seen the European average production will know the good effect the American example is bound to have on European producers.

(—W. Stephen Bush in Moving Picture World.)

"THE WOMAN WHO WALKED ALONE"

AS a fiction story "The Woman Who Walked Alone" might have been all right. But in transposing it to the screen it loses momentum and falls flat.

However, this picture was not produced in vain. Action is well handled by George Melford. In fact his direction shows marked progress over previous productions.

The locations are beautiful and scenery fits the locale which principally shows African atmosphere without going far from Los Angeles.

Dorothy Dalton is a more settled actress and has gained more poise of late, as she shows as Iris Champneys.

Milton Sills has a straight part that calls for little acting but he plays it in his pleasing quiet way.

E. J. Radcliffe overacts disgustingly. We thought his type of actor went out with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and other aged pieces.

Cecil Holland is quite unrecognizable in a native make-up. He makes a small part worth your while to see.

John Davidson might be a good actor, but he expresses his sensual character in a way that leaves a bad taste.

Unnecessarily introduced to plot or action are the following with a few scenes to their credit: Wanda Hawley, Fredrick Vroom, Mayme Kelso, Harris Gordon, Charles Ogle, Mabel Van Buren, Maurice E. Flynn, John MacKinnon and Temple Pigott.

STORY BY

Edith Kennedy is writing the continuity for Billie Dove's initial Metro starring picture, "Country Love," which Emile Chautard will direct.

Leah Baird is working on the continuity for her next feature which will enter production in a month.

Edward Sheldon's first original story for the screen, "On the High Seas," will soon be produced under the direction of Irvin Willat for Paramount.

Frank Howard Clark, who has just finished the scenario for King Vidor's next picture, is now completing an original story entitled "The Wolf Man" which Metropolitan Productions will film with James B. Warner in the featured role.

Ted Dickson, Jr., magazine writer, has completed the second of six South Sea stories called for in his contract with Picturecraft productions. It is called "Flame of the Night." The author will act as technical adviser on his stories, including "The Tam-ing," which is now casting.

John Ames Mitchell wrote the story of "The Young Rajah" which has been adapted to the screen for Lasky studios by June Mathis.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes wrote the story of "Gimme" which is being made by Goldwyn.

Kathryn Cuddy is adapting Hans Christian Anderson's "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," to be produced by Mission film corporation.

Charles Kenyon and Arthur Statter are adapting William Dudley Pelley's story, "Bitter Sweet," for Universal.

Arthur Statter and A. P. Younger wrote the scenario of "Misfit Becomes Chaperone," William H. Hambys' story for Erward Gibson.

Marion Fairfax, who has produced several pictures, has written a story and continuity for Billie Dove titled "The Girl in the Gilded Cage."

Raymond Schroek is adapting Bernard Hyman's story, "The Rainbow Chaser," for Herbert Rawlinson.

Mary O'Hara has been selected to write the continuity for "Peg O' My Heart."

Rex Taylor will prepare the continuity for "Noise in Newboro."

Crosby George is the author of "June Madness," which has been purchased as a future starring vehicle for Viola Dana.

Lenore Lynard has been added to the cast of Gloria Swanson's latest production, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

Lloyd E. Sheldon has been engaged by Metro to prepare the continuity for his new story, "East of the Suez."

Billie Dove's first starring picture for Metro will be "Country Love," a story by Hulbert Footner.

A pretty girl can afford to play homely parts. Ask Colleen Moore; she just got through being a "Wall Flower."

Larry Evans is the author of Katherine MacDonald's next picture, "Money! Money! Money!" It will be magazined about the same time the picture is released.

Hope Loring adapted "Money! Money! Money!" to the screen.

Roy Del Ruth has written the story and continuity of the next Mack Sennett comedy.

Tom Forman will direct Katherine MacDonald's next picture, "Money! Money! Money!," a Preferred Picture production.

Justine Adams' "Old Folks at Home" will be filmed by Warner Bros. It may be made in the East by Sam Warner.

Dr. Horace R. M. Maddock, for forty years a resident of India, is technical consultant for the Norma Talmadge production of "The Voice from the Minaret," at United Studios.

Nelson McDowell has been added to the cast supporting Ruth Roland in "The Riddle of the Range," a serial being produced for Pathe by United Studios.

Under the new management at the Metro studios there will be no scenario staff. Instead, writers will be engaged to prepare continuities according to their qualifications.

Robert Ensminger, Vitagraph director, plans to leave shortly on a vacation trip east.

Pete Gerald, secretary-treasurer of the A. D. A., formerly production manager of the Francis Ford company, who for the last eight months has been associated with Joe McDonough in the G. & M. Print Shop, Hollywood, has bought McDonough's half interest and will continue the business.

Harry Burns got back from Oxnard with the Christie company.

Jack Proctor has returned from Beaumont, Texas.

Gordon Hollingshead is with director Kennedy at Fox lot.

At the bi-monthly meeting of the Assistant Directors' Association, to be held Thursday evening, June 22, there will be a number of vaudeville acts as well as an "ace" of the profession as speaker.

One comedy unit at Universal City has been held up over a week because of the illness of Roy Atwell, who is staving off an attack of typhoid.

Arthur H. Stuart has been cast for his second season with the Pilgrimage Players.

Catherine Murphy served her dramatic apprenticeship on the road with Margaret Anglin, and had the leading feminine role in the first Mission feature production.

Mildred June is now a fully enrolled member of the bobbed-hair brigade.

Malcolm McGregor, Yale athletic star who made his initial screen appearance in "The Prisoner of Zenda," has been signed by Metro.

John Arnold has returned to Metro and will photograph Viola Dana in her new picture.

Louis Gottschalk, composer, has been secured by Rex Ingram to prepare a special musical score for "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Walter Anthony will title Jackie Coogan's recently finished "Oliver Twist." Anthony is also writing a prologue in title form.

Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, has been granted a two months' leave of absence. Irving G. Thalberg, director-general, is supervising scripts.

King Baggot has returned from Universal City, from Louisville, where he filmed the "Kentucky Derby" as a part of the Universal-Jewel photodrama of that title, an adaptation of "The Suburban Handicap."

W. E. Keefe has been engaged to title "Night Life in Hollywood."

Who wants motion pictures free from reproach? Well, not the man within, who flaunts salacious advertisements of his own deliberate productions.

Mexico is banning all films which show any Mexican character in an unfavorable light. This leaves the daily press with a complete monopoly of the banditry, murder and pillage below the line.

ROSE DIONE

"Mme. Rose Dione, the French actress recently from Odeon, Paris, is now a prominent player in the motion picture colony of Hollywood.

"Mme. Dione's previous important film appearances have been that of the patriotic French woman in 'The Four Horsemen,' wherein she is shown singing 'La Marseillaise,' as indeed she did in a Paris restaurant when war on Germany was declared, and as 'the other mother' in Mary Pickford's presentation of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.'"

—LOWELL (Mass.) LEADER.

"Where have they been keeping that superb actress, Rose Dione, so long that we haven't seen some of her fine work before? For sheer power, dynamic emotional force, arresting sincerity, we have had nothing on the screen finer than the work of Miss Dione as the woman living alone in the old farmhouse."

—GRACE KINGSLEY.

"I saw my Mam'selle alive, suffering, conquering; you have made her live."

—HARRIET T. COMSTOCK.
(Author of "Mam'selle Jo." Picture, "Silent Years.")

"The leading character is a woman not possessed of any great beauty of face or form, yet blessed with an able mind, high spirit and a character so genuine as to hold the intense interest established with her first appearance."

—MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Mme. Rose Dione, a French actress, who is evidently a newcomer to the American screen, is a new type. As the rugged, unattractive woman with the starved maternal instinct, she is most convincing."

—MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"Rose Dione" as Mam'selle Jo is particularly well suited to the role, and her work proves she is quite capable of handling an emotional part. She exercises the proper repression and yet is convincingly pathetic. She deserves credit for her work in this."

—WID'S DAILY.

"'Silent Years' brings before the public Rose Dione in a fine piece of character acting. As the strong woman, not beautiful, but with infinite determination and ability to steer her own course for a goal of duty, she sacrificed her lover to the care of an invalid sister."

THE PICTURE SPEAKS

[A News-Editorial]

REMEMBER the early film days when action would suddenly be cut off by "End of Reel One"? Then a glass slide requested "Just a moment, please, while operator changes the reel." Short silence, then a buzz of gab and giggles in the audience and sounds of tinkering in the projection box. In a few moments came a warning rattle and "Reel Two" flashed on the screen.

It was something like that Tuesday night at the Ambassador theatre.

About 150 members of the Actors' Equity association and a handful of other professionals, who had been tipped that something interesting was to be shown, were there.

"Finis" flashed on the final embrace of Hoot Gibson and Louise Lorraine in "The Fire Eater."

Two men adjusted some machine in the orchestra pit. A buzzer buzzed.

* * *

Slightly rotund, Secretary of Labor Davis faced us. It was his first film appearance, too, but he tried to make dignity mask his embarrassment.

He opened his mouth and spoke.

His words were distinctly enunciated, although with slight harshness. He made a serious, conventional speech about his intentions to bring employer and employee in better harmony, using carefully-planned gestures.

That was over in four minutes.

A man in oilskins sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" from the screen. Next, another singer. Then the announcer announced Sam Moore and his singing saw. Vibrations of the saw under the fiddle bow were musically recorded.

* * *

All this was ordinary entertainment. The appeal was novelty—the novelty of perfect, synchronization.

Something new. Novelty held us, just as the first moving pictures held their viewers with rushing trains and trotting horses.

But to continue:

Frank Gilmore, executive secretary of the Actors' Equity association, smiled from the screen. He took a paper from his pocket and unfolding it, read some figures.

The home office had spent $11,950.27 getting the motion picture branch started, he said among other things. Of course, with the slump in pictures, they had not done so well. Still (he smiled hopefully) he knew that would be made up the coming year.

Occasionally he cleared his throat, and the sound was recorded as audibly as his words.

Gilmore spoke with apparent admiration of Will Hays, and told of conference in which he discussed a standard form of contract with the director-general of the new producers and distributors association.

He also reported to Hays that the coast branch of Equity did not receive full cooperation from picture interests there. He was going to talk this over with Hays again next week, he said.

At the end of his first four minutes he lifted a glass of water to his lips. The screen went white. They put on a new record and a new reel. Gilmore appeared, just setting down his glass. The three minutes drink got a laugh.

With two machines in operation there would have been no appreciable halt, however.

It was an impressive demonstration. It set every mind thinking. What did this invention mean to motion pictures? Could whole plays be presented audibly from the screen? Was the silent drama to become the strident drama?

* * *

The device is called the phonokinema, an invention of Orlando E. Kellum.

* * *

At its present stage of development the phonokinema is not practical for presentation of entire plays. It may be perfected to this point.

Here are some things the phonokinema can and will do:

It will elect the next president. Candidates can appear before and deliver personal messages to 25,000,000 persons daily.

It will thrust the film industry into politics.

It will give the exhibitor a telling weapon against vaudeville. He will be able to present on his screen full variety performance.

It can eliminate the spoken title in photodramas, and present dramatic speech with startling effect.

It can eliminate "personal appearance" trips of stars. Stars can have curtain speeches prepared for optional use by exhibitor.

Orchestral and prologue programs can be filmed and sold to exhibitors.

* * *

A wonderful achievement and undoubtedly of great value, yet the phonokinema will never supercede photodrama as now projected in silence. Silence is one of the screen's charms.

—Ted Taylor.

Film Capital Production Notes

VITAGRAPH PLANS

This is Vitagraph studio's annual vacation time. Larry Semon has a company working, but otherwise all activity is centered in the scenario department.

In another week William Duncan is expected to start casting "When Danger Smiles."

On his return from Del Monte Earle Williams will start "You Never Know."

In two weeks David Smith will launch a special, probably "The Magnificent Amberson."

George Archainbaud, director of the Selznick forces is enjoying a brief vacation at Coronado before starting on the next Elaine Hammerstein production, which is being put into continuity by Edward J. Montagne.

Madge Bellamy has been selected to play opposite Jack Pickford, in his first United Artists picture, "Garrison's Finish," now in production. Miss Bellamy will start the middle of June, when Mr. Pickford returns to Hollywood from New York, where he has been taking scenes of the Metropolitan Handicap which will serve to give this racing story realistic backgrounds. Arthur Rosson, is directing Jack and Elmer Harris is supervising the production.

Hobart Bosworth, fighting veteran of the screen, has chosen "Scottish Chiefs" for his next production in which he will assume the role of Sir William Wallace, Scotland's national hero.

"Scottish Chiefs" is to be filmed on a huge scale in and about San Francisco.

Hugh Hoffman is directing his first picture at Universal City. This initial effort behind the megaphone is "The Gypsy Trail," a Northwest Mounted Police picture, starring Art Acord.

The 130,000 feet of "Under Two Flags," the Universal-Jewel production starring Priscilla Dean, has been whipped down to sixty reels, and Tod Browning and his staff are making fast progress in the final eliminations.

After four weeks spent in business conferences in New York, Louis B. Mayer has returned to his Mission road studios where an extensive program of production is now getting under way.

Rupert Julian is preparing for the production of Bret Harte's story, "M'liss," at Universal City. The star will be Gladys Walton.

Herbert Rawlinson is at work on the Universal picture, "The Rainbow Chaser," written by Bernard Hyman. Harry A. Pollard will direct.

Lambert Hillyer is directing at Eagle Rock in a small town scene of the Universal-Jewel special production starring Lon Chaney in "Bitter Sweet."

Hoot Gibson is in Arizona to film a western drama called "Misfit Turns Chaperone." It was written as one of the series of "Misfit" stories for Adventure magazine by W. H. Hamby. Nat Ross is directing. Clarkdale, Arizona will be base headquarters for the expeditionary force.

Hobart Henley is in the middle of production on "The Flirt," at Universal City, an all-star adaptation of Booth Tarkington's famous novel.

Actual construction work has begun at Universal City on the elaborate sets which will be used by Erich Von Stroheim for his forthcoming Universal-Jewel.

Lillian Rich is playing in "The Kentucky Derby," at Universal City.

Buster Keaton's next comicality will be "Day Dreams." It is said to outspeed "The Boat" as a laugh encourager.

E. Mason Hopper is going to pilot "the kid" through his next photoplay. Work on the production is scheduled to start within a fortnight.

The Thomas H. Ince studios in Culver City were closed with the conclusion of work last Saturday. The shutdown is said to be but for a brief period, and is due to overproduction. During this closed period an inventory will be taken with a view to sub-leasing the place to one of the larger producers of Hollywood. Ince is said to have five big pictures ready for immediate release.

William de Mille has begun work on his new production for Paramount, which is to be Booth Tarkington's play, "Clarence," adapted by Clara Beranger. The cast includes Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, May McAvoy, and Kathlyn Williams.

Frank Mayo's latest starring vehicle, not yet permanently titled, has been finished by Lambert Hillyer and is now in the hands of the editors.

Vehicles for all the Universal stars are being edited and a score or more of short-reel subjects are on their way to the screen as two or three weeks' output.

LINDER SIGNS WITH UNITED ARTISTS

Immediately after Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists' corporation, had affixed his signature to the contract, which will make Max Linder's latest special comedy, "The Three Must Get Theirs," a U. A. release, the French comedian closed up all his affairs in Hollywood and started for Paris.

Mr. Linder expects to remain abroad for about a year, during which time he will produce a big super-production at Nice, where he is having a new studio built. Upon finishing this special, he will return to Hollywood to resume his film-making activities.

"The Three Must Get Theirs" is a burlesque on Douglas Fairbanks' version of "The Three Musketeers."

What the comedy unit starring Roy Atwell at Universal City is doing right now is "Simply Shocking!"

Reggie Morris is directing the "scandal," which is nothing more nor less than another rollicking short reeler in which Atwell can show that he is a master in comedies that are not slapstick.

F. M. Sanford of the Sanford productions is in New York where he is closing some deals for the releasing of the series of pictures that he has been producing here in the past months. Hal Norfleet is with Mr. Sanford acting as eastern salesman for the organization. They are expected back here within the next two weeks.

John Rounan has returned from New York where he has been looking after his interests in the Snookey pictures. He reports everything is adjusted for his starting things about the first of next month. Reports from New York state that the Hodgkinson Corp. are to release six of the Chester subjects, the first already made is "The Jungle Romeo."

LASKY BUILDS NEW LAB

A modern laboratory capable of handling 1,000,000 feet of film daily and costing $500,000 will be built by Lasky at southeast corner Selma and Argyle avenues.

Each director will have a private cutting room. There will be four projection rooms. A new light system will be used in developing negatives. Special machinery and equipment has been ordered. The roof will have a cafeteria lunchroom for employees.

The laboratory will be 77x172 feet, with two stories and a basement. Edwin Bergstrom is the architect.

Goldwyn organization is to send a company to the South Seas to film "Capt. Blackbird," the romance by Carey Wilson, production of which is now being arranged. This is the third undertaking of this kind, for the Goldwyn company has already sent a company to England to make exteriors for "The Christian," and is shortly to dispatch another to the Mediterranean coast to film scenes for "Ben Hur."

The "Capt. Blackbird" company will sail from San Francisco July 7. The complete cast and a large technical crew will comprise the party. R. A. Walsh is to direct. So far only three players have been chosen for the cast, these being Antonio Moreno, George Siegmann, and William V. Mong.

The leading feminine role has not yet been filled.

Current Reviews

"GOLDEN DREAMS"

IT is a most surprising thing that Benjamin B. Hampton would put his name to such a bloody dime novel type of production as "Golden Dreams." Mrs. Hampton was one of the first producers to show the world that a picture could be entertaining and interesting as well as censorless. This fact put him on the pedestal of reliability. And now, as though to undo that good, Mr. Hampton shows murder after murder, villainy, sex appeal and just about everything that gives the reformer a new lease on life.

Had Zane Grey's "Golden Dreams" been original in story or presentation, even that would have helped it some. But it is old stuff done in the same old way. There is nothing uplifting in a story of two men trying to murder another throughout five or six reels. Nor is it refreshing to see tigers and lions devouring human beings. These are just a couple of touches of "realism."

The cast crowds the picture to death. It is so large that no one member has a chance to show his or her ability.

The photography is well done, and art direction is admirable, to say nothing of beautiful art titles.

Madame Rose Dione is positively wasted on the mediocre part given her. She is an actress to the fingertips but hasn't the slightest chance to show her talent.

Claire Adams is another to whom this film puts the melodramatic ropes. She is far too fine to race through reel after reel in serial form.

Bertram Grassby makes us sorry he is a villain and not the lead. His suave manner, never overacting, is most commendable.

Carl Gantvoort is well fitted for his popular hero part. He proves to be worth seeing in spite of being almost crowded out.

Audrey Chapman is pleasing; Ida Ward does her bit well; Frank Leigh is distinctive in character; Gordon Mullen is exceedingly good; Pomeroy Cannon adds a touch of comedy as well as Babe London; Frank Hayes, an honest-to-goodness clown and Mary Jane Irving in a "Toby Tyler" bit please with circus stunts; Walter Perkins is a typical circus manager; Harry Lorraine the villainous inn-keeper; C. B. Murphy handles animals in breath-taking fashion; William D'Orlamond and D. Mitsoris complete the enormous cast.

"THE BARNSTORMER"

THERE was no line in front of the Kinema on the opening night. Yet Charles Ray was there, directed by Charles Ray. His cast also was an impressive one, and the title of the production seemed to promise much.

Yet there were empty seats. It is sad and somewhat alarming to see the popularity of a star wane so suddenly as has happened in case of the clever Charles Ray. It truly reveals the need of good stories, and the results of poorly selected material. Add to this the misdirection of an otherwise good man, and you have the grand total result—failure.

"The Barnstormer" is the trite old story about the ambitious person who gets mixed up in the misfortunes of a 10-20-30 troupe, save that this production is more wearisome than predecessors. It was Charley Rayed to death. That star was in front of the camera so long in some scenes that the house murmured. There were some laughs, but there was nothing sincere in the working out of the production. It is not a story as told by Mr. Ray. It ends about the time one is really expecting something to happen. Jack White's comedy, "Spooks," on the same program, was immense. The Mermaids grow better and better.

"Oliver Twist" Will Have Social Preview
Sol Lesser announces that "Oliver Twist" will not be released until Jackie Coogan's present release, "Trouble," is widely circulated throughout the country.

CECIL HOLLAND

OTHER FILMS

"The Boat" (Garrrick). Buster Keaton, the sure-fire comedian, shows himself as unsteady on sea as on land. Trick boat, trick family, trick comedian.

"The Crimson Challenge" (Loew's). Dorothy Dalton chased through six reels by three bad men.

"A Fool There Was" (Mission). For people with a sense of humor. Looks like title sounds.

* * *

"Out of the Silent North" (Superba) into the heat of California summer. Mayo shows all signs of becoming the male idol of screen.

"Crossroads of New York" (Miller's). As thrilling and breathtaking as crossing Forty-second and Broadway. Central park and Riverside drive all taken in California.

"Queens of the Turf" (Clune's). England's idea of a good melodramatic play. Made with regular formula: crooked jockey, horse-race, happy ending.

* * *

"South of Suva" (Grauman's). Mary Minter looks for husband in Fiji isles, and nearly finds herself in a stew.

* * *

"The Great Alone" (Pantage's). Monroe Salisbury returns to screen on a pair of snow shoes in the middle of June. Good stuff!

"THE CRADLE BUSTER"

MAKE way!

Here comes a new one in answer to the cry for new blood in the films!

He is Glenn Hunter who now sprouts into program-feature stuff in "The Cradle Buster."

Young and with a personality all his own, Glenn is as refreshing as a cool shower in that dear Yuma, and as full of concealed laughs as a bottle of the Old Stuff in the suitcase of a prohibition agent.

The production was incited and put over by Tuttle & Waller, whoever they are, and audiences are enjoying every foot of the film wherever it is shown. It may be a little crude in the eyes of the profession, but audiences that smile or laugh throughout an entire production don't have time to be critical.

It isn't a big story, but it is 99 per cent entertainment, and that is what the people want, and what the people are going to have if they are going to consent to return to the emptying picture theaters.

Glenn Hunter is one of the new stars who is going to bring them back and, incidentally, to shove some of our juvenile stars with their flivvering productions into the background.

Come on, Glenn!

PREREVIEWS

"THE FIRE EATERS"

What a pleasant relief to see a red-blooded outdoor picture of the U. S. forest rangers' life with a red-blooded star such as Hoot (Ed) Gibson living right straight through "The Fire Eaters." This true to life sort of production has nothing that suggests fiction about it. It has the sharp contrast of the forerunners, the Northwest Mounted cut and dried stories, to set it off.

Hoot Gibson is in for a long and steady stardom if he can keep up his set mart. He has not only a pleasing personality but he does some real trooping. His riding stunts do not look like stunts and at no time does he use a double for truly dangerous work.

Louise Lorraine is a most pleasing little person. She is pretty enough to play debutantes. Instead she rides horseback up the sides of mountains and down gorges.

Reeves Easton directed the production with an understanding of human likes.

The photography with locations and scenery was marked for its beauty.

All in all a censorless and all around good production.

"TEN SECONDS"

Lee Moran is a knockout in his new Century comedy, "Ten Seconds." This fast moving clean two-reeler that will show up the general run of slipshod comedies.

Lee Moran is overtaking many of his funsters in the run for fame. He is funny without being vulgar.

Bartine Burkette, playing his support, is pretty and is becoming a good little comedienne.

Comedy kings had best look to their laurels, a newcomer is in view.

Where to Find People You Know

Lewis Stone has one of the greatest roles of his career in the all-star production of "The Dangerous Age," now being made by John M. Stahl.

Henry B. Walthall has been selected to play the principal masculine role of "The Long Chance," a Universal-Jewel special production which Jack Conway is directing. "The Long Chance" is by Peter B. Kyne and was a Universal "special feature" with Frank Keenan in the character lead.

Ralph Graves is the juvenile lead in "The Long Chance." He has attained a starring contract with D. W. Griffith.

Marjorie Daw, signed to star with another organization, will waive her starring chance for several weeks to play the leading role in "The Long Chance," a Universal-Jewel production.

William Bertram will go to the Mojave desert for gold mining scenes in "The Long Chance."

Edward Connelly will have an important part in "Page Tim O'Brien," Viola Dana's new starring picture, which Harry Beaumont is directing.

"Bull" Montana is to make twelve pictures for Metro during the coming year.

Barbara La Marr has been placed under contract by Metro. She will enact the leading feminine role in the S-L production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which Clarence Badger will direct.

Milford W. Howard, former Alabama Congressman and author, is making his debut in pictures in the Cosmopolitan Film Company's seven-reel production, "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Emile Chautard will direct "Country Love," starring Billie Dove, at Metro.

Harry Beaumont is directing "Page Tim O'Brien" at the Metro studios.

Ruth Clifford has been added to the cast of "The Dangerous Age" by the Mayer studio.

Johnnie Walker has signed with Robertson-Cole.

Adolphe Menjou has been signed to play the "Duke of Buckingham" in Geo. Fitzmaurice's picture, "To Have and to Hold."

Sydney Algier is assistant director to John M. Stahl who is directing "The Dangerous Age" at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Edward Connelly will have a part in "Page Tim O'Brien."

Emile Chautard will direct Billie Dove in "Country Love."

Louise Lorraine is to play opposite Roy Stewart in "The Radio King" at Universal City.

Don Bartley is being directed by Del-Lord, under the supervision of Jack White.

Douglas Dawson, Chester Bennett's right hand man, says that things ought to commence to hum at the United studios in about a week when Mr. Bennett starts to direct Jane Novak in "Thelma."

Snitz Edwards is helping things along at Lasky's. He is doing some eccentric things in the Al E. Greene production of the "Ghost Breaker."

Virginia Fox plays opposite Buster Keaton in "Day Dreams."

Harry Pringle is stepping high and handsome these days for he just finished with Tom Mix, and any time you work with the cowboy star you have to be up to those kind of tricks.

Werner Janssen is composing a special musical score to accompany Oliver Morosco's debut picture, "The Half-Breed."

Myrtle Stedman is the latest addition to the all-star cast of Louis B. Mayer's "The Dangerous Age." Her latest engagement was with Clara Kimball Young.

Frank Coleman is now appearing in his third picture in support of Chester Conklin, who is being directed by Erle Kenton, formerly a director of features for the Sennett organization.

Pewee Holmes took a flop on his nose the other day while riding a broncho in a Fox comedy, and if the spill gets as many laughs out of theatregoers as it got out of the company, it ought to knock 'em off their seats. Slim Summerville was directing the horse opera. And upon completing it, he starts a picture with Clyde Cook.

Edith Roberts is playing with Douglas McLean in "The Sunshine Trail" which is now under production at the Ince Studio.

Boyd Irwin will go with Jack Conway to Red Rock in the Mojave desert to film scenes for "The Long Chance."

Jack Curtis is going to the Mojave desert with the Universal-Jewel production, "The Long Chance."

Edna Murphy has the leading feminine role in the Hoot Gibson production, "Misfit Becomes Chaperone."

Mary Philbin, who will have the big feminine role in Von Stroheim's new picture, is studying the psychology of her unusual part.

Dale Fuller has refused three other offers to play in Von Stroheim's new production.

Maude George is nearing the completion of a stage engagement when she will start work in Von Stroheim's drama.

Caesar Gravina is on his way from Brazil by way of the Panama Canal. He will arrive for the opening scenes in the Universal production which will be made by Von Stroheim.

Edward Sowders, first assistant to Von Stroheim and Louis Germonprez, her personal adjutant, are interviewing the large number of applicants for leading man for Von Stroheim.

Helen Jerome Eddy holds that nothing in her past career compares with her present role in the Universal-Jewel special production, "The Flirt," which Hobart Henley directed.

Harry Myers, the star of "The Connecticut Yankee," will join Edward Laemmle, director of the Universal overseas unit, to play the lead in "Ivanhoe."

Kingsley Benedict has completed in five weeks a role in the Universal-Jewel special, "The Kentucky Derby," which he played three thousand times on the stage. The picture is adapted from the melodrama by Charles T. Dazey, "The Suburban."

Virginia Valli has been signed by Universal under a long term contract.

Jack Mower has been signed for the juvenile leading role of Lon Chaney's Universal-Jewel starring vehicle, "Bitter Sweet," William Dudley Pelley's story. Lambert Hillyer has initiated production on the special at Universal City.

Florence Lee, who recently married Teddy Hayes, erstwhile secretary and trainer for Champion Jack Dempsey, has cast her lot with the Syd Smith company at the Fox studios under the direction of Noel Smith, with Chas. Lamont assistant director.

Bud Jamison and Phil Dunham are cast with the Noel-Smith to help whoop things up with Syd Smith, aided and abetted by Charley, The Elephant, who will listen to Curley Stecker's instructions from the side lines during the filming of the scenes at the Fox studios.

Patsy Ruth Miller plays opposite Earle Williams in "Fortune's Mask."

WEST COAST SECURES A FAR NORTH FILM

Announcement is made by officials of the West Coast Theaters, Inc., that first-run exhibition rights have been secured on "Nanook of the North," produced for Revillon Freres by Robert J. Flaherty, F. R. G. S. Its story deals with life—stark and dramatic—in a barren and uncivilized land.

It was photographed entirely in the frozen North, 800 miles from civilization's outposts, where the average temperature is 35 degrees below zero. Even the film developing was done in the North, with the assistance of Eskimos.

Mr. Flaherty shows us the Eskimo, not as a freak or a curiosity, but as a superman—ill-used by Nature; a man whose whole life is a struggle for a mere existence, yet he is happy and contented.

This snowland epic of life and love will be accorded a local premiere at a near date at the Kinema Theater.

Charles Meakin has just closed with Sam Wood, where he played the District Attorney in the current picture, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," starring Gloria Swanson.

Frank Alexander, on finishing his picture with Jimmy Aubrey, decided to go fishing for a week at Bishop. On his return he expects to get busy once more.

Emmett Rice, well known in filmdom workings, has retired in favor of law work with the firm of Verge and Willson.

Maurice Flynn had a narrow escape from losing one of his eyes, when a six by six plank struck him while he was bathing in the surf down at one of the beaches.

The Ray, Chaplin, Goldwyn, United, Mayer and Fairbanks' studios all entertained the nine honor exhibitors, in Los Angeles last week as the guests of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The making of the period costumes to be worn by Norma Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret" is progressing rapidly under the direction of Walter Israel, nationally known as a designer.

Tom Forman has just finished editing "White Shoulders," the Preferred Pictures' production, in which Katherine MacDonald is starred.

Frank Lloyd, Frances Marion and Stephen Goosson comprise the research committee in Norma Talmadge's "The Voice from the Minaret."

Roy Marshall, formerly a director of motion pictures, but now the promoter of the four-round boxing bouts at the Stadium in Hollywood, seeks to become the Father of a 12-Round Boxing Bill for the State of California through the Hollywood Post of the American Legion.

Fontaine La Rue received an offer to make a personal tour with one of the feature productions that she recently worked in which is to be given its premier showing in New York city.

Bill Dyer and Al Knight were seen very quietly whispering sweet words of cheer into the ear of one Franklyn Farnum; evidently they must have been assuring the latter that with their ability and all the forces of the Phil Goldstone company he ought to be the proud possessor of a good picture.

TRAGEDY NOT IN THE SCRIPT

When "The Prisoner of Zenda" is released, Lois Lee cannot visit the theater to see herself in it.

A few weeks ago there was no livelier participant in the Girls' Studio club dances than Lois Lee.

Now she lies at Good Samaritan hospital, motionless from the hips down in a plaster-of-paris cast.

Miss Lee must undergo an operation on her spine because of a small tubercular spot. Then for two years she must be careful. No more horseback riding. Perhaps no dancing.

Her role in Rex Ingram's picture may "make her" personally, those who have seen it say. But it can't make her well.

Yet she is smiling and cheerful on her cot in the cool hospital ward.

Ralph Kettering, general representative of the big Jones, Linick and Schaefer chain of theatres of Chicago, was a recent visitor at the Louis B. Mayer studios.

Von Stroheim will start his drama in three weeks at Universal.

A group of Rotarians visited Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, yesterday and watched directors Alf Goulding, Arvid Gillstrom and Al Herman producing comedies in which Baby Peggy, Brownie the dog, and Rosie the monkey, took part.

Alexander Alt, in between working in pictures, is getting his old vaudeville act ready that he did last year with Helen Howell, and he expects to return to the "two a day" as soon as he can complete the settings and wardrobe for his act.

Caroline Rankin wrote "finis" to her work in the Jack Ford picture at the Fox studios just in time to start with the Metro.

The Universal unit filming "Perils of the Yukon," is at Truckee, Cal. Perry Vekroff and Jay Marchant, directors of the historical chapter play, took William Desmond, Laura LaPlante and twenty players to the Sierra tavern following a ten days' stop in Summit.

The Summit hotel burned, compelling the players to jump out second-story windows into frozen drifts. No one was seriously injured but a hundred handkerchiefs and a couple of doctors had to be imported at once, to say nothing of period costumes of 1867 having to be designed again.

Previous to the Summit fire, the unit was on location at Truckee, and William Desmond was severely injured when thrown into the Truckee River by a sliding cliff. Laura LaPlante narrowly escaped death.

COPYRIGHT PROTECTION IN GERMANY

The Associated Press reports the following from Berlin:

"The Reichstag passed a bill today according the same copyright protection to American authors as is accorded to Germans by the United States.

"The new law accords protection for works of literature, art and photography on the same basis as is designated in the law of Jan. 15, 1892, and is retroactive in application to the period between Aug. 1, 1914, and July 2, 1922, although it does not apply to the rights of publication, circulation and duplication of any American product which might have been obtained by a third party previous to Dec. 18, 1919."—From Film Daily.

Leatrice Joy was painfully burned when she accidentally overturned a pot of boiling grease, during a scene which was being shot at a hospital. Treatment was instantaneous, but the picture is being held up.

Jack Warner and Harry Rapf are in New York conferring with the other Warner brothers upon a picture which they will start immediately upon their return to Hollywood.

Louis Burston went to New York to preview his picture, "Forget-me-not," starring Gareth Hughes and Bessie Love.

Harry Depp returned from the East after undergoing a severe operation. He formerly starred in Fox productions with Larry Semon. He has fully recovered and expects to take up his picture work again.

L. C. Bickel, manager of the Metro Exchange in Dallas, Texas, visited the Metro studios in Hollywood recently.

Laurette Taylor, who is to star in the Metro production of "Peg O' My Heart," is resting at East Hampton. She expects to arrive in Hollywood July 1st.

Jackie Coogan is playing host to the nine "dollar-a-week" men that Associated First National Pictures, Inc., selected as best putting over First National Week.

Max Mogi has finished his contract with the Century company where he has been playing in a series of eight two-reel comedies.

Sam Mogi, assistant cameraman to George Benoit in "Omar the Tentmaker," has written a story which Richard Walton Tully is considering making into a film. William and Max Mogi adapted the story to the screen.

RE: THAT BILL HART FILM

CULVER CITY, June 19.—Editor Camera! Dear Sir:

I saw a motion picture the other day in which a plumber was represented as a very bad man. I am sure that plumbers have in some way offended motion picture producers, and that they are taking this means of getting even.

Dr. Briegleb, please note.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH A. JACKSON.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

William S. Hart is to work at Lasky's about the first of October. He will work on an arrangement similar to Will Rogers' when he was at that studio.

Cecil B. De Mille staged a New York snow scene with Thomas Meighan, that made some of the old timers actually believe they were living the old days "over again." The Argyle lot was converted to resemble First Avenue, New York, with the elevated road and everything.

Joseph Swickard returned from Chicago where he has been making personal appearances with "The Four Horseman of the Apocalypse."

Chuck Riesner has once more joined Charles Chaplin. This time his youngster also plays a part with the famous funster.

Harry Cohn, Monty Banks, and Norman Taurog are speeding along on the Overland Limited for New York city, where they expect to close some big deals that will affect comedy row hereabouts.

Frank Keenan may soon be on the Louis B. Mayer pay roll. Which listens good for all concerned.

Frank Beal, I'm told, is considering making a feature picture on the R-C lot, assisted by his son, Scott M. Beal.

Lois Weber will probably start a half million dollar production at her plant inside of the next sixty days.

Harry Carey started his second picture with Val Paul directing. William Elmer and Bill (Gettlinger) Steele are in the cast.

Eleanor Lynn is once more working for the Jack White comedies. This makes the second series that producer has made with the fair Eleanor acting the role of the comedian's charmer.

Bobby Dunn no more than finished one picture than Eddie Lyons, his boss, told Bobby to get his director, Eugene De Rue, and start on another subject. Bobby believes in obeying orders and did as he was told.

Joe Ryan has some of our leading producers nibbling on the bait he is offering them to feature him. Swim out, boys, you're rocking the boat, if you miss on this one.

Hap Depew has photographed Al St. John in so many comedies that he has stopped counting them. When Al gets started shooting he never let's a cameraman come up for air.

Jack Duffey and Cliff Bowles claim credit for putting over a Universal comedy lately and expect the powers that be in New York city to wire general manager Thalberg, "send us some more like it." Which would mean that the pair would return to the Big U and make more such subjects.

William Duncan returned from the springs where he has been boiling out a bruised arm he acquired in a free for all fight in his last picture. If looks count for anything, William is fit for working right now.

Jimmy Adams has cast his lot with the Jack White company at the United studios.

Harry Depp has returned to the Southland after quite an absence and reports that he is going in for drama. Heretofore he was appearing in comedies.

Sidney De Albrook is working with the Buck Jones company at the Fox studios. Ride 'em, cowboy Sid! What say yee?

Laura La Varnie has just finished a part in Buster Keaton's "The Electric House."

Noble Johnson shipped his first feature production to New York and has contracts calling for five more via the five-reel route, which means, Noble can be one busy hombre.

Joe Bonner finished an engagement with Ward Lascelle, who directed "Affinities" at the Thos. H. Ince studios.

Arvid Gildstrom held court the other day at the Century studios, the prisoner at the bar was an artist who answers to the cognomen of Lee Moran. He was found guilty of making comedies that are to be laughed at. The scenes were said to be funny even to those in the courtroom.

Dorothy De Vore was dressed in the cutest jockey suit the other day, which means that when Al Christie returns she will be at all set and ready for that racing story that was on tap before he left for Europe.

George Fields is playing in the present Rodolph Valentino picture at the Famous Players-Lasky studios. Which means that a perfectly good villain is disporting his wares.

Lige Conley is still the leading player that Mr. White writes his gags for, and directs when in the mood.

Nelson McDowell is working at the United studios in one of those blood and thunder plays, which accounts for the reason that Nelson looks so rough and ready to take a hand in anything from a poker game to a free for all fight.

William Horsley is removing the big rubber bands off of his last million, so that he can erect a concrete fire wall and dark stage on his property to protect the family bank roll that is tied up in the laboratories next door.

Dave Allen, riding about in his red automobile, travels so fast from studio to studio, that some of the towns' best people think he is the fire chief answering an alarm, and give him the right of way.

Zion Meyers carries a two-bit piece about with him that you couldn't buy for any amount. It is one of the quarters his mother had in her purse when she had a near accident at a local studio, the other when her silver mesh bag came in contact with an electric switch and almost electrocuted her. Hence the value of the pocket piece that Zion now carries in his pocket.

Walter Hiers stepped out of his car the other day made up ready for work. Some Shriners standing by didn't recognize him at first. When the visitors realized who he was, they shouted a "Hello, Walter!", which went unanswered for he was far out of hearing distance, much to the disappointment of the visitors who happened to be from his home state.

Vera White is a busy lady these days; she no more than gets through at one studio, and one finds her busy some place else. It's awful, Vera, to be popular, 'tain't it?

Alf Goulding seems to have struck the happy medium of what the Centuryites want to see Baby Peggy Jean in, for he and the starlet get along like brother and sister, and each thinks the other is great. This out of the mouth of a child ain't so bad, what sayest thou, Brother Alf?

Bobby Vernon wants a prescription on how to sell a car. If any good salesman knows a new angle or line of talk, please, forward to Robert at the Christie studios, where he has a extra car that he just can't get rid of, no matter how hard he talks.

Roscoe Karnes pulled the latest wheeze: "I'm the idle of Hollywood for I have been idle for almost a year." Not so bad, Roscoe, even if Fred Stanton did get away with, "I'm in Escrow." Officer, find the cop who let these fellows run loose!

Joseph Dowling finished last Saturday with Lloyd Ingraham at the Fine Arts studios working until wee hours in the morning so Harry Todd could get through and join the King Vidor company at Catalina. How about some of the young fellows following in the footsteps of Uncle Joe, and try and help the other chap?

Vin Moore is directing some animal and kid comedies over at a Mission Road studio, in between drawing his breath in anticipation of starting a serial for a newly formed organization.

The Screen Writers' Forum - Conducted by William E. Wing

A LA POMPADOUR

WHEN some of us were mere youths with bare feet and a toad in the pocket for dear teacher, the male persuasion was wont to cut its hair medium, and brush it straight back, bringing about that startled appearance effect known as the pompadour. The name, as we understand it, was derived from the word pompano, another kind of fish.

Later, about the period A. B. (after bustles), the motion picture ceased to devote its feverish attention to the Yonkers fire brigade, marching school children and views of the Mississippi in activity, in order to test out the experiment of telling a connected story upon the screen.

After film stories had graduated from the primary class, they gradually drifted into theme, but also subconsciously established a mathematical set of rules by which pictures must be made to be the genuine, blown-in-the-bottle proposition.

Every now and then an 1885 pompadour drifts into view in these days. Also the public portrudes an optic as old Dobbin, attached to a rubber-tired carriage, passes.

Babies cry and cling to mother. Little children scamper into their own yards, and timid adults grow nervous.

Motion pictures, created according to the ancient rules of the age when "A Bird in a Gilded Cage" was the song rage, and grandfather was a juvenile, continue to flow out upon the screen in time to the measured beat of precedent.

Are the people startled? Do they even shy?

No. Instead they sleep as sweetly as babes, or bethink themselves of something important up street, and stroll out, forgetting entirely to demand their money back.

It is about time to cut the aged pompadour, and a few are doing it.

But a startled Old Guard is holding up its hands in holy horror and protest.

What? No villain in the production; no sex; nobody going wrong? Heavens! Rules 1, 7 and 11 absolutely violated!

A cry of mortal anguish as the physical punch occurs in the second or third reel. Yet, on Page 23-for-you it distinctly says: "The punch must come just before the final fadeout."

Again a story goes out and gets the money without the interference of an insipid young couple falling in love at first sight and mooning throughout an otherwise strong production. Why, that is an insult to the man who wrote the book of rules, regulations, by-laws and statutes.

But the proposition to plaster down the ancient pompadour, rent the old shay to the movies, and treat all such antiquated things lightly, does not seem to apply to the Old Guard's ideas regarding film productions.

The New Guard look upon the matter differently. "The Four Horsemen" violated about everything. "Come On Over" dared to air individuality instead of bending the knee; Hon. Mickey tossed three odd tales into a single production and got away with it. Others have starved mother, father and even grandparents without sinking the ship.

Verily, someone is out to cut the antiquated film pompadour. Writers who sport stiff backbones might try a hack or two.

Writing up to a market with lowered head, is a mighty poor occupation.

UNCLE CARL SAYS:

Between th' cradle snatchers an' th' animal trainers, th' movies is comin' into their own ag'in; ain't it?

"OH SAY, CAN YOU SEE—"

T occurs to us that Yankee Doodle might well be called in to solve some mighty serious production menaces. He is a fine chap and, for many years, has been engaged in the business of keeping poor stage shows afloat.

If necessary the anxious studio management might place a neat, little American flag in the trusty right hand of certain directors. With that emblem in such close proximity, a regular fellow would have some difficulty in adjusting his mind to scenes which are suggestive, of situations which smack of the smutty, and of stories which flaunt immorality.

The psychology of the thing is perfect. It would be a perverted mind indeed that could conjure up offensive, off-colored mental pictures while the band was playing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Anxious Seat

V. C., EDGAR, Mont., June 5.—I have finally succeeded in selling a story. It was a comedy, and the ——— studio sent me a check for $25 for it. Was that a fair price?

The sum of $25 is too much for many comedies we see upon the screen, but yours probably had some laughs in it. If so it was worth several times the amount you received. But, as we stated previously, comedy producers set such a low valuation upon acceptable stories that it does not pay to cater to that market. Try five-reel comedy-drama.

WHITTIER COLLEGE: When you ask if it is possible to sell a Canadian woodland story without "a dog with a fatal memory" in it, we fear you are spoofin. Perhaps you are merely sore. It sure is as difficult to suit them with one of those timberland scenarios as any other kind.

R. U. E.—If, as you say, you are one of many who would like to see Mr. Hays come right out and declare himself, you might try putting on a production which raps the republican party.

BLUEMONA SPECIAL: Th' movies ain't all that is bein' regulated here. Our eagle-eyed constabulary is busy Mondays seein' that fam'lies don't hang ALL the fambly wash out on the line.

The first five reels are the hardest.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce thought that Paris would not go as fast as Hollywood.

A HITCHING POST

WHILE studios are groping around in the darkened recesses of the mind, to discover what they really want, and writers are waiting with baited breath for the delayed verdict, the scenarist might employ his time in trying out a formula which, with the aid of heaven and new blood, is coming into general use some time, some day.

While endeavoring to hitch the old wagon to a star, we might practice on a hitching post.

The name of a very good one is "wholesomness."

The bird "wholesome" is a sturdy rascal. One cannot dodge the responsibility it spells. Tied to that steadfast object in nudging the old brain for a theme, in developing the cute little idea into something big, and in steering actors through the unfoldment in vision, one cannot stray.

The hitching post is there, and thought is securely tied to it.

Yet one never needs to travel in a confined circle. That is the peculiar part of old Wholesome. The writer may wander afar in vistas of fancy and the loyal hitching post will trot right along, faithful to its charge and as true to its companion, Clean Plot, as a horny-handed son of toil to his flivver.

Wholesome! Man! Woman! How good it sounds! And it is inspiration in itself. It does not lie back in the traces, demanding to be dragged along.

No; it leads! And, as it leads, it inspires. Red-blooded story? Yes, it permits that. Drama and even melodrama? Yea also. Old Wholesome is no goody-goody, with shackles for the imagination. Instead, the hitching post urges one on as to the crack of a whip.

The proof is in the reading. What is given first-page position in our better classes of magazines?

Nothing less than wholesome adventure. The story of achievement also ranks high. Old Wholesome often demands the moral note, but it is not so prominent as to offend even the gent in the sporty clothes.

Is Old Wholesome worth trying? Hitch to him once and maybe you can inspire the editor, instead of waiting for his verdict.

EDITOR: "Give us a story that can be made cheaply, but which will look a Million dollars."

WRITER: "Why not film 'King Solomon's Mines' inside the U. S. treasury building?"

Why not write a story with a sheik and lots of sand in it?

Bedroom sets should be getting cheap in the second-hand market.

They are even using bear skin in the animal stuff.

The fellow who said he would "rather write than be president," never went up against a studio manager.

If eager producers don't quit running those Sheiks ragged in the desert sands, we're going to hear bad news from the Prevention of Cruelty to Arabs mighty soon.

Joe Murphy's Sensible Nonsense

Stars like to visit but Eddie Barry thinks he will wait until 1924 before seeing Mars as he will save 7,000,000 miles of the walk.

Carmel Myers caught her purse on the main switch of the powerful light circuit the other day with the result that the coins were melted to one lump. Oh! What a shock!

The Court house clock has had its face and hands washed and has a good make-up on. Let's hope it keeps up with the times.

IT IS MORE THAN LIKELY—

That sardines are lucky they do not have to ride on the Los Angeles street cars. They are crowded to be sure, but they have oil on them so they can slip.

That the anxiety to find out somebody else's business has made the radio very popular.

That Clarence Klester and Red Young will cut out shooting pennies and get to work cutting Wesley Barry's picture "Rags to Riches" when they learn the boss (Jack Warner) is coming back from New York.

That Alf Goulding is using a step ladder to direct his human skyscraper in "Jack and the Bean Stalk." He is only 7 feet 7, and still growing.

That the man who invented the one-man cars got his ideas from a dice box.

Jack O'Brien has decided to make a dramatic story instead of the Biblical as announced. Jack sent his assistant, Jim Gormly, to get the Bible, but Jim did not know what it looked like so brought the first book he found to demonstrate his speed.

Jack threw up his hands and used the book.

Dear Readers:

In answer to your questions will answer as short and as snappy as possible.

An All Star Cast is a lot of actors who know more than the director.

An ingenue, is sometimes the grandmother of the juvenile, and he is the father of the leading lady.

Rex Thorpe is raising the roof off the Balboa studio. Easy, Rex, Long Beach is noted for its soft pedal stuff.

Helen Darling: "Did you say Neal Burns?"
Yes, cigarettes.

By the way, how many corporations have been arrested for leaving auto-wrecking ditches across our crowded boulevards?

Contemporary Criticisms

"OVER THE BORDER" (Paramount)

"Over the Border" sets a standard for other producers to aim at. To date it is the finest 'snow-set' picture we have ever seen—barring none. The story is worked out in about three or four feet of snow—real, honest to goodness stuff. There's a blizzard in this picture that is the acme of realism. The entire feature is a photographic gem, some of the night shots being especially fine.

"Then comes the excellent cast. Betty Compson and Tom Moore lead it, and both are good, although Betty does not get much chance to display her real ability. Tom's smile is there and that helps any picture. J. Farrell MacDonald . . . contributes a fine bit of characterization as does Casson Ferguson . . . and Jean deBriac.

"The story is one of action and Penrhyn Stanlaws has kept it moving smoothly. In spite of its length, one finds that the interest does not lag for a moment."

—Motion Picture News.

"This picture has an interesting story presented with due regard to its dramatic values and provides good entertainment.

"Penrhyn Stanlaws deserves credit for the manner in which he has handled this story, bringing out the points, and in holding the suspense in the crucial moments. The production is portrayed by a thoroughly competent cast who are all seen in congenial roles, and the work of the two stars is thoroughly satisfactory."

—Moving Picture World.

"The story is from Sir Gilbert Parker's 'She of the Purple Chevron' and serves as a very appropriate vehicle for Tom Moore and Betty Compson.

"Over the Border" offers a pleasing entertainment and there is plenty of action and several worthy dramatic moments.

"Only one feature of Director Stanlaw's work which may be found fault with is excess footage. . . . Cutting would help a whole lot."

—The Film Daily.

"THE FIVE DOLLAR BABY" (Metro)

"When the season's best contributions are compiled at the end of the year Metro's picture, 'The Five Dollar Baby,' adapted from a story by Irvin Cobb, directed by Harry Beaumont and starring Viola Dana, will be ranked among the winners. . . . The director has certainly put forth an opus which carries his individual touches all over it.

"Viola Dana will have to share honors with Ralph Lewis, who in the role of the pawnbroker, contributes one of the finest character sketches ever shown on the screen.

"The subtitles are gems of native wit, shrewdness and observation.

"If there is any flaw it may be found in certain scenes which are held too long."

—Motion Picture News.

"Aside from the fact that director Beaumont has done all that he should to provide a satisfactory production, it is really Irvin Cobb's story that makes the outstanding impression.

"It is a picture that contains genuine audience appeal, a mixture of humor and pathos.

"The star gives another of her delightful performances and they'll be in love with her every minute she's on the screen. . . . Individual touches throughout make the feature a winner.

"Ralph Lewis deserves mention for his splendid characterization and for that matter, everyone in the cast does very fine work, including Otto Hoffman and John Harron."

—The Film Daily.

"DOMESTIC RELATIONS" (First National)

"As a portrait of Katherine MacDonald, 'Domestic Relations' has higher artistic merit than many of her recent offerings because her performance strikes a deeper note of sincerity. The picture considered as a whole, is one of those smooth running productions that has a certain pictorial glamour surrounding a conventional plot.

"The cast has been chosen with discrimination and a vivid touch is accomplished by Barbara La Marr in a drab role. The photography is splendid."

—Moving Picture World.

"Katherine MacDonald has another neglected wife theme in her latest production, 'Domestic Relations,' a picture that is uninspiring and a dull entertainment. The star and a capable supporting company works hard to make it interesting, but the situations are too unconvincing and hackneyed to hold the attention.

"There are really two stories, each containing identical situations so that repetition for one thing makes it slow-moving and tedious. . . . The star is pleasing and pretty and is quite a decoration to the picture at all times. Wm. P. Carleton does good work as the judge, and George Fisher is one of those silly, amorous portrait artists. Frank Leigh and Barbara LaMar as the other couple give satisfactory performances. The sub-titles are poor and at times foolish and mushy."

—The Film Daily.

"THE WOMAN WHO WALKED ALONE" (Paramount)

"This is a big production. . . . Incidentally it's one of the best starring vehicles Dorothy Dalton has ever had. . . . Dorothy does some of the best work of her career.

"Patrons are given some fine thrills, some fine character types, especially those contributed by Miss Van Buren, Charles Ogle, and Maurice B. Flynn. Here also Mr. Sills does his best work. . . . While the action in the English part of the story is interesting, that which transpires in Africa keeps one on the edge of the seats.

"George Melford should be given credit for contributing his genius, which has made this offering a directorial masterpiece. To Bert Glennon should go praise for fine photographic work, while Will M. Ritchey has put John Colton's story, 'The Cat That Walked Alone,' into a scenario that runs along smoothly."

—Motion Picture News.

"Melford has spared neither expense nor effort to make the atmosphere realistic and agreeable to the eye. Particularly pretty exteriors have been selected for backgrounds and excellent photography enhances the beauty of them in every case.

"Everyone will like Dorothy Dalton's work in this. . . . In the last half of the picture especially, she is very likeable. Milton Sills, playing opposite, is a good hero and Mabel Van Buren makes the small part of the Boer farmer's wife stand out."

—The Film Daily.

"The 'Woman Who Walked Alone' is a vital film play constructed, directed and acted with keen intelligence. Everything has been done with genuine technique.

"The story, which is unfolded in excellent continuity, although the plot at first is somewhat involved, is packed with drama.

"An unusually strong cast of well-known players has been assembled and the personality which these performers radiate does much to raise 'The Woman Who Walked Alone' to a plane that is higher than the average. . . .

"Miss Dalton has seldom if ever done better work."

—Moving Picture World.

"ROUGH SHOD" (Fox)

"Its most distinguished feature is the cast. . . . The personality contributing is a strong prop to the picture as can be imagined from the names of Maurice Flynn, Ruth Renick and Helen Ferguson in addition to that of the star.

"Charles Jones is an honest hero with perhaps an easier role than usual. He is assisted by two such charming actresses that there is little or no favoritism as to which one he chooses. Maurice Flynn gives a typically smooth performance."

—Moving Picture World.

"The story doesn't differ greatly from the usual run of westerns—but all in all it makes for a good, live entertainment.

—The Film Daily.

GOLDSTONE PRODUCTION PLANS

Goldstone has just completed his first series of six Richard Talmadge productions and for the coming season will make eight specials with this coming star.

Franklyn Farnum will shortly complete his first series of six comedy drama westerns for this season's market. These pictures are a new type of westerns and should be in keeping with Goldstone's idea of something different.

Goldstone expects to announce a new series featuring an all-star cast.

William Abramson has left the Hollywood offices of the Phil Goldstone productions to make a country-wide trip in the interests of the Richard Talmadge and Franklyn Farnum productions.

Actor Gives Technical Aid in Kimberly Film

Besides playing the part of an English general, Richard Pennell is giving valuable advice, in a technical way, on "Pink Gods," the story of the Kimberly diamond mines, which is now being made by Penrhyn Stanlaws, featuring Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood.

WHAT'S WHAT ON THE SENNETT LOT

The carpenters and electricians are busy constructing sets and mountings for light effects for the Mack Sennett-Billy Bevan comedy now in production, to be in readiness for the jungle monarchs, fifteen lions and tigers which Roy Del Ruth has engaged from a traveling circus to appear in "When Summer Comes."

After an absence of almost two years from Mack Sennett Comedies, Louise Fazenda is giving vent to her happiness at being back again with her old friends, through the medium of work.

Robert Ensminger, director, slipped out of town with a Miss Sullivan, nonprofessional, and was married in Riverside last Saturday. The couple left for Vancouver, B. C., and from there will go to Winnipeg.

Corinne Griffith is to star in a Vitagraph production called "One Stolen Night."

Earle Williams recently completed a Vitagraph picture entitled "Fortune Mask." It was the story known to the people on the lot as "Dickey."

Roland Asher has finished assisting Norman Taurog in making two-reel films at the Century plant.

After devoting five full weeks to almost unbelievable strenuousness in re-filming "Tess of the Storm Country" in a complete fishermen's village she had built on Chatsworth Lake, thirty miles from Los Angeles, Mary Pickford has taken her company into the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios at Hollywood, where most of the remaining scenes of this screen classic will be made.

Grace Darmond is under the direction of Leslie Peacocke in "The Wheel of Fortune" at the Fine Arts Studio.

Coffin productions, featuring Tully Marshall and Gale Henry in comedies, has taken office space at Cosmoart. Booth Mitchell is director.

Larry Trimble and Jane Murfin are producing another dog story at Cosmoart.

"The Ghost of the Rancho," starring Bryant Washburn, is the forthcoming Pathe Playlet which has been scheduled for release by Pathe the week of July 2nd. The production has been re-edited from a former feature success which was adapted from the story by Jack Cunningham. It is described as a romance of Arizona, filled with thrills, comedy and mystery. Bryant Washburn is assisted in the offering by Rhea Mitchell and Joseph J. Dowling, while the picture was directed by William Worthington.

Helen Dale, famous screen bathing beauty, is now supporting Bobbie Dunn in a series of two-reel comedies being filmed at the Berwill Studio.

Shirley Mason, Fox star, is putting away the grease paint this week, and will take a vacation trip to Del Mar, accompanied by her husband, Bernard Durning, Fox director. She will start work on a new feature shortly.

"Joie," the little monkey that has brought so many laughs in the Educational-Campbell Comedies in the last year, is dead. "Joie" got wet in a heavy rain, caught cold and died.

This intelligent little monkey attracted a great deal of attention through his work in "The Four Horsemen" before the first of the Campbell Comedies was made. The current release of this series in which "Joie" appears is "A False Alarm," and the next will be "Circus Days."

Having just returned from a personal appearance tour, during which she met flocks of governors and mayors and suchlike dignitaries, Miss Dupont star of Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," is with us once more.

It was as an added attraction to the Von Stroheim production that Miss Dupont has been traveling with the picture during the past four months. She appeared in a little monologue act, and reports that she had a perfectly wonderful time.

Walter McGrail has finished his part in the latest King Baggot production and has left for the mountains to worry some more fish.

Arthur Jasmine, having completed the part of the Fox in "The Son of the Wolf," with Edith Roberts, has been cast for the part of one of the disciples in the Pilgrimage Play.

Miss Frederick is at her old home in Ogdensburg, N. Y., with her mother, following a slight operation in a New York hospital. Her husband, Dr. Charles Rutherford, will join her later.

Miss Frederick will recuperate, and will then take up her stage work.

George Webster left last week with Tom Mix for a two weeks' stay in Phoenix, Arizona.

Bill Thompson, who has been directing some sacred pictures with a modernized version, has left for New York to sign contracts with a new releasing unit who will handle his future products.

Ralph H. Dixon expects to finish the reconstruction of the "American Torreador" about June 17. He is with the Dixon McNitt Schneider company.

GAUMONT BUYS "LITTLE MINISTER"

Gaumont has purchased United Kingdom rights of "The Little Minister," starring Betty Compson.

John Harroff has again signed a Metro contract and will appear with Viola Dana in "Page Tim O'Brien."

Cullen Landis has joined Metro to appear opposite Viola Dana in "Page Tim O'Brien." This will be Mr. Landis' second picture with Metro.

Wanda Hawley has the feminine lead in "The Young Rajah," with Philip Rosen directing.

Harry Myers will play a part in "Ivanhoe."

May Wallace will play a character role in "Gimme," the next Goldwyn production.

Lila Lee will star in the Lasky picture "Ebb Tide."

James Kirkwood will play in "Ebb Tide" under direction of George Melford.

Virginia Valli is playing in Jack London's story, "The Abysmal Brute," which is being made by Universal.

"Pep" Harry Parizer is now at work on his own original comedy id'ias, at the Kel-Pine Studios.

E. H. Christ has been appointed chief engineer at Universal City.

Niles Welch is supporting Wesley Barry in "Rags to Riches."

Russell Simpson is working with Wesley Barry in "Rags to Riches."

Mrs. Minna Ferry Redman is working in "Rags to Riches," the new Wesley Barry picture.

Louise Fazenda will renew her screen acquaintances through the medium of "Bow-Wow."

Jack O'Brien is casting for a picture that he will produce at the Hollywood studios. Dal Clawson is the cinematographer.

Harry McPherson has started as production manager of the Malabee productions, which combination comprises the star director, Leo Moloney, and the well known scenario writer, Ford Beebe. This company has started the first of a series of 26 two-reel western films.

Douglas Fairbanks has been personally reporting the proceedings of the thirteenth annual convention of the International Rotary to the world over the radiophone. Doug's verbal reports have been relayed by various broadcasting stations so they have extended from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard and from the Gulf of Mexico to Medicine Hat and thence to many foreign lands.

William Kenton, of the popular Harlequin Players, will portray an important role in "The Bishop of the Ozarks," the Cosmopolitan Film Co.'s big feature, being produced at the Fine Arts Studio under the direction of Finis Fox. Mr. Kenton has had a varied and extensive stage career. His latest picture was with Goldwyn in "Poverty and Riches."

THE MAN ON THE COVER

Jack Cunningham, one of the staff writers at Lasky's, is a "well and favorably known" citizen of our motion picture community, as he would say it himself in his snappy little publication, "The Script." He is one of the old timers in the business of creating and producing motion pictures, although not old in point of years.

Some time ago, when it was decided that some feature of community life was needed to knit factors in the writing end of the profession more closely, Frank E. Woods, president of the Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America, picked on Cunningham to run a paper for the Guild and Writers' Club. Cunningham accepted the task and then made his suggestions as to the policy of the new paper.

He proposed to imagine the writers and their families as a little community of some four or five hundred souls—then to run their newspaper as a country editor would conduct a little weekly in a town of that size. The results have been most satisfactory and the influence of "The Script" has been gaining steadily week by week.

At the present time the subscription list of "The Script" includes every name of importance in America letters. They all read the little paper and many of them contribute to its columns.

Mr. Cunningham's principal employment in life, however, is writing for the various stars and directors at "Laskyville" as he designates the Lasky studio. He recently adapted "The Call of the North" for Jack Holt, "Beyond the Rocks" for Gloria Swanson and "The Ghost Breaker" for Wallace Reid and Lila Lee. At present he has on his desk stories in preparation for Betty Compson, Bebe Daniels and Mary Miles Minter.

Previous to joining Frank Wood's staff at Lasky's, Cunningham was employed by Universal, Triangle, Pathe, Robert Brunton, Bessie Barriscale productions, Sessue Hayakawa productions, H. L. Frothingham, Robertson-Cole and a number of independent producers. In all, something like seventy-five released feature length subjects are down to his credit on the records of the industry.

Story By

J. G. Hawks and Bess Meredyth adapted "The Dangerous Age" to the screen.

George Randolph Chester is story supervisor at Universal and works in conjunction with Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor. Chester is doing some active scenario work at Universal City. He prepared the continuity of "Top O' the Morning."

Lloyd E. Sheldon has been engaged by Metro to prepare the continuity for his new story, "East of Suez," which will be Billie Dove's second Metro starring picture.

Charles Felton Pidgin is the author of the new Metro production, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Bernard McConville adapted it to the screen.

Congressman Howard wrote the story of "The Bishop of the Ozarks," a Finis Fox production.

Lois Zellner has finished the continuity for "Rich Men's Wives," a Louis Gasnier special now in production at the Mayer studios.

"Money, Money Money" Katherine MacDonald's next starring vehicle, is the work of Larry Evans, widely known as a novelist and magazine writer. The story will appear serially in a well known magazine simultaneously with the release of the picture through First National.

W. D. Hoffman, M. P. editor of the Oakland Tribune, won a prize for "The Paths of Glory" in the recent Goldwyn contest.

William Beaudine, in between receiving offers to direct dramatic productions instead of comedies, has written a couple of laugh producing stories which he expects to put on for the Christie studios.

Bernard McConville adapted "Quincy Adams Sawyer" for the screen.

Mrs. Talmadge has written a book under the title of "The Life Story of The Three Talmadges," by Margaret Talmadge. The first edition will be 20,000 copies, and so much interest has been shown in this book, that the publishers are confident that a second and third edition will follow closely upon the heels of the first. It will be attractively illustrated with thirty hitherto unpublished photographs of the Talmadge and Keaton families, including the first photograph of Buster Keaton, Jr. There is also an amusing enlargement of the three Talmadge sisters from an old tintype showing them still in baby dresses.

The editorial department at Universal is paying close attention to "The Kentucky Derby," for half of it is now in their hands, and the film shot in Kentucky is particularly beautiful. King Baggot is directing.

F. S. Mattesson, who wrote and directed the Pete Morrisson feature for the Sanford Productions, received an excellent report from headquarters in New York city anent this subject, and expects to sign some profitable contracts on the strength of his latest efforts.

Julia Crawford Ivers, well known scenario writer, has returned to the Lasky studio. She has just returned from a trip to Honolulu where she has been resting during the past few months. No announcement is made of what her first work will be.

CHANGE IN TITLE

"Afraid to Fight," Frank Mayo's unique Universal starring vehicle written for him by Leet Renick Brown, has been re-titled, "A Real Man's Love."

Here is a title to which the blue ribbon might as well be passed at once: "The House of a Thousand Trembles." It is the caption for the latest comedy effort of Roy Atwell at Universal City, directed by Reggie Morris. "The House of a Thousand Trembles" hits the shiver spot much harder than the original name, "Caesar's Ghost."

"Homemade Movies" will be the title of the next Ben Turpin two-reel special, being produced by Mack Sennett Comedies, for First National release, instead of "The Frozen Trail," the title originally affixed to the story. This change was decided upon following a conference between producer and director.

SYD SMITH

Under the title, "Bow Wow," Mack Sennett will shortly release through the Associated First National, one of the cleverest two-reel comedies ever presented. This new picture, being directed by Fred Jackman, features Louise Fazenda, little John Henry, Jr. and that almost human canine, Teddy.

The name of Douglas Fairbanks is to be part of the title of his new picture which will be known as "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." This is designed to protect the new production from encroachment by an old picture.

Carl Laemmle is the inspiration behind the "Universal City News," an eighteen-page magazine devoted to Universal City which has just been distributed at the big studio and is in the mails to editors throughout the country. The magazine is an innovation in organization publications. The staff includes Malcolm S. Boylan, managing editor; Arthur Q. Hagerman, city editor; M. B. Dickson, advertising manager and Max Cohen, art editor. An editorial advisory board includes Irving G. Thalberg, Julius Bernheim, George Randolph Chester, E. S. Moffat, W. F. Willis, Virginia Starck and Ray van Alstyne.

"The Stuttered Marriage Vow" ought to be a good title for some of them.

Editor Camera!

Perhaps this is a good time to say an honestly-inspired word to Camera! In my writing attempts I seem to find it the most useful of all the motion-picture publications--and I subscribe to six.

I also want to say a word about the article of William Wing in the issue of June 3. I think his layout of matters is remarkably well sustained. His page was most interesting. I shall look forward to his opinions on things with interest.

"YE SHALL THINK AS I THINK"

NEWS associations reporting the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in Des Moines overlooked two rather important things.

1. The ministerial body unanimously agreed to call upon churchgoers to refrain from attending any theater that showed upon its screen a picture considered suggestive.

2. It instructed its board of temperance and moral welfare to launch immediately a movement to unite all reform agencies in a demand of congress for pre-production censorship of motion pictures.

* * *

In one breath these men agreed to exercise their American right individually to select what each person considers right or to discard what each considers wrong.

In the next breath they agreed to place a federal check on free expression of ideas.

* * *

"RESOLVED: That the general assembly call upon the constituency of our churches to refrain from attendance upon any theater which permits upon its screen the presentation of pictures that are suggestive and unclean."

Thus read the first resolution, a constructive action that thinking men and women of motion pictures have been endeavoring to persuade the screen's moral critics to take for months—nay, years.

It is the only way to drive out of business the small group of outlaws and irresponsibles that have given the motion picture industry a black eye.

It is the only American way to control free speech, whether it be speech by screen, press or pulpit.

However, in a strange spirit of inconsistency, the good pastors faced squarely about.

"The general assembly hereby instructs its board of temperance and moral welfare to inaugurate a movement which will seek to unite all the moral agencies of America in a concerted request of congress that legislation be enacted such as will make mandatory production of pictures in accordance with certain well defined moral standards. This legislation to be applied at the point of production, that is, before a picture is made."

Let's go on record right here:

The people of motion pictures want better pictures. They always have wanted them and always have worked for them. As it is unlikely, on this mundane planet, that perfection in anything will ever be attained, we probably always will want better pictures—and will strive for them.

We want better pictures just as we would like better sermons, better books, better art, better humans.

We're all working for better things—directors, for better pictures; pastors, for better sermons. Let's not sling mud at one another because actual advance doesn't reach our optimistic goal.

"Certain broad ethical and moral lines, in which all good people believe, can be defined by the government," one reformer told the assembled Presbyterians.

The churchmen adopted the resolution without questioning whether one good person might not differ with another as to even "broad ethical and moral lines." Nor did they trouble to discuss what the qualifying definition of "good people" should be. Many Presbyterians are good people, but, probably admittedly, not the only good people.

* * *

Our respected friends overlook inconsistencies between their resolution to exercise individual boycotts on whatever displeases them, and their resolution to exclude all other persons from viewing the same thing.

Instead they lay the foundation for what is intended to be a repetition of the prohibition drive. Here are Dr. Gustav A. Briegleb's own words before the Presbyterian general assembly:

"If you adopt the program suggested it will mean that our great board of temperance and moral welfare can blaze the way in gathering together all like-minded organizations, fusing them into some movement akin to the Anti-Saloon League, which shall have as its end and aim 'national regulation of motion pictures.'"

Churches of America have great opportunity in their hands.

By encouraging constituents to exercise their personal, genuine conceptions of right and wrong, they can control anything under the sun and make themselves a cultural power respected and obeyed.

If they misuse their opportunity by trying to inflict on human thoughts the same censorship imposed on meats and foodstuffs (to use the reformer's own simile), they risk ridiculous failure."

Ted Taylor.

Film Capital Production Notes

TO FILM LINCOLN'S LIFE

Rockett-Naylor Productions, Incorporated, capital one million dollars, a Delaware Corporation, with offices in the Security Building, Hollywood, has been organized to film a series of subjects of world interest the first of which will be the life and times of Abraham Lincoln, martyred president of the United States.

Production will be on a scale commensurate with the subject and only actual historical locations, relics and documents will be used.

Location work will be done in Washington, D. C., Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, New Orleans, and on river craft on the Potomac, James, Ohio, and Mississippi Rivers.

Studio and laboratory work will be done in Los Angeles.

Dr. Gilbert Ellis Bailey, of the University of Southern California, and an old friend and neighbor of Abraham Lincoln, has charge of the research on the Lincoln picture which has covered more than a year.

PEACE FILMS

The Tribune yesterday published the following special dispatch from London:

"D. W. Griffith arrived on the Aquitania at Southampton on the first leg of a European tour to study the basis of a series of moving pictures in which the brotherhood of man will be stressed. He will remain ten days in England and then go to France. Later he may visit Germany and Russia.

"I think that now is the time to devote money and brains to teaching peace to all the nations of the world," Griffith said. "Therein lies the great work of the films. Americans are determined to be the pioneers in this movement."

MAY STAR WILL ROGERS

It is understood that D. and M. Films of Detroit which last year produced "The First Woman" with Mildred Harris are negotiating with Will Rogers to appear in that company's third production. The second, "A Wife Worth While," is now being made in Detroit with Norman Kerry, who was cast by Jess Smith.

William Fox threatens to parallel the Nazimova production of "Salome" with one of his own. He has gone to his archives and brought forth the "Salome" that he made about three years ago, the star of which was the ample Theda Bara. When the Nazimova production is released in a town or a city the Fox production will also be shown.

Ernest M. Shipman is promoting a producing company operating space granted by federal government in Lansdowne park, Ottawa, Can. Henry McRae is now directing a picturization of Ralph Connor's "The Man From Glengarry." "Cameron of the Mounted" was the company's first.

Marshall Neilan is preparing for his first Goldwyn picture following his return from 11 weeks' vacation and honeymoon in Europe following marriage to Blanche Sweet in Chicago.

Frank Urson, director, and David Kesson, cinematographer, returned to Los Angeles with him.

Miss Leah Baird and her entire company have just sailed for South America for backgrounds in the new picture upon which she is at work, the fourth of the series of Leah Baird productions being made for the Associated Exhibitors under the direction of Arthur E. Beck.

Arrangements have been made in two of the southern ports to have developed any negatives taken up to the time of arrival there in order that there may be ample time for any needed re-takes. The company will not arrive in New York City, their port of ultimate destination, until August.

J. FRANK GLENDON, playing in Grace Haskill's production, "Just Like a Woman"

DROPS R-C AS DISTRIBUTOR

R-C Distributing corporation went out of existence June 30. Today its releasing machinery is operating under title of Film Booking Offices.

The change was made by P. A. Powers to afford the individual producer full advantage of his own brand, name or title in presenting his picture to the public. Chester Bennett's "Colleen of the Pines" will be the first picture distributed through F. B. O.

The producing plant will continue as R-C studios.

"Rich Men's Wives" is the first of a series of special productions B. P. Schulberg has arranged to make, for release by the newly formed Al. Lichtman Distributing Corporation.

Sets are being constructed at the United Studios for the next Jackie Coogan production, which has not yet been titled. Production will start the latter part of the week, with E. Mason Hopper directing.

The Richard Walton Tully Company, engaged in making "Omar the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post, at the United Studios, will leave for a series of location trips to Santa Barbara, Catalina and Oxnard this week.

ROBERT O'CONNOR TO PRODUCE FEATURE SERIES FOR SCREEN

Robert O'Connor, the latest "recruit" in Hollywood's producing brigade, is at present busy producing and distributing a series of two-reel comedies featuring Billy Franey. He announced that he will invade the feature field in August with the first of a series of multiple-reel dramatic photoplays having Mexican border locales.

Mr. O'Connor, who hails from Laredo, Texas, and who was five years in the employ of Hal Roach, is negotiating with the Mexican Government for use of the famous Rurales and for permission to photograph certain important border battle-grounds and buildings, which will form the background for the feature series.

The first story to be filmed will be "Hot Dog!" a comedy-drama from the typewriter of Tomas Sanchez, a newcomer in Hollywood. "Hot Dog!" will be marketed in five parts, according to Mr. O'Connor.

FILM CRIME SERIES

Short stories of underworld life written by Fred V. Williams, newspaper feature writer, will be launched in production July 1 at Pacific studios, San Mateo.

W. A. Matthews, manager of Kenmat productions, is at Clark hotel to engage directors and leading players for the first series of two-reelers, known as "Adventures in Hoboland." Twenty-five of Williams' stories have been purchased.

Mildred Davis is to head her own producing company, and she will appear in five-reel comedy-dramas. The pictures are to be made at the Roach studios, and Hal Roach is to direct the first.

Upon the completion of "The Voice From the Minaret," Norma Talmadge will be presented in "The Garden of Allah," one of the greatest stage successes of the past decade.

The next Bevan-June comedy by Mack Sennett will be called "When Summer Comes." Roy Del Ruth is directing.

Preparations are being made by Selznick for the starting of two new productions at the United Studios within the next few days, coincident with the return of Myron Selznick to Los Angeles. George Archainbaud and Victor Heerman will direct. Casts of prominent players are being selected by Myron Selznick and the titles of the two productions will be revealed shortly.

George Melford will leave July 5 for Channel Islands, to be gone the entire month, to make scenes for "Ebb-Tide," a Robert Louis Stevenson story, adapted by Waldemar Young. James Kirkwood, Lila Lee, George Fawcett, Raymond Hatton, Noah Beery and Jacqueline Logan form the cast.

Thomas Meighan, with Leatrice Joy playing opposite, will start July 10 under direction of Al Green on "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," a story by Perley Poore Sheehan adapted to the screen by Frank Condon.

The southern mountains, with hickory shirts and cloistered places in the heights, appeals to us as a relief location in this flood of westerns.

Current Reviews

"I AM THE LAW"

THERE are fads in motion pictures just as there are in styles in dress. But the most burdensome of late have been those of the North-West Mounted type. The two-reeler makes a cowboy hero type into a Royal Mounted. The matinee idol casts aside his full dress suit for the "Get your man" outfit. Pictures have become policed to death.

And now comes a righteously Mounted story with a satiated people to convince of its wholesomeness.

The James Curwood story or combination of stories, "I Am the Law," is a good old standby story in new disguise. The brother against brother gag has been laid in every locale except the snow country as it is here. The strong dramatic punches are aided by blizzards and races through the snow country.

Edwin Carewe has made the most of the written page. His dramatic scenes are made more dramatic by repression of action rather than making his cast overact. He handles a large and prominent group of players with an equality that is astonishing.

Alice Lake shows more dramatic ability than ever before. But it is not all drama for her part. She keeps her cute mannerisms that win appeal.

Rosemary Theby is a good contrast for Miss Lake. She has the heavy feminine role requiring heavy acting that she manages very well.

Kenneth Harlan plays a straight role with sincerity that is convincing.

Wallace Beery crowds as much talent into a few scenes as most actors can put into five reels. Here he is a half-white, half-Chinese character.

Gaston Glass, the weak brother, has slid from his usually popular role to that of a weakling. However, he shows his adaptability undauntingly.

Noah Beery is another to change about and play an opposite type to his general run of pictures. He has a chance to show his real and pleasing personality. Beery portrays the most dramatic action, thus consummating dramatic situations.

"WHILE SATAN SLEEPS"

A photodrama that will make censors squirm and wonder where it can be censored without spoiling a splendid moral is brought to light in "While Satan Sleeps." This drama is the first in a long while that has enough substantial material for a feature picture.

The story, from the original Peter B. Kyne "The Parson of Panamint" carries a human strain of sins and sorrows, reforms and joys.

Joseph Henabery has directed the picture in the most satisfying manner.

We see a new Jack Holt here. Mr. Holt is not the suave leading man or the jovial westerner that he has been heretofore, but a crook made up of good and bad. He adapts himself to the part with decidedly more skill than straight parts.

Fritzi Brunette shows herself to be a real emotional actress and the part she plays though a difficult one, fits her as though written for her.

Mabel Van Buren is splendid in a dance hall character.

Betty Francisco is a typical ingenue at all times, and plays her part after the fashion of ingenues.

Wade Boteler, as a crook, has good opportunity and makes good with it.

J. P. Lockney is another character who adds brilliancy to the film.

Fred Huntly is our idea of how a reformer looks and thinks.

Bobby Mack, a horrible example, gives many a laugh as the husband of Sylvia Ashton. No Lasky picture is complete without Miss Ashton.

Herbert Standing in his usual bishop role is reliable for a good performance.

R. W.

"ARABIAN LOVE"

Different cast, different sets and different director is the only variation of "Arabian Love" from any other of the "Sheik" pictures. If you have seen one of them you have seen all. It can all be told in five words, Sheik, desert, girl, kidnappers, murder. That's all there is; they haven't any more.

But that isn't all that hurts. It is a shame to see a producing organization with every Dulcie Cooper has been engaged to play the ingenue with Tom Mix in his forthcoming picture, as yet untitled.

material to work with such as Fox, to tread the badly worn path of imitation.

The direction of Jerome Storm is quite commendable for he works his players to the best advantage to bring out all the dramatic talent they possess.

That doesn't especially apply to John Gilbert. He has far more personality than the part calls for. He who immortalized Monte Cristo thereby winning recognition, had to accept a mediocre vehicle to carry on his reputation. It is asking too much even from the best.

Barbara Bedford was more fortunate, however. Not only was she well cast but there are bits of dramatic action that gives her opportunity that she does not pass by.

Barbara La Marr is brought into animation, playing a native character, which tends to hide her beauty but brings out her skill as an actress.

Herschel Mayall plays the Sheik satisfactorily.

Robert Kortman and Wm. A. Orlamond fill out the cast capably.

Jules Furtman is credited with the "original" story. The originality is a matter of personal judgement.

R. W.

"THE GRAY DAWN"

It all goes to show that a picture such as "The Gray Dawn" can be made thrilling without airplanes, telephones, automobiles and radios. Here is a production from the cameras of Benjamin B. Hampton showing the thrills and romance of the early Californian days.

That doesn't mean that the story by

Stewart White is above reproach of the censors. Far from that! There are several first class killings that stimulate no good emotions.

But there is true romance, too, that takes the raw edge off the production.

Claire Adams is charming as she is a splendid actress. She might have stepped from the pages of a '49 romance.

Maude Wayne is a winsome villainess. She has personality and beauty that aids her capable work.

Robert McKim is at his best when playing his worst character.

George Hackathorne, a wistful young lad, plays the best part of his career with his best work.

Snitz Edwards, though having a part small in quantity, plays it great in quality. He is a great character.

Claire McDowell is the eternal mother. Here she portrays a most realistic one.

Charles Thurston is fairly good.

Omar Whitehead lives and dies in the story but for all that remains a good actor.

Marc Robbing is excellent in a Chinese character role.

Carl Ganvoort, the male lead, is most convincing.

Stanton Heck, another reliable member of the cast that makes the picture better for his presence.

Atmospheric bits that are well played are: J. Gunnis Davis, Zack Williams, Grace Marvin, Charles Arling, Harvey Clark, and Charles Murphy.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle is responsible for the art titles that add color to the picture.

—R. W.

"DOMESTIC RELATIONS"

ALTHOUGH this production enjoys some of the heaviest billing done here, empty seats were very visible at the Kinema during the first run of this Katharine MacDonald picture.

Those who remained away were entirely justified. Again we were given an ancient story; again Miss MacDonald posed in long shots, in medium shots and in closeups, until her stock of smiles, frowns and eye-lifting became very familiar under repetition.

The story was episoded so severely that it proved a checker board. But, why the members of the cast proved so artificial to their roles; why there was not a foot of convincing action in the entire production, is more unexplainable than Miss MacDonald's faulty selection of wrong vehicles.

"HER OWN MONEY"

Average story, average direction and average action, occasionally dragging, occasionally interesting but nevertheless true to life is "Her Own Money," a recent Ethel Clayton, Lasky production.

There is nothing startling in the way the story is worked out by Elmer Rice. It is simple and homely. It creates mild interest yet leaves no impression.

The direction, under Joseph Henaberry, befitted the material he had to work with.

Ethel Clayton again has the misfortune of playing a complacent housewife with ordinary action and emotions to portray. Therefore, it can only be said that her part is fairly played.

On the other hand Mae Bush, a vivacious stenographer, has a chance to show her personality and the result is that she attracts most of the attention.

Warner Baxter, long absent from the screen, has a freshness that is good to see. Here is a male lead that disdains the stove-polished hair and curled eyelashed, thus relieving self-consciousness.

Jean Acker plays a simple part in pleasing manner.

Roscoe Karns leans toward the comedy side of life in his part which is well played.

Clarence Burton and Charles French have roles of the same order and serve to fill out the cast competently.

R. W.

Where to Find People You Know

Claire Windsor has been placed under a long-term contract with Goldwyn studios.

Gaston Glass will play the leading male role in "Gimme" by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, which Mr. Hughes is directing at the Goldwyn studio.

William Fox will return to his west coast studio following a winding up of some business in the east.

Fred Jackman is directing "Bow Wow," his first picture for Mack Sennett.

J. Frank Glendon is cast with Ethel Clayton at the Robertson-Cole studios.

Louise Fazenda has deserted vaudeville entirely for pictures now, as she says "Life on the stage is just one make-up after another." She has returned to the Sennett studios after a year and a half of the "three a day."

Dick Jones has finished shooting "Home-made Movies," the latest Mack Sennett-Ben Turpin comedy.

Georges Carpentier is featuring in a J. Stuart Blackton production which is being made in London. He plays a romantic adventurer who figures in many daring episodes.

Maym Kelso has been added to the cast of William de Mille's present film, "Clarence," being filmed on Lasky lot.

Sylvia Ashton has been engaged to play a role in Metro's "Country Love," to star Billie Dove.

John Bowers has been selected by Metro to play the title role in "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Joseph Poland has joined the Fox scenario staff. He recently wrote the scripts for "The Gun Fanner," a Tom Mix picture and "The Splendid Outcast" with John Gilbert, both of which are to be released shortly.

Metro has placed Howard Strickland in charge of the coast publicity staff, succeeding Ray Leeks, who has gone over to R-C as a production manager.

Arthur Martinelli, who photographed many of the Bert Lytell and May Allison pictures for Metro, has been selected as cameraman for Billie Dove's initial starring vehicle, "Country Love," which Emile Chautard will direct.

Winter Hall is cast as a bishop in the Joseph Schenck production, "The Voice from the Minaret."

Gerald Pring has been engaged to work at Universal with Herbert Rawlinson in "The Rainbow Chaser."

Sam Allen, Lincoln Plumer, William Carroll, Otto Hoffman and John Stepping have been added to the cast of "The Rainbow Chaser" at Universal.

Cullen Landis is playing the leading male role opposite Viola Dana in "Page Tim O'Brien" at Metro.

Rupert Julian is directing Gladys Walton in Bret Harte's story, "M'liss."

Melbourne McDowell has a part with Herbert Rawlinson in "The Rainbow Chaser."

John Brunton is now manager of Miami Studios, Inc., in Florida, built by the Curtiss Airplane company. It has two large stages.

Jimmy Aubrey, Frank Alexander and Frank Smith, assistant general manager of Vitagraph, are fishing and hunting near Bishop.

Bradley Smoellen is in the east on business.

Jack Holt will leave for New York in two weeks to work in "Making a Man," returning here September 1 to make interiors.

Brenda Fowler, a writer of one-act plays, is cast in "Money, Money, Money!" Katherine MacDonald's starring picture.

Katherine MacDonald and other members of the cast of "Money, Money, Money!" have returned from location at Sonora, Cal. Tom Forman will finish directing the picture at the Preferred Pictures studio.

Dot Farley, former comedy star, author and director, is being featured by Mack Sennett.

Milton Gardner, production assistant to Abraham Lehr, Goldwyn manager, is going to the South Seas with the Walsh troupe as manager.

Sylvia Ashton is the first member of the cast selected to support Billie Dove in her initial starring picture, "Country Love," which Emile Chautard will direct.

Arline Pretty, heroine of many screen dramas, has been selected by Harry Beaumont for a part in "Page Tim O'Brien," Viola Dana's Metro picture.

Rowland V. Lee, the director, will return to Hollywood within a few days.

Mr. Lee, who is vacationing in the vicinity of Big Bear, says that he will return shortly—with some wonderful fish yarns.

Spike Robinson has been signed by Harry Carey to play an important part in "Good Men and True," a Western drama by Eugene Manlove Rhodes which is being produced at the Robertson-Cole studios.

Tully Marshall has been added to the cast of Harry Carey's production, "Good Men and True," a story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes, which Mr. Carey is producing at the R-C Studio.

Pickups By The Staff

Constance Binney has gone to England to take a leading role in the film production of "A Bill of Divorcement."

Eric Von Stroheim's super-feature, which will soon be under production at Universal, has been titled "Merry-Go-Round."

The cast has not yet been definitely chosen for "M'liss", Gladys Walton's next Universal picture.

Evelyn Selbie has finished her second part under the direction of James Young. She was playing "Zarah" in "Omar the Tentmaker."

Charles F. Eyton, general manager of the Lasky Studio, has returned with Mrs. Eyton (Kathlyn Williams) from a trip to China and is again at his desk. During his absence the post was filled by Victor H. Clarke.

"The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," an original story by Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon, will be the next vehicle for Thomas Meighan, Paramount star, and work will begin upon it on July 10th under the direction of Alfred Green.

Claire Windsor has just finished playing in "Brothers Under Their Skins," by Peter B. Kyne, at the Goldwyn studio.

Forrest Stanley, who played opposite Marion Davies in "Enchantment," will again be seen with her in her next, "The Young Diana," from the story by Marie Corelli. Robert G. Vignola and Albert Capellani directed the picture and the colorful settings are by Joseph Urban.

Wyndham Standing writes from Syracuse, New York, that he is to return to the Coast to get some more "California sunshine."

Tom Forman has just finished editing "White Shoulders," the Preferred Pictures' production in which Katherine MacDonald is starred.

Al Lyman's Ambassador Hotel orchestra got their initial taste of motion picture work yesterday at the Preferred Pictures studio, where "Rich Men's Wives," the first of the series of B. P. Schulberg Special Productions is being filmed under the direction of Gasnier.

George Fitzmaurice has returned from Balboa with the company headed by Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and Theodore Kosloff.

Several box car loads of camels will be re-shipped immediately to Imperial Valley, where Norma Talmadge and her company are to film desert scenes for "The Voice from the Minaret," a Robert Hitchins story, adapted for the screen by Frances Marion and which Frank Lloyd is directing for Joseph M. Schenck to be released through Associated First National.

Henry East and Buddie, that canine marvel, finished a picture with Bobby Dunn at the Eddie Lyons studios, and then cast their lot with the Edwin B. Kennedy company at the Fox lot.

If freckles were dollars, Harry Beaumont, who is directing Viola Dana in "Page Tim O'Brien" for Metro, would have been unable to induce Vern Winters to take the part of an office boy in the production. That Vern had more freckles to the square inch than there are legs in three generations of a family of centipedes, was the remark of John Arnold, who is photographing this picture, when the youthful actor appeared on the set for the first time.

Frederick Reel, Jr., director of the Great Northern Film company, is on location at Sangor, near the Fresno big trees, where he is shooting scenes for a northwestern picture. They will be gone for three weeks. The two leads are Harold Mills and Katherine Adams.

Camera work is finished on "A Tailor-Made Man," Charles Ray's screen version of this popular play.

Work on assembling, cutting and titling "A Tailor Made Man" already is well under way.

Maurice Tourneur returns from England day after tomorrow to finish "The Christian" at the Goldwyn studio.

Rupert Hughes' "Gimme" company leaves today for San Mateo to be gone a week. The estate of Mrs. C. Temple Crocker will be used for location.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Louis Chaudet, previewed his latest made in L. A. production at the Ambassador Theatre. The title, "Fools of Fortune," listens like a good box office cognomen.

Fred Hibbard believes in doing his work right, if it doesn't do it, he willingly does it over again. Hence he's making some re-takes on a picture at the United studios.

Lloyd Hamilton had about thirty men made up in cop uniforms the other day. Evidently "Ham" is figuring on wearing off some surplus weight, with all these minions of the law chasing him.

Donald Hughes has finished taking orders from Director Hibbard, who wrote finis to another fun-film which features the kiddies and all that.

Ethel Clayton will soon be at work on the R-C lot with Wesley Ruggles, acting the part of a honest to goodness director. Which, according to Ethel, he has proved is in calling.

Hal E. Roach made a picture with Harry "Snub" Pollard in record time. The actual shooting time was from sunrise and finished as the last ray of light bid the sun good morning. "Do you follow me or are you ahead of me?" That's it Brothers and Sisters."

Eddie Baker gave a party in celebration of his seventh month as one of the chief funsters at the Hal E. Roach studios.

Jack Perrin has some of our best financiers of this old town figuring out a plan to make him a star in a series of subjects.

Harry Russell overheard the following which is worth repeating. DIRECTOR—"Get me a cute and nifty inguene." PRODUCER—later interviewing applicant that assistant director brought in to cast for the part. "You won't do you're a brunette."

Charles Conklin, Walter Fredericks, Clyde McCoy, Harry Cornellia, Jim Donley, and half a half-dozen other equally well-known troupers are doing their bit to help Chester Conklin in his present story that is being directed by Edwin B. Kennedy, who is assisted by Gordon Hollingshead at the Fox studios.

Harry Booker, hiding behind a funny make-up, was discovered in a moonshine plant the other day by minions of the law and after they chased Harry for what seemed miles, they finally rounded him, Billy Engle, Billy Franey and a lot of others up and arrested them. But, don't get excited folks, this all happened in a movie scene that Director Erle Kenton was directing.

Byron Foy, who used to be one of the very amusing Foy Family, on the vaudeville stage, has been with the Fox organization for some time, exchanging his ideas for the company's perfectly good American dollars.

Fred Tyler was seen snooping about some of our best studios. Wherever he went, the glad hand boys were almost wringing his arm out of its socket, for Fred has been busy at the Vitagraph.

Hampton Del Ruth is around with a chip on his shoulders and he dares any one to knock it off. If what Mister Del Ruth has lined up comes to light, and sees his every ambition realized, he is going to be the busiest man this side of the Rockies. For he will have three feature units stepping in tune to his commands. When he gets them going he will start a small army of comedy batteries blazing the trail of laughville with their efforts to make funny pictures for sensible people to laugh at in some of our leading theatres.

Fat Karr is back among filmland workers, having been away for the past month. He returns very much refreshed after a four weeks' vacation and will once more fill a lot of space within the camera lines for some of our best producers. (N. B.—Fat weighs close to the three hundred mark).

William Irving registers a kick. Here it is. "A baby star rides in a $5,000 car, a dog marvel comes to work in a $3,000 machine, the funny mule rides in a trailer drawn by a car that costs more than a fellows California bungalow, while I have been with the same firm for six years supporting these stars and must take the T. P. and W. Road to get to work—meaning—TAKE PAINS AND WALK." Not so good for the shoe leather, William.

Bernard Durning not only acted as chaperon for his friend wife Shirley Mason, and her sister Viola Dana at the boxing show the other night at the stadium. He was rooting harder for Jimmy Marcus to hand the sleep powder to Bud Soules than he could have rooted for Jack Dempsey to topple over Georges Carpentier at Jersey City.

Ida May McKenzie, a wee bit of a girl, is acting as manager of her sister Ella, who isn't any bigger or older than Ida herself. Ma McKenzie is busy looking after Baby Fay, while Pa McKenzie is earning a few shekles at the Fox studios.

Harry Lucennay seems to have landed a life job for his dog Pal with Director Fred Hibbard, for he no more than completes one story than he is resigned for the next subject.

Ted Billings has landed himself in a nifty job when he agreed to rustle props and dress the sets for the Jack O'Brien Co.

Lupino Lane is to make one more picture and then go to England, where he has some contract arrangements with his British backers to adjust.

Earl Dodney, after a brief illness is up and around seeking action on the part of some of the fellows who shout "camera" at real actors at so much per week.

Sydney De Grey dropped in at Fox's the other day to look up his friend Heine Conklin, with whom he used to do comedy situations with when that organization first started making two-reel subjects. Sydney has kissed the studio goodbye and is connected with a commercial firm in the Angel City.

Jack Blystone has shouted his last "camera and Cut" on the pirate picture that he was making with Lupino Lane.

Clyde Cook, outside of being one of the most liked of comics that Fox studios harbors, is one of the gamest, although he was hurt but a short time ago, he no more than threw his crutches away and he insisted upon completing his picture.

Herman C. Raymaker is directing Pewee Holmes at the Fox studios, doing one of those horse operas with a comedy twist that will make even the horse actors holler with glee.

Otto Lederer, since being away with the Abies Irish Rose company, hadn't figured that while he was away that the old town of Hollywood could change, for we have Sunset Boulevard torn up again and he thought he was some place else and had to be shown around by Jack Mower, so he could find a way to cross streets without dropping in a sewer.

Sam Kaufman was looking the studios over the whole of last week. Sam wasn't seeking a job, to the contrary he had a financier with him who was a stranger in those parts and wanted to invest his money in the movies.

Anna May Wong is still with the "Troubled Waters company" and from the way things are progressing along she will be signing her name to a number of other weekly checks before the story is completed.

Bud White, owner of that 600-pound bear (John Brown) returned from Honolulu. They were appearing at a carnival on the islands, where the animal wrestled all comers.

The Screen Writers' Forum - Conducted by William E. Wing

Be a Woofle Bird

SOME genius, with a penchant for valuable invention, has brought to life the name, "Woofle bird." Since that time his ponderous mind seems to have been diverted to other national problems, and he has left us flat as to the exact definition of the thing.

However, it sounds more tuneful that the bird called "Dodo," and breathes of other possibilities. Therefore, I would suggest that writers cease being what they are, and become Woofle birds.

Let us suppose that the Woofle cares not a darn for precedent born in 1915, film primers of an earlier period, or the views of people whose minds are in the same past age of the film.

In woofling therefore, one naturally would go and do differently than did his antiquated brethren of the some-time-ago.

From the uprisings expressed by letters received by the conductor of this page, it would seem that many writers were ripe for a revolution, if not a regular tong war. Some cry for a revolutionary party, all organized for battle.

In that case let it be the Woofle bird party which will proceed to kill all antiquated laws and pass fresh ones, despite the frantic whoops of the Old Guard in the last trench.

If you wish to write a film about what our children are going to think of us and our lives some day, let 'er rip! That theme alone contains more wholesome, get-there stuff in it than half a dozen productions drifting around at present.

If some fresh, sturdy idea carts around a rough but gold-hearted old sea captain as its central figure, hit it for a home run. It might be difficult to sell but, when it landed it would send the audiences away satisfied.

If you can write anything as natural as "The Cradle Buster," fly at it. Such a story will not startle the world, but it will be remembered long after the "Master" production which attacks the honor of American women.

A recent magazine story opens with a flustered young man who proposes to a girl in a dark summer house, and then finds he doesn't know the identity of the girl who accepted him, although three man hunters claim the honor. One couldn't escape from building good stuff on a foundation like that.

Yet that is not a difficult kind of platform to erect. Getting a subject between two fires always is inspiring to corking situations in the follow up. Keep the stories sparkling but filled with HARMLESS fun, and you will land the story of big demand—the entertainment value.

Seems as though, with so many young writers speeding right up to mark, that much new, fresh and sparkling wooflescript should be forthcoming, regardless of the phantom bogie man of "what the studios want."

They want what you writers make them like.

Therefore, be a Woofle bird, and supply the new dope.

Some spoofer from up north is trying to show up our ignorance by making inquiries into the origin of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." Why should he want information upon that subject—now.

On the Other Foot

THE stage bunch as well as fiction publishers are rising suddenly with loud cries of anguish, as if great-grandfather's ghost had appeared to them in a warning but vivid vision.

They find Mr. Censor has crossed their trail so many times, in chasing film productions, that the self-appointed sees fresh meat.

Both stage and magazine are loud in their roars against any such unjust invasion. They propose to fight, and everyone is calling upon everyone else to do the fighting.

If both these brethren of the film had arisen in their might years ago when censorship was in incipient state and had shown its menace by attacking motion pictures only, the combined force easily could have overcome a rising evil.

But stage and press did not give much aid to the struggling few, and pictures have been forced to expend fortunes and years, alone battling the now common enemy.

As in the case of the films, "producer and public have seen the light." Again it is the case of "flagrant violation by certain well-known producers." Just as familiar the stage proposes "a real cleansing from within."

If the stage would prevent the entrance of the un-American thing, censorship, it might be well to bunch its efforts in those placed directly inhabited by the offending directors, instead of scattering their blows, thereby avoiding the mistakes of motion pictures defenders.

Now will stage or publisher be alone in the fight. The Authors' League of America is doing all in its power to crush censorship. The biggest screen writers' organization in the west will tender its aid gladly to the unfortunate brothers.

But the films truly can say to all other of the oppressed:

"Look back upon our mistakes, then go and do differently; yea, much differently."

What a swell excuse some theatre orchestras have to play the funeral march.

Handing It Down

AND the leading lady can be an immoral woman in love with an honest to God man. By hook or crook she lands him. In the end she is the 'woman God changed,' and all is well.

"Is that the lesson to hand down to the coming generation, that a person can do anything, can live as he pleases; go the limit, then ask for forgiveness and have things all right?"

"No wonder we have so many boys and girls who don't care!"

Honestly, it's great to have lively correspondents who help fill up this page, as Miss Millie Sieg does in the above pointed argument.

The very next epistle, all the way from that dear San Diego, treats the situation in very decisive manner. B. Alice Alberts certainly is a woman of convictions. Let us hear from her:

"For the photoplay market is surely chaos. Speaking as a business woman, I must say that I am amazed at the shortsightedness

Tar Without Feathers

MINGLING with the humans who woof at producers engaged in the business of encouraging censorship through the tar-smearing process, is the writer. He is one of the first to lift a lusty howl against risqué pictures, now that he has "seen the light."

And yet, strange to relate, there would be no putrid pictures if the scribe did not write putrid stories. The only exception to this rule, or course, is the director with the exalted privilege of framing his own smut.

The film industry has expended fortunes in combatting censorship. Corporations, units, managers, directors and individuals have volunteered money and valuable time in the cause for a number of years. Organizations have been formed and meetings held for the purpose of circumventing the menace.

This self-same producer of scarlet pictures has sneered at Japan, Mexico and other countries which have objected to having members of their race characterized as villains or vampires upon the screen.

In the same breath these same persons—and, thank heaven, they are few—the bigoted few have turned to their own and have maligned American womanhood with the utmost deliberation.

We have nothing but contempt for the man or woman who will attack womanhood, yea, even motherhood, in order to attract silly women and the wrong kind of men to the picture theater. Worse than this, the immoral production attracts the inquiring youth of the nation, and of all nations.

Among the many sad thoughts in this pot pourri of tarring, is the fact that writers are not guiltless.

Tar? Yes; tar, but—unfortunately—tar without feathers!

Al: The "heaviest" dramas we know of were written with a hammer in the stone age. You can still see them upon the screen together with the light comedies, inscribed by Joe Miller upon tissue paper with a quill pen.

of the producers, the men who furnish the money, for, in many cases, they are deliberately throwing away their money and killing a golden industry.

"Every real business man knows that it is much harder to re-build an industry than to build it up in the first place. Many evils must be corrected, much debris must be removed before re-building can even begin.

"The greatest evil from which the entire industry is suffering is chaos. It always has been chaos within, producers' instability, uncertainty, inefficiency and a whole brood of similar evils.

"All these will need be overcome by the producing end before writing for the screen can truthfully be called a profession.

"Even then it will not be a field worthy of years of study and honest endeavor until these same photoplaywrights incorporate and cooperate."

A live wire in Portland adds a few remarks which could be published fittingly right here, but he forbids. Kind friends, telling your troubles exclusively to an editor, never cured a bunch of patients.

Plans for the reconstruction of the Caswell studios, corner Santa Monica Boulevard and Bronson Avenue, have been approved by Gus Schumacher, owner, and work will commence shortly on new stages and dressing room units. The Caswell studios have been leased for a long period by the O'Connor Productions, for the manufacture of Billy Franey two-reel comedies and features.

Director Victor Heerman of the Selznick forces returned from Catalina this week where he went for a brief vacation in company with Mr. and Mrs. Owen Moore, and is all pepped up about a fishing trip the party went on.

Hazel Dean is once more working for some of our leading directors in both comedy and dramatic productions, after a short layoff from studio activities.

George Larkin worked Sunday in order to finish up a picture that William Craft is directing for the Russell Corp. He is the star performer.

"A little speeding up of the minor scenes would have helped the production. The comedy work is good.

Frank Gerreghty is pinch hitting in all sorts of places while making the Ruth Roland serial. While Director Ernest Warde was acting the part of Ruth's father, who was dying, Frank played the death scene music on the piano and directed the director and the star from the piano stool. F. G. should learn how to turn the camera crank at the same time. So to make his job complete.

A cyclone struck and partially demolished "The Old Homestead" set on the Lasky ranch. No casualties resulted, as the windstorm as well as the company was under the direction of James Cruze.

TITLE CHANGES

"Home-made Movies" will be the title of the next Ben Turpin two-reel special, being produced by Mack Sennett Comedies, instead of "The Frozen Trail," the title originally affixed to the story.

Billie Dove is settling in Hollywood with her mother.

Bruce Guerin, the three-year-old child player, is working with Viola Dana in "Page Tim O'Brien."

Contemporary Criticisms

"NANOOK OF THE NORTH"

"Five thousand persons in the Capitol Monday night sat in deep silence through the unfolding of the story of Nanook except on those occasions when they were moved to mirth or to applause..

"Nanook is a real screen hero, and apparently a very happy one. May his tribe increase.

"Entertainment? Rare. Photography? Superb."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The first prize for unique photoplay entertainment, so far this year, goes to the Pathe Freres production, 'Nanook of the North,' a picture that carries with it not only a powerful dramatic quality in the stark realities of life in the far North, but genuine educational value. It is the most vivid and dramatic, intimate glimpse into the lives of the North's uncivilized inhabitants.

"There is a generous sprinkling of comedy . . . in six reels of the most absorbing picture you have seen in a long time.

"It is almost impossible to describe in words all the worth while features of this film. It will have to be seen to be appreciated."

—The Film Daily.

"An epic of the snowlands so real and so interesting in every detail that it carries the spectator right into the heart of the snowstorms, ice and bitterest cold.

"'Nanook of the North' is a screen classic."

—Moving Picture World.

"Put all the snow pictures you have ever seen together and they appear insignificant compared to 'Nanook of the North,' which comes forth as one of the greatest contributions to the screen."

—Motion Picture News.

"OUR LEADING CITIZEN" (Paramount)

"George Ade's first original story for the screen has been shaped into a very pleasing comedy-drama by Director Alfred Green.

"Not the least of the picture's good qualities is the sub-titling, which carries the genuine George Ade mark.

"Thomas Meighan fits the role of Bentley like the proverbial glove. . . . Lois Wilson plays . . . with infinite charm and a keen sense of its quiet comedy possibilities. Lucien Littlefield as a rustic editor, and Theodore Roberts as a wily politician, give excellent performances and capable support is rendered the principals by others in the company."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'Our Leading Citizen' is a good picture but it might have been a whopper if it wasn't so long.

"The role of 'lazy Dan' Bentley gives Meighan one of the biggest hero parts he has ever had. He's a hero in every inch of the film, from start to finish. . . . The romance that is woven in gives Lois Wilson plenty of opportunity to be appealing."

—The Film Daily.

"It is typical Ade stuff, told in the best manner of the Hoosier humorist, which not only speaks in recommendation, but shouts. It is wholesome, clean and amusing, with a dash of thrill and a charming love interest.

"Thomas Meighan is ideally cast. . . . Miss Wilson and Oliver come near to rolling away with the picture.

"Alfred Green has handled the direction with admirable results. He displays absolute technique but is not so technical that the humaneness of his material is lost sight of. The atmosphere is delightful."

—Moving Picture World.

Jack Sennett has developed many feminine stars, but George O'Hara is the first male star to be sponsored by the comedy producer. He is directing as well as acting.

"Meighan is supported by a corking cast which includes 'name values' in Lois Wilson, William P. Carleton, Theodore Roberts, Laurance Wheat, James Neill and Lucien Littlefield. . . . The direction is by Alfred Green who has managed to handle the story interestingly, carrying the yarn along logically. In titling the film has evidently had the advantage of Ade suggestion for some of them are quite humorous."

—Variety.

"LIGHTS OF THE DESERT" (Fox)

"Shirley Mason has had better stories than this one, and has done better acting. Not only does the improbable story help make her acting unconvincing, but carelessness in the detail adds to it. You see shots of the desert in July with the actors wearing flannel shirts and sweaters.

"Allan Forrest and Edward Burns in the cast do good work as rivals. Andree Tourneur makes an attractive 'other girl' in which she does some good acting."

—The Film Daily.

"This is a love romance of the oil fields with the pleasing Miss Mason at her best. A very capable cast appears in support, headed by Allan Forrest. The climax is well handled and worth waiting for.

"Director Beaumont has evolved a first-rate little comedy-drama."

Exhibitors Herald.

"Shirley Mason gives an attractive performance in a picture with a good balance of comedy and seriousness. The story is refreshing without being startling.

"Lillian Langdon gets the most out of a good comedy role."

—Moving Picture World.

"The story has no special novelty . . . and is without subtlety of any kind, but it is direct and human. The characters are well drawn and contrasted.

"The emotional episodes are genuine and are not overdone. They are happily broken by contrasting comedy.

"Admirers of Shirley Mason will be delighted with her acting in this role. . . . Allen Forrest . . . acts the thoroughbred in every move and expression. All other members of the cast do splendidly and are entitled to their well-earned commendation.

"Direction unforced and true to type."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE SUN OF THE WOLF" (R-C Pictures)

"This story of Jack London's has been interestingly told in the screen version. The film has a variety of splendid shots of mountains, waterfalls and snow-covered trails.

"The photography throughout the picture is of the best. There are occasionally some shots that show true genius and artistry. . . . Continuity of the story is evenly done and well directed."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"One quality that is totally lacking in 'The Son of the Wolf' is suspense.

"The Make-up of the 'Indians' is terribly exaggerated and there is a tendency toward burlesque in the scenes among the Indians themselves.

"Wheeler Oakman and Edith Roberts are satisfactory in roles that don't require very much of them."

—The Film Daily.

"The pictorial appeal is greater than any other.

"The acceptance of some of the situations and characters requires an active imagination as for instance the fact that Edith Roberts is a savage. Nothing about her, unless it's the beads in her hair or the polar bear robe, suggests the barbarian. She is charming and docile mannered at all times. The rest of the cast is satisfactory if not unusually gifted. The most salable feature . . . is the setting and the Indian effects."

—Moving Picture World.

"The author has not been unduly inspired in his theme and if the director has followed the script closely, then London has not added one fresh idea to the age-old situation—that of the barrier swept aside when the hero, a frontiersman, becomes a squaw man."

Motion Picture News.

We recently saw a Broadway opener in which two wives were kissed by other men. Both husbands punished their wives, but allowed the male kissers to stalk out, without even dusty footprints upon their coat-tails. We forget the great lesson taught by this picture.

"A FOOL THERE WAS"

WILLIAM Fox destroyed a national illusion by re-filming "A Fool There Was." Largely because it introduced the vamp to long-lasting popularity, the Theda Bara screen version of the play based on Kipling's "Vampire" poem has been remembered by the public as one of the little group of famous films.

Now the 1922 version appears. Settings look a million dollars; no talent was spared in casting. Yet it is neither drama nor satire. It starts in serious and logical vein and concludes in a burst of wild, trite melodrama, with the conventional staircase fall, and the vampire strewing flowers over the dead body of her fool, a la Ophelia.

Bernard McConville's script is a well-knit piece of work, but inconsistent in tone. Titles, credited to Thomas Maranda, are for the most part ordinary.

Lucien Andriot's photography is pleasantly unobtrusive, his artistic effects supplementary to the action.

Emmett J. Flynn was severely handicapped in receiving such a story after "Monte Carlo." He appears to have done his level best—indeed the production is excellent until it reaches its last quarter; then his players overact.

Harry Lonsdale, as the fool's secretary, invests a minor part with a wealth of humanness. Irene Rich, the fool's wife, is natural, and sweetly sympathetic.

Marjorie Daw has the snappy role of the impetuous sister, a fiery character strange to her, but handled truly.

Lewis S. Stone is the fool. His work is excellent in the early portion of the film; then he is drawn into the maelstrom of melodrama in which overacting reaches a perfect frenzy.

Estelle Taylor is no successor to Theda Bara. Miss Taylor's beautiful, but cold; and her vampire lure consists mainly of optical caelesthenics.

Mahlon Hamilton is another player whose well-drawn character is ruined by a final fit of exaggeration.

Muriel Frances Dana is charming as the tiny daughter. She seems to mind perfectly.

William V. Mong has a kindly bit as the butler in the early scenes.

Wallace McDonald is evenly good throughout his role, perhaps because he is killed off before they get to the slaughter of realities. —T. T.

"SCIENCE OR GOD?"

The intentions of the producer might have been the best in making the picture, "Science or God" but to add a misleading title such as the above is poor taste to say the least. Clarence Geldert wrote the story and directed. There is nothing startlingly new about it but the theme is one to be admired. And that is love of humanity.

The story is not what one would judge from the title. It is not a sermon on any one religion. If anything, it is a bit of all.

Direction is not of the smoothest, but considering this is the director's first effort one can overlook many rough spots.

The production is above reproach as far as the censors are concerned. Any child can see it without bad effect.

If this production were re-cut and one idea carried throughout the picture, instead of touching on many and leaving them half finished, and if then retitled this film would be on a smoother road to success.

R. W.

Dal Clauson, while working on a set at the Hollywood studios, stepped off of a stage and wrenched his left ankle. He couldn't continue to shoot the scenes for John B. O'Brien. Roy Carpenter, his second cameraman, shot for him, while he supervised from the side lines.

Chester Conklin is playing the role of a jailbird.

Harry Lustig, Western District Exchange Manager for Metro and B. F. Rosenberg, Los Angeles Exchange manager for that organization, have gone to Salt Lake to attend a gathering of the western Metro managers.

Portland, Oregon, will furnish the locale for scenes of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the new S-L production to be filmed for Metro. Charles Hunt, assistant director and Rudolph Bergquist, cameraman, already have departed for the northern city and other members of the company will follow later. Clarence Badger will direct the production.

On July 1st of this year Century Comedies will celebrate its eighth anniversary of motion picture production.

President Stern plans some new changes with the coming of the eighth anniversary within the next fortnight.

C. L. Chester is to make some feature pictures in the East after he gets things straightened out in the Southland.

Walter Williams is now turning the camera crank for the Chester Conklin company at the Fox studios.

Alf Goulding motored up to Yosemite with Baby Peggy Jean and a lineup of near greats of comedy row to put on a north mounted police story.

Bud Osborne is playing opposite Leo Maloney, who is making a series of western two-reelers for Pathe.

Denver Harmon returned from Catalina where he has been playing in the Florence Vidor picture King Vidor is directing.

Ruth King, well known both on the silent and speaking stage has taken a flyer into comedies doing a salvation army lassie in a Chester Conklin film.

Irvin Willat has finished "High Seas" with Jack Holt.

RICHARD ROWLAND OINS
FIRST NATIONAL

Richard A. Rowland, for years president of the Metro Pictures Corporation and senior member of the firm of Rowland & Clarke of Pittsburg, with extensive theater holdings in Western Pennsylvania, has joined the executive forces of Associated First National Pictures, Inc. He will be associated in the administration of the company's activities with President Robert Lieber, J. D. Williams, Harry O. Schwalbe, and the executive committee.

Hampton Del Ruth, formerly head of Mack Sennett's scenario department and later producing manager for William Fox, is working on the plans for the new production plant now under reconstruction at Long Beach. Details are lacking at the present time.

The idea in view, however, is to make four two-reel comedies and two five-reel comedy-dramas. Production will start about the first of September.

Melville Brown has turned his attention to directing shadowgraph pictures at the Fine Arts studios.

Irene Jones, Emily Ward and Della Wallis entertained the Assistant Directors' Association members last Thursday evening at the A. D. A. clubrooms.

George Fitmaurice and his company returned from Balboa Saturday where they have been for the past six days filming some pirate scenes aboard a ship.

Jack O'Brien took sick suddenly the other day when he ate something that didn't agree with him. He was rushed to a doctor, but came back to the studio and worked most of the night at the Hollywood studios, where he is directing.

Myron Selznick, who recently went to New York to confer with Select Pictures Corp., which distributes Selznick pictures, is returning to Los Angeles this week.

Hector Sarno has gone on location to the big trees with the Great Northern Film Company to take part in their northwestern picture.

Edwin Stevens is cast for the "heavy" in "The Voice from the Minaret."

A Lincoln Hart is publicity director for Cosmosart.

Myrtle Stedman is the latest addition to the all-star cast of Louis B. Mayer's "The Dangerous Age," a John M. Stahl production now in the making at the Mayer studio. Miss Stedman has just recently returned from the East where she made a personal appearance tour of the theatres upon the completion of an important part with Elaine Hammerstein in "Reckless Youth."

Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres, Kathlyn Williams, May McAvoy and Ed Martindel are principals who start Monday in "Clarence," the Booth Tarkington play adapted to the screen by Clara Beranger, under the direction of William de Mille.

"GRANDMA'S BOY"

"The story, an original by Jean Havez, Sam Taylor and Hal E. Roach, is a perfection of small-town life. . . . The supporting cast is excellent. Whoever was responsible for the casting deserves credit. Likewise the photography, which is above standard. Fred Newmeyer did a masterly job with the megaphone and can count this one as his big bet. The titles by H. M. "Beanie" Walker are more than titles. . . . Hannah Townsend, although 79 years of age, is a find. On the strength of her showing in this comedy she fits right on the top row with the leaders. The bully could not have been handled and better than that of Charles Stevenson, while Sutherland as the tramp confirms the reason why all of the producers on the coast lots are after him for character bits."

That picture titles have a different meaning than the way they read: for instance, "FOOLS FIRST" might mean the mob that rushes for the door before the program is finished.

"THE LYING TRUTH" might mean any one of the salaries you hear made in pictures.

"EAST LYNNE" sounds like some sort of baking compound, which can be used for home-brew.

"THE WALL FLOWER" Ah! The small boy with a coveted knot-hole at the baseball game.

"HANDCUFFS OR KISSES" might suggest a debate in married life.

"CROSSROADS OF NEW YORK" would remind one of the crosslots of Hollywood.

"BLACK ORCHIDS"

"NICE PEOPLE." What does that suggest? Yes, I give it up also.

Ranger Bill Miller at Balboa Studio is not a cook. There are other kind of ranges besides stoves, so Bill took to the mountains.

Clara Horton, Morante's beautiful leading lady, is making out-of-door pictures now. She says she is used to it as their roof leaked all winter.

Hyman Bolinsky was nearly featured in Rex Ingram's picture, "Black Orchids." He would have been a full fledged feature if they could have topped the camera from opening its iris and shimmying with mirth every time he smiled.

Read It Like A Fox Trot

Tom Mixed a Shirley Mason with a Buck Jones which made Wm. Russell like Syd Smith doing an Al St. John down Lupino Lane into one of his Pee Wee Holmes where he stabbed himself in the Chester Conklin with a Clyde Cooked pie.

With the coming of talking pictures as demonstrated at the Ambassador theatre the other night, what is going to happen when the old bar room scenes comes on the screen with tinkling glasses, a jazzing trombone and shouting waiters. Guards will have to be posted to keep the audience from crushing the orchestra and rushing the curtain.

Moses must have been a motion picture actor as he was the first one seen in the rushes.

A California Pageant of Progress and Industrial Exposition will be held at Exposition Park from August 26 to September 9. Cameraman will be the chief supporters, and thirty-five leading motion picture producers have entered exhibits and will furnish leading features of the entertainment. The chief attractions will be a reproduction of the famous engagement on the fields of Chateau Thierry and the New York Hippodrome shows.

Frank Beal, Sr. has moved his directorial luggage to the Fine Arts studios. Aided by his son, Scott M. Beal, he is to produce a feature.

Frank Lloyd is directing the Joseph Schenck production, "The Voice from the Minaret," starring Norma Talmadge. Norbert Brodin is cameraman, Dr. H. R. Maddock is in charge of research work, and Stephen Goosson designed the sets.

Harry Carey has purchased a home on Balboa Island where he, Mrs. Carey and the baby have gone to escape the warm weather.

Walter Anthony, musical critic, dramatic writer, and press representative de luxe, has been added to the staff of the Jackie Coogan Productions.

Bridgetta Clark, known for her character work in Rex Ingram's "The Four Horsemen," and "The Conquering Power," has returned from an eight months' stay in New York. She has been studying under the direction of Theodora Ursula Irving. She will continue her screen work, unless she decides to accept a vaudeville offer.

Dorothy Dalton has left for New York, having finished her role in Irvin V. Willat's production of Edward Sheldon's original story, "On the High Seas."

Tom Regan is assisting Erle Kenton, who is doing a story of the Frozen North, which touches on the radio, taxis, and all sorts of amusements.

Nat Deverich has just about shot his last scene in his recent effort as a director, between looking after the Fine Arts studio and the units that are working there.

Story By

Miss Bradley King, Ince staff writer and author of "Jim" and "A Man of Action," two specials for Autumn release, is completing an original story with American "news" as the theme. The feature, as yet untitled, will soon enter production with an all-star cast.

Frances Marion adapted the Robert Hitchens story, "The Voice from the Minaret" to the screen.

Hope Loring adapted "Money, Money, Money" to the screen.

Ward Lascelle has completed the Mary Roberts Rhinehart story, "Affinities," with Colleen Moore and John Bowers in the cast. The negative is in the Ince laboratory for Autumn release.

Edward Montagne of the Selznick scenario staff, who recently completed an original story which is to be produced as a special in the near future, has been assigned by Myron Selznick to the writing of a new script for early production.

Bernard McConville has completed the continuity for "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the new S-L production to be filmed for Metro under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Mary O'Hara is preparing the screen adaptation of "Peg O' My Heart" for Metro.

Si Jenks finished in the Jack Ford all-star story written about "The Village Blacksmith" and was immediately signed up to work opposite Al St. John at Fox studios.

CURWOOD SUES ON FILMED STORY

"I Am the Law" is subject of two lawsuits naming Affiliated Distributors in the east.

International Film company charges infringement on its "Valley of Silent Men," published in Good Housekeeping.

James Oliver Curwood, author of both stories, asks $100,000 damages and injunction, charging that William Nigh paid him $1000 for screen rights to "Poetic Justice of Uke San," but that "I Am the Law" is a piratical adaption of his stories, "The River's End" and "The Valley of Silent Men," "distorted and garbled with evasive deviations."

TEACH RADIO IN COMEDIES

Two educational-comedies have been completed by Radio-Films, Inc. They are first in a series of two-reelers, each incidentally illustrating construction and use of radio apparatus.

Will Jim and Charles Hatton are featured. Paul Cazeneuve is director.

Five-reel dramatic features and a one-reel straight educational are planned by the company. Officers are:

John W. Boyle (former chief cinematographer to J. Gordon Edwards), president;

Otto K. Oleson (electrical engineer and head of the Studio Lighting Service company), vice-president;

E. H. Kaufman (Pacific coast representative of Gaevort Film company), treasurer;

Lyle W. Rucker (former assistant U. S. District Attorney in Los Angeles), secretary.

Louise MacIntosh, who is appearing at the Mason Opera House in Los Angeles with Henry Miller and Ruth Chatterton, has been secured by Metro to appear in "Country Love," Billie Dove's initial starring picture which Emile Chautard will direct.

The title of Marshall Neilan's forthcoming release through First National has been changed from "Her Man" to "Minnie." "Minnie" was suggested by a story from the pen of George Pattulo, called "Her Man."

"The Wheel of Fortune," directed by Capt. Peacocks and featuring Grace Darmond, has been completed. It will be distributed by the Independent Productions Distributing Syndicate.

Actual shooting has commenced on B. P. Schulberg's "Money, Money, Money," starring Katherine MacDonald. Tom Forman is directing.

John M. Stahl has been shooting some race-track scenes for his next Louis B. Mayer-First National release, "The Dangerous Age," at Exposition Park.

PHILLIPPE DE LACEY

Richard Walton Tully has finished many of the interiors for "Omar the Tentmaker," and Guy Bates Post and the entire company will shortly leave for location to film some of the desert scenes.

Ed Gibson has returned from a ten-day trip to Victorville with the "Gallop Kid" company.

Frank Mayo's next picture will be "Wolf Law," directed by Stuart Paton.

George Monberg, after a short sick spell, signed the dotted line to a Fred Hibbard's right hand bower in the making of his two-reel kid and animal pictures over at the United studios.

William Beaudine, eastern dispatches have it, is to direct Wesley Barry for Harry Rapf, at the Werner Bros. studios. The story deals with "Little Heroes of the Street." Sam and Jack Werner ought to arrive from New York City most any day as they and Harry Rapf left for the coast the other day.

Jack Dougherty, red-headed and Irish, is to be Katherine MacDonald's new leading man in "Money, Money, Money."

Fred Weller has returned from Balboa, where he has been on location with George Fitzmaurice company.

GIVES STATE RIGHTS DATA

State rights buyers want pictures but have no cash, according to Independent Producers Distributing syndicate of Los Angeles.

Good prices and guarantees on percentage or credit basis are offered by buyers, states James Calnay of the syndicate, but only big exchanges can make cash deals.

The syndicate offers independent producers a free service of advice on what to produce and what price to expect.

Universal has purchased and will release "The Exile," an all-star picture made by Irving Cummings at Universal City. Those in the cast are Gladys Brockwell, Mahlon Hamilton, Stuart Holmes and Kate Price.

Harold Austin is exchanging his talent for some of the Fox companies good money in the Erle Kenton troupe.

Pete Morrisson is to start right after Independence Day making another feature under the Sanford banner, with F. S. Matteson directing.

Al Semenacher is to go north and make a baker's dozen two-reel subjects with an entire Chinese cast. Backed by Mongolian capitalists who are located in San Francisco.

Slim Summerville has started once more with Clyde Cook on an Arabian comedy which they were working on when the famous comedian was injured.

Wallace Fox is assisting his brother, Finis Fox, who is directing a seven-reel feature. The locale is laid in the Sunny South and has Senator Howard and an all-star cast interpreting the characters in the film play. This is the first presentation of "The Bishop of the Ozarks" books to find their way to the screen.

Dorothy Terry is now working on her second picture for the William Fox Sunshine Comedies under the direction of Erle Kenton.

Virgil Hart returned from the hills where the Wm. Russell Co. amused some of the townspeople at Big Bear by filming some scenes.

Otto Fries finished with the Hamilton-White company in time to be cast with the Al St. John comedy unit at the Fox studios.

Fred Caldwell, Gene Evans and Mrs. A. B. Maescher left Tuesday evening for New York City, where they intend to sell "Night-Life In Hollywood."

Scott Sidney and Harold Beaudine slipped away from the studio on a fishing trip. They not only brought back their share of fishes, but some new ideas for Christie Comedies.

Hughey Fay is again directing Lloyd Hamilton at the United studios aided by Lloyd Bacon and a staff of gag men.

Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corporation, the producers of Century Comedies, is making arrangements to leave for his annual trip abroad. While abroad Mr. Stern usually combines business with pleasure, by investigating comedy conditions over there. Abe Stern, brother and associate of Julius, is now resting in Europe, but will return as soon as his brother's accommodations are completely taken care of.

Organize University of the Cinema

SCHOOL opens at the Lasky studio July 6. When Jesse E. Lasky returns from Europe on that date, the Paramount stock company and school will begin regular sessions.

The curriculum consists of subjects dramatic and technical, a few of which are included in some university course; the remainder can be studied at no other place.

The entrance requirement to this University of the Cinema is that the applicant be a member of the Paramount stock company. There are no tuition fees to students, and no amount of money can secure a course for an outsider.

Instruction is given in these subjects: Photodrama theory and practice, photo comedy, scenario, direction, pictorial values, cinematography and lighting, acting, make-up, physical culture, dancing, carriage and fencing, horsemanship, motion picture history, costume theory, architecture and interior decoration.

Versatility is the main object of the school.

Originality will be sought after and developed by instructors.

* * *

All pupils, big and little, will receive report cards with their class gradings. Memories of childhood will be recalled when actors are marked for times tardy on the set, absence, sickness and misbehavior. The general deportment of each stock member will be graded and recorded, both inside and outside the studio.

* * *

The one strict rule of the school is that members of the stock company must avoid places, circumstances and conduct which might in any way bring themselves and the motion picture profession into disrepute. Violation of this rule brings liability to instant dismissal.

* * *

Good health is considered the basis of good work by the school's faculty. Therefore proper exercise, sufficient sleep, fresh air, proper diet are urged on stock members.

"Temperament" comes under deportment. Twenty-five percent of it is as far as a player may go without being expelled. All members must maintain at least 75 percent grading in deportment.

The inspiration, the development and the conduct of the Paramount school lies in this paragraph of the rules:

"The motion picture, because of its great distribution, gives you popularity, wealth and a great career. But by virtue of this very distribution it also brings you enormous responsibilities. The motion picture has made you an intimate friend of countless people whom you will never see. You are their friend nevertheless, and it must be your constant care never to do anything that will betray the confidences these million of motion picture lovers have placed in you."

WANTED---A GENIUS

SCREEN, press and pulpit—three great factors in the life of civilized peoples.

United, they could make or break a nation.

Compared with one another, what is their power?

* * *

There are about 2,000 daily newspapers printed in the United States.

There are about 20,000 motion picture theaters.

There are about 200,000 churches.

But the combined readers of these 2,000 newspapers are over a quarter of the total population—29,000,000—every day.

There are ten times more theaters than newspapers, but they reach only a fifth as many people.

And churches reach 26,000,000, but only once a week.

Right now the little group of newspapers wield the greatest power.

Both theater and church have far to go to catch up.

To a great extent they can help each other.

* * *

Over 5,000 churches in the United States are equipped with moving picture machines, the Rev. Henry Quickenden points out in the Los Angeles Examiner.

"Producers, and would-be producers, have seen in the nearly 200,000 churches a large potential field, and have attempted to supply and develop it, not, however, with any considerable measure of success," writes the doctor.

"We may catalogue the reasons for their partial success. First, the demand from the churches has been limited. Some church people doubt that it is a vehicle that will meet with the approval of their Lord for the carrying out of the commission; just as musical instruments were at one time rejected as being the instruments of the world, the flesh and the devil.

"New attempts at production are being made. A Burbank company is putting out the first of its sacred films presenting old testament stories. Another Los Angeles corporation, proposing to produce for churches and schools, is at present in the stock-selling stage. A Pasadena company is specializing in pictures with a view to churches as a part of their clientage.

"What keeps the churches from using more of the movies?

"Some churches are opposed to their use, believing it to be not a suitable instrument to carry out their purposes. Others are conservative. They adopt the policy of watchful waiting. Some would have them, but have not yet found the way to provide the finances. Lastly, the churches have not yet found a regular, dependable source of supply for suitable pictures. The genius is yet to arise to master this situation."

There's the problem. Where's the genius who will solve it to the satisfaction of pulpit and screen?

Censorship, 1576

IF BILL SHAKESPEARE'S first bosses had ever let up fighting censorship, you'd never have heard of Bill. In 1576, the Puritans put over an act forbidding the performance of plays of all descriptions in London. James Burbage, actor-manager, proved too smart for them, however, and erected The Theatre, the first English playhouse, just outside the city limits. It was here that our hero, coming to town to dodge a summons for deer-stealing, began his career by holding the horses of playgoing gallants, and it was here that he learned his trade as actor and dramatist. In 1597, the Puritan faction again got the upper hand, and after inducing the landlord to refuse to renew the lease of the property on which The Theatre stood, passed an order that it should be "plucked down." The sons of the original Burbage, of the same mettle as the old man, beat them to it, pulled the building down themselves and re-erected it on the Bankside, where it was called The Globe, and became the scene of the first performances of the greatest glories of all literature.

Credits and Debits

MOTION pictures have opened to millions new vistas of knowledge and beauty.

They have brought the glories of an Alpine sunset, the mysterious charm of the Orient, the cool feathery waterfall—the multitudinous wonders of nature into the drab lives of the tenement dweller, the factory worker.

They have provided countless hours of laughter, of romance and adventure for a great class of Americans who are otherwise unable to afford the luxury of frequent entertainment.

They have given surcease from toil, forgetfulness to the troubled heart, courage to the despairing.

The motion picture has given opportunity to millions to see the work of great artists, to know many of the best actors and actresses of the generation; and it will preserve to posterity the histrionic art of this period.

The motion picture industry has played a noble, generous part in every public charity. It has fed the orphan of every land, and during the war it was the government's greatest propagandist.

How insignificant are its offenses in the light of its achievements!

—Los Angeles Examiner

Film Capital Production Notes

STARS TO BE ABANDONED BY SELZNICK COMPANY

In future no particular player will be featured in a Selznick production over and above the story and production value. The story and production will come first, and such players will be selected from the field at large as are considered best suited for the purpose. The new policy is to be applied to the 1922-23 schedule.

A company under the supervision of Jack and Sam Warner will get under way this week on the production of F. Scott Fitzgerald's book "The Beautiful and Damned".

Marshall Neilan's picture organization has moved to the Goldwyn studios, where work is shortly to commence on Dona Byrne's story, "The Strangers' Banquet." Mr. Neilan is to retain his personal organization while working on the new contract.

Edward Sloman has formed his own producing organization and is preparing to start work presently on the first of a series of dramatic features, which he will personally direct and supervise.

For his initial subject he has selected Frank R. Adams' popular and widely read story, "Blind Justice."

Shirley Vance Martin, well known portraiture and New York medalist in portrait work and landscaping, has been appointed official photographer for the Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge companies at the United Studios.

Victor Hugo Halperin is now preparing another story for the forthcoming Halperin Productions superfeature.

Tod Browning seems to love crook pictures. Ever since "Outside of the Law," he has been deluged with requests for other such subjects, and smartly has waited until he got a vehicle that he felt sure would top the other he has already made. Hence his decision with Irving G. Thalberg at the urging point to make another for old-times sake.

Edward J. Le Saint went East with Harry Cohn, Monty Banks and Norman Taurog. He took his initial effort, which features Alice Lake, back to the C. R. and C. Corp., who are to release his feature production.

Denison Clift, the American director who has made his work famous in England and on the Continent during the past year, is directing a super-feature based upon "A Bill of Divorcement," Clemence Dane's celebrated play that won such success upon the London and New stages.

The picture will be completed about the middle of July, and shown in England and America this autumn. It will contain some wonderful scenes of English country homes, the spring countryside and old-world gardens.

Immediately upon its completion, Mr. Clift will start producing his super-feature, "Mary Queen of Scots," in association with Ideal Films, Ltd. This story has been in preparation for a year and, it is said, will be the most ambitious production yet made in England. Fay Compton will play the tragic role of Mary Stuart, and the roles of Darnley, Rizzio, Bothwell and Elizabeth will be handled by celebrated artists.

LOCATION OR VACATION

King Baggott has returned from Kentucky where three weeks were spent in filming scenes of the annual race track classic for "The Kentucky Derby."

"The Radio King," Universal's scientific serial starring Roy Stewart and directed by Robert Hill, is in its fifteenth laboratory, the laboratories being sets for the film.

Arthur Edmund Carew has been engaged for Jackie's leading man. Anna Townsend, who played Harold Lloyd's "Grandma" in "Grandma's Boy," will have a similar relation to Jackie. Bert Woodruff has been cast for the role of Jackie's grandfather.

"The Shriek" will summon Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire to begin immediately with production of the next Mack Sennett-Ben Turpin two-reel comedy special, under the direction of F. Richard Jones.

James Calnay, president Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate will leave for New York Saturday night, July 15th, to make arrangements for the showing of Clarence Geldert's Six-reel Special Production—"Science—or God?" in a large New York first run house, also in other key cities for an extended run. At the same time Mr. Calnay will state right his latest production "The Wheel of Fortune" a society drama featuring Grace Darmond.

Earl Rodney is to become a star in his own rights at last, and is to be featured in a series of comedies by a well known producer who harbors his stars on a lot along Santa Monica Boulevard.

George Archainbaud starts work on a special production for Selznick written by Edward Montaine, today or Monday.

Halperin Productions have completed the shooting of "What Do We Live For?" and the feature is now being cut and titled.

THEDA BARA RETURNS

Theda Bara returns to the screen by way of Selznick productions.

Irvin Willat has been secured by Metro to direct "All the Brothers Were Valiant."

Production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the S-L special for Metro which Clarence Badger is directing, started this week. John Bowers and Barbara La Marr have leading roles.

Clara Kimball Young will start work on "Enter Madame" within the next ten days. It will be her second starring picture for Metro and will be made at the Garson studios.

Fred Niblo will begin work shortly at the Mayer studios on his first four pictures for Metro.

Filming of "Peg O' My Heart" will start August tenth at the Metro studio.

"Bull" Montana will make eight two-reel comedies at the Metro studios during the coming year.

Metro program pictures are a thing of the past, so W. E. Atkinson, one of the company's executives, declared on his arrival in Hollywood from New York. Production will be increased at the studios immediately.

"Laramie Lad" will be the next story for Edward Gibson's use at Universal City.

Hobart Henley is nearing completion of the Universal-Jewel production from Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Flirt."

Frank Mayo has begun work on "Wolf Law" at Universal City.

Buster Keaton has finished "Day Dreams," his latest hilarity, and is hard at work on his next comicality, a two-reeler as yet unnamed.

Jack L. Warner, Sam L. Warner and Harry Rapf are preparing to start work at the Warner Brothers West Coast Studios immediately to produce a series of current books, among them Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street".

Announcement comes from the Pathe Exchange, Inc., that the short subject features scheduled for release the week of July 16th will be augmented by "The Log Jam," the first episode of Ruth Roland's new Pathe serial, "The Timber Queen".

"Spring Fever" is the next re-issued one-reel comedy starring Harold Lloyd and featuring Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard.

Clarke W. Thomas, Ince general manager, who has been in New York for several weeks attending conferences with Thomas H. Ince and distributors, will return to the studios this week to begin work on the season's producing schedule.

Ward Lascelle has completed the Mary Roberts Rhinehart story, "Affinities," with Colleen Moore and John Bowers in the cast. The negative is in the Ince laboratory for autumn release.

"Gay and Devilish"

THE title "Gay and Devilish" isn't a burlesque one; it is put there to be seriously applied to the story.

Maybe the picture was too highbrow to be appreciated by a humble critic and for that reason went over our head. So that is why this writer hasn't the slightest idea what the story or action is all about.

The director evidently turned to page seven of "How to Make Movies" and found that it says to tell the alleged star what he or she is supposed to be and let them fly at it. If that isn't a good guess then we give up.

Doris May is the excuse for the title. Her idea of being gay and devilish is donning short frocks, flapping about the scenery, and with painstaking care planting the fact that she is a flapper. The least Miss May could do in her hectic stardom is learn to dress appropriately.

Jacqueline Logan read another page of the book with the object of becoming a vamp. She too is conscientious, sparing no oggling toward the success of the part.

Cullen Landis strayed from the fold when he became ensnared in such a production as this. He caught the fever of action and spoiled himself for five reels.

Of course a fat man was necessary to fall off a horse and break up the furniture. Otis Harlan was it.

Bull Montana is an artist's model. He cuts quite a figure as cupid, which fits well in the story.

Lila Leslie neither overacted nor otherwise, but, quite out of taste with the picture, was really natural.

We didn't stay long enough to see the three detectives, Kingsley, Benedict, Arthur Millett and Milton Ross, but the picture was too far gone for them to do it any good unless they jailed some of the actors and kept them off the screen.

William Seiter directed and Garret Fort scenarized it.

"The Storm"

A TRIANGLE without a new angle to it is a monotonous affair where story is concerned, as "The Storm" shows. Toward the last of six reels one tires of scenes sandwiched between titles.

Had it not been for able direction, a well known cast and exquisite camera work—with help of the laboratory—"The Storm" would never have seen light of day on Broadway.

The most noticeable work in the picture is the photography from Percy Hilburn's camera.

Reginald Barker handled an ancient story to the best possible advantage. It can especially be appreciated by the way he handled his cast, headed by House Peters.

Virginia Valli, newcomer to the screen, attracts a great deal of attention. Her manner is unaffected and natural and she shows emotional acting qualities.

House Peters is a bit disappointing, due perhaps to work in the past that set a high mark for him. It is possible that he overestimates his ability, thereby falling down on the work expected of him.

Josef Swickard is seen for a short space with good results.

Matt Moore stepped from his usual leading role to that of heavy. He adapts himself as well to this role as to former ones of smiling heroes.

They couldn't leave out a Northwest mounted officer, so it fell to the lot of Gordon McGee, who played it after the formula.

Otto Lederer, who was playing Solomon Levi in Abie's Irish Rose on the road is replacing Sidney Franklin, who created the same part at the Morosco Theatre.

"The Vermilion Pencil"

THERE seems to be a difference between productions which are put on with greatest care, alluring backgrounds and remarkable photography and, the picture which doesn't "look like a million dollars," but which warms right down into the heart of the story.

Sessue Hayakawa has given us many pictures worthy of actor and photographer. But the passiveness of the oriental nature had continued so long that one feels it as a handicap, rather than accept it as repression. Thus the star of the solemn face impresses one as a repeater in his recent pictures.

"The Vermilion Pencil" must be a thriller when read as a book. It should prove utterly absorbing. On the screen it is a somewhat lavish production, with sets and backgrounds of beauty. The actors themselves are worthy of high praise, but the story itself lacks something and seems to drag. It does not seem to warm the audience up.

The climax, a haste-to-the-rescue, is not convincing.

Members of the cast who distinguished themselves were: Bessie Love, Sidney Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Tote du Crow, Omar Whitehead, Misao Seki and Ann May.

"The Vermilion Pencil" is a Chinese tragedy with no humor to relieve it.

"Always the Woman"

WHAT connection the title "Always The Woman" has with the story, and where to find the story in this five reel jumble would be a good subject for a guessing contest.

An apparently able author by the name of Perley Poore Sheehan, is responsible for this erratic semblance of a plot. He drags his characters all over the globe, which is a round about way to get them in Sheikland, where all good (?) movies land nowadays.

If you are keen and have a good memory you will see a bit of every story filmed in the last five years and then some.

Sometime ago Betty Compson made a name for herself. She was rated a good actress. Now it looks as though she were dissatisfied with former fame and good direction and is boasting of personally producing "Always The Woman." Responsibility must have rested heavily on her shoulders, thus hampering her acting abilities.

Doris Pawn in a subordinate part passes Miss Compson by, as far as character and personality goes. She hasn't half the opportunity but her personality stands out.

Gerald Pring is decidedly well cast as a weakling. His only requirement was to be colorless, and he was.

Emory Johnson plays every variation of role from a dope fiend to a regular hero that saves the star from the cruel villain. His work is passing fair.

In Macey Harlan is a real actor. He is called a prince and wears the garb of a shiek, but his acting is so well accomplished that one doesn't mind seeing a half reel of Araby laid in Egypt.

Richard Rosson plays an alligorical figure. With soft photography he shows up to good advantage. But action he has none unless it is in directing the production.

Arthur Belmore is a good character. That is, he is good but not for long. He is cut out while the picture is yet young.

Photography is beautiful and shows up the awkwardness of the picture, therefore the cameraman is not credited.

"The Village Sheik"

Here is a snappy comedy with little plot yet screamingly funny. Al St. John gets over a two-reel subject that is by far more interesting than the feature on the same bill. He does many old gags in a new way but the main thing is that they get many of the good old laughs, and that is what they strive for.

When action grows dull a moment there is a subtitle to hand out a chuckle.

A character plays with St. John who is not credited and that should be mentioned. A comedy career is predicted for that odd looking person if he can keep up at the rate he started.

"NANOOK OF THE NORTH"

"Nanook of the North" was secured by Revillon Freres from one of their Hudson Bay outposts, and it is a true diary of the life of the average esquimeaux family during a year. . . . The picture is the work of Robert J. Flaherty, F. P. G. S."

Sylvia Ashton has a part in the Metro production of "Country Love."

Harry Pollard is directing Herbert Rawlinson in "Confidence" at Universal.

Mary Philbin will play the lead in Von Stroheim's next picture.

Louise Lorraine is playing the lead opposite Roy Stewart in "The Radio King."

Ernest Butterworth, Jr., has been playing in "The Radio King" at Universal.

Gordon Hollingshead received a telegram from Alan Crossland who is starting a big feature in New York City asking him if he wouldn't like to come to the metropolis and assist him. Gordon is a native son and rightly replied that he loves our own California, and is sticking to his pals, Edgar L. Kennedy and Chester Conklin, at the Fox studios.

PHYLLIS HAVER LEAVES MACK SENNETT TEMPORARILY

Through a special arrangement with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Miss Haver has been engaged to play "Polly Love" in Hall Cain's story of "The Christian."

George Cowi, who played with Pauline Frederick in "The Glory of Clementina," is in "Pink Gods," opposite Bebe Daniels.

Captain C. K. Van Auker finished with the Nell Shipman productions two weeks ago and has returned to Los Angeles.

Joe Roberts, the smiling grouch, who has been playing heavy for Buster Keaton, has signed a year's contract with Fox company to do funny things in a funny way.

Derelys Perdue is the bishop's daughter in the Cosmopolitan Film company's production of "The Bishop of the Ozarks" at the Fine Arts studio.

Gertrude Short has been engaged to play in "Country Love," the latest Metro production.

The Lee children are going to make a comeback in filmland for the William Fox corporation. The question if they will work out here or in the East hasn't been settled as yet, but the Little Imps will come back with everything but the kitchen stove and cut up as only they can via the two-reel route.

Gladys Walton's next starring picture for Universal will be "The Lavender Bath Lady."

James Thompson has joined the vaudeville clan for the time being and is playing some of the Southland theatres. Doing his old time bicycle act with his former partner of the days gone by when he did two shows a day in the leading theatres of the country.

Edward Hunt has been added to the cast of the Pilgrimage Players.

Allen Holubar's company left Wednesday for location at Huntingdon Lake and will be away two weeks.

Nick De Ruiz is supporting Frank Mayo in "Wolf Law."

Harry Carter has been cast in "Wolf Law" at Universal.

Edythe Chapman is among the other notable players already chosen for "Country Love."

Mabel Van Buren is playing in the Billie Dove feature, "Country Love."

Al Smith has a principal supporting role in "The Radio King."

Noah Beery is the latest addition to the cast selected by Metro for "Country Love."

Ben Turpin and company have gone to Oxnard to film some desert scenes. The whole town is ready to greet the cross-eyed comic and his band of funsters.

Mark Hansen and Oxnard capitalists are contemplating turning the old opera house into a motion picture studio, affording the companies that go there to shoot scenes the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce in arranging for location sets.

A well known local director has been approached to take charge of the affairs.

J. K. McDonald landed a very healthy contract with the Pathe corporation, when he went East and showed off his initial efforts as a producer of the Johnny Jones kiddie subjects.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are contemplating making a two-reel comedy that will take them to New York City. While enroute they will film scenes at the different locations that the story calls for. Which promises another across the continent subject for theatregoers to view.

Little Napoleon, after quite a trip in vaudeville, has returned to the Southland just in time to be cast to play in the Erle Kenton company at the Fox studio. The story deals with monkey glands and monkey business. Harry Booker, Jack Henderson, Dorothy Terry, Dick Smith, Robert McKenzie, Billy Franey and others are in the fun-making cast.

Buddy Weller has finished with Fitzmaurice and expects to start soon in another production.

Pickups By The Staff

R. D. MacLEAN WITH FINIS FOX

R. D. MacLean, the veteran Shakespearean actor, has been engaged for an important role in the Cosmopolitan Film Company's feature production "The Bishop of the Ozarks" now being filmed under the direction of Finis Fox. Mr. MacLean has played "Macbeth" and "King John" with Modjeska; "Othello" and "Julius Caesar" with Faversham; "Audrea" and "The Heart of Maryland" with Mrs. Leslie Carter.

"The Mother of the Studio" is a new title bestowed upon Mrs. Milo Adams, playing the part of the Shepherd Woman in Congressman M. W. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks" at the Fine Arts studio. Mrs. Adams has taken apartments a few steps from the studio, where she keeps open house for all studio folks.

Fritzi Fern is figuring on taking a flyer into vaudeville during vacation time, in a specially written skit, by a well known author.

"Todd of the Times" is the latest Pathe Playlet, starring Frank Keenan in a comedy drama of newspaper life.

Clarke W. Thomas, Ince general manager, who has been in New York for several weeks attending conferences with Thomas H. Ince and distributors, will return to the studios this week to begin work on the season's producing schedule.

Dan Thomas, photographer with Stout in the Malobee Productions has a world of equipment as well as medals and souvenirs from the world war. He owns a Bell and Howell camera and the fourth Mitchell ever made besides an Akely camera with a set of 12 lenses which enables him to take photography. These Malobee Productions are released through White and Goodman to Pathe.

Miss Fay Compton, a prominent English film artist, is cast for a part in "A Bill of Divorcement" starring Constance Binney.

Diane Pascale is leaving for an extensive trip east on business and pleasure combined. She expects to visit the studios in Atlanta, Georgia.

Thomas H. Ince has wired an emphatic denial to the persistent rumors that his studios have been closed. He and the members of his staff expect to return to the Culver City plant within the next two weeks.

Carmel Myers is now sojourning at the seashore, leaving the rest of the world to find the answer to the Halperin picture she has just completed: "What Do We Live For?"

William Farnum will more than likely come to the coast when William Fox pays a visit upon the latter's return from Europe. Then he and Dusty Farnum will run some races and do a few fishing stunts that will add many a new tale to the hall of fame along rod and reel row.

Lee Garmes was borrowed by the Harry Carey troupe to film some scenes in which a bunch of wild riding galoots rode upon the stage and did all sorts of stunts at the R-C studios. Garmes is the pet cameraman of Carter De Havens who happened to be laying off when the organization needed a crack filmer of some ticklish scenes.

Hampton Del Ruth will start the first of his five-reel comedy dramas about July 20 with an all-star cast at the Long Beach studios. Rex Thorpe will assist.

RUTH ASHBY

Joe North narrowly escaped drowning last week while working in "The Radio King" for Universal. He was out at sea on a raft when the raft sank and, being unable to swim, was almost down by the time the other players came to his rescue.

Gus Inglis, general manager for Florence Vidor, has returned from New York with a contract from Arthus S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for a series of four special productions. The series will go into production about September 1. Miss Vidor is working at Catalina completing the fourth picture of the first series under the direction of King Vidor.

Goldwyn capital will get an awful crimp in it when R. A. Walsh takes his company to the South Sea Islands. One has just to know the story and the standard of the director, to realize what the expense sheet will look like when the powers that be get a peek at it, after the word "finis" is written in the work books that register what the Goldwyn organizations are doing. The company leaves San Francisco Friday for Tahiti.

Harry Edwards, casting director for Christie comedies, returned with Al Christie from Europe a few days ago. They had been gone two months.

HUNGATE REPLACES HARPER

Mr. Pete Hungate, who was associated with the firm of Garwood & Hungate, has joined the Lasky company in the casting office, taking Mr. Harper's position.

Walt Whitman finished with Nell Shipman productions a week ago and has returned to his Los Angeles home.

Jackie Coogan was host at a Fourth of July benefit given at Long Beach by Syd Grauman.

Sidney de Grey, when not engaged in business, is working in pictures.

Dick Currier, outside of being chief cutter for the Ruth Roland serial, has found time enough to buy an oil station and invest a small sized fortune in all sorts of equipments, which leads one to believe that being a film chopper is a profitable business.

Irene Lentz is on location at San Francisco with the Rupert Hughes company at the Goldwyn pictures corporation.

Edward R. Halperin, brother of Victor Halperin, the writer, is now production manager of Halperin Productions.

Reginald Barker has returned to the Mayer Studio after a short siege of illness due to exposure while hunting locations in the Big Bear Valley district.

Willie May Carson has returned from San Francisco where she was vacationing during the Shriners' convention.

The appearance of the internationally known dancers, Hilda Lee and Boyd La Dero in "The Dangerous Age," John M. Stahl's production, is indicative of the high standard Mr. Stahl seeks to maintain in all his productions.

David O. Selznick, vice-president of Selznick Pictures Corp., has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with Myron Selznick, president and production head of the company, regarding production plans and activities for the coming season. This is Mr. Selznick's first trip to the West Coast in two years. He plans to remain for about two months.

Ruth Stonehouse has just returned from San Francisco, where she has been in conference with northern capitalists who are negotiating with her to feature her in a series of productions.

Wyndham Standing, who is playing opposite Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Thru," will soon return to Hollywood to play in pictures here.

Principal members of the cast of Miss Nell Shipman's forthcoming super-special feature, "The Grub Stake," are completing their parts, and are returning to their homes at Los Angeles, after four months spent on the picture in the Northwest.

Miss Shipman and her leading man Hugh Thompson, are now working in Mr. Thompson's final scenes, and it is expected that he will be through within a week.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

E. Mason Hopper is a book worm. That's granted and acknowledged, and the surprising thing to me is, how any studio ever drags him away from his library long enough to earn a few honest kopecks directing some of our leading stars. Maybe that is the reason E. M. H. knows what he is talking about or doing when he directs a story which calls for a lot of food for thought. I'LL BET HE'LL PROVE A GOOD TEACHER FOR JACKIE COOGAN.

Robert Kelly is traveling about Southland studios with an air of a fellow seeking something, just what no one seems to know. But, you can rest assured he isn't traveling about the lots just for his health, and when he lets us in on what he is doing, a lot of fellows will come forward with the "I told you so" chorus in unison.

Ward Lascelle has contracts for enough features to keep his brain working night and day as to how to make each story beat the other one. He has "Rip Van Winkle" and "Affinities" to his list of completed stories. Now the next one will have to beat either one of these. Who knows what it will be like, or what the crafty W. L. has up his sleeve as his next trump card.

Wallace McDonald is playing opposite Shirley Mason. He did one of those loveable hero stunts of grappling for a gun to save his hide with the old grouchy miser who refuses the business with the son of someone. The old kotcher, of course, is knocked into his right senses by the youthful chap and all ends well. Joseph Franz saw to it that it did, for he is directing the dramatic production at Fox's.

Edgar Lindsay Kennedy, (The middle cognomen Lindsay, I gather, comes from the great explorer kin who carries that mon-acher into the wilds of our land and other parts unknown), has developed into a class A comedy director. When it is remembered that Big Ed Kennedy, as he is more familiarly known along comedy row, used to be a first rate villain who tried to steal the c-h-i-l-d and the papers and everything. He is reformed now and shows the Fox funsters, especially that charming character actor Chester Conklin, just how it ought to be done, and he has proved himself a good teacher.

Arvid Gildstrom finally tore away from the Century studios and drove up to Frisco over the fourth of July. But, for taking that much of a breathing spell, just try and follow Mister Gildstrom when he gets back on the job and you will think that you are on a merry-go-round. He'll open all throttles wide and give her the gun and tear everything down in front of him to make up the lost time.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson (Mrs. Duncan) are due back to work at the Vitagraph studios the 17th. Which means that after giving Honolulu the once-over they will have ample time to give our fair city of Hollywood the double O, and meet their friends, and enjoy a few moments of pleasure and no business worries, before Duncan starts shouting "Camera and Cut" at his charming wife and his all around acting staff, not forgetting himself who plays the leading role in all his dramatic productions that he produces.

Frank Lloyd and Harry Weil are the busiest individuals that one ever tried to get a word out of over on the United lot. To stop one long enough to do anything but eat, is like asking a stranger to give you two tens for a five. You have to give both the rush act, for they are so busy getting ready to produce another feature.

HARRY BURNS

Congressman Howard is credited with the following bit of inside information as to what he thinks about our fair city which is worth repeating.

A Friend—"How do you like our fair city of Hollywood and its people and night life?"

Congressman Howard—"I have quit politics to come here and settle down in Hollywood and live a clean and honorable life."

This is worth copying and broadcasting, when one just drops in and meets that noble character, who is making his bow as a author-star, in his own story, "The Bishop of The Ozarks," at the Fine Arts studios, under the direction of Finis Fox.

R. A. Walsh found time enough to see the Marcus-Soules scrap the other night at the Stadium. Raoul back in old New York was a regular fan, but when he gets to the Southland he is usually filled with a greater desire to work, and less play, hence his being drawn away from his work for a single night. How come, R. A.? Was it the call of the squared circle you heard?

George Schneiderman says if he had a penny for every time he turned the handle of his camera crank while filming a Wm. Fox picture, he could sit down and rest for the rest of his life. To those not familiar with photography, let it be known that a single turn of the camera crank means the filming of one foot of celluloid, and 5000 feet productions is the length that George is working on and he has been with that organization ever since it opened its Western Avenue plant, which is about five years ago. Give this record a little thought and then give the chap credit for knowing what he is talking about.

Louis Seiler, who's word is law as to comedies for the Fox Corporation, has surrounded himself with a staff of writers, gag men, and artists, that smacks of ye ole days when the King of Comedies, Mack Sennett, was looked to and upon by every fun-make as a man who knows what they want and when they want it and how they will accept it. L. S. seems to have hit the happy medium of his organization, and is getting results through it.

Chester Conklin may be a fool and a jester in comedies, but in real life, Chester has piled up enough of the worldly goods that no matter which way the wind blows, he will always be safe. Now that Mister Conklin has his safely saved up, he is giving those associated with him some real honest to goodness tips on "How to make some money." No, kind readers, you won't have the federal officers after you for what Chester advises; it's real honest business.

Bobby Vernon is spending some of his leisure hours with Scott Darling, talking over his next story, which deals with the world war. Robert is going to give the Heinees some instructions on how a yankee doodle lad can go through all sorts of experiences without flinching and foils them at every turn.

Louis Lipton and Chuck Reisner seem to have a trump card up their sleeves which they aren't laying on the table right now. But don't be surprised if they uncover a hand that will make comedy row sit up and take notice.

Joe Rock came out of William Horsley's private office the other evening all smiles and holding a handful of documents in such a manner that they revealed some seals. Not the kind that swim and everything, but the kind that people swear by; and the manner that Joe had his five fingers wrapped around them, made me believe that Bull Montana would have an awful time wrestling them away from Mr. Rock. "What's up, Joseph."

Al Herman is trying to invent a new way to put in a real day's work, not counting the nights that he spends during his efforts to produce his two-reel comedies. Whenever one drops off at Gower and Sunset and looks about, Al is either going in or coming out of the studio. "Is it coming up for air, Al, or just going in after you've had a whiff of it?"

All Fixed Now

Although we are not a Columbia professor of scenario writing, it seems necessary to set down here a few hints regarding photoplay writing, in justice to a number of very earnest and smartly intelligent persons who have pelted us with letters recently.

Believing that lectures belong to the organization making a business of giving instructions, we have not, thus far, essayed anything along that line. But readers desire to know this, and the wherefore of the other thing. Therefore let us hit the old trail for the benefit of the inquiring minds, while the fellow-who-knows is getting his dime's worth on another page.

There is an ancient rule which nudges the bright novice harder than almost any other. It says a lot in a few words and helps keep the writer on the track.

Never write a scene which does not advance the plot.

That one ought to wrap itself around the surging brain of any impetuous aspirant and hold him right in the chair until the operation is concluded. Can't get away from it very much. Having risked our lives at the hands of the old-timers by springing that one, we will pass along to the anxious waiters.

X. Y. Z., whose initials seem familiar, is anxious to discover where successful photoplay writers get their plot ideas. Presumably the inquirer with the alphabetical habit, desires to go look in the same place. If he does he is due to grow so cross-eyed that Ben Turpin will sue him for infringement.

For our writers secure their ideas in many different places. But the system which works for one is a terrific flop for others. It depends upon the way the old brain works.

Some writers are incessant news readers. Every publication which relates the doings of the people and races everywhere, is scanned. Situations strange, odd and sometimes erratic are found in happenings of real life. The professional is able to grab the appealing idea and mould it into something which attracts a jingling sound.

The next fellow can read every publication in the world without getting many such impressions, if any. Perhaps he is the scout who is a dreamer. Some of his tribe can lie upon their back in a quiet, deserted place and have good ideas flutter right down into their laps.

The next one needs noise. He probably would get too rich if confined in a boiler factory. Confusion, the movement of busy people, seems to lead him to his best thinking.

For some it is the inspiration of the ocean; others rise to the messages of desert or forest.

The matter of taking advantage of happenings in real life is something which does not always work out for the novice. He takes his printed situation too literally and does not dress it with flights of fancy and activity that are demanded by pictures.

The resentful aspirant who declares that his returned story happened in real life, does not realize that true occurrences sometimes violate logic to a great degree. Screen logic makes more stern demands even than that of fiction. We can hear some outraged author howling a denial of that assertion, but, like the man who declared marriage a failure after the seventh experience, we can prove it.

THE LITTLE BIRD SAYS:

Some low scoundrel proposes to have censors bar bad plays, instead of plays with bad morals. What's this horse-thief trying to do; put pictures out of business?

Herbert Fortier will play a part in the Universal production of "Wolf Law."

Therefore the ardent entrant should always consider the reasonableness of story and situation before launching his efforts upon the restless tide. The screen public is an eagle-eyed and severe critic. And now well doth the perspiring producer know it.

The put-er-over fellow who gets his "from the air," is a sort of day dreamer. He loaf and muses, with muscles and brain relaxed. He allows thought to drift and, believe us, when he lands an idea it is a genuine one. One cannot lie at ease, with mind wandering in the luxuries of lazy thought, without pulling in quality stuff also.

The man-who-loves-racket is not a freak. Perhaps he was born on a battle field, or reared in a block where four car lines and two fire houses added their music to daily life. At any rate his mind does not chord with his brain unless there is chaos reigning in chunks. It merely is his ideal state of mind. He is the fellow who uses his eyes, picks up a peculiar character out of life's seething masses and, in tuning up the character to deeds peculiar, eventually works out a successful screen story.

Again we have the radio mind. It grabs at catch phrases, or a sentence here and there wafting through the air. "When a Woman Is Forty" was written after hearing the five words uttered by a member of the weaker sex, which frequently has suffraged its cave partners out of many an office.

In such cases, the constructive penchant is the big gift; the faculty of saying to one's self:

"Ah yes! The man has a gun in his hand. Who is he going to shoot? Well, er—I guess he shoots at another man. In that case—why? Well, because the other man has come into his home and—no. That is too old.

Have to find something that has not been done. All right; the other man is his own father! Gosh! I've got to step some now to make good on that!"

And he does step some, or steps down and out until something else hits him.

The writer who plays the general-delivery plan, seizes upon almost anything, so long as it is a lead. Many times he takes a single unusual character and toys with it until it develops his story to fullest extent. He is the adequate person who writes 'em forward or backward, but he is not the fellow who lolls back and allows the story "to come to him." Instead he is the snappy, up-and-at-it fellow, who, once getting the scent, hits it up with brain alert. You can remember lots of stories written this way. One of the most familiar is the bad, bad man, a criminal from youthhood, whose hand is against all fellow men until, one day, he reveals the tiny human spot in his heart by rushing to the defense of an infant, or a dog; or a tiny feathered songster sings outside his cell and—but what's the use. You know that combination.

Other regulars use even different methods. We know of one who makes a day-laborer of himself. Sits down every morning at 10 o'clock and begins to write. Puts in his time until four in the afternoon, even if he tears up everything he has punched out on the old machine. He makes it a daily plod and, despite tradition, he is not in the breadline, unless you can find one on his palatial grounds up in San Fernando valley. His income hardly doubles that of the president of these United States.

There are a few pertinent rules of the game which struggle out of the above pot pourri. It makes no difference whether you are of the one class or the other, the faculty of taking the helpful situation from printer's ink, from the imagination or "the air," and tuning it up to the studio standard pitch, is the really important thing.

Without this gift, or training, you are shooting in the air. Success comes erratically now and then. The sale of an idea does not mean anything so far as the future is concerned, unless the foundation of knowing is with the writer.

Still pursuing the subject of addressing the anxious-to-enter throng, more of the same ancient advice must be added. Among the Joe Millers—which are new to the coming generation—it might be advised that the youthful but worthy writer should know his or her subject before typing.

Do not write of countries which are so strange to you that you don't know whether the First National Bank issues clam shells or cocoanuts for currency. Do not pull a Monte Carlo for a South American crap game. Do not make your hero an Italian, when your knowledge of race is confined to the Siwash tribe of Indians.

Rather make your hero, your heroine, your people, those with whom you are entirely familiar.

If you live in Iceland, don't write a story of the desert. If your mind still maunders around the old New England farm, don't write a thriller about Buffalo Bill.

Catch the point?

Well, we have said it twice. Once more should be sufficient. One cannot extend the old brain cell. Therefore stick to heredity and the message of the home-grown. Be natural to your telling; grab the subject you are sure of, and then expand, with—

Every scene advancing the plot.

We thank you.

This is an explanation to Mr. Horner. Not Jack, who stuck his thumb in the pie, but to Bob Horner, the producer. He promised me a package of One-Elevens if I would say something mean about him, but I can't think of anything to fit the occasion.

I wonder if all these actors who are going to school on the Lasky lot will carry the girls books for them or bring flowers to the teacher.

Edwin Warren Guyol admitted on cross-examination that Alice Catlin wrote the scenario for "THE VERMILION PENCIL." He insists that he had a hand in it, however, saying, "What is hers is mine, and what is mine, is my own."

It may be all right for you, Warren, but the rest of us don't dare try that.

Tex Hewston has played crook so long that he is going to get a job supporting a shepherd.

Her name now is Annette De Foe.

Her name in private life is Miss Clevere, taken from the Hindo verb meaning "there with the goods."

That is all perfectly proper, but how a foe looks after it has been annetted, is more than I know.

Lottie Williams, who has a reputation for doing more parts than the average actress, is not the fat lady one would imagine. Lottie does not mean, a lot of.

Why not quote salaries in Marks or Yen. It will sound larger to the ear.

By standing them on edge it would take less room than laying them flat.

Carter DeHaven is having the dog-gondest time making pictures. He had about 40 flea scratchers on the set, but still Carter De Haven is the star.

Dorothy Dalton has gone to New York to live in her flat she left two years ago. She will be gone three months; which shows her speed as a mop and dust-pan artist.

Finis Fox—Funny name, isn't it? Sounds like the end of the hunt, but it isn't. It is the name of a great director. They knew right away as soon as he saw the light of day that he would be a great man, perhaps an author, so—seeing that Finis signed his name to most of the books, naturally they named him—Finis Fox.

The straight and narrow Pathe releases are pointed out to righteous pictures by White and Goodman, who hold conferences daily in the Mason building. All reels are welcome, also free-will offerings.

RISE TO FAME

Milford M. Howard started out in life as a poor Congressman from Alabama and rose rapidly to a lecturer, and then to an author, and now he is a motion picture actor. What more could he wish in life, except perhaps to be a cameraman.

The telephone business is nothing but Talk, Talk, Talk. When you ask for better service, that is all you get.

Henry East has a kick to make to all assistant directors and here it is. "Let it be known that any time you want my dog Buddy to play in any jail scenes, please don't feed him juicy meat bones, doughnuts, candy, and ice cream, for you will cause me to go to jail for life. Buddy is playing in a jail story, and he refuses to go home, and when he does go past the County Jail and sees the bars and everything he just runs up and begs Sheriff Traeger to let him in and there is my problem, boys. Don't want to spend the rest of my natural days in prison."

Hardee Kirkland has been engaged by Metro to play in "Country Love."

Sylvia Breamer is playing opposite Frank Mayo in "Wolf Law."

Curley Stecker motored over to the Sen-net studios with his pet lions and gave Director Roy Del Ruth and his staff of co-workers all sorts of thrills while filming some comedy scenes with the rulers of the jungles.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE TOP OF NEW YORK" (Paramount)

"There is nothing new or novel in this story. It is entirely too long and filled with stereotyped characters and situations. And the director has stressed the sticky sentiment to the point where reality never has a chance.

"As it is made in California the snow storm never appears genuine.

"The chief fault of the offering is in burying May McAvoy's talents. The star who played Grizel never has a chance to ring a true note."

—Motion Picture News

"May McAvoy has most congenial role in 'The Top of New York,' into which she infuses her fascinating personality and makes doubly attractive with her decided beauty. . . . She takes what is basically a rather commonplace role and lifts it to a higher plane with her. . . distinctive acting ability.

"Carrie Clark Ward in a broad comedy part which keeps just this side of the line of over emphasis. Walter McGrail is convincing in his role. The two children, Mary Jane Irving and Pat Moore, are especially appealing because they do not display any of the quite common precociousness that happens in some of the best regulated features."

—Moving Picture World

"The atmosphere of a New York tenement roof is excellent in every detail and it is apparent that neither expense nor effort was spared to make the backgrounds thoroughly realistic. The photography is very good as are the lightings.

"Carrie Clark Ward, who plays Miss McAvoy's aunt in the picture, has a rather false characterization, in the role of the hard-hearted Mrs. Brady.

"The star is pleasing despite the blonde wig and is always beautifully photographed. She is appealing in emotional bits but seems better suited to a more winsome type of role."

—The Film Daily

"There is nothing extraordinarily original about the plot of this picture, but the subject matter is so well handled by the director, the late William D. Taylor, and cleverly acted by a capable cast of players, that there is no hitch in the action and one's interest.

"Walter McGrail plays the part of the artist lover, giving a well-balanced, appealing performance; Edward Cecil furnishes an impressive character sketch of the would-be seducer, Stearns; little Pat Moore is a pathetic figure as the cripple, Micky, and the support is adequate."

—Exhibitors Trade Review

"FOR BIG STAKES" (Fox)

"An expensive and well produced comedy-drama, with Mix getting away with many unconvincing and difficult stunts. The usual rough riding, straight shooting and villainy familiar to followers of Western romances.

"Bert Sprotte's portrayal of Rowell Clark was especially good, as was Al Fremont as the deposed sheriff."

—Exhibitors Herald

"The story is slight and very much on the order of what they generally give the star—plenty of opportunities for him to whip those plotting his ruin. . . .

"Some comedy is gotten in here and there, mostly through the sub-titles in which Tom tells his victims what he thinks of them and what he will do to them. Mix's horse, Tony, has quite a bit to do when the star rides him through the fire to rescue the heroine. Patsy Ruth Miller is pleasing as the leading lady, and some of the villains who take a terrible beating from Tom are Sid Jordan, Joe Harris, Al Fremont and Earl Simpson."

—The Film Daily

Pauline Curley is playing opposite William Lawrence.

"Tom Mix followers will chuckle with delight at the various methods he uses in handling his enemies. And even Tony, the horse, has a chance to do some of his clever acting along with the star. The big fire scenes in the latter part of the picture are very realistic and spectacular.

"Patsy Ruth Miller is a very pleasing heroine, but with none too much to do. Others in the cast give adequate support."

—Exhibitors Trade Review

"Director Lynn Reynolds has offered nothing novel here. The stunts that Mix contributes have been used before.

"The love interest beckons here and there, but the action is so rampant with rough riding and typical western incident that one has no time to pay attention to it."

—Motion Picture News

"The effect is as if the author and director had thrown realism to the winds for the sake of exploiting the star.

"Tom Mix and Patsy Ruth Miller are an attractive team."

—Moving Picture World

"JOHN SMITH" (Selznick)

"Very good entertainment in this last Eugene O'Brien starring vehicle. It is marked by real imagination both in details of settings and direction of the artists, and the work of the entire cast is on a high level.

"There is Vivian Ogden, excellently cast as the cook; William J. Ferguson, in a delightful comedy role as the butler; Tammany Young, as a chauffeur; Ester Banks, very natural and convincing as a crusty, cranky, old lady, Mrs. Lang; and Mary Astor, delightfully appealing as secretary to Mrs. Lang.

"One of the best Eugene O'Brien pictures Selznick ever made."

—Exhibitors Herald

"John Smith, featuring Eugene O'Brien, is one of the most pleasant bits of entertainment that one could wish for.

"All of the characters in the story are drawn true to life and will find an instantaneous appeal with the audience. The touch of mystery that has been included suffices to bring about a big climax.

"Eugene O'Brien's work in this picture is one of the highest quality and his many admirers will be thoroughly delighted with the production. The individual members of the cast are good types and render excellent support.

"Continuity of the story is easily followed and very well directed."

"Excellent supporting cast and first-rate mystery story, with interesting romantic background. Besides the star the picture has George Fawcett, best of character old men, and J. Barney Sherry and a capital company. O'Brien has a part made to order . . . and he makes the most of it."

—Variety

"THE HALF BREED" (Asso. First Nat'l.)

"The chief fault with 'The Half Breed' is its incomprehension.—The continuity might almost serve for a guessing contest it is so vague and the director has not used any ingenuity to improve it.

"The cutting of the film is very poor. . . . So many titles are necessary to tell the story, which the director hasn't succeeded in doing, that the pictures and titles consume about equal footage."

—The Film Daily

"Mr. Oakman is a good selection for the role and portrays it with realism; however, it is not a pleasant story particularly where he allows his savage traits to get the better of him.

"One of the weak points of the picture, from an audience standpoint, is the fact that there is no strong sympathy established for either the hero or any of the characters and while there are some melodramatic scenes they are not convincing."

—Moving Picture World

"Taken from the stage play of the same name, 'The Half Breed' offers a rather glorified melodrama of the West. The production has been well handled and an ample supply of thrills and suspense has been generally maintained throughout the picture.

"Wheeler Oakman, gives a good performance but is not convincing in his make-up. Mary Anderson and Ann May, the two female leads, are good. Hugh Thompson as Ross Kennion is an acceptable hero. Joseph Dowling has formerly had much better opportunities in which to display his talents."

—Exhibitors Trade Review

"Wheeler Oakman appears in the role of a half breed taking it out of the realms of reality in several spots. Mary Anderson in the leading feminine part is called upon for a lot of work. Her personal attractiveness is one of the bright spots of the picture. Her acting is one of the few redeeming features."

—Motion Picture News

"HER NIGHT OF NIGHTS" (Universal)

Hobart Henley provides a good production, surrounds the star with the right sort of atmosphere and in the first two reels presents her in a whirlwind of beautiful gowns.

"Richard Daniels, Wes Barry's freckled competitor, gets over a few laughs as the kid brother of Molly May, the model.

"The director succeeds in holding the attention despite the slight situations which he had to work with and he keeps the development from becoming obvious."

—The Film Daily

"As in her previous productions, Miss Prevost is charming and attractive and acts with ability, but she has not been provided with a particularly interesting story in this instance.

"The star is assisted by a capable cast, including Edward Hearn, as her serious-minded lover; Hal Cooley, as a rather gay young husband, and Betty Francisco, as his chorus girl wife. Then there is also Richard Daniels, a very much freckled youngster. Director Hobart Henley has succeeded in making this production only of average appeal. The star being its main drawing power."

—Moving Picture World

"You may catalogue this picture as inconsequential and produced to present Marie Prevost's piquant personality in a series of flighty scenes, yet it is a story with which you cannot take offense. . . . The point is it serves like an old-fashioned Bronx Cocktail after you have partaken of a heavy lunch. The star is rapidly assuming the position of being the best dressed woman on the screen.

"The action carries incident and flits about without much attention paid to continuity."

—Motion Picture News

"ANNABEL LEE"

"The adaptation is draggy and the continuity decidedly messy. One could hardly call it a continuity, it is just a series of events pieced together with titles, the latter being depended on to tell the story. . . . The leading lady was employed more as a walking model than anything else. In direction the picture was a slaughter of film, there being more padding in it than there usually is in five regular program features."

—Variety.

"THE BLACK BAG"

"It has action and speed and a couple of rough and tumble fights, but somehow the scenario writer (George Hively), has missed the suspense that should have been developed out of a mystery and its surprise climax. . . . Miss Valli is rather in the background, with no opportunity to get into the center of interest, a pale part for an actress capable of much better things. . . . Everybody has been subordinated to the star."

—Variety.

"ROSE OF THE SEA"

"Fred Niblo has handled his material in masterly fashion. . . . An important detail is that Miss Stewart does better and more natural acting than in any picture of hers for a year or more."

—Variety.

What Folks Think

Horn Rims and Business

HOLLYWOOD, July 1.—EDITOR, CAMERA!: It is all right, of course, for plumbers to defend their craft, as Mr. Jackson suggests in a recent issue of Camera, but how about the increasing army of horned goggle wearers? How much longer are these higher intellectuals going to stand for Harold Lloyd? This is an economic question and the rehabilitation of business depends on its settlement.

Whenever a horned rimmed highbrow enters an office to spiel his lay, what happens? His auditor immediately begins to think of Harold Lloyd and is too full of mental giggles to give the horn-rimmed horner-in the consideration to which his intellectuality is entitled.

This censor business is getting serious. First thing we know there will be more people suggesting censorship ideas than there are writing stories. The only hope for the industry is for some genius to take all these censorship suggestions and make a continuity out of them. What a knockout such a picture would be!

EUGENE A. VOGT.

Boosts Rupert Hughes

LOS ANGELES, July 5.—EDITOR, CAMERA!: While most productions are faulty in story, I desire to agree with Mr. Wing, of the writers' forum, that the Rupert Hughes kind of productions are the kind the people need. I believe it is because he first is a student of human nature and next a writer. It is not surprising that we have so many failures when it is reported that few directors can write good stories. Even good mechanics cannot succeed in art.

Scenario Market

HOLLYWOOD, June 29.—EDITOR, CAMERA!: Mr. Wing's articles and paragraphs are clever and diverting, but hasn't he diverted the primary purpose of the department formerly known as the Scenario Market? When I subscribed for Camera, following my landing in Hollywood, it was because I understood it kept its readers in touch with story-needs of scenario departments. But at an early date in the Wing dominance, after a faint flutter naming three wants, I found this: "Other editors who desire to attract attention of writers, should send in their dope. We are not a mind reader." May I hope that the scenario market will be restored, bigger, fuller, and better than it ever was before?

CHARLES STOKES WAYNE

So often do wants of script editors change, it is manifestly unfair to them and to readers to keep the Screen Market standing in type. Camera! intends to print actual, live requirements of men who buy scripts, one or two at a time. Once a month a resume will be run.—EDITOR.

Wants Life on Screen

HOLLYWOOD, July 4.—EDITOR, CAMERA!: Why don't scenario writers study life more and other photoplays less? By glancing at the posters before entering a theatre one can say which of a dozen or so plots he's going to see.

Right now if you get out of a "temple of the silent drama" without having watched a mounted policeman bravely doing his duty against the dictates of his manly heart, or a flapper almost forced to marry some one she doesn't want to, you may congratulate yourself.

Re: 'Pay Day'

GLENDAL, July 1.—EDITOR, CAMERA!: I have read that Charles Chaplin is finishing his corporation contract in order to make his own pictures. I have just seen "Pay Day," and have put one and one together. To my mind "Pay Day" is about as childless and ineffective as any alleged comedy could be. I want to predict that Chaplin will not put any such slush in his own productions. All this is just to wonder what the corporation thinks about it.

DIRECTOR VIA AUTHORSHIP

By Finis Fox

To give the fullest dramatic expression to the picturization of stories was the natural and impelling motive responsible for my taking up the directing of motion pictures. During the years I was writing original scenarios and preparing continuities there were many hours bordering on the tragic. Somehow or other the picturization of my ideas never came up to my expectations. So I resolved to be my own director—and here I am. It has been a long hard pull with apparently everyone believing in me but the man higher up who had the final decision.

In "Man's Law and God's" I had the first opportunity to take my own story and follow it right through to the finish. In the cutting room I discovered my mistakes, but I learned a lot and got a great kick out of seeing my ideas take form and substance.

The director must have the power to visualize the author's ideas as clearly as his own. He must have an attitude of sympathetic understanding toward each member of the cast. He must be able to draw out the best that is in them. Even the ablest actors may be forced by wrong direction to become automatons, while hidden talent may be brought to the surface by sympathetic call to the subconscious powers of the soul.

The director should coach each player on the side lines. He should talk to them heart to heart, giving them freely his ideas and instilling them with the spirit of their characterizations, so they can live their parts.

At present I am directing Congressman M. W. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks," and I have gone over with him the entire story so that I have his ideals as firmly in mind as if they had been conceived originally by myself. I have taken his viewpoint and made it my own by the natural process of understanding rather than by seizing it and shaping it to fit my mental vision.

Why is one individual cold and austere while another is magnetic and charming? Answer that and you have the key to the success or failure of motion pictures.

I believe that the author-director should present the other fellow's plays as well as his own without any sacrifice of the author's ideal: that there are hidden powers and psychological forces in every actor and actress which a director can actualize and vitalize to the surprise of the performers themselves; that the director should be a creator, an artist.

I believe that the spirit of the actors and of the director is equally important as the script, and that the director should be felt by the audience on every foot of film but that he should never be sensed by them.

More by Harry Burns

Max Linder, our old funny little Max, is in New York City, and after visiting Gay Paree will start a series of pictures for the Allied Producers Corp. California may eventually coax Max back into our fold to spend some of that company's real money out here for real locations and actors who have made comedies here since Adam ate the first apple.

Al Martin walked along Sunset with a fist full of ladies' hats all covered with sacks. When Alexander Alt saw him he immediately got suspicious, "What's the big idea Al, of all the hats?" asked Alex. "Gone in the hat business?" asked another. "Nope!" retorted Al, "just having them carefully dusted and pressed for my sister so she can shine up to her bow."

Bruce Mitchell has been reported going to New York to sign some contracts for a continuation of a series of pictures that he started, and next thing we hear he is in our midst all ready to shout "Iris In" and "Fade Out" at a good listening cameraman, and then the first rumor takes hold again! Bruce, please let us know if you are on your way or standing still.

Slim Summerville and Bobby Dunn held a reunion at the Fox studios the other day. The tall, lean, and lanky Slim is directing Clyde Cook, while Bobby is an acting star for Eddie Lyons, directed by Eugene De Rue. The old Keystoneers who used to do the funniest knock 'em down and drag 'em out scrap ever screened, talked shop for a couple of hours.

Monty Banks and Norman Taurog are trying to induce some of our Eastern producing corporations to give them a contract to turn out some fun-films that will make all parties concerned a snug bank roll. How successful they are in making these knights of the film world come through, remains to be seen when they return to the Southland with their pockets either empty or loaded down with contracts.

J. G. Blystone is scheduled to start another story with Lupino Lane after Independence Day celebrations are a forgotten thing and everyone's mind is on his work. The Fox director has a line of comedy situations that will carry the fun making Lupino into all sorts of mixups about a baseball game and other incidents.

Bob Horner dropped into Hollywood the other day to let drop a word or two of praise for the way he is getting along at the Balboa Studios in Long Beach, where he is producing a five-reel western heart and soul interest story.

Syd Smith seems to have taken quite a fancy to animals ever since he said farewell to the Hallroom series, for he has worked with everything from a dog down to an elephant and fallen into everything from a manhole to a real watery ocean, and he is worrying now what Noel Smith, his director, has up his sleeve for him, before he puts on his last makeup in his present picture that he working in at the Fox studios.

Mark Goldaine seems to have a rich uncle or he knows where there is a secret gold mine that he taps now and then, for he hasn't worked since Los Angeles was a flag station, or near around that time. He rides around in a classy car, smokes the same stogies, and has the same wife, and lives in Hollywood. What's the secret Mark?

Gilbert P. Hamilton is one of those busy bodies that can't remain idle long. If he isn't directing or writing, he keeps his hand in at some commercial line, and then takes a flyer back into filmland doings. Fair enough Gilbert, for you know that there aren't any philanthropists hanging around L. A. or Hollywood with their hands in their pockets ready to give a fellow a handout.

Ed Yeager, handling the interests of the Reliable Photoplay Association, seems to be of the opinion that the industry is once more coming into its own and that the actor will soon be a very busy individual, and that his organization will get more than their share of the bookings. He has on his list of members the leading troupers of the silent stage, who are well known to directors assistant directors and casting directors for their standard performances, no matter whatever the daily stipend calls or their services.

Marie Prevost is once more within our midst. Producers hereabouts made all sorts of overtures to the charming actress while she was in the East and even trailed her across the country by wires while on the train. But, so far she hasn't announced her next affiliation, which can be expected real soon.

Capt. Leslie Peacocke stopped traffic the other day when he unloaded his actors that he has in his present vehicle that he is producing at Sunset and Beechwood. Pedestrians and autoists never saw so many characters congregated on a sidewalk at one time outside of a city market with someone giving away silver dollars with every pound of potatoes purchased.

Phil Goldstone seems to draw a small sized army about him every time he starts to give instructions to one of his right hand men. If he adds any more companies to his roster he will have to use the radio system of broadcasting his orders to his directors, assistants, cameramen, actors, and whatnots that it takes to make the pictures that he produces.

Story By

Chester and George Hull prepared the Bret Harte classic, "M'liss," which is going into production as "The Girl Who Ran Wild."

Hugh Pendexter is the author of "Wolf Law," a story of the north country.

Charles Sarver adapted Frank Mayo's next starring picture, "Wolf Law," to the screen.

Raymond Schrock wrote the scenario for Bernard Hyman's story, "Confidence."

Ben Ames Williams is the author of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," a melodrama of the sea to be produced by Metro.

Victor Bridges is the author of "Another Man's Shoes," which has been secured by Universal.

Arthur Statter is adapting "Another Man's Shoes" to the screen.

Ralph Cummins is the author of "Laramie Lad," Edward Gibson's next starring picture.

A. P. Younger is adapting "Laramie Lad" for Edward Gibson, to the screen.

George Randolph Chester, novelist and scenario writer, has been assigned by Universal to prepare the continuity of "The Lavendar Bath Lady."

Zasu Pitts is to return to the screen. She has been signed by Metro for a role in "Country Love."

Rex Ingram will leave for New York in about three weeks, where his next picture will be made.

"The Shriek" is an original story from the pen of Mack Sennett.

Townsend Martin, who plays the role of Holcomb Berry, the quarrelsome bully in "The Cradle Buster" in which Glenn Hunter is starred, and who will also be seen in Hunter's next picture "Second Fiddle", has collaborated with Frank Tuttle in writing a new story for Glenn Hunter, entitled "The Lap of Luxury".

Miss Bradley King, Ince staff writer and author of "Jim" and "A Man of Action," two specials for autumn release, is completing an original story with American "news" as the theme. The feature, as yet untitled, will soon enter production with an all-star cast.

Alf Goulding is taking a fling at the Canadian Mounted Police in a burlesque with Baby Peggy Jean. It is one of those heart and soul gripping situations where the red jacket, with his blood curdling for excitement, rushes in where there are an army of men with guns staring him in the face and hollers right out in the open "Hands up" and of course, being actors at so much per day, they obey orders. What are we coming to next. Now they have a baby doing he-man stuff.

Laurette Taylor and her husband, J. Hartley Manners, will arrive here about Aug. 1. Not only will Miss Taylor's husband be with her, but he brings along his trusty typewriter, and will complete a story which will be produced by Metro during his stay in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. Manners will reside near the ocean while they are in California.

BOBBY VERNON, SAYS HE WOULD HATE TO MAKE A LIVING SELLING USED CARS IN SPITE OF THE FACT, POVERTY IS NO DISGRACE HE HAS TRIED EVERY KNOWN METHOD IN THE ART OF SALESMANSHIP TO GET RID OF ONE OF HIS.

Josie Sedgwick has just signed a contract with the Jackie Coogan productions whereby she will enact the role of Jackie's mother in the starlet's forthcoming production.

"The Dumb-Bell" is the title of the latest Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard. Assisting Pollard in the offering are Marie Mosquini, Noah Young and the Hal Roach comedians.

EXTRA! TITLE UNCHANGED

The title of "The Long Chance," Peter B. Kyne's story which is being made into a Universal-Jewel picture, will not be changed.

Walsh, Goldwyn director, set forth from San Francisco, Thursday, for the South Sea Islands, where "Captain Blackbird," a romantic melodrama by Carey Wilson, will be filmed. Pauline Starke will play the leading feminine role. This announcement was not made until the day before sailing. House Peters will be Captain Blackbird and Antonio Moreno plays the young American.

Jack Pickford and his company filming "Garrison's Finish" left Thursday for the Tevis Ranch near Bakersfield for location work.

Madge Bellamy has the leading feminine role in "Garrison's Finish" and Arthur Rosson is directing.

William Duncan, Vitagraph star, accompanied by Mrs. Duncan, motored to San Francisco several days ago on his way to Honolulu. A two weeks' sojourn in the islands will be followed by a return to the studio and opening of production on a new picture, titled "When Danger Smiles."

Pauline Frederick will have the leading role in an A. H. Woods play entitled "By Right of Conquest," a three act drama by Michael Morton, who wrote that melodramatic success, "The Yellow Ticket."

Jerry Mandy is putting over some of his eccentricities in the Fox comedies, much to the satisfaction of himself and the director. This is his starting point at that studio, and his work is being watched with interest by all concerned.

Carl Gerard has been added to the cast of "The Voice From the Minaret," which Joseph M. Schenck is producing, with Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien. Frank Lloyd is directing.

Vaughn C. Marshall, one of Australia's prominent exhibitors, located in Melbourne, was a visitor to the studios of Mack Sennett comedies.

Thomas O'Connor of Laredo, Texas, is in Hollywood to visit his son, Robert O'Connor, comedy producer.

BOBBY CONNELLY DIES

Bobby Connelly, child picture and vaudeville actor, died today at his home here of bronchitis and an enlarged heart. Heading a vaudeville team of his own, Bobby was one of the highest paid juveniles behind the footlights. His parents are actors.

Two years ago the child played in "Humoresque," and later in "The Old Oaken Bucket." Once he was with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, and at times he appeared with Harry Moran and the late Olive Thomas.

Athens of The Pacific

By FERDINAND EARLE

Sometimes we lose sight of the fact that we live in a motion picture community—or rather, we never lose sight of the motion pictures, but we take the home and community life for granted. Camera! hails the summer symphonic concerts in the Bowl as a distinct cultural step forward in a community of artists.—
EDITOR.

THERE is no delight more healthful and enduring than to sit amid the serene, star-lit mountains of the Bowl and listen to the tone poems of Beethoven, Wagner and other giants of song.

With the inauguration of forty great open-air concerts by the Philharmonic Orchestra this summer in the Hollywood Bowl, it may more than ever be said that the influences which brought about the pre-eminence of ancient Greece are at work to make Los Angeles the art center of modern civilization.

The fascination of nearby desert, mountain and sea, combined with all-year climate and scenic splendor, is attracting not only the wealth of America to those shores, but also those divine vagabonds and gypsies, artists of all the arts and musicians from every clime.

Alfred Hertz, whose work at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra has made him dear to music-lovers, is conducting a series of concerts within the reach of the humblest purse.

Here the cultured can find relaxation and enjoyment; here the younger people may acquaint themselves with the treasures of modern and ancient music; here the music-starved proletariat may be initiated into the realm of music; and here our summer visitors may have all that is best in music in the world and in California under ideal circumstances.

The cities of Europe vie with one another and take great pride in their permanent symphony orchestras, many of which also play on summer evenings to all the people. But no enthusiast ever listened to music under more entrancing conditions than in our Bowl.

The community owes a debt of gratitude to William Clark, Jr., who founded the orchestra, and to Mrs. J. J. Carter, whose untiring efforts has made this "dream come true."

The Cinema Invasion

THE influence of the motion picture scenario has developed a new type of literature in France.

While American readers protest that the motion picture is corrupting the novel and the short story, said to be now written primarily with the screen in view, the situation is quite the reverse across the water.

Cinema influence on French literature makes for brevity and brilliance, critics say.

If American authors "would take the trouble of studying the pictures, instead of trying to make money out of them, and discover the elements in the cinema technique which are capable of making their own work fruitful, we might have better movies, and we certainly would have a few less bad pictures."

Thus spoke Gilbert Seldes recently in Vanity Fair.

There are two excellent examples of the French use of the scenario as a method of fiction in the work of Blaiso Cendrars, poet. He has written "The End of the World," a cosmic cinema-novel in fifty-five swift, concisely told scenes.

"It deals with a sort of tribal deity, resident on a planet accessible to all the mechanical comforts of this earth," Seldes tells us, "who is induced to travel to Mars as a propagandist for his own religion. . . . Too late he learns that 'the Martians are disillusioned and confirmed pacifists, iodophages living on the peptonic vapors of human blood but incapable of bearing the sight of least cruelty.' . . . Thereafter, with the aid of retarded and accelerated projection we see the world slowly dissolving into its elements, through those stages so graphically presented to us a year ago by H. G. Wells. There is chaos, and then annihilation.

"And then, by an accident in the projection room, the film begins to reverse and so, naturally, one gropes upward out of the slime and returns to the first scene . . . the tribal deity at his American (roll-top) desk. He hastily signs innumerable letters. . . . He rises, lights a big cigar, looks at his watch, strides nervously up and down the room. . . . Suddenly he snatches the telephone and begins to 'phone furiously. . .

"That is American movie technique which M. Cendrars has evidently learned all too well, because he uses it, in all its tedious detail in 'La Perie Fievreuse,' for which he is publishing, not a scenario, but a director's script, with the cutbacks and visions and close-ups all numbered and marked. . .

It was inevitable that the screen should influence literature, even though its critics will not admit it is a form of literature. (That is rapidly being disproven by such as George Ade and Rupert Hughes.)

But the effect on the form of literature is so far unhappy in America.

Film Capital Production Notes

SELZNICK PRODUCTION PLANS

Myron Selznick has started a new production at the United studios co-starring Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle. The entire company is uniting in an effort to make this the biggest feature ever turned out by the Selznick organization. Their future productions will be conducted along the policy recently adopted by Selznick—that of doing away with individual stars.

Reginald Barker's company left yesterday in a special car for Spokane, from which point they will travel to British Columbia and the Kootenay Lake district.

All the important scenes of "Timber," the first Reginald Barker Production made for Louis B. Mayer, are to be filmed in the above district.

William Watson is winding up another in a long series of comedies starring Neely Edwards at Universal City. The current effort is "Doing 'Em Good." Violet Joy provides the foil to the nonsense of Edwards.

The final scenes of "On the High Seas," Irvin V. Willat's production for Paramount, have been completed. The picture, which is an adaptation by E. Magnus Ingleton of Edward Sheldon's first photoplay effort, will now undergo cutting and titling.

M. A. Litson, well remembered for his Edgar Series which featured Johnny Jones for the Goldwyn Corp., has hit upon a line of comedies for his star that seems to have struck the popular chord with the Pathe Corp. of New York. They are doing a child's version of "Uncle Tom" for the movies.

William Craft is cutting a sea picture that he made that features George Larkin and has a cast that is second to none. The production was made for the Russell Productions and is the first of a series of such narratives that Director Craft expects to turn out for that organization.

George Marshall is waiting for the final O. K. from the big city on his initial Tuttle story that he made at the United studios. Those that saw it feel sure that it will meet with the highest approval with those connected with organization that is to release them as two-reel western pictures.

Director Bert Van Tuyle is now engaged in making the animal scenes for the "Grub Steak" in the mountains near the Canadian Border and as soon as they are completed he will start cutting. The story was written by Miss Shipman who is the star. The other principal parts are played by Walt Whitman, Alfred Allen, Hugh Thompson, George Hernandez, C. K. Van Auken and Ah Wing.

Ralph Staub is making a series of one-reel subjects releasing one every week which carries with it a title of "Did This Ever Happen to You?" Who will handle the distribution of these pictures hasn't been decided. But R. S. expects to have contracts closed very shortly, as he is shipping three subjects east this week.

SLOMAN STARTS WORK ON FIRST INDEPENDENT FEATURE

Cameras started grinding this week at Fine Arts on "Blind Justice," the first picture to be made by Edward Sloman, noted director, since joining the ranks of independent producers. "Blind Justice" has been adapted to the screen by Hylda Hollis from the original story by Frank R. Adams and is being personally directed by Mr. Sloman.

The latest brilliant touch to Goldstone's production, "Deserted at the Altar," is Barbara Tennant, for sometime absent from the screen.

Bertram Bracken has started production on the first of a series of stories from his own pen, the first six have already been arranged for release. Will Ehfee, who has assisted him for the past two years will again be with him. Bracken heads his own company and will shoot all interiors at the Hollywood studio.

Harry Moody and his company, who went to Bisbee, Arizona, to make a series of eight pictures, are now working on their last story, and will return to Los Angeles within the next ten days. In the organization is Mary Wynn, Hugh Saxon, Al Ferguson, Doc Cook, cameraman, and others.

Marshall Neilan is now casting his players for "The Strangers' Banquet," his picturization of Donn Byrne's popular novel.

Actual "shooting" on "The Strangers' Banquet" will be started within a few days.

"Singed Wings," a story by Kathleen Newlin Burt, which appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine, will be Penrhyn Stanlaws' next production following "Pink Gods."

"Jack and the Beanstalk," Century's second Fairy Tale, has been finished.

"FOOLS FIRST" SELECTED AS BEST PICTURE OF MONTH BY NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW

Marshall Neilan's newest production, "Fools First" has been named as the best picture of the month by the National Board of Review.

In the publication, "Exceptional Photoplays" issued by the Board of Review, the Neilan-First National film heads the list of the month's best films, "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Grandma's Boy," occupying second and third places respectively.

The next Mack Sennett productions in which Ben Turpin will let loose his wayward eyes will be "The Shriek," a parody on the well-known hot-sands romance.

Florence Vidor and King Vidor with their company returned from Catalina Island yesterday morning. They have been working for several weeks on Miss Vidor's next production.

The complete interior of a houseboat has been constructed on one of the Metro studio enclosed stages for scenes of "Country Love," the first of the Metro special stories series in which Billie Dove is to be featured. Photographs were taken of many of the houseboats on the Potomac River and the outstanding features incorporated into the settings.

Johnny Walker is to be directed by Emery Johnson in a feature at the R-C studios. After completing this story J. W. is to start on a series under the R-C banner which he has been signed up for some time ago.

Rowland V. Lee is directing William Russell in a political story that gives the matinee idol an opportunity to become the mayor of a town.

The Murfin-Trimble production, "Brawn of the North," featuring the celebrated dog, Strongheart, is rapidly nearing completion at the Cosmo-Art studio.

Ray R. Rockett, general manager of Rockett-Naylor Production, Inc., the company recently organized to film the life of Abraham Lincoln, is in Springfield, Ill., arranging for the use of the historical locations, relics and documents to be used in photographing the Lincoln picture.

Ben Stoloff is getting things in ship-shape for the Al St. John comedy at the Fox studios which has to do with a department store.

Reginald Barker is preparing to start a big feature at the Louis B. Mayer studios with an all-star cast.

Marshall Neilan's next production to be shown publicly in the early fall, is "Minnie," an adaptation of George Pattullo's "Her Man."

Alf Goulding has returned from Yosemite Valley where he has been filming "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Current Reviews

"Nice People"

AT FIRST glance one would think that William DeMille were going in for C.

B. DeMille's line of productions, but at a second look one would see where they had made the mistake in judging too quickly and harshly. Where Cecil DeMille sanctions the actions of "Nice People" William DeMille gives them the laugh and points a ridiculing directorial finger at them. He is the first person that has dared to bring the real social bud to the screen, showing her as she lives rather than as the fictionist and the high school girl pictures her. He openly scorns the ultra modern social set whose standard is that "Nice People" can do as they please providing they aren't found out.

Of course the stage play by Rachel Crothers showed these things to some extent, but Mr. DeMille worked without the advantage of clever spoken lines. And he puts over the idea in a more understandable way than does the original production.

The one harsh note in the picture is the inappropriate casting of Wallace Reid. He is credited with the leading role and yet he fails to respond to the masterly direction of DeMille. He is absolutely inanimate, and it is misery indeed to see the supposedly featured person in the cast fall so far short of lesser members.

Bebe Daniels, on the other hand, is everything to the production that Wallace Reid is not. She is well cast, takes direction intelligently and all in all plays a part that surpasses any of her screen work heretofore.

Conrad Nagel should have had the male lead. He has character and poise and is much too reserved to play the part of the cake eater that he is pictured here. His sincerity in work shows up on the screen even while portraying an insincere character.

Julia Faye, as the social leader who "only removed the cigarette holder from between her lips to kiss, and makeup," gave a splendid performance. Her acting was true to life and she proved to be another on whom able direction was not wasted.

William Boyd is learning the screen ropes fast. Though he has a small part he makes himself noticed.

Ethel Wales has about five scenes in the production but that is enough for her to put over some very good business.

Claire McDowell and Edward Martindale share honors for elderly characters.

Eve Southern is insipid but not hard to look at.

"Shackles of Gold"

WHEN you hear the title "Shackles of Gold" you can also hear villains stage laughter along with everything else that goes to make up a moth-eaten story. It is difficult to imagine what William Farnum had in mind in making this film unless it was meant for a first-class burlesque. Or perhaps Farnum may be numbered among those actors who, after making a screen reputation for himself thinks that anything will go providing his magic name appears as the star.

It is a bit unkind for observers to snicker and even laugh out loud at Mr. Farnum's dramatics for on second sight one can see that he really means every exaggerated gesture.

The direction, intended to be stern and dramatic is merely stiff and jerky. Herbert Brennon may have had ideas in direction but he fails to put them over.

The story from a stage play (probably staged for the first time on old man Noah's famous ark) follows the usual definition for melodrama. This includes the wife-in-name-only, the villain who entices the wife away and the jealous neglected husband all set into the general jumble of motion. "Shackles of Gold" resulted.

Al Loring is only the heroine's father which calls for no great acting so got none.

Marie Shotwell is the gushiest plotting, ambitious mama seen on the screen to date. If women lived the way she portrays that character there would be a law allowing men to carry guns all the year around.

Myrta Bonillas, evidently an amateur to the screen, is to be excused for her ungraceful acting owing to her obvious inexperience.

Elliot Griffin is the weakling and villain. He looked dumb at the right time and mean at others according to what he was told.

Ellen Cassidy is a great contrast to anyone else in the picture. She has poise and grace that makes her presence a joy to behold amid an awkward throng. She is beautiful, too, as well as a splendid actress.

Wallace Ray and Henry Carvill had inconsequential parts that neither made nor marred the production.

"Our Leading Citizen"

NO one would ever accuse George Ade's distant relative, Lemon, of writing "Our Leading Citizen." It isn't that kind. Political stories, as a rule, are bores. Ade's isn't. There's a difference somewhere.

Humorous situations are plentiful, and humorous subtitles frequent, although they don't especially remind one of George's justly famous fables—and there is a moral.

Thomas Meighan is capable of (and he has done) better work than as Dan Bentley, the lawyer, loafer, soldier, statesman and lover of "Our Leading Citizen." It's always easy to look at Tommy, but it's only when he gets under the skin of his role that he is really excellent.

Lois Wilson as the girl in the case proves quite as charming a leading lady as could be wished for. She profits by every opportunity, but opportunities aren't quite as numerous as they should be.

Theodore Roberts and Lucien Littlefield share honors for character bits, the former as the politician and the latter as the editor. Littlefield especially brightens up several little corners.

Guy Oliver deserves to have had more time spent in the preparation of his role. He has any number of bits, but they all call for exactly the same thing.

James Neill handles the part of the unsuccessful congressman with dispatch, and Charles Ogle makes the most of a very brief bit as the judge.

William P. Carleton as the tempting capitalist; Thomas Kennedy as Boots Monego, the tough guy; Sylvia Ashton as Mrs. Brazey; Ethel Wales as Eudora Mawdle, Dan's stenog; and Laurence Wheat as the law student, are all acceptable. Direction is average.

Watch for the scenario market in the next issue.

"French Heels"

THE direction and consequent unfolding of this trite story are so bad that they almost cover up the faults of the continuity.

Once more we are led to wonder what inducements are held out to vaudeville houses to use such mediocre photoplays. There must be a catch to it somewhere, for we have witnessed a procession of bad film plays in local vaudeville theaters this year.

Irene Castle is featured in this tame telling of an old, old story. She is winsome and wholly likeable, and cannot be blamed. She is the same girl who, you will remember, was of good family but was left penniless. She knew nothing but dancing. So she danced in a cabaret. The young man married her. His rich dad refused to even see them. She pulled a brave act before papa-in-law, and he relented.

It's pretty soft when they can get by with that kind, and especially when such a Joe Miller is done so unconvincingly.

And yet the director also has Charles Girard, Howard Truesdale, Ward Crane and Thomas Murray in his cast. All of these did their best, under harsh handicaps.

W. E. W.

"The Ordeal"

ABOUT the only thing that can favorably be said of "The Ordeal" is that it is well named, the ordeal being to sit through the production. The story by W. Somerset Maugham might have been written long ago when those kind of stories were popular. But today it is threadbare and shiny from age. That does not mean that it is not without its thrills. There are two first-class killings and a triangle situation that will make the censors smack their lips with glee.

The direction is jump and has harsh edges. It is far from pleasing to see a sweet young thing such as the flapper in this picture become so crudely intoxicated, especially in the period A. V. (after Volstead).

The featured one, Agnes Ayres, is a great disappointment. Her portrayal of emotions never varies. She has set expressions for grief with little variation for sorrow and anger. Her sameness in action becomes monotonous.

Clarence Burton, the cruel husband of the fair heroine, evidently did as he was told, with not bad results.

Conrad Nagel, always good, was wasted on this mediocre production. He has nothing out of the ordinary to do, but he brings a pleasing personality to a dull atmosphere.

Edward Sutherland plays one of those things known as the black sheep. He, too, has pleasing presence and puts over an unpopular role with good effect.

Edna Murphy, the ingenue, prances about and acts like a flapper should, which is very bad.

Anne Schaefer, in an unusual role, does some of the best work in the picture. Burnt cork does not hide nor hinder Miss Schaefer in giving a good performance.

Eugene Corey and Adele Farrington are average screen crooks going through necessary villainy.

Clare Du Brey has a good bit, adding the expected humorous touch.

Edward Martindale and Shannon Day have atmospheric bits that in no way affects the production.

Paul Powell directed "The Ordeal."

Where to Find People You Know

Nelson McDowell has signed with Universal to play the "Rev. Joshua McSnagley" in "M'liss."

Leatrice Joy will have the feminine lead in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," directed by Alfred Green.

George Archainbaud will direct "Blazing Sands," the first Selznick production to be made at the United studios.

Conway Tearle is coming west from New York to co-star with Elaine Hammerstein in the new Selznick production.

Jack Mintz is still working with Alf E. Greene at the Lasky studios where he is making himself generally useful.

Arthur Edmund Carew has been engaged to play the leading male role in the new Jackie Coogan production.

Bert Woodruff has been signed to play Jackie's grandfather in the next Jackie Coogan picture.

Anna Townsend will play the role of Jackie's grandmother in the next Jackie Coogan feature.

Elinor Fair has started work in New York on Charles Brabin's initial First National production, temporarily called "The Flower of the Flock," a Cosmopolitan Magazine story.

Little Valerie Davis Waggle is playing the part of Marguerite de la Motte as a little girl, in the current Haskins production.

Lillian Leighton returns Saturday morning from a four months' sojourn in Spokane, with the Nell Shipman company. The entire Shipman company has had a most delightful four months, which have seemed more like a vacation than a "location" expedition.

George Monberg, Tiny Sanford, Jack Duffy, Florence Gilbert and Snookey, the pickaninny, are working in the Fred Hibbard comedy at the United with H. C. Updegraff assistant and F. Corby whirling the camera crank.

Bert Bracken got started at the Hollywood studios on his feature production with Bill Ehfee assisting him and Ross Fischer at the camera.

Jack Pickford has been shooting some scenes up north and upon his return is going to work at the Hollywood studios.

Virginia Warick has been signed to play opposite Richard Talmadge in his current Phil Goldstone production.

Harrison Ford has joined the supporting cast being organized for Helen Jerome Eddy's first starring picture, "Love's Coming of Age."

Chance Ward is associated with Ted Sloman as production manager.

Lincoln Steadman has been added to the cast of "Country Love," the first of the Metro special stories series in which Billie Dove is to be featured under the direction of Emile Chautard.

Rudolph Bergquist, who photographed all of Madame Nazimova's pictures for Metro, will do the camera work on "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which is to be filmed by S-L pictures for Metro under the direction of Clarence G. Badger.

Victor Potel has been cast to play Hiram Maxwell in "Quincey Adams Sawyers," with Clarence Badger handling the directorial reins for Metro.

Ralph Morello has cast his lot with the Harry Burns Service Bureau, who are well known for doing publicity, advertising and sales campaigns for the motion picture industry and commercial organizations.

Gertrude Messenger is playing opposite Johnny Jones at the Hollywood studios under the direction of M. N. Litson. This story deals with "Making the Movies" and is brimful of heart and soul interest with many laughs. It is sponsored by the J. K. McDonald Productions for Pathe.

Arthur Jasmine plays the part of the disciple James in the Pilgrimage Play.

Cullen Landis will remain on the Metro lot for a few more weeks in support of Billie Dove, in the leading male role.

Kathryn McGuire will support Ben in the absence of Phyllis Haver, loaned to Goldwyn for "The Christian."

Buddy Messenger has finished at the Universal and gone over to the R-C studios where he will work for Bill Seiter.

Mike Siebert is working on the United lot with the S. A. Franklin company. Constance Talmadge is the star of "East is West" and at the present time they are shooting on the Chinese street.

Colin Kenney is working with the Jack O'Brien company at the Hollywood studios.

Dal Clouston has joined the Colin Campbell company at the United as cinematographer. Roy Carpenter will finish the Jack O'Brien picture at the John Jasper plant out by Santa Monica Boulevard.

Mary Lee Wise is playing "Queen Anne" in Lasky's production, "To Have and To Hold," under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Buddy Ross and Blanche Payson are working with Brownie, the canine marvel, with Arvid Gillstrom in charge of the direction at the Century studios.

Harry Lamont is now on his second picture with Rodolph Valentino, "The Young Rajah," which is being directed by Phil Rosen. Harry is doing an attendant in an insane asylum.

Margaret Loomis has one of the roles in "Money, Money, Money," the Preferred Pictures' production.

Bobbie Davenport, the 4-year-old starlet, is now playing the part of a peasant child in Douglas Fairbanks' film version of "Robin Hood."

Virginia Warwick, who made her debut in drama as Chichi in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," has been signed to play opposite Richard Talmadge in a Goldstone production.

Jackson Rose has been engaged as cameraman for Ted Sloman.

Billie Hodges has been appointed auditor to the Ted Sloman production company.

Viola Dana has completed her work in "Page Tim O'Brien," her newest Metro starring picture, and is spending the short vacation period between pictures at one of the Southern California beaches.

The moving picture world has two more stage artists: David Torrence, famous for his eight-year engagement with Maude Adams, and Forrest Robinson, who will be remembered for his work in "The Fortune Hunter" and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Both ventured away from New York early this spring to take a stab at pictures in Hollywood. Both got into Mary Pickford's cast for her revival of "Tess of the Storm Country."

Sherry Hall (nothing to do with prohibition) has been engaged as assistant to Director Sloman in the filming of the latter's first independent picture, "Blind Justice."

Pickups By The Staff

Frank Conklin recently returned from Europe, looked over the old battle front of the world war where he used to play a game of checkers with the Boche shells while he was driving a ambulance.

F. M. Sanford, after giving New York exhibitors and exchange men a chance to give his latest productions the once-over, has once more returned to the Southland.

Robert Smith and his wife have taken a short vacation, driving up to Big Bear. Upon their return they will get busy once more.

Earl Neville resigned from the Fox cutting department so that he could get a much needed rest. Once he is refreshed he will start laboring again.

Dick Hatton is so far ahead of his scheduled release that he has laid off making his own five-reel western stories until after the first of September when he will resume activities. In the meantime he is going to play leading man for so much per week.

Richard Walton Tully is elated over the way things are working out in the making of "Omar the Tentmaker." In speaking of the progress he said, "Theatergoers will be amazed at the artistic presentation this picture has been given, the photography will be marveled at. The direction, acting and technical work will surpass anything that has ever been attempted along these lines."

James E. Abbe, the New York photographer, has been in Los Angeles for the past three weeks, making still studies of many film stars.

Bobby Vernon bought a lot just this side of Laurel Canyon and intends to build a home that will be on a par with those of some of our leading artists.

Melbourne McDowell has bought Willard Mack's vaudeville play, "Second Sight," and expects to start on the road via Schubert Theatres soon.

Walter Israel, designer, has designed all the costumes for Norma Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret."

F. Richard Jones directed "Suzanna" starring Mabel Normand.

Mabel Normand will return from Europe about September first to resume work on another Mack Sennett feature, now in course of preparation.

Tom Forman has finished the Preferred Pictures' production of "Money, Money, Money."

Rosemary Theby plays one of the chief roles in "Rich Men's Wives," the B. P. Schulberg Special Production.

Lupino Lane, 'tis said, is to be in London in time for the London pantomime which is a yearly affair in which the Lane family have always had their hand.

Lucile Carlyle admitted that she was engaged to Larry Semon in a dispatch from New York, Thursday. This isn't especially news as the rumor has long been afloat.

Mary Eicks, for ten years at the Universal City Telephone stage, is now at Lasky.

Irving Willat has been secured by Metro to direct the all-star production of "All the Brothers Were Valiant."

Blanche Sweet is to return to the screen! Arrangements have been completed between Arthur Sawyer of the S-L organization and Miss Sweet whereby she will enact the leading feminine role in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," under the direction of Clarence G. Badger.

The return of Miss Sweet is one that will be welcomed by all film fans as well as by her many friends in the motion picture industry.

She retired several years ago on account of ill health.

A letter from New York to John A. Waldron, general manager of Sennett Comedies says that Mack Sennett will return to Los Angeles in two weeks.

Mary Savage returned from New York where she combined business with pleasure and expects to start her own producing unit inside of the next three weeks in Hollywood.

Rowland V. Lee just returned from his vacation at Big Bear, Calif and will immediately begin direction of "Mixed Faces," a Fox feature starring William Russell and written by Ray Norton.

Alf Goulding directed both "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Watch for the scenario market in the next issue.

Last Saturday evening Louise Fazenda was surprised to find that automobile thieves had driven her machine away.

Three days later, while driving through the downtown district, she saw her car being driven by two strange men. She followed them until she caught sight of an officer who made the arrest.

Valerio Olivo is arranging the formation of his own company in connection with Mr. Alfonso de Larios, a theatrical man and actor from Mexico. Mexican capitalists are in back of it.

The Cinema Players, under the direction of Benjamin D. Sharpe, are at present rehearsing their new production. The cast so far includes Estelle Gouldin, Evelyn Wynatt, Carmen Melnotte (Mrs. Benjamin Sharpe), Rollin Rae Arenz, Eddie Jones and Clifford Barrymore.

Ward Hayes, who directed the first six of the current series of comedies featuring Billy Franey, will continue in that capacity, according to an agreement recently concluded between Mr. Hayes and Robert O'Connor, the producer.

Edwin Sturgis will assist Director George Archainbaud in the filming of "Blazing Sands," with Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle as co-stars.

"Love Is An Awful Thing" is the title that has been settled upon by Selznick for the Owen Moore Production recently completed by director Victor Heerman under the title, "A Previous Engagement." The cutting of the picture is under the guidance of Harold McCord.

Jules Cronjager has been assigned by Myron Selznick as cameraman to the big special being made under the working title "Blazing Sands."

Harry Lamont has finished a part in "Omar the Tentmaker" under the direction of James Young.

Gertrude Webber, formerly with World, Pathe and Selznick, has arrived from New York City after completing a part with D. W. Griffith. She will start shortly with Selznick.

Little Dorothy Seay, a seven-year-old beauty prize-winner, has just come from Chicago to enter the picture game in the West. She has had considerable picture experience in Chicago and has played in the Chicago Grand Opera Company. She has been engaged to play in Helen Jerome Eddy's next starring picture, "Love's Coming of Age."

Mrs. Milo Adams, now playing the part of the Shepherd Woman in the Finis Fox production of the Cosmopolitan Film Co., "The Bishop of the Ozarks," began her movie experience on her fifty-fifth birthday.

Baby Peggy plays the part of giant-killer in "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Al. Herman finished his latest all-animal Century Comedy and has called it "Just Dogs."

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Patsy Ruth Miller is working day times at the Charles Ray studios and evenings with Guy Bates Post at the United. In between that time she is refusing contracts and jobs galore, so the charming little lady needn't worry about the wolves howling at her side door.

Arthur Bernstein, who looks after the Lesser-Gore-Coogan interests at the United, is one of those chaps who starts the day off with a bang and ends with another bang when he rolls down his desk and calls it a day's work. And believe me or not, it is some big day every day for him. It's some JOB.

Gordon Mullen, Harry Lamont, Cliff Saume, Sam Kaufman and many other boys who smear the grease paint on and play anything from a dandy dude to a bolshevik schemer, at anything from so much a week to a daily stipend, are all doubling in brass for "Omar the Tentmaker" at the United studios.

Al St. John gave Ocean Park theatergoers a chance to see his latest comedy that he just completed at the studio called "A City Chap" which was written by Glen Lambert and Murry Roth, exhibiting it at the Rosemary theatre. The audience roared louder than the lions do at the Big U Zoo.

Little Gertrude Messenger made a smart remark the other day when Mrs. Peel, mother of Johnny Jones and Virginia Peel, asked Gertrude, "What are you chewing, Gertie, chewing gum?" "No," smartly replied Gertrude, "my false teeth."

Claude Camp, who looks after most of the interests of the Service Bureau outside bookings, had three hundred people to furnish for one of the leading organizations over on the United lot. The way he looked after things was very gratifying to all concerned, and on top of that order he was given a call for another hundred just a few days later.

Scott Dunlap must have learned the game of checkers very thoroughly, for out at Fox's he keeps every one moving in every direction while he is directing some of the stars. The other day he outlined his schedule something like this: "I will go to the beach, shoot so-and-so, then the running inserts of the milk wagon, go shoot the well, make the chase and—" About that time I passed out, and when I came to Scott and the staff had completed their day's work and were on their way home.

Monty Brice is playing second teacher in the Lupino Lane company at Fox's studios. He first learns of some good ideas that sound funny, and he tries them on J. G. Blystone, the director. Then if both see it from the same point of view they try their pupil, Lupino Lane. If it is funny, they O K it, and if it isn't, they try and find something else that is and throw the scenes in the can.

Jimmy O'Shea has cast his lot with Lesser company at the United studios. He will see to it that all those that are entitled to attention won't have to fall on their knees and pray for that chance. For Joimes knows a real trouper when he sees them.

Fred Newmeyer, who directs Harold Lloyd, must have received a bonus off some of the big features that he has been making with the now famous funmaker. He was seen driving a high-priced car out Hollywood way the other evening which caused a lot of the wisecrackers who stand at Gower and Sunset to go through the motion of swishing their heads from right to left, as if they were trying to clear their vision and make sure it was our own Freddy putting on the dog.

Mary Culver who plays with Carter De Haven in "Twin Husbands."

Vernon Dent, Babe Hardy, Billy Hauber, Fred Gambold and others who played in Larry Semon's last picture, posed for some stills the other day with the funmaker and his leading lady, Lucille Carlisle. The famous Konekamp, the photographer, superintending the making of the stills, and Tom Buckingham, the director, looking on with pleasure and approval. Not forgetting Helen Carlisle, who looks after the Semon publicity, shooting her own kodak to make sure if one camera missed the other one got the view. Joe Basil was an interested spectator.

J. P. McCarthy, Victor Milner, R. Holmes Paul, and Harry E. Tullar gave the Assistant Directors' Association members a few inside tips about motion making and the future of the profession. The affair was a sort of a get-together gathering of the chaps who do the hiring and firing for the director of today in and about a studio. Mr. Tullar was there to talk about affiliation of all motion picture interests into a council which can have a voice in politics.

Al Christie will never be caught napping, no sir-ee. He no more than set foot on the studio lot than he was up and at 'em, and has been filming scenes out at Exposition Park. Once through with those, he immediately went into as nifty an interior set as was ever worked in to a two-reel comedy subject, and what's more, he has the interior of a race track stable.

Ed Pearson, owner of the clever canines, Queenie and Peggy, completed a picture with Phil Goldstone and walked the dogs over to the United studios where he signed a contract to have them work in the Dorothy Phillips picture that Colin Campbell is directing, with George Bertheleon assistant, for the Principal Pictures.

Alexander Ait has gone and done it, folks. He has landed himself squarely into a job with Joe Rock, who is about to start a new series of fun-films which will be released by the Federated.

Pete Morrison's latest picture evidently pleased the powers that be, for Producer Sanford started the second production with the cowboy star the minute after his arrival in the Southland.

H. C. Simons finished an engagement with Fitzmaurice at Lasky's, and expects to be given some equally good work in one of the other companies on the same lot soon.

Leo McCarey jumped with joy when he was told that he was to return to his old boss, Tod Browning, for his present picture. Tod was just as pleased as Leo, for they are a sort of a "united we stand and separated we fall" combination.

Lew Lipton (no relation to Sir Thomas) has gone in for living close to nature up in the hills while getting some brilliant ideas for a series of comedies that he is writing.

Harry Edwards no more than saw to it that his boss, Al E. Christie, was safely landed home from his European trip than he drove over to the studio, gave it the double-O, found everything intact, peeled his coat, rolled up his sleeves, lighted a cigarette, sat down at his desk, unlocked it, shut it, rolled down his sleeves, put on his coat, lighted a fresh cigarette and called it a day. But, the next day, every one knew he was there and with a lot of new knowledge that he picked up while across the pond.

William Beaudine made a good move when he hired James Hogan as his right hand to help put over Wesley Barry in a feature at the Warner Bros. studios. Hogan has things almost closed to start a series of top-notch productions on his own after finishing with Director Beaudine.

Fat Karr, was given an eleventh hour call to do a bit in the Chester Conklin fun-film at Fox's, which called for the big boy to be buried in the sands of Venice. All went well along the beach, much to the amusement of the onlookers.

Wallace Fox was seen riding with some convicts through the streets of Hollywood and every one wanted to know if Wallace was promoted to a guard of the chain-gang. But when they heard Wallace's brother, Finis Fox, tell the cameraman to set up the camera and shoot a scene from this angle the gang soon changed their tune and kept their questions to themselves.

Norman Taurog admits that he is back from New York and that his side kick, Monte Banks, is also among those present.

A Terrific Backset

(Special Correspondence)

BLUEMONA, July 13.—Our fair town is shook to the very centre by a discovery which is the most momentuous since the Board of Censors found out that an extra man in one of the pitchers showed here, was a near-beer fiend.

This time our entire inhabitants is quivering with holy horror to find that one of our youngest inmates is writing skenarios!

At first some was for organizing a Coo Clucks Clam and boiling the erring one in oil. But the price of oil has riz, so Deacon Indigo said the money ought to be saved for the head-hunters of Hottomali.

Then someone exclaimed that the criminal ought to be banished from our patient and forebearing munisipality, but R. U. Shick, the undertaker, said it would be too good for him. Besides he might go forth and start some other innocent souls on the road to ruin.

Therefore our Board of Censors consulted and decided that laws was necessary which would send skenario skoundrels to the penitentiary, if caught poluting our pure air with their perpetrashuns.

So these is the set of laws past by our city selectmen:

"Anyone caught writing skenarios is guilty.

"Anyone caught writing skenarios which make light of marriage, or any form of legal punishment, is guilty.

"Anyone caught writing skenarios which mention divorce or excape from prison, is guilty.

"Anyone writing skenarios which mention infants kissing each other, or any other things which teach immorality to the young, is guilty.

"Anyone writing skenarios which mention the little slips of highly respectable Bluemonia people, such as eloping with funds or someone's wife, is guilty.

"Anyone writing skenarios which mention the slight mistakes of Bluemonia church people, such as the scandal last month, is guilty.

"Anyone writing skenarios which mention Bluemonia is guilty.

"Anyone writing skenarios is guilty."

These laws is meant to reveal to the whole world what censorship relly stands for in Bluemonia and in every other richeous and forebearing place, where they are back-setting the sinful movies by hitting at the egg, before the blightful skenario is hatched.

Watch for the scenario market in the next issue.

Solemn Thoughts

WOOF woof!

The world loves melodrama.

That's why women always rush to the marriage and divorce columns.

Also why men watch the train go past, some of them from an auto between the rails.

Laughs please them after they are in, but horrors and a million shudders brings back a certain bunch.

Thank heavens and Volstead, we are not all alike. Some will go to the theater merely to be entertained.

VIN MOORE SAYS,

"Chimpanzee comedies have made a monkey out of many a director."

Les Bates did a small town sheriff for Phil Goldstone and then walked over to the R-C offices and signed to appear in the Johnny Walker-Emory Johnson picture in a nice part.

Just what great moral these flapper photoplays are going to bring to a suffering world, is not quite clear, but someone might make a few dollars on 'em. That's nice.

Do you know that the fiction market and a great reading public always have favored stories of mystery and adventure; that detective tales always have gone for the money? Tip.

H. Winslow Davis: We do not favor certain photoplay contests because the operators thereof have so arranged the list of prizes that they are at liberty to take your almost-prize-winning scenario at one-twentieth the amount of the grand prize.

Someone has slipped us the old rule in a new dress and it sounds mighty fine. He says: "Photoplay writing is keeping on the subject." Well, that should keep one on the track of the action-not-description road. Might try leaning from your window and, mentally "see" your actors go through their scenes upon the lawn. Must have visualizations.

We are holding in our office mail for the following:

Harry Todd, Fred Thompson, Gordon Griffith, Graham Griffith, Theodore Chapin, Charles Arling, Newton Hall, Bradford Ralston, Stephen Welz, Julian Lenne, Coy Watson, Jr., Junior Alden, Earl Crain, Jack Condon, Winston Radom, Noah Beery, Jr., Bennie Billings, Billie Bennett, Kenneth Green, R. D. Saunders.

A Very Nice Woofle

Our Woofle bird has hatched an egg. Much to our surprise, someone almost agrees with us—once.

Believing that this woofle from that dear Mill Valley, California, is well worth perusal, we pass it along.

"The July 1st issue of 'CAMERA!' caught me on the fly toward the San Francisco train this morning, and I hasten to send you a word of appreciation regarding the first article on page nine thereof, under the alluring title: 'Be A Woofle Bird.'

"My dictionary, on being consulted regarding Woofle's antecedents, gives me the following: 'Woof—the weft of a woven fabric—the texture of a fabric.' Woof, therefore, seems akin to Theme—the weft of a woven story! A Woofle Bird, therefore, seems to be the legitimate prey of the tireless Theme-Hunter!

"While the initial introduction of the fantastic Woofle Bird stamped that rare and multi-colored specimen of the feathered kingdom as a good deal of a freak—may such a characterization of the well-meaning Theme-Hunter be forever spared! We are but human.

"It is good to know that you realize Heroes are not always replicas of matinee idols—Heroines, also, are among every type of the world's femininity. All cannot be Birds of Paradise—if there were no Woofle Birds, there would be no Peacocks!

"I take it, after reading and re-reading your article—the THEME'S the thing—not the youth or appearance of the Hero! If an idea is 'different' from anything the writer has seen—and I see pretty much every picture which appears on the screen!—then it may be new and 'different' to many others in the audience also! In other words—it isn't so important to BE a Woofle Bird, Mr. Wing, as it is to CAPTURE said Woofle Bird! Therein lies the novelty. It is different from any other bird which may light among us—yet it is a bird! There are great possibilities in its variegated plumage—there is unplumbed sadness in the depths of its beady eyes—its general appearance evokes laughter—yet it is a bird! A bird that is 'different'!

"An idea is an idea. Woofle Birds stalk among us daily, even in our most prosaic surroundings. It is for us to capture one—and write him down—in black and white. He's worth while!

"I distinctly remember the first Woofle Bird I saw—in captivity! He nestled his brilliant plumage of pine-cone texture among furs and fancies in a prominent Grant Avenue shop-window in San Francisco. I subsequently went out of my way to search him out gain that a relative might also see and know him! If an idea can be likened unto a Woofle Bird in that it is 'different'—with its brilliant plumage of possibilities—why not embody it in the story we are all waiting for—sad—gorgeous—fantastic—different—but above all—the Bird that is different!

"Good luck to your column of common sense!"

"Sincerely,

Cristel H. Burnham."

Miss Burnham is something of a bird herself by way of writing it down upon the page.

Watch for the scenario market in the next issue.

Jim Cruze has nearly finished "The Old Homestead," and the cost experts are wondering how many gallons it is going to take.

Knute Erickson thought he had a two-gallon part but it turned out to be only a pint.

T. Roy Barnes only had a quart Thermos bottle but drew a five-gallon part, which kept him busier hunting sponges than Vernon Keys when signing checks after a mob scene.

Theodore Roberts had a patent bucket to hold his part in but the darned thing leaked. He felt very bad, so they promised him another part to make up for what he lost.

Geo. Fawcett knew they could turn him on for any amount and suggested a barrel to measure his part with, but Jim said that three fingers was enough.

Did you ever see a policeman on horseback?

Sure, that is old stuff. We have them right here in Los Angeles. Although they are mounted, they don't amount to much except to remind us of the antiquated days of doing things.

Joe Roberts signed a contract with the Fox Company for a year's services. Now who is the fox? Joe or the company?

Jackie Coogan caught a goat,
On Catalina Isle.

His Daddy tried to fish a fish,
But catching's out of style.

Eddie McAffie is an electrician with the Finis Fox company. He is their light comedian. He says that the only difference in an actor, a tree and an elephant is in the size of their trunks. Now he will have to hit us with a spot before we can see that joke.

A lot of actors and actresses are going Badger hunting when they find out he is casting at the Metro studio.

Harry Kerr at the Metro says he is glad he is not a blacksmith for then he would be a forger, but as it is he is only a castor. Maybe he means oil.

With the return of long skirts the motor-men won't have any use for those mirrors to watch what kind are getting on the cars.

Nat Deveritch says the Fine Arts studio is noted for its buildings and the way they are arranged. One can easily find their way around among them, if they know how. Knowing how is a Fine Art.

Mack Sennett has discovered how to make a dog and a bear fast friends. I call that diplomacy and suggest sending Mack to Europe to teach love for one another.

Rex Ingram has made preparations to go to New York, a la de soft, meaning state-room, kitchenette, screen porch, etc. No one else will accompany him except his wife, Alice Terry. His business manager, Cornel Ford, will leave later with a hand car and expects to pass Rex about Kansas City. He is physically fit and in the pink of condition.

I made an awful mistake the other night in the hotel lobby. I was sure I saw Dr. Sun Yet Sen. I said to him, "Toy hung chow sing luck?" He gave me a blank look then smiled and said, "You are mistaken, my name is Irving Cummings."

How was I to know he shaved his head?

Julius Stern is such a busy man at his studio that he has to read the many contracts that he has recently made as he goes back and forth from his home. When he gets through making this series of animal and kid pictures he will not want to look a child or an animal in the face for some time to come. For producing these stories isn't a job. Nope, it's a task that makes one go down the street talking to one's self and not requiring any answers.

Vera Reynolds was seen with a makeup at Fox's which we gather as evidence enough that she is working there for one of the fun-making companies.

Contemporary Criticisms

"DIVORCE COUPONS"

(Vitaphone)

"Divorce Coupons" tells Connie Griffith in one of the most successful methods conceivable. Pictorially, as the wife to unlimited millions, she registers one hundred per cent. in magnificent array of becoming gowns. Dramatically, she is just as certain, for the role is one that commands sincere interest, and her interpretation of it is most sympathetic.

"Mona Lisa, in the role of Ishtar Lane, the psychic, is a remarkable personality. Her performance, which must credit to credence both by the director and herself, adds only the slightest mystical touch, and is effective because of this."

—Motion Picture News

"It reaches a high standard of cleverness throughout in plot construction, artistic settings and consistent acting.

"Holmes Herbert made a manly and convincing Poland Bland; Mona Lisa gave a carefully balanced performance as Ishtar Lane; Diana Allen was pleasing as Teddy Beaudine and Cyril Ring natural as Conrad. A small role, buddy, was assigned to Vincent Coleman, which he played well."

—Exhibitors Herald

"'Divorce Coupons' offers a new and interesting angle on the unhappy marriage problem that adds to its value as entertainment and lifts it out of the hackneyed rut of pictures of this type.

"Director Webster Campbell has provided a very well acted production."

"The director handles the story very carefully and with the exception of spending just a little too much footage in the climax, his work is better than the average."

—The Film Daily

"Ethel Watts Munford's story is utterly lacking in conviction. The main issue deals with a young woman who falls in love with her husband."

"The cast is adequate, which does not do justice to some members, since few in the play have anything worth while to work with. Mr. Herbert, as the leading man, never suggests the 'universal correspondent' sort of person, but there are times when he appears the most resourceful player in the company. There should be a good word for Vincent Coleman, who makes an impression with his role of buddy."

—Exhibitors Herald

"WHILE SATAN SLEEPS"

(Paramount)

"The parties responsible for this story (we are speaking of the author and scenarist), have refurbished an old idea and a familiar characterization and by seeking for originality have lifted the picture into acceptable entertainment."

"The director deserves praise for his admirable handling of the theme, particularly the regeneration of the criminal."

"Jack Holt gives a convincing performance in the leading role. It is his fattest part and he makes the most from it."

—Motion Picture News

"It has been handled in such a fresh and expert manner by the director, Joseph Henabery, that the combination theme takes on a further appearance of reinvigoration."

"Then the acting is so well done that the spectator really loses sight of the fact that he is watching familiar characters go through some quite well known situations and incidents. . . . Holt gives a performance that is decisively convincing, getting his effects with excellent acting technique and displaying a personality that wins immediate sympathy for himself. Mabel Van Buren and Fritz Brunette do especially distinctive work."

—Moving Picture World

"Careful direction makes it sincere and convincing. They'll laugh at the comedy and choke a little in the dramatic scenes."

"Wade Boteler is a fine type."

—The Film Daily

"A lively melodrama with timely snatches of comedy here and there, 'While Satan Sleeps' registers as excellent entertainment. The fighting parson is a familiar type in pictures, but a crook masquerading in ministerial garb and combining priestly and scragging qualities is an entirely new departure and in the present instance a pleasing one."

—Exhibitors Trade Review

"SLIM SHOULDERS"

(Tilford-Hodkinson)

"It never becomes uninteresting. Again there are times when the action drags. However, Irene Castle is in there supplying a creditable rapidity of scenes due to her athletic capabilities.

"A well balanced cast gives a good rendition of the supporting roles. In all it is a picture which eclipses anything the star has appeared in for some time."

—Motion Picture News

"The plot is good, there are thrills and suspense aplenty and a delightful bit of romance supplies the finishing touches.

"Irene Castle, as Naomi Warren, gives a performance that not only sustains her reputation of being an exceedingly well-dressed woman, but also as an actress of great charm and ability. Rod La

Ashley Cooper plays Ben Harrington in "The Son of a Wolf."

Roque, who does the leading male role, has every qualification of a most acceptable hero. Excellent support has been given by all of the other members of the cast."

—Exhibitors Trade Review

"At the moment when Irene Castle doffs her conventional role and decides to play crook, the picture becomes resourceful and entertaining. It has a startling way of upsetting any preconceived notions of how things are going to turn out."

"Earlier in the picture too much footage is used in depicting familiar situations."

"Some unusually picturesque spots in Florida have been photographed and the sports of swimming, yachting, motoring and golf contribute some refreshing scenes."

—Moving Picture World

"THE UNDERSTUDY"

(R-C Pictures)

"Doris May . . . has foresworn to some extent her tendency to overact, with agreeable results, and in acting at the fast tempo the action has been set she strives valiantly to maintain the farce-comedy spirit. Miss May is supported by a cast that works as hard as she does to put the laughs across, and among which Christine Mayo does the most finished piece of acting."

—Moving Picture World

"After the first reel or so Director Seiter gets away from the frivolous stuff and settles down to a better and more substantial kind of comedy that offers some fairly original situations and amusing complications."

"Doris May is suited to the role of the understudy and does good work for the most part. She overacts occasionally in being too vivacious. Wallace MacDonald makes a satisfactory hero while Otis Harlan is the unusual father. Christine Mayo is the actress who loses out in the race for hero's affections. Arthur Hoyt seldom succeeds as a comedian."

—The Film Daily

"The characters are manipulated like so many marionettes and indulge in many entrances and exits."

"The cast comprises a small group of players, Otis Harlan lending his rotund physique and his sunny personality to the rich father. He is the only experienced farcuer in the company—and when he fails to get over you are forced to admit that the story lacks substance."

"The settings are first rate. It strikes us that better stories could have been selected than this mild study. There isn't a funny scene."

—Motion Picture News

"NINE SECONDS FROM HEAVEN"

(Rialto Productions)

"'Nine Seconds from Heaven' is different from anything that has come across the water. It is built upon foreign standards and will appear much too morbid to many an audience. . . . The great points in its favor is that it holds the attention in a remarkable way, is entertaining and different. The points against the picture would be its extreme morbidness, the very unattractive girls and young men in the leading roles and the fact that the hero fails to gain your confidence and sympathy."

"Many titles are needed to explain the story which is well acted out by an able cast."

—The Film Daily

"Weird, mysterious and fantastic is 'Nine Seconds from Heaven,' a foreign-made production which the distributor, Rialto Productions, Inc., announces was filmed in Denmark, while the sub-titles place the locale of the story in London."

"The whole story is in the vein of many of Edgar Allen Poe's tales and its appeal to your audience will depend on whether they like this type of production."

"The acting is in keeping with the story and the work of the cast, as well as the technical handling of the picture, suggests the German school."

—Exhibitors Herald

"An amusing novelty, if not altogether convincing. Part of the time, following a first reel that drags unmercifully, it would appear that the characters, shrouded in gruesome shadows, are not exactly composed of men."

"The picture has nothing to offer other than to entertain those who might find it entertaining. It is not a spectacle, nor a problem play. It aims at nothing, gets nowhere and is a conglomeration of incidents."

—The Film Daily

Baby Peggy has a limousine that is modeled along the lines of a dressing room. Here the Centuryette's "making-up" and dressing is done, with ease and solitude.

Maudie the mule, owned and trained by Pete Morrison, has been placed under contract by Century Comedies.

Queenie, the human horse of Century Comedies, has been re-signed by Julius Stern for his company.

Al. Herman starts new comedy for Century in which Queenie and Maudie play the main parts.

"At the Fair," with Johnny Fox has been completed for Century.

Brownie, the wonder dog of Century Comedies, will play the part of a sleuth in a coming production.

Jackie Morgan, five-year-old leading man, is playing a big part in Brownie's next comedy.

Arvid Gillstrom will direct Brownie's next comedy for Century.

Former Canadian Mounted aids Alf Goulding's Mounted Police comedy. The locale was photographed at Yosemite.

Most readers will read with surprise that shortly in the Luxembourg Gallery, Paris,—The French National Collection of Modern Art—there will be hung a nearly life-size portrait of Mary Miles Minter. It must be noted that this Gallery is for France the equivalent of the Tate Gallery, London. One might be tempted to suspect that the exhibition of this portrait in such a distinguished Gallery is one of the most subtle pieces of publicity ever put over, and the person responsible for Mary's personal publicity is to be congratulated.

One of the biggest films ever attempted in Great Britain is the filming of "Rob Roy" by the Gaumont Company. The whole story is set in Scotland where there is no difficulty in finding baronial castles, churches, etc., for location. The picture is to be made near Aberfoyle.

I notice that Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have forsaken the film world in the U. S. A. and are being co-starred by Walterdaw Company, London, in "Under Suspicion." The New York newspaper world is the background of the story.

Fred Le Roy Granville and his company of artists including Peggy Hyland, Gibson Gowland and Lewis Willoughby, are in Tripoli making exteriors for British International Granville Productions. "The Price of Silence" is the name of the film.

Constance Binney made her first appearance in a British studio recently when she commenced work at the Ideal Studio, London, in "A Bill of Divorcement."

This is another attempt to make international pictures, the idea being to feature a well-known London stage name, such as Fay Compton, and a well-known American screen artist as is Constance Binney.

"Orphans of the Storm" was shown at the Scala Theatre, London, for ten consecutive weeks and it is claimed that 630,000 persons have seen the picture during its 150 performances.

Elsie Ferguson is in London and has spent some time in visiting the larger London studios.

At a discount in America and England, Arbuckle films are still apparently in strong demand in Germany. The Phoebus Film Company has just completed the purchase of ten or twelve Arbuckle features and with exchange at its present figure the action indicates considerable confidence in Public Opinion. After all, Fatty has been acquitted by a jury of his fellow countrymen.

What Folks Think

The Carbon Copies

Hollywood, July 1, Editor, Camera!: Your article, "Mock Fame," struck ruthlessly at the producer who waits patiently for a popular figure—and then moulds a carbon copy to cash in on the original's popularity. A producer of this type can be indexed along with a photoplay plagiarist. Both of these types would be plumbers or waiters (and dumb-waiters, at that) if their "within-the-lawishness" didn't play such a big part in their existence.

More by Harry Burns

Pete Gerald, who looks after the Assistant Directors' Association offices of Secretary and Treasurer, outside of looking after his print shop, has been given the assistance of two other members to keep up the heavy business rush for membership. Joe McDonough and Harry Tenbrook are giving Pete a hand to inform the members that next Thursday evening will be a sort of a high jinks that will make the assistant directors and their friends look up to them as honest-to-goodness entertainers, for they have on tap a show that will be on a par with any the club has ever put on.

Harry Brown, for years at the head of the electrical department out at the Universal, and who resigned, is now in the same kind of a position with the Metro, and when seen he said he never was so contented with any job that he ever held as he is right now.

Louis Troester has had all sorts of misfortune of late. Not much doing in the work line at the studios for bearded men, he got into the Grauman prologue when the theatre caught on fire and the house was closed up for a short spell. What will happen next he doesn't know. "HOPE SOME ONE WILL KILLS YOU A MILLION, DAD, SO YOUR LAST DAYS WON'T BE FULL OF STRUGGLE AND STRIFE." H. B.

Bob McKenzie sneaked over to the Eddie Lyons studio and had for himself a job to play a rural character. And the sidewalk comedians are still trying to figure how the rotund chap does it.

Harry Depp, outside of writing some stories, is about the studios angling with some of our leading producers to put him to work in the noble art of acting. He served his apprenticeship in the comedy school and is emoting to the more serious line.

Here is the best squib ever picked up in movieland.

A motion picture agency offered an armless man, who gathers up a living by begging on the streets, to work in a picture at one of the studios. When offered $7.50 for the day's work he informed the agent that he can pick up about $7.50 an hour on the street and wouldn't consider the proposition! The armless actor got his price and laid off of the streets long enough to work in a picture, and as soon as he finishes he will be right back at the old stand collecting from the cheerful giver. Mostly the actors.

Finis Fox screened four reels of his six-reel feature, "The Bishop of The Ozarks," for the group of capitalists who are backing his project. And the expressions that they manifested after it was over was very gratifying to the man who is responsible for the direction of the picture.

W. S. Campbell was operated upon last Saturday for nasal trouble, and feels better for his experience and is very anxious to get busy once more. Francis Grandon and he seem to have something up their sleeves and can be expected to line up a few surprises.

Leo Maloney starts shooting scenes so early that the actors can hear the milkman's bottles knocking together as he is delivering the morning milk to those along Beechwood Drive. When every one has turned in for the night Leo is still plugging away. Archie Stout, the cameraman, is figuring on changing his name to Archie Lean, for he is working off a lot of good sound weight trying to film the scenes that Leo is directing in his two-reel western stories.

F. W. Vander Bogert is with the Richard Walton Tully company at the United studios. He shouted so loud the other day in trying to make a mob act just right that when he took a hand in a game of cards the following evening he couldn't say "that is good." So they took his kale and everything.

Harry Sweet is about awaiting what he calls "Patents Pending" for rights to a regular job since he quit at the Century where he had been making 'em laugh for the past three years.

Henry Murdock is doing a jockey in the present picture being made by Al E. Christie.

Story By

Bruce Mitchell and Ward Hayes have been engaged by Ben Wilson to get some stories in shape for Eddie Barry and other comedy stars that make up the two units with the Federated corporation of New York City. Roy Clements is directing Eddie Barry in a two-reel fun-film, while the second star and director will soon be named.

Edwin Warren Guyol and Alice Catlin scenarized "The Son of the Wolf," a recent Norman Dawn production.

Miss Bradley King, author of "Jim" and "A Man of Action," two Thos. H. Ince specials is completing an original story with American "news" as the theme. The feature, as yet untitled, will soon enter production with an all-star cast.

"Suzanna," Mabel Normand's next starring picture, was adapted by Mack Sennett from a novel by Linton Webb.

Tom McNamara, artist of the comic strips "Us Boys," who is writing for Hal Roach's "His Rascals," has a new comedy ready which he calls a "Lady Bountiful" picture, small boys, to be benefited by a generous spirited patron of youth.

James Whipple has finished what J. P. McCarthy calls a first-rate script and continuity for his next story that he expects to start any day with an all-star cast.

Foster Goss has been appointed editor of the American Cinematographer, which is being published under the management of Harvey E. Gausman and associates. The current issue is expended into a national monthly magazine.

In addition, Goss becomes director of the Harvey E. Gausman publicity department.

Alfred Hollingsworth has been a very busy man for the past few weeks. He has produced three plays running three nights each at the "Patio" Theatre and at the present time is playing the Pharisee, the heavy in the Pilgrimage Play. Mr. Hollingsworth is now busy on a script for a play to be produced at the Little Theatre in the fall.

Julian Josephson will prepare the screen adaptation for the Metro production of "All the Brothers Were Valiant."

Robert Grey looked excellent in a Hindu costume that he is wearing in the Phil Rosen picture that is featuring Rodolph Valentino at the Lasky-Famous Players studios.

Alfred Green is preparing to direct Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," an original story by Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon.

Mark Sandrich is assisting Al Herman in the absence of Jack Greenberg.

Dorothy Seay has been engaged to play a part in "Love's Coming of Age," under the direction of William S. Seiter at the R-C studios.

Jack Wilson, cameraman at the Chaplin Studios, has been the father of a baby boy since July 13.

Zasu Pitts, comedienne, is to return to the screen. She has been engaged by Metro for an important part in "Country Love," the first of the special stories series of productions in which Billie Dove is to be featured, under the direction of Emile Chautard.

Lon Chaney has been secured to enact the part of Obadiah Strout in the screen version of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," for Metro, which Clarence G. Badger will direct.

Louise Fazenda, feminine portrayal of of screen comedy, is to have the part of Mandy Skinner in the production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" for Metro.

Wallace Worsley will direct Clara Kimball Young in "Enter Madame," her new starring picture upon which production started last week at the Garson studios. "Enter Madame" was written for stage production by Dolly Byrne and Gilda Varesi.

People

Max Linder, who has just completed a new studio at Nice, France, announces he is planning on erecting a similar institution for himself in Hollywood next year.

Madge Bellamy, Jack Pickford's leading lady in "Garrison's Finish," is one of six popular photoplayers listed by a prominent magazine assured of very early stardom.

Elsie Bishop is playing a part with C. J. Hall & Sons production, which Jack O'Brien is directing at the Hollywood studios.

Harry R. Hough died at his home in Glendale on July 1st. He was formerly general manager of the production branch of Robertson-Cole and comptroller at Universal City.

David Smith assisted Alf Goulding in "Little Riding Hood" and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Jerry Ash is responsible for all the photography in comedies made by Alf Goulding.

Pete Morrison is training Queenie for further Century Comedies.

Three more companies will be added to the three now making pictures at Century Studios.

S. Blum has been made Chief Property Manager by Julius Stern.

Jack Earl, giant, grew one full inch while on location at Yosemite. Earl is now 7 feet 5 inches.

Elmer Clifton is using the State Pier at New Bedford for a studio while producing his whaling drama, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

J. Thornton Baston is now playing in the Elmer Clifton production, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

The Misses Howland of Fairhaven, Mass., have permitted their wonderful old home to be turned into a motion picture studio for the time being for Elmer Clifton to secure some interiors for his drama of old whaling days, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

William Duncan and Edith Johnson enjoyed the pleasure of their own car over in Honolulu, for they shipped their machine over on the boat and viewed some of the greatest sights that they ever imagined. Next Monday will find them once more at the studio, much refreshed from their journey and ready for work at the Vitagraph studios.

James Kilgannon has been assigned the strangest of all titles ever tendered an assistant director. He has been called "The Floating Assistant" at the Lasky studios. He floats from one director to another as soon as they complete their pictures, while the other assistants stay with one director until they have drawn their last check with the organization.

Century Comedies will give the two "doubles" of the Baby Peggy Contest their opportunity to act in a picture soon.

CHAPTER I.

ONCE upon a time there lived in Hollywood a pretty little leading woman with gorgeous blond hair, and lustrous eyes, and a perfect camera profile and all sorts of acting talent.

But, alas! she couldn't get a job! She tramped every day from studio to studio, interviewing casting directors. They greeted her with the pleasantest smile in the world, but were sorry "there's nothing in your line casting just now."

One day she sat down and thought it over.

"If I only knew when a company was preparing a new picture and could happen in when they're casting, they couldn't pull that alibi on me," she mused.

"Now, how can I get that information?"

She abstractedly picked up a copy of CAMERA! and read this very story.

"That's it," she cried, and signed on the dotted line, and worked happily ever after!

Here's that fortunate dotted line—tear it out and sign it!

Hays Arrives for Week in Filmland

WILL H. HAYS, director-general of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will spend next week inspecting the cinema production center of the world in Los Angeles.

He arrives Saturday or Sunday, according to advice received by Camera! at press time, and will be met by Jesse L. Lasky, who returned Wednesday from New York, Abraham Lehr, Irving Thalberg, and other executives, directors and stars of the films.

His first official appearance in the west as the big boss of film producers will be made Monday at a Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Members of the motion picture profession will banquet him Wednesday night at the Ambassador Hotel, when Hays will give his first message to the personnel of the industry.

Hays will stay a week, visit all studios, and study details of film production. Before he returns east a monster mass meeting will be held in his honor, probably at the Hollywood Bowl.

The Next Step

MARSHALL Neilan produced a picture that every professional film viewer hailed with delight. Yet, they say, it wasn't a commercial knockout. So no more "Bits of Life" from Neilan—or anyone else.

The screen needs new devotees.

Granted that the short-story series, such as Neilan's, doesn't appeal to the run of fans. Here's yet an opportunity to bring several new millions under the spell of the silversheet. And to keep them there.

The Little Theater of Motion Pictures.

Why not?

One in every community. Three to five hundred seats. Prices, sufficient to make the game pay. Pictures, "high brow," "artistic," "unusual"—those pictures of sterling merit the box office is afraid of.

There'll have to be a circuit of them. . . It'll cost money to start it. . . It's a big job. . . Yes, yes, yes. But it's the next step forward. Who'll take it?

* * *

Only a Stunt?

NEARLY one month ago Paramount announced the proposed formation of a motion picture school, whose faculty was to be composed of experts in dramatic and technical subjects.

The announcement was made personally by Zukor in New York, and by studio officials in Los Angeles. Newspapers devoted columns of space to it, considering it an earnest effort on the part of one producer to improve quality of pictures and to establish high standards for folk who make pictures.

It was a wonderful publicity stunt—for the industry as well as for Paramount.

School was to open July 6.

It hasn't opened yet, and apparently there is no intention of opening it.

It was a wonderful publicity stunt, so far—that's all.

If Lasky permits it to stop at that, he makes a grave mistake.

The newspapers took the announcement seriously. Now, if the school idea is not carried out as announced—or good reason given for not doing so—newspapers will not take seriously the next announcement coming from Paramount.

Don't try to fool the newspapers, boys and girls. It's never been done and it never will be done.

You've promised a plan epochal in motion pictures. Go ahead with them, Lasky folks!

* * *

THE fact that 'The Top of New York' is sympathetic without being offensively sentimental is largely due to the intelligence and good taste of its director, William D. Taylor. But Taylor is dead, and there aren't many others in the movie business who possess the qualities that he brought to the screen."—Robert E. Sherwood in Life.

Film Capital Production Notes

INCE RETURNS

Thomas H. Ince returned to Los Angeles Tuesday after a five months' stay in New York, bringing with him material to carry out production plans for the coming season. The plans as set forth by Mr. Ince include furnishing screen material that will interest Europe as well as America.

A producing company will start filming the first of a series of five-reel comedy-dramas at the Long Beach studios, July 31st, personally directed by Hampton Del Ruth and assisted by Rex Thorpe, casting.

The first picture, "The Marriage Chance," was written by Hampton Del Ruth and the cast now on salary reads like the roll call of the Writers' Guild: Alta Allen, Milton Sills, Irene Rich, Henry Walthall, Lon Chaney, Tully Marshall, Laura La Varnie and Tom Wilson.

Harry Cohn is back from New York and will start things moving with the Hall Room company inside of two weeks. By that time Syd Smith and his director, Noel Smith, will have completed their picture at Fox studio. Charles Lamont is assistant director of the organization.

"The Range Rider Series," a succession of two-reel Western features, starring Leo D. Maloney, have been accepted for distribution by Pathe. General Manager Elmer Pearson announces the signing of a contract to that effect, releases to be one every two weeks, beginning early in the fall.

Harold Lloyd has nearly completed a new multiple-reel comedy, which bears the working title of "Doctor's Orders." This is the first of the series of six Lloyd features contracted for when the comedian visited New York early in the winter.

"The Forest Fire," the second episode of the new Pathe serial, "The Timber Queen," starring Ruth Roland, has been scheduled by Pathe for release the week of July 23rd.

The exteriors for Wyndham Standing's latest picture are being shot on the shores of Lake Placid, New York. Mr. Standing will leave New York for Hollywood on the completion of this picture.

Fred Jackman has finished "Bow-Wow," the Mack Sennett comedy, featuring Teddy, Louise Fazenda, and John Henry, Jr.

F. Richard (Dick) Jones, production manager of Mack Sennett Comedies, completed casting "The Shriek," which is the title for the next Ben Turpin special and has taken the principals on location to shoot the desert scenes for the picture.

Billy Franey will resume production within a month. Reports from F. E. Samuels, sales manager, now in New York, state that Billy Franey comedies are going on the state rights market.

Robert O'Connor will add another unit to his producing forces next month.

Lee Moran will make a series of comedies abroad.

"Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's four-story production was selected by Frederick James Smith in the August "Photoplay Magazine" as one of the eight best pictures of the year.

Larry Semon's latest two-reel comedy, "Golf," was shipped east for distribution last week. Semon started production of his new one this week. Lucille Carlisle will be leading woman.

She has become known as the "little girl with glasses" but her real name is Valentine Churchill and she has just finished a bit with Billie Dove.

An amusing screen novelty, described as a "novelette, bound in leather," "Feet—Her's 'N His'n," has been scheduled for release the week of July 23rd. The subject shows a romance with two pairs of feet—masculine and feminine—playing the leading roles and expressing all the necessary emotions for a love affair. The camera only records the feet and ankles of the two leading characters.

Bob Horner left for Chicago, Wednesday, to confer with his backers on a series of twelve five-reel westerns. The production will be known as the Prairier Film company. He will return in about three weeks to start production.

Louis Burston will return from New York to start another feature about August 1, according to word received from him. Burston has sold his latest feature, "Forget Me Not," with Garreth Hughes and Bessie Love.

Gertrude Astor is working at Lasky studio under the direction of Sam Wood.

Alfred E. Green is starting another picture with Thomas Meighan.

Foreign Productions

Many British producers are now busy making one-reelers, and exhibitors over there claim that these short films keep their houses continually filled. B. E. Films, Ltd., have just turned out six of these from famous plays:

"The Lady of the Camelias"

"The Merchant of Venice"

"Jane Shore"

"Bleak House"

"The Scarlet Letter"

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame"

During the daytime shoppers and business people hesitate to spend two hours in a cinema theater to see a feature production but visit the theaters where these one-reel productions are being shown for a short rest and recreation.

AMERICAN FILMS AWARDED

At a world film competition recently held at Milan, Italy, in which about a hundred films were entered, the jury discarded eighty-five as unsuitable to be shown to the general public, leaving only five American productions: two Vitagraph, two Goldwyn, and one United Artists; four Italian, three Austrian, two German and one Swiss in competition. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Dramatic Film, Sascha Film, Berlin; Sentimental Film, United Artists, America; Comic Film, Vitagraph, America; Travel Film, Swiss; Historical Film, Express Film, Germany.

Signor Gaido, the Italian who produced "The Bridge of Sighs," has completed "Dante."

Louis de Carbonnet, in France, has hit upon the happy idea of filming statuary in the Louvre for the purpose of teaching the history of art and of sculpture.

William Fox is in London for the purpose of making arrangements for the production of "If Winter Comes." He has been in consultation with the author, Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson. Harry Millard is to direct the picture. Mr. Percy Marmont has been selected to star in this picture.

It is interesting to note that the majority of the cameramen employed in the filming of the big English horse race, The Derby, used Dallon Anastigmat-Fixed-Separation Telephoto Lenses and that the excellent results obtained are a further testimony to the quality of this product for topical work.

Dave G. Howard is a very busy individual aiding King Vidor in producing the feature in which Florence Vidor is the star. It is being made at Vidor studios.

Bernard McConville has started work on his original story for Viola Dana, which has been temporarily titled "Miss Emmy Lou."

Robert Thornby will direct Leah Baird's next production if everything moves along in the final stages of the transaction.

Frank Borzage is to make "The Pride of Palomar," by Vincent Blasco Ibanez at United studio with an all-star cast.

Current Reviews

"Sonny"

ONE of the few productions that is interesting and clean is "Sonny," with Richard Barthelmess as the star.

There is nothing startling about the story. There are no big "punches". But it moves along with heart interest and wholesomeness that has a soothing effect in contrast to the general run of sophisticated and spectacular productions.

Frances Marion and Henry King adapted the story from a stage play by George V. Hobart. They extracted screen values and handled the war episode without dragging it out. They touched delicately upon the spiritualistic episodes adding beauty to the film rather than preachment.

Henry King directed with an understanding of the subject obtained by co-operating with the scenarist.

Richard Barthelmess plays a dual role, one character bordering on the snob, the other a roughneck. The effect brings out his versatility to the best advantage. It gives him good material and he shows exceptional ability as well as his known pleasing personality.

Pauline Garon makes us wonder what we have been missing in not seeing her before on the screen. She is decidedly individual, a most capable little actress and has depth added to quaint beauty. As "little sister" she is indeed captivating.

Margaret Seddon does some excellent acting as the blind mother.

Lucy Fox is not so graceful nor is she beautiful, but she is a good type and fits the part.

Herbert Grimwood, the heavy, is the one jarring note in the picture. He oversteps his bounds of villainy and overacts his role.

Patterson Dial, Fred Nicholls, James Trebell, Margaret Faulconer and Virginia Magee fill out the cast.

R. W.

"The Eyes of the Mummy"

POLA NEGRI is Paramounting around town once more, but someone seems to have stolen her chariot. The present vehicle is quite a curiosity to those of the younger generation, for the gowns are as much down at the heel as the plot.

Just how long ago Australia suffered the making of this film ark is up to the archaeologist. The three guesses given the audience are not sufficient.

Those who witnessed the first run enjoyed several laughs but, as the scenes commanding the merriment were intended for tragedy, it would seem that Paramount has purchased a job lot of Pola Negris, the good with the bad.

At any rate, if this feature is a sample of the dreaded foreign invasion, all reissues of American one-reelers are safe.

This screen attack of acute film rheumatism is no reflection upon Miss Negri's histrionic ability, unless one counts the reflection of her own vivacious person in the brilliant shoe-shine upon the villain's face. Emil Jannings, as Radu, a fanatic, and the only other person named in the cast, packs a Shinola visage which would cause an old-time minstrel to wrap the drapery of his Joe Miller about about him and go to press.

There are two other persons who have parts, but they get little chance between Pola enjoying a nightmare, and Radu, the desert mystic, whose hidden powers allow him to remove black circles from his face at every touch, without pain—to himself.

The direction of the production is almost as enlivening as the underground mummy tomb, which set seems to have been borrowed from some slap-stick studio.

The orchestra showed great restraint during the presentation. It did not play "We are dying, Egypt, dying—."

—W. E. W.

The youngest Romeo and Juliet of the screen score a big hit in "Supply and Demand." Gertrude Mesenger plays Johnny Jones' lead.

"Supply and Demand"

IT is satisfying indeed to see a producer come along with a two-reeler that is far above the average feature picture and dare to choose the simplest of stories and most unsophisticated of players for his subject. That is what J. K. McDonald has done in his initial production "Supply and Demand."

James H. Finn has written a story of high finance that the kiddies play in grownup fashion. Finn knows his subject well. He has written a story in a way that will be understandable and enjoyable to children as well as their parents.

Mason Litson, the director, has handled the kiddies well. He makes every child actor a true to life character, and every parent who sees the production will recognize the different kids antics.

Johnny Jones, of course, is the star of the production. His work is the best that can be found in child talent on the screen. He has perfect understanding of values and never does he over act. He seems always at ease before the camera.

Gertrude Mesenger, though a little doll of a child, plays a hoydenish part. She is the only girl in the picture, but if there had been others they would have been lost in the shuffle beside this clever little actress.

Kenneth Green, the fat boy of "Penrod" fame, is the comedy life of the picture.

True Boardman and Newton Hall, two impish kids, fill out the cast with the rest of the "gang."

—R. W.

"Life's Darn Funny"

THERE is a lot of truth and poetry in the Metro production of this title because two youngsters make it true in the most human way imaginable, upon the screen.

When Viola Dana sets herself in a character like that of Zoe Robert, a French girl with natural temperament, she does herself full justice. Although one might find a little fault with "Life's Darn Funny," for its drag and lack of liveliness, the audience of average people probably never will pause to harp, for the lightsome story is possessed of that successful qualification, entertainment value.

The story is not constructed according to rule, and the continuity writer overlooked plenty of chances to jazz up the unfoldment, wut, when the good people who pay their money do not notice such things, why carp and be critical?

Gareth Hughes was immense in his characterization of the lad who had been trained as a tailor, but who persisted in trying to be an artist. His affair with Miss Dana grew so naturally that one did not notice the romance in the face of so many difficulties, nor did the lovers themselves realize it until the frenzied hug of alarm when creditors were at the door. This situation alone was worth the money for, until the youth held and kissed her to calm her alarm, neither had even goo-gooed or pulled the old-time stuff as leads have been trained to do, lo these many years.

Those who desire to be entertained without offense at any time should witness "Life's Darn Funny," and find therein a comforting note.

Kate Price, Mark Fenton, Eva Gordon and Kathleen O'Connor make up the well-balanced cast. Each one assisted in making the production a success.

"Missing Husbands"

WHOEVER said that "Missing Husbands" made Paris gasp couldn't draw the line between a yawn and a gasp. Because this picture was made in Europe, one might think it sensational. But this, like many foreign productions, draws crowds under false pretenses.

Pierre Benoit wrote the novel "L'Atlantide" but little story is left in the production, or, owing to the narrative style, little action could be filmed from the story.

Jacques Feyder adapted the novel to the screen. Whether the story was cut out because of censors in the United States, or dropped out in the adaptation, is a question. It was lost somewhere.

Stacia Napierkowska is extreme in her actions. One moment she gives the impression that her character is cold and unconcerned and the next she is emoting with a vengeance, requiring a large area to work in.

Marie Louise Irbie is more like American actresses. She is a pleasing characterization of a slave girl.

Jean Angelo and Georges Melchior played the leading male roles ordinarily, but held a moderate amount of interest.

Abd-El-Kader Ben-Ali (his true name) flitted in with the native settings and proved capable in the part.

—R. W.

Where to Find People You Know

Reginald Barker, accompanied by his production staff, left for British Columbia where the majority of the exterior scenes of "Timber" will be made. As soon as he has established headquarters in the Kootnay Lake district he will begin the picture with a raging forest fire, staged under the supervision of the forest rangers. The cast leaves for the north on Monday, scheduled to join the director at Cranbrook, B. C., shortly after his arrival there.

Fred Kelsey is playing heavy roles for Finis Fox in "The Bishop of the Ozarks" at Fine Arts Studio—where Fred did his first screen work in Los Angeles as a director for D. W. Griffith.

Bertram Bracken, who is at present making an all-star production at the Hollywood studio, was the producer of two successful Selig Productions, "Kazan," and "The Confession."

Will Elfe, who has been with Bertram Bracken for the past three years, will again be with him as assistant.

Cecil Spooner, for many years with the Blaney Play in New York as leading comedian, is associated with Eddie Barry under the Ben Wilson banner. Roy Clements is directing. The picture is to be titled, "We Never Sleep."

Bruce Mitchell, who directed Jack Richardson in a series of comedies for the T. R. Coffin company, has been secured by Ben Wilson to direct Monte Banks.

Esther Ralston will be leading woman for Monte Banks.

Ward Hayes will be associated with Bruce Mitchell as gag man in the Monte Banks productions. Ward directed Billy Bletcher for over two years in comedies.

Jerry Kline, formerly assistant director with the Wayne Mack company, has joined Dick Saunders as assistant casting director at the Hollywood studios.

J. M. Voshell has been appointed business manager for Reginald Barker.

Percy Nilburn, who has been cameraman for Reginald Barker for years, will be in charge of the photography for Mr. Barker in his production of "Timber."

Josa Melville, who was the only woman character in Maurice Tourneur's "Treasure Island," has been cast in an important role in the Cosmopolitan Film company's rendering of Congressman M. W. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks."

Al Cody has just finished supplying music for Rupert Julian and is engaged with the Perfect Pictures at United studios.

R. D. Saunders and Wilfrid Lucas have been added to the cast of Bert Bracken's production.

Anna Q. Nilsson will be leading lady in Reginald Barker's production "Timber."

Grace Marvin is doing a colored mammy for Colin Campbell.

William Fairbanks will have the leading role in "Peaceful Peters," to be produced by Ben Wilson.

Frank Keenan is returning to the screen in the leading role in "Timber," the first Reginald Barker production to be made at the Louis B. Mayer studios.

It will be strange to see Milton Sills on a new brand of films. He is playing with Carmel Myers in "Blind Justice."

George Cooper is supporting Ben Turpin in "Home-made Movies."

Cullen Landis, who is playing opposite Billie Dove, recently finished the leading male role in "Page Tim O'Brien."

Wyndham Standing leaves New York City this week and will arrive in Hollywood soon.

Arthur Jasmine, juvenile, who played in support of Edith Roberts in "The Firecat" and "Thunder Island," has finished another part with her in "The Son of the Wolf."

Craig Ward, Reginald Barker's discovery, is playing opposite Anna Q. Nilsson in "Timber."

George Fitzmaurice directed Irene Castle's latest starring picture, "The Hillcrest Mystery."

Aggie Herring is playing Mrs. Calahan with Wesley Barry in "Sherlock Calahan."

Walter Mayo, formerly with Rex Ingram, will assist in the direction of "Timber."

Fay McKenzie has joined Carrol productions, featuring Helen Jerome Eddy, at R-C.

Lucile Hutton, who did the tough girl in "The Miracle Man," is playing in a feature production at United.

Lloyd Hamilton is monkeying around with monkey actors in order to get some laughs with Hughy Fay at the directorial helm. Hamilton is doing the boob character he originated.

F. L. Hemphill is working in "Omar the Tentmaker" at United. We caught him in scenes the other evening with Guy Bates Post and Rose Dione.

Lillian Nicholson is handling the wardrobe for "Omar the Tentmaker," aided by her daughter Kathleen, and a staff of assistants who look after details of costumes and makeup.

Lige Conley is playing a Swiss riding master in his present two-reel comedy, directed by Del Lord for Jack White at United studio.

Ben Lewis played a railroad station agent at Lasky studio in an interior setting.

Jack Leonard has gone in the real estate business. Another good actor gone wrong. Jack used to be some makeup artist and performer.

Harry Rapf is supervising the direction of "Little Heroes of the Street," starring Wesley Barry; working on the scenario of Charles Norris' famous novel, "Brass."

Mary Jane Sanderson, a new Warner Brothers star, has been loaned to Clara Kimball Young for a part in "Enter Madame."

Wallace Worsley will direct the production, "Brass."

Elliott Dexter will appear opposite Clara Kimball Young in "Enter Madame," her new starring picture which is being produced by Harry Garson for Metro.

Baby Josephine Adair is in the cast with Ella Hall in "The Discard," an Emory Johnson production being made at R-C studios.

Kenneth Harlan is playing opposite to Dorothy Phillips in Principal Pictures corporation's initial production, "The World's a Stage."

Ernest Belcher, dancing teacher, has been procured to stage the "Follies" dance in the Wesley Barry picture now in the process of shooting, "Little Heroes of the Street."

Wallace Worsley, who has just finished directing "Rags to Riches," has been lent to Clara Kimball Young to direct "Enter, Madame."

William Beaudine, who directed "Watch Your Step," is hard at work on "Little Heroes of the Street," with James Hogan assisting.

Ralph Cloninger has a role in "Timber," which will herald Frank Keenan's return to the screen.

Betty May is playing the ingenue in Al Herman's latest animal novelty comedy.

Dr. Comstock of Boston, Mass., is supervising the technique-color process at National studio laboratory. He is making his first picture with Bessie May Wong.

Harry S. Northrup has been engaged by Goldwyn to play one of the principal parts in Sir Hall Caine's "The Christian," under the direction of Maurice Tourneur.

Dorothy Manners has been assigned to a role in Jack Pickford's picture, "Garrison's Finish," at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios. Miss Manners hails from the musical comedy stage.

Norman Taurog is directing Joe Rock at the Big U making a series of comedies for Federated Corporation of New York.

Charles Clary is playing in "Blind Justice."

Edward M. Kimball will be seen in "Omar the Tentmaker" as the hero's father.

Milano Tilden acted with Richard Mansfield, Sothorn and Marlowe, and Guy Bates Post, with whom he still is with in making "Omar the Tentmaker."

Jack McDonald is in the cast of "The World's a Stage," directed by Colin Campbell.

Pickups By The Staff

Thomas H. Ince returns today to his Culver City studios after an absence of five months spent in New York negotiating distribution arrangements for his autumn releasing schedule. The producer expects to return to New York soon following a cruise with his family aboard the Ince yacht, "Edris."

Benjamin B. Hampton will preview his "Heart's Haven" before an audience of 1000 invited Christian Scientists, with which religion, the theme of the picture, is associated. As an added attraction he will have Jean Hersholt, who directed the picture, go over some of the actual working of the scenes on the stage to give the guests an idea of how movies are made. The presentation will take place at Cosmo Arts studios, July 24.

Alla Nazimova has just returned from New York with her husband, Charles Bryant. It is understood that several big offers were made Madame Nazimova to reappear on the legitimate stage. Should she decide on the spoken drama she will merely postpone proposed film plans and will return to them later.

Judging from a post-card received from Robert Ensminger, Vitagraph director, who recently betook himself upon a vacation into the east, he will re-appear shortly with a bride. In fact it is understood that Robert became a benedict just before he made the train.

Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore are in Wyoming with Charles Maign, directing scenes of "The Cowboy and the Lady" for Paramount.

Ralph Graves is taking a brief rest following completion of his leading role in two productions in which he worked simultaneously. One was "The Long Chance" at Universal; the other "Just Like a Woman," a Grace Haskins production at Fine Arts.

When Constance Binney returns from London, where she is starring in a picture, she will leave the films to go into a New York stage production.

James M. Fidler has been added to the publicity department staff of Paramount.

F. M. Ball, lately from the East, now located in Hollywood, is in search of a limited number of two and five-reel pictures for release.

Al Herman, art director for Vitagraph, is a busy man these days. In addition to other duties, Art has been called upon to supervise installation of furniture in the handsome new home recently acquired by President Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph, on Camino Palmero, Hollywood.

Bradley J. Smollen, scenario writer for Vitagraph, has returned to the Hollywood studios of the company after three weeks' vacation spent in the east.

Earle Williams and Mrs. Williams have returned to their Los Angeles home following a vacation in the vicinity of Hollywood.

Frederick Warde, star of the Mission play and who also played "Omar" in Ferdinand Earle's screen production of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" soon to be released, will leave for his country home at White Lake, New York, on July 31st.

Mr. Warde will commence a lecture tour, October 23d, that will bring him to California about the middle of December to fill his engagements here.

Jean Hersholt was injured in a fist fight with Lloyd Hughes in Mary Pickford's "Tess of the Storm Country."

An immense dining-room set in which more than 250 persons took part was filmed Monday for scenes in Edward Sloman's first independent picture, "Blind Justice."

Gus Schumacher, general manager of the O'Connor Productions, was 77 years old Sunday. He spent the day with Robert O'Connor and staff at Catalina Island.

Ben Wilson has secured the picture rights of W. C. Tuttle's book, "Peaceful Peters," and is having it put into continuity.

Clyde Cook and Florence Miller were married at Pomona June 21st. They managed to keep it a secret until last Monday.

M. W. Howard, star in his own story of "The Bishop of the Ozarks," expects to start filming his successful book, "Peggy Ware," in a few weeks.

Guy Bates Post's first starring vehicle is "The Masquerader."

Secretary Guy Bogart of the Cosmopolitan Film company is directing the publicity for the Finis Fox production of "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Joe Brandt of the Federated Film Exchange of America is in the market for two-reel comedies.

Morris Schlank is on his way to New York to sell productions of the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc.

William Horsley is building an office in Hollywood to be occupied by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc.

Lon Carter is cutting Jack O'Brien's feature at the Hollywood studios.

J. A. "Kitty" Howe, directing "Paul" Parrot, has a new home on Whitley Heights.

B. H. King, at Caswell studio, has made a find in Rina Amato, who just arrived from Egypt.

John J. Hayed, president of the Pacific Film company at Culver City, is organizing a "Producers' League," the purpose of which will be to keep production down in quantity and up in quality.

A. Guy Frumm, formerly with Universal, is now treasurer of the Pacific Film company.

Harvey Gausman, Hollywood representative of the Film Daily, announces a "short staff" number soon.

"Blind Justice," now being produced by Edward Sloman at Fine Arts, is the second Frank R. Adams' story in which Carmel Myers has appeared. The first picture is "My Unmarried Wife."

Alf Goulding, director, and David Smith, his assistant, are celebrating their fourth year of association in pictures—two of them having been spent with Century Comedies.

Abe Stern left Liverpool, July 15, bound for New York. He will start for Los Angeles immediately upon his arrival.

Gloria Hope denies the report that she will be starred by the Pickford-Fairbanks organization.

Jean Hersholt, director-actor, celebrated his thirty-sixth birthday with a party at the Hotel Hollywood.

Robert M. Greer, of the Ohio State Censorship Board, while visiting the Mack Sennett lot, was an interested spectator on the Del Ruth set during part of the filming of "When Summer Comes" in which picture Billy Bevan and Mildred June are featured.

Emile Chautard, who is directing "Country Love" for Metro, has returned to Hollywood after making a trip to Sacramento to select locations for the exteriors of this production.

Harry Beaumont, having completed the direction of "Page Tim O'Brien," Viola Dana's newest Metro starring picture, has gone deep sea fishing in the vicinity of Santa Cruz Island.

Chit Chat and Chatter About Southland Film Folks

By Harry Burns

Frank B. Good, as good a cameraman as his name signifies, is laboring on the United lot. Frank no more than finishes with one organization than he hops into his car, drives over to another and starts working.

Joseph Calder, lately with Rex Ingram at Metro as art director, is filling a like position with Jackie Coogan's company at United studio. Joe promises to tell Camera! readers some tales of his trip through Egypt, which will make a lot of us sit up and take notice.

June Mathis' handiwork is visible in the making of "The Young Rajah," under the direction of Phil Rosen. Miss Mathis has every angle of the production at her finger tips.

Walter Willis has been rehearsing a dance with Maude Fulton for "The Humming Bird" at Egan theater, opening the 21st. Walter is at home in such a production, for he is an old-time trouser, and has but recently turned his attentions to the silent stage.

Sandy Roth has returned from San Francisco, where he has been visiting his folks. Now that Monty Banks is back from New York the pair is inseparable. It wouldn't surprise me to hear of Monty working some place with Sandy assisting the production.

Virgil Hart hasn't seen so much of cowboys since he left the Thomas H. Ince organization. Now Virgil is with "Pee Wee" Holmes, who is being directed by Herman C. Raymaker at Fox studio.

Jimmy Adams is still telling 'em funny stories over at United studio, so that when the Jack White payroll is made up, his moniker is on it. He is what is known as a gag man and scenario writer, such as comedy directors welcome with outstretched arms.

Dick Sherer has been working hard at United studio with the rest of the acting brigade, who change makeups so fast and often that it takes a Philadelphia lawyer the best of a day's time to figure out which is which as they come on the set.

George Webster has been taking a much needed rest, after handling the job of assistant director with Tom Mix at Fox studio. George, unlike some assistants, does more than just hold the script and tell the boys when to come to work and quit.

James Davis and J. A. Howe should be given Carnegie medals. They have stuck at Roach studio longer than any of the directors.

George Archainbaud had a thrilling time when he had to direct scenes that called for an airplane to run right into the roof of a building. It was photographed by cameramen Gerstad and Congager.

Irving Cummings has finished another five-reeler at U studio and expects to start another within the next two weeks. William Crinley is production manager and Eugene Lowery assistant to the star-director.

Barbara Dorothy Vernon witnessed her first motion picture of her father's (Bobby Vernon) picture, "A Hickory Hick." Barbara isn't a year old as yet, but she got quite a kick out of her dad's work.

George Benoit is responsible for the photography of "Omar the Tentmaker," and the way James Young, directing the production, and the author, Richard Walton Tully, take George's word on everything, leads us to believe that Benoit is delivering the goods in good measure.

STARS, PRODUCERS, DIRECTORS, WARNING!

Certain persons attempting to make a similar reel to Screen Snapshots, the film fan magazine on the screen, showing screen folks at home, at work, at play, in motion pictures, are endeavoring to make appointments giving the impression that the scenes are to be used in Screen Snapshots, which is being distributed by Pathe.

No one has authority to make appointments for Screen Snapshots' cameraman except Louis Lewyn, and any individual making false representations will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

Eileen Sedgwick loves her art and doesn't mind doing anything to further it along, but she doesn't like to cry over it. In the Jackie Coogan picture, where she plays the little fellow's mother, Eileen had a crying scene that lasted the best of a day's time. She never flinched from taking all sorts of chances in serials, westerns and animal pictures, but gee! how she hates to be sad and cry.

Arthur Walker ran wild at United the other day, wearing a night-shirt. Every one wondered what was wrong with Arthur. When it was noticed that the cameraman was recording the scene people gave Arthur credit.

R. W. Richter has been taking things easy waiting on Billy Franey to get started making his own pictures again under the Billy O'Connor banner. Richter has photographed all the Franey comedies.

Joe Dixon, who does daredevil stunts, is all together, but doesn't know when he will be called upon to do more flops or bumps.

Louise Lamont worked at the Fairbanks studios the other day during the filming of "Robin Hood."

Vera Alden worked the other evening for Colin Campbell at United studio.

Sam Appel is playing a Hindu heavy in "The Young Rajah."

Scott Sidney has been racking his brains lately for another good story for Neal Burns. We should hear an announcement soon about what comedy will serve for his next screen efforts, via the two-reel route.

Paul Powell, Jerome Beatty and Arch Reeve, with Lasky-Famous Players—Powell, a director, Beatty and Reeve, writers of publicity—all used to work on the Los Angeles Express. Powell was a writer and special journalist, while Beatty and Reeve covered sports.

Cullen Tate, assistant to Cecil B. De Mille, has jumped in the breach to help Director Phil Rosen, whose assistant, Murray Graham, was taken ill. Cullen, who carries a nickname of "Hezzie," is a likeable chap.

John Finn is with Mason N. Litson as his assistant in producing two-reel comedies with Johnny Jones, aided and abetted by Gertrude Messenger and a cast of kiddies. Litson is angling for two stories, one which calls for work among the big timbers, while the other will take the juvenile stars to Catalina.

Sol Polito is responsible for the cinematography on the Finis Fox feature in production at Fine Arts studio, in which Congressman Milford Howard is star.

Douglas Gerard is playing an excellent part in "Omar The Tentmaker." The role calls for Jerry to be an assassin, and if any one should ask you, Gerard looks so vicious and acts so rough that some of the on-lookers are afraid to stick around when he starts to act.

Mark Goldaine has come to earth and has a regular job in the movies aiding Roy Clements at Berwillia studios to make Eddie Barry and Billy Bletcher and other comics real funny in two-reelers.

Esther Raiston has been selected as Monty Banks' leading lady in his initial efforts as a funster in a new series of comedies he has started at Berwillia studio. Bruce Mitchell is shouting orders.

Tote Du Crow, dressed in Hindu garb, looked the image of the character he was portraying in "The Young Rajah" temple set the other day.

Benny Goldstein, who handles bookings of actors and actresses, should make a good checker player. He moves on the jump, he hops from here to here and back again, and it is a wonder to me that he doesn't run himself down, for he covers the same territory so often during a day, while arranging for bread and butter for a lot of other people.

Bruce Gordon is the best example of what they do in the movies when there is a fight on tap in a scene. The other day he and Johnny Walker mixed things pretty strong in a scene that Ruth Roland took part in.

Harriet Smith has taken to a Ford like a duck does to water, and is seeking some one who likes Mexican heavies such as she interprets.

The Screen Writers' Page - Conducted by William E. Wing

The Story Market

NOW that the thunderous applause has died away, following the reading of the above title, we desire to set down a few noble thoughts which may aid in preparing writers for the great plunge.

The first cute, little epigram that should be uttered in connection with the subject is that, although you may have a story framed upon the very subject, or the type of stories demanded by certain studios, do not begin spending the money before receiving your check.

The way of a woman hurling a rock at a Plymouthrock rooster, is as weird as the way of an editor editing his flock of offerings. On one side one may perceive his staff of assistants who serve the purpose of slipping manuscripts into return envelopes. On the other side is his ash tray or something, upon which he lays the accepted stories.

Therefore, if you would connect with the ash tray be sure that you smoke up plenty before deciding that your scenario is complete. The first writing of a story never carries full values. Much time of concentration and active scheming should be done after the preliminary draft. Then will you only begin getting values in that tale.

As the photoplay demands far more than the story which would go over as fiction, be sure that you are well grounded in scenario construction—not continuity—before letting the newly born flit forth.

Load it with activity or situation; make it sparkle, or speak a new language; have it either skipping along or moving in dignified, meaningful manner all the time. Let it be a birth of laughter, accompanied by genuine interest; or psychology brightened from first to last with genuine humor.

Do not follow story types you see upon the screen.

It is a fact that studios do not know exactly what they want for the present and future, but they well know it is not most of the stuff which is being screened now. Paul Bern, in his announcement below, is honest enough to admit this, partially.

The successful writer—yea, and continuity writer—of the future, must be advanced in a most marked measure.

For example—the western no longer should be an excuse for stunts and thrills. Rather "western" must represent the background and, naturally, include some western characterization. But the story should be as psychological, or as complete in rounded story form as entertaining value, as the program drama.

But more markedly examples or originality in types of plots must be forthcoming, and fortunate is the writer with a "twisty" mind.

With these few kind words, let us turn first to Mr. Paul Bern, of Goldwyn's, Culver City. He says:

"We are in the market. As a matter of fact, we are particularly anxious to secure some stories. It is very hard, however, to specify just exactly what the requirements are, because it is almost impossible to make the demands specific without calling for a particular story or type of story, and thus immediately conventionalizing the whole subject by limiting it to a hackneyed style."

"We intend to make only really big pictures, and therefore are not interested in light comedies; in vehicles designated specifically to exploit a personality; we do not want costume stories, nor as a general thing do we want small-town or Western subjects. We do want big stories, but what this bigness consists of must be left largely to the inventiveness of the author. A so-called 'society background' is invaluable in making a picture commercially acceptable.

Failing in his other efforts, Doc A. Conan Doyle turned to the films to prove that the dead ones can be materialized.

"The use of fundamental human relationships, resulting in terrific dramatic clashes, is definitely desirable when it does not lead to heaviness or morbidity. A comedy drama or other story ending in a great spectacular climax interests us. As a matter of fact, almost any story which has at least one smashing sequence offers enough to intrigue our interest. We want stories with some resemblance to life as it is, but on the other hand would not turn down anything with a great melodramatic spark or thrill.

"To sum up: We are anxious to make only big pictures, and for this purpose we want great stories of definite audience appeal. No formula can be written to express this, for any formula would merely act in a limiting, repressive manner, and would defeat our purpose of trying to secure fresh, untrammelled, novel stories, ideas and twists."

Editor J. G. Hawks, of the Mayer studio, 3800 Mission Road, is short and to the point, but you had better read carefully and thresh it out in your mind thoroughly.

For John Stahl, psychological, subtle story thread of American social life with tenderness and heart throb.

For Reginald Barker, big, strong virile drama, must have tense and consistent situation.

For Fred Niblo, modern drama and melodrama with color and atmosphere. Fast stepping and intriguing story structure.

It is reported that Cecil de Mille, of the Lasky studio, wants a story which will "give the other side of the flapper's case against humanity."

The psychology of bobbed hair; revealing $3.70 worth of $4 stockings, and a penchant for doing nothing much with great gusto, sure looks like a delicate thing for the average writer to dally with.

It requires study also. Have you a little flapper in your home?

Stories wanted at Universal City, for Universal stars and all-star casts are, according to Irving G. Thalberg, director-general of the studio.

Snappy outdoor dramas with a strong flavor of comedy for Hoot Gibson, such as "Trimmed" at the Superba, or "The Galloping Kid," coming up.

Romance with plenty of mystery, strong love interest, and fight stuff that isn't preceded by any meditation or stroking of the well-known chin, for Herbert Rawlinson.

Distinctly deep drama, very serious and themeful, for Frank Mayo, preferably with a spot calling for his fighting arm to loosen up. But no rough stuff without psychological point.

Super-stories, real dramas of life; doesn't have to be any cut-and-dried atmosphere, but the story must be GREAT—to be any good for Priscilla Dean. Just remember there is no role too hard for her to handle, that the bigger it is the better for the picture. The theme must be big—a story without a meaning has as much chance around Priscilla Dean as a moth around a torch.

Emotional stuff, less comedy than of old, for Gladys Walton. Stories like the one she is doing, Bret Harte's "M'liss," with a pathetic, lovable figure.

All-star productions directed by King Baggot, Hobart Henley, Jack Conway and such big league artists call for stories of the first rank. Nine times out of ten stories big enough must be famous novels or short stories, such as "The Flirt," which Henley just finished, "The Kentucky Derby," an old play which Baggot has made, or "The Long Chance," a Peter B. Kyne story which Conway directed recently. An all-star story needn't feature one role very heavily; it can be balanced in any fashion that helps the story develop logically.

Universal wants stories that have a distinctly new and novel punch for serials, but most of these recently, such as "The Radio King," a serial of science, and the various historical serials, have been developed by the staff.

If any ambitious young writer thinks he can write as good a story for von Stroheim as von Stroheim can write for himself, he's welcome to try it, but many famous writers have tried it and have found themselves out of luck.

If your brain teems with big, modern stories of New York life, which lean to the romantic, dash one off and send it to Rex Ingram. He is at the New York studio of the Metro.

Well, one word in that sentence, signifies some order. He says "big." When one associates New York and romance, however, a little light begins to break in. Rex always has pulled some melodrama in his stories, and seems of like it.

The Lasky studio, at Vine and Selma Streets, Los Angeles, provides a somewhat difficult market for the original writer. That concern deals mostly in published stories, but will buy originals if they are big enough to make successful specials. The story for a program feature has little chance.

Jess Robbins, Fine Arts studio, 4500 Sunset Boulevard, is making several features starring Edward Horton. He wants stories out of the ordinary based mostly upon a highly amusing mixup plot. The stage play wherein the victim discovered a system of making people fall in love, but which he tried out with sad results upon everyone in the cast, was one which caught Robbins' fancy.

At the R-C studio, Melrose and Gower, a number of companies are working upon a somewhat independent basis. However, all stories are sent to the editor for consideration.

That studio will consider stories for Harry Carey, of the rough-and-ready type; for Ethel Clayton, society type or problem play, and two-reel comedies for Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven.

The only woman "property man" in the world is working at Goldwyn studios.

Phil Whitman is photographing trick stuff at Universal. He has his sleeves rolled up and the closer you watch the less you see.

Billy Franey with a hook
Went teasing fishes in the brook,
They ate his bait, line and tack;
Now Billy Franey's just got back.

Richard Thomas and Jack Fuqua are still arguing over a five-legged tripod.

Charles Bader, Century publicity man, talks a lot about Baby Peggy and the smart things she does. One would think he is the father.

Patricia Palmer, formerly with Bill Hart, is now with Bill Miller at Long Beach studio. She likes Bills. A Miller without a Hart looks like caveman stuff, doesn't it?

The game laws should be amended to include human beings. There could be open seasons now and then, but put the license fee up to at least $1.50 per quarter, payable in advance.

John Walter, assistant with Irvin Willat, says he is going to carry an alarm clock in order to keep George Fay, handsome juvenile awake on location. George is still explaining how it happened.

It may be so,
But I don't know,
It sounds so awfully queer.

Faye Holderness has a terrific wallop, according to William Russell.

During the filming of "Mixed Faces" at Fox, she had to hit him. "Make it real," said Bill, "Don't be afraid." BOY, SHE DID. Bill has changed his mind about woman's rights.

Jack Allen, veteran assistant director, has been in San Francisco four months promoting a new position or a situation. Now he is back looking for a job. When he finds it he will call it an engagement.

Alan Crosland is to produce "Aphrodite" in the East and more than likely Dorothy Dalton will play the leading role on the screen. She made a hit in the original play in New York.

Soda fountain clerk: "And what will you have to drink, sir?"

Customer: "The same think that made Ben Turpin cock-eyed."

"Business is business" with Cecile Spooner, Ben Wilson's accomplished star from New York. That name sounds good.

Monte Banks was caught doing 56. With another bottle of catsup he perhaps could have made the famous 57.

Joe Rock is making "Ala Baba and the Forty Thieves." He says he is going to expose the inside workings of motion pictures.

Charles Conklin had a narrow escape from being demolished. He said he was between pictures when they bumped together.

Kennie King is trying to reduce his weight by eating ice cream for breakfast and a bowl of mush for a nightcap. He says he is in training to make eleven pictures for Jack White. They do funny things and they are not going to fool him.

Buster Keaton was coming out of the restaurant the other day moaning as if in great pain. "What is the matter?" I asked, ready to dash for a doctor. He looked up, "I just ate a square meal and the corners were pointed."

Serves him right. He eats in a cafeteria.

Harry Mann is nibbling to start a new series of comedies with a well known firm, and has the proposition just about ready to close.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE FAST MAIL" (Fox)

"Bernard Durning has certainly brought Lincoln J. Carter's novel to life in a production that can boast of being the most melo of 'mellers.' But it is sure-fire stuff, and for lovers of melodrama they couldn't ask for anything more complete than 'The Fast Mail.' It includes every trick of melodrama that was ever thought of, the kind that brings them to the edge of their seats and sends the gallery crowd into shouts.

"Sequences follow in snappy succession, and the film is so short that it seems hardly on the screen until it is off.

"Charles Jones, Fox's cowboy, is too heavy as the jockey, but otherwise is the right one for the heroic role, and he does fine work, taking great chances in some of the thrill scenes. Eileen Percy is more attractive than ever with her bobbed hair. Adolph Menjou is good as the villain."

—The Film Daily.

"'The Fast Mail' is certain to make the blood tingle even in the veins of an anaemic spectator. The gallery gods will stand right up on their hind legs and shout for joy.

"The incident is well put together so that lapses in the continuity are never noticed. Charles (Buck) Jones will surprise you. You never expect to see him apply himself to such rugged heroics after witnessing him in easy performances. Yet he makes his work easy through an adaptability which might well suit Fairbanks.

—Motion Picture News.

"Another famous old time melodrama reaches the screen in the Fox production of 'The Fast Mail,' which thrilled theatregoers of the last generation and toured the country, played by various companies, for over twenty years.

"The continuity proceeds as smoothly as necessary in a film of this sort and the director has done his share in handling the scenes well and mounting them appropriately, not to say anything of the arrangement of the mechanics that permit of the hair-raising episodes."

—Moving Picture World.

"A very satisfactory blond objective for Mr. Jones' sensational exploits is Miss Eileen Percy, who is very Southern, confident, loyal and all else that the part requires. Adolph Menjou is an agreeably obnoxious villain, and if he keeps right in the track he followed on 'The Fast Mail' he very likely will become one of our best hated figurantes in pictures. The other principals in the cast, which includes William Steele, Harry Dunkinson and Jim Mason, are quite acceptable.

"This young and coming Bernard Durning, who is credited with the direction, is entitled to especial mention. He has done a splendid job with the famous Lincoln J. Carter story. Several highly important action scenes are handled in a thoroughly creditable manner."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"THE DUST FLOWERS" (Goldwyn)

"Of all the modern Cinderella themes 'The Dust Flower' is about the most improbable and an introductory subtitle conceals a bit of apology for it, at the same time taking a whack at the cynics who may dislike it for its improbabilities.

"Lovers of romance will be well pleased with Basil King's story and the happy ending will meet with their complete satisfaction. . . . Rowland V. Lee provides a suitable production and has secured a good cast.

"Helene Chadwick handles the Cinderella role capably, but does not photograph as well in this as in some more recent pictures. James Rennie is the matinee idol type of hero, and Claude Gillingwater makes a good deal of the role of Steptoe, the butler."

—The Film Daily.

"A thoroughly satisfying story of a modern Cinderella, containing a clean wholesome plot, the characters of which are portrayed by a cast of uniform excellence. The players are one of the big features of this production, and one will go a long way before he will meet up with such a sterling character actor as Claude Gillingwater. . . . Of course, it's always a real delight to watch Helene Chadwick act. . . . These two dominate the picture, and should be given credit for lifting it to a place in the sun.

"Edward Peil, as the stepfather, has the heavy role, and is convincing in it. . . . Mona Kingsley is good as Barbara, the fiancée and a society belle. . . . 'The Dust Flower,' like all Goldwyn attractions, is finely mounted throughout."

—Motion Picture News.

"Exquisite taste has been used in the settings and the direction has been exceptionally well handled.

"Claude Gillingwater, playing what might be called a comedy butler, with emphasized acting, gives the outstanding performance in the picture. . . . Helene Chadwick is charming to look upon, and whenever she is called upon for acting that is not easy she performs it with most excellent results. The others in the cast give notable performances."

—Moving Picture World.

"There are instances when 'The Dust Flower' really takes hold of the spectator's attention and something like an illusion is approached, but nothing of a very permanent worth comes of the proceedings, which hew close to the line of the familiar and the customary.

"Helene Chadwick is at her best, which means that her performance lacks little in acting skill and absolutely nothing in personal charm. Claude Gillingwater scores most conspicuously as the butler, James Rennie makes much of this role, and George Periout attracts attention as the cabaret man."

"Mr. Lee showed fine judgment and skill in his direction of the piece."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"SMUDGE" (First National)

"A pronounced departure from anything Mr. Ray has done recently, but one that presents him to advantage.

"Until the inventive young mind of the hero contrived a smokeless heater, the country round about the fruit groves became all 'smudged up' following use of the frost prevention. On this informative basis has been well worked out an interest-compelling plot, a cross between comedy and drama, and in either instance, of great general appeal.

"Added to the splendid cast is the evidence of painstaking direction."

—Motion Picture News.

"In 'Smudge,' Charles Ray has a story that is interestingly told, and a vehicle that is well acted throughout. 'Ora Crew, in support of the star, is charming, and the misadventures also by glimpses—too short—of other good looking girls that would go a long way toward lending attractiveness to any production.

"There are speeding automobiles and motor-cycles that play a part in the story's progress, and will please those who favor fast action, and the photography is one of the details that deserve special commendation."

—Moving Picture World.

"COLLEEN OF THE PINES"

(Chestes Bennett Prod.—P. B. O.)

"'Colleen of the Pines' is a good picture as far as production, direction and acting is concerned, but it is rather doubtful if the story will meet with the same satisfaction. There has been such a run on stories of the Northwest with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police officer playing an important part, that people are beginning to tire of too much of the same thing.

"Chester Bennett has done pretty well with his material, except that several times he permits things to reach what the audience expects will be the climax. Then he continues on until it leads to another near-climax."

—The Film Daily.

"Jane Novak delivers a convincing interpretation of Joan, known to her lover only as 'Colleen of the Pines.' Charlott Pierce, as her younger sister Esther, portrays an impetuous child in an appealing manner. Both girls are pretty and are well cast for the respective roles.

"The male members of the cast might have been improved upon. Especially is the father over-acted. Yet 'Smoke' Turner as the half-breed Indian, makes considerable out of a minor part. Those who are called upon to fight do it convincingly. Edward Hearn, as the hero, rides well. The picture has marked scenic value and has been well directed."

—Motion Picture News.

People

Wheeler Dryden has been elected second vice president of the Playcrafters Club.

Elmo Lincoln, strong man, will portray the role of the village blacksmith in the screen version of "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Joan Standing has been assigned a part in Reginald Barker's production, "Timber."

Mrs. C. A. Collins has received a wire that her husband, "Chick" Collins, has arrived in New York and is pleased with his position as representative for Curtis Photoplay corporation in New York.

Lincoln Stedman has been added to the cast of "The Dangerous Age," to be directed by John M. Stahl.

Claire McDowell will play the part of Mrs. Putnam in the Metro production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Dorothy Phillips has been engaged for the leading role in "The World's a Stage," to be directed by Colin Campbell, at United.

Bill Crinley is casting for Irving Cummings' next production.

Frederick Jobson has the leading character role in "The Young Rajah," under production at Lasky studio.

Max Linder's "The Three Must Get Theirs" will be released by United Artists in the early fall.

David Torrence, formerly with the Maude Adams and Jane Cowl companies, is in support of Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country."

Mike Rosenberg and Irving Lesser have bought "The World's a Stage," by Elinor Glyn.

Frank Borzage, director of "Humoresque" arrived in Los Angeles Saturday, where he will probably start work.

Murray Miller, formerly with Sanford, is now at Goldwyn's.

Mark Goldaine is gag man with Ben Wilson.

Norma Talmadge and her company returned from Santa Barbara, where they have been making exteriors for "The Voice of the Minaret."

Ward Caufield returned from New York City where he has been combining business with pleasure.

Tom Gubbins returned from the Orient after spending five months there gathering data, costumes and first-hand information on customs of the people in those countries.

Francis Carpenter and his mother returned from Catalina, where they have been sojourning for two months. The little chap, who made famous Jack in "Jack and the Beanstalk" for Fox years ago, is anxious to get back to the screen.

Fred Datig, casting director at Universal, is not going to turn his new Hudson coupe into a transportation bus between Hollywood and Universal City.

Walter Israel, is designing costumes of the period of Louis XVIII in Norma Talmadge's "The Eternal Flame," and has been engaged to design the costumes to be worn by Miss Talmadge and her company in "The Voice from the Minaret."

Wesley Barry is now working in "Little Heroes of the Street"

Chester Bennett has started a production at R-C studios under the working title "Thelma," starring Jane Novak.

Mrs. C. B. Collins is looking after the casting offices at United studio during the absence of her husband in New York.

Jack Pearce, hurt recently while working in some scenes of "Omar, the Tentmaker," has almost recovered from his accident. He will assist Henry Otto, directing Edward Alexander in a five-reel western which carries a working title of "Smashing Through." The company is to work at Warner springs and other locations.

T. "Doc" Joss, who has been assisting Nat Ross at the Big U, left that organization and intends to turn his attentions to directing. At present he is working at United studio aiding George Berthelon and Director Colin Campbell in a satire on the movies.

Hampton Del Ruth and Rex Thorpe are two busy individuals at Balboa studio. The incorporation papers have been returned from Sacramento with the stamp of approval on the Balboa studio's business affairs at Long Beach.

Bob McKenzie is working with the Bruce Mitchell company at Berwillia studio doing a farmer.

A championship polo match at the Santa Barbara polo grounds is being started by director Frank Lloyd for "The Voice from the Minaret," Norma Talmadge's forthcoming feature production for First National.

"Bill" Colton, a gateman at United studios, was called upon to don grease paint and costume for an appearance in the production, "The World's a Stage."

Marshall Neilan's "Fools First" has been named as the best picture of the month by the National Board of Review.

"East is West," featuring Constance Talmadge, has been completed at the United studio. Ten weeks were consumed in the making of this picture.

Katherine MacDonald has completed "Money, Money, Money," a Larry Evans story written for the screen.

Buster Keaton has decided upon a title for his next comedy. It is to be "The Love Nest." This comedy is unique in that there is not a woman in the cast.

The title for the next Jackie Coogan production will be "Fiddle and Me." Jack Coogan, Sr., wrote the story.

Helen Lynch is playing a role in John M. Stahl's production of "The Dangerous Age."

H. E. Stockwell has finished playing a part for Maurice Tourneur in "The Christian."

After a vacation in San Francisco, George Sheldon has returned to Hollywood to start work in "Manslaughter."

Cullen Landis may leave for New York after he has finished his part with Billie Dove in "Country Love."

Leatrice Joy will be seen in a leading role in production, "Her Man."

Audrey Chapman, in Douglas Fairbanks' "Robin Hood" and Jack Pickford's "Garrison's Finish," has been engaged by a newspaper syndicate to write a series of articles on how women can make their own clothes cheaply.

Monkey Glands for the Screen

By Ferdinand Earle

WITH enthusiastic faith that the screen may yet become the supreme manifestation of the spiritual life of mankind, our organization has been occupied for over six months on a production of "Faust."

FERDINAND EARLE

No photoplay that aspires to rise above the deadly level of "program pictures" can be concocted over night. The finest output of the studios is marred by the earmarks of hasty production.

One's senses are glutted with sustained suspense and pictorial entertainment; but it is safe to declare that the souls of motion picture devotees are literally starved for some crust of the deeper truths of life.

Would it not be a literary crime to distort Goethe's world-story into a monstrosity of melodramas, stripped of its underlying philosophy?

Exhilarating possibilities unfold themselves to the screen pioneer eager to explore this battlefield of the human soul. It has taken nearly a hundred years for critics and scholars to understand the undying story values of this greatest of all messages to mankind.

Such a drama should become a permanent classic for schools, colleges, clubs, theatres and homes, and be a service to fellow men.

It might exert as much influence as years of a university's activity, and rouse new respect for the screen, proving that it is the prodigious half-brother of the printing press.

ENTERTAINMENT POSSIBILITIES

Over seventy thousand photographs and engravings illustrating the various phases of the story have been selected, filed and catalogued. And many thousands of pages of literature dealing with the subjects have been digested.

We are preparing the first really synchronized score, from Berlioz, Boito, Gounod, Listz, Wagner and numerous others who have already written more Faust music than can be used. Besides this, I spent the best part of twenty years in Europe, visiting and living in many ancient towns and familiarizing myself with Gothic architecture and the customs of primitive peoples, and with the culture of artists and writers of old. And we feel even cocky about it, and are tempted to promise settings and imaginative scenes unlike anything heretofore attempted.

In Faust's time humanity had scarce awakened from the Dark Ages and was dreaming back to a golden age of fable and song. The action takes place in Gothic cathedrals of mediaeval Christianity, in castles and towers of the feudal barons, and in the gabled houses of ancient Germany, as well as in settings suggesting Dante's Inferno and Paradise and the Grecian tragedies.

Without pity for some of the stuffy traditions of the stage, and with one eye on the New Theatre movement, and with the use of oil paintings for many of the scenes, it is safe to predict a production on an undreamed of scale.

But archaeology and history and scholarship, untouched by poetic insight and poetic vision, create only a post-mortem portrayal of the past, and catch but little of the quivering life that colored the fragmentary facts that have survived their day.

The love story of Faust and Margaret is one of the treasures of the world, and would suffer from a dry-as-dust or a melodramatic rendering. Some mythical renaissance, some inner awakening must lift screen drama out of the rut into which it has fallen, to treat such a story. And the writer is not ashamed to say that we are trying to make a drama wherein the actors shall be as masks imaging forth things of the spirit—a drama of clashing ideas and ideals.

GOETHE'S PROPHETIC DISCOVERY

Curiously enough, it may have been Mephisto who first tested the value of monkey glands in the scene of Faust's rejuvenation in the Witches' Kitchen.

We should like to think that perhaps "Faust" will help rejuvenate the screen.

Century Notes

"Hansel and Gretel" will be the next Centurized fairy tale to be made by director Alf Goulding.

Jack Earle, seven-foot, five-inch "heavy" will play a big part in "Hansel and Gretel."

Arvid Gillstrom is working on Lee Moran's next story, and is now finishing Brownie's newest comedy.

Sig Neufeld, Century's film editor, left for a three-week vacation in New York.

Johnny Fox will play Hansel in the Centurized fairy tale, "Hansel and Gretel."

Baby Peggy will play the part of Gretel in Century's "Hansel and Gretel."

Ena Gregory, blonde beauty, will appear in Arvid Gillstrom's late Brownie comedy.

Pearl Schwartz will assist Sig Neufeld in his film editing.

"Brick" Enright has been appointed gagman for the Arvid Gillstrom company of Century Comedies.

Jack Sullivan is assisting Gillstrom directing Lee Moran.

Percy Pembroke is now assistant director to Al. Herman, all-animal and novelty director.

A RARE SIGHT

"Hey, you, where do you think you are going? Why the turn in the middle of the street with your car? So you are moving picture people, hey?"

"Oh, yes—were were hurrying home from location."

"Don't you know it's against the law to do that?"

"Yes, officer, we are sorry."

"Well, don't let it happen again."

Yep, this isn't a dream folks. It actually happened. Will the Carnegie medal donors please take notice?

Crete Sipple has gone in for real estate work making a few dollars in the movies. When I say "a few," I mean that is all they pay nowadays for anything from doubling, to acting on your own.

Eddie Laemmle postal-cards from Germany to say that he is already lonesome for Sunny California and his many friends. "That's what they all say, Eddie."

Earle Crain lost an excellent part with Rodolph Valetino when his mother died suddenly. After accompanying the remains east, he returned to the Lasky lot and was cast in another part.

Monte Banks has signed the dotted line and is working for Ben Wilson productions at Berwillia studio.

Irvin Willat has moved his script case and everything off the Lasky lot over to Metro where August 1 will find him shooting a feature story with Billie Dove and an all-star cast. John Waters will be his assistant.

Geo. Lasley is in between studios right now instead of in between pictures.

Walter Long and Billy Elmer slipped over to United studio the other evening and did a number of scenes with Guy Bates Post. Heart strings were pulling hard for the star when Long and Elmer, as the brutes, were whipping Guy Bates Post, and brought in to the scene Patsy Ruth Miller and Virginia Faire.

L. M. Goodstadt would have been a wonder as a baseball scout for the National League if he was as good picking a nine as he is in selecting casts for feature productions.

Ralph Morello is not with Harry Burns' service bureau (which doesn't exist), and was at the latter's service but once—and that was when he was manager of a well known studio. This correction is made that Ralph's friends may know he is with International service bureau.

James Gibbs is making so many trips from the Reliable Association of Photographers' offices of late that he is fixing a private phone connection with the office to his apartments.

Ed Fitzharris has gone in strong for radio machines. He has one erected at his home which he can almost hear when it is working at its best.

Mark Parmeter's anxiety to stay within the law got him a letter from the government that he paid his 1923 income tax by mistake.

Silver "Tex" Coffey is trying to grow a walrus moustache like Chester Conklin's.

Denver Davidson wants to know if any one has the address of a good makeup school. He intends to get back in the movies and wants to know whether actors smear the grease paint on with a brush or a mop, or do they use their hands; someone please instruct D. D., I haven't the heart.

Bob Hill has made a ten-strike with the "Radio King" he produced for Universal. There are enough thrills for the most hardened audiences.

Tom Wilson is burning up a lot of gas answering calls from different studios that want to use him since his work in "Reported Missing."

Douglas Dawson has been scouting all over the southland for any speck of information any one can give him about "Thelma," that he is going to aid Chester Bennett produce. Things will be humming with that company within the next week.

George Melford and his company are in Catalina, and the way Uncle George makes his company comfortable and assures them plenty of good eats is an example to follow. Just imagine one of our leading chefs and two assistants cooking all the goodies of the season and serving it right out on location, hot and everything!

Frank Lloyd and his company of artists returned from Santa Barbara to film scenes with Norma Talmadge. Types of all kinds which were needed to round out the foreground and background were taken along.

Harry Webb gets time once in a while to take in the fisticuffs festivities at the legion stadium. When he does he and friend director, Stuart Paton, stick close enough together to talk shop between rounds and bouts.

Story By

Congressman Milford W. Howard's book, "The Bishop of the Ozark's," is to be published in the fall at the same time as the release of the Cosmopolitan Film company's screen version of the story.

Billy Franey's book, "Keystone Days," which goes to press within the next sixty days, reveals some interesting facts about the personnel of the Keystone cops.

J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby adapted "Timber" from the novel of the same name by Harold Titus. In making the picture for Mr. Mayer, the Reginald Barker company will operate as an independent production unit.

Bradley King, scenario writer for the Thomas Ince company, wrote a magazine story, "The Girl at Hell's Delight." It is now being dramatized and will be presented on the Eastern stage this fall.

Julien Josephson comes to the West Coast studios to write the scenario for the production of the novel, "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.

Ouida Bergere wrote the scenario of "The Hillcrest Mystery," the new Pathe Playlet starring Irene Castle.

Olga Printzlau, scenarist, has been secured by Jack Warner to do the continuity on F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel, "The Beautiful and Damned."

John Grey wrote the story of "Home-made Movies," Ben Turpin's latest comedy.

Myrtle: Can one use hypnotism in writing stories for the studios?
Yes; use it on the cashier.

Blanche Rose played the role of the village spinster in "Money, Money, Money," for Katherine McDonald.

James Morrison has been selected for a role in John M. Stahl's "The Dangerous Age."

Hal Wilson is working at Lasky's in the Sam Wood production that features Gloria Swanson, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

Chas. R. McHugh is with the Coogan company in his present picture. Charles will be remembered in Douglas Fairbanks earliest successes.

Jack White has placed his stamp of approval on the latest two-reel comedy completed for Educational with Lige Conley, called "Above Board."

Joe Roberts is under the the directorial wing of Earle Kenton.

Patricia Palmer, having finished "Twin-Six O'Brien," under direction of Bob Horner, has left for Wyoming on location with the Lasky company.

Betty May has been placed under a long term contract to appear as leading lady in all Century comedies starring Lee Moran.

HISTORY OF RADIO

A scientific educational picture, entitled "The History of Radio," has just been finished by Richard Thomas Productions at the Berwiller studio. This picture is the last of a series of educational films of this class, all of them personally directed by Richard Thomas. The Thomas pictures are developed with a high degree of art.

The first sequence of pictures opens with Professor Henrich Hertz at work in his laboratory. This eminent physicist was the first to demonstrate (1888) the transmission of magno-electric waves through the hypothetical ether as a medium. He is represented generating static electricity by revolving a glass disc with a functional contact and conducting the electricity so produced to a Leyden jar. This vessel is a glass jar with both its interior and exterior surfaces covered with tin-foil, and so called because it was invented at Leyden, Holland. It has the property of accumulating a charge of electricity and therefore is a condenser. When the experimenter discharged the jar in the usual manner by making a metallic connection of the inside and outside surfaces, not only was a spark produced by this contact, but there was also one across the gap in a small broken metal ring hanging on the wall of the laboratory. What caused this transmission of electrical energy to a distance? Was the medium the atmosphere or that subtle imponderable medium, conceived of by speculative philosophers as pervading all space to the most remote star; and penetrating all solids organic and inorganic. Continuing his experiments, the great physicist obtained a spark across the gap in a small metal ring suspended in a glass jar from which the air had been abstracted. Therefore ether was the medium. All this is shown on the screen, thus depicting for the first time what has become the greatest wonder of the present marvelous age of can be transmitted half way around the world.

Incidental pictures are shown of a family "listening in" to music from the air, of a long-haired, be-whiskered hermit at the entrance to his cave, enjoying the same concert, and of an old negro mammy with a head-phone, ecstatically listening to what seems to her to be the strains of a celestial choir.

The most striking illusion depicted is that of ether waves traversing not only the atmosphere but passing in through and out of city buildings. Double exposure, ingeniously devised, is the magic by which this illusion is accomplished. If the eye could perceive the vibrations of the ether, it is conveyed, that a broad-casting station would appear to radiate luminous lines in every direction, and that these lines would have a versimilitude to the varying colored flashes of the Aurora Borealis.

Al Kelly is assisting W. K. Howard at Phil Goldstone studio.

Charles Gould has been made chief electrician of Century by president Julius Stern.

Robert J. Kern has been engaged as chief cutter of the picture, "Timber."

Sam "Whiskers" Kaufman is still the star makeup man for "Omar the Tentmaker." "Whiskers pasted on your face right here while you wait," shouts Kaufman.

Max Dupont, cinematographer, has been appointed chief cameraman for Edward Sloman productions.

The Dotted Line

CHAPTER II.

THERE was a bright young man in Hollywood who wrote screen stories. Sometimes he sold them. But although he combined the best qualities of George Ade, O. Henry, Rupert Hughes and Richard Harding Davis, his incoming mail was just as bulky as that he sent out.

His stuff was good. His friends among scenario buyers admitted it.

"But," they told him, "we're not doing anything like that just now. You see . . ."

He thought he did see. But he kept right on sending the right stories to the wrong studios. Then one day he picked up Camera!, glanced through it, then devoured every line. He found out what stuff each studio was doing.

"Now I'm going at this systematically," he muttered.

He mailed in a subscription so he'd get Camera! on the dot every week. Then he followed the hunches Camera! gave him and sold stories ever after.

Just a twist of the wrist, and this corner of the page is torn off—try it! Sign it and send.

Come Again, Hays

COME again soon, Will Hays.

We're glad to have you show healthful curiosity about motion pictures. We're glad to gratify your curiosity. Many of us have wondered why you didn't give us the opportunity before.

We mean it cordially—come again, soon.

Because you've had your right arm shaken nearly off, don't go away thinking of us as yes-men and hand-shakers.

Because you've had cameras clicking at you right and left, don't think we spend most of our time posing for stills.

Because the directors dropped their megaphones with a smile when you came on the set, don't think we stop work every time a visitor appears.

You've been a mystery, curiosity. We all wanted to honor the man the public thinks bosses motion pictures. We know you're working for a group of producers, but we feel you're anxious to think ahead of your salaried job—and while you do, we're for you.

Now a little tip: When you come back, sneak in town quietly. Don't let them tip the chamber of commerce you're coming. Duck off the train and get to a telephone. Get Lon Chaney, or Cecil Holland, or some other make-up wizard to disguise you as an extra player. Go around and register; play in the mob if you can—you'll learn more about films in a day than you can in a year of personally-conducted tours.

Why not try it, Hays?

Best wishes to Marilyn Miller and Jack Pickford, who are to be married Sunday. May their honeymoon at Lake Tahoe be happy. And may that rumored first feature of Miss Miller's—will Jack direct it?—be successful.

* * *

Fanny Ward fell down a stairway at Pourville, France, and fractured a bone in her right shoulder. Always feared someone would get hurt in these staircase falls.

Warped Ideas

THE motion picture craze is a mania."

"There has not been a single denial regarding the statements of these people (notoriously prominent in the news) that they are here to go into motion pictures."

These statements, obviously intended to gain publicity for the speaker, are not from the mouth of Crafts or Voliva, as might be imagined.

They were spoken Tuesday by the new president of the University of Southern California, Dr. R. B. Von KleinSmid, in a lecture on "Efficient Causes of Crime."

If Professor Von KleinSmid had indulged in an academic love of facts, he would not have spoken so assuredly.

Regarding the influence of motion pictures on juveniles, we refer Dr. Von KleinSmid to Judge Hoyt of the New York children's court and to Justice Ben B. Lindsay of Denver.

Regarding the entrance of notorious persons into pictures, we invite Dr. Von KleinSmid to look up the facts in the Clara Hamon case.

Author's Victory

An important legal precedent for authors was made in New York Tuesday when James Oliver Curwood won a decision against Edwin Carewe, Warner brothers, Affiliated Distributors, and others.

Curwood sued to restrain the use of his name on the picture, "I Am the Law," a story of two mounted policeman and a girl. He said it was not the one he sold as "The Poetic Justice of Uko San," a story of two hunters and a bear.

Defendants claimed they purchased nothing but Curwood's name.

"Elaboration of a story means something other than that the same should be discarded and its title and authorship applied to a wholly dissimilar tale," declared U. S. District Judge Knox.

Film Capital Production Notes

W. P. S. EARLE TO PRODUCE HERE

William P. S. Earle, hitherto identified with eastern production, arrived in Los Angeles this week via Lincoln highway. He intends to produce his future pictures in the film capital. Plans for a special production are now under way. W. P. S. Earle and his family are the guests of his brother, Ferdinand Earle.

"Her Only Way" will be the next of the Selznick Revivals Starring Norma Talmadge. It will be released July 20th. This production was directed by Sidney Franklin. Mr. Franklin's latest effort along those lines was the direction of "Smilin' Through."

Larry Trimble, who with Jane Murfin is producing "Brawn of the North" for First National, left for New York Saturday. "Brawn of the North" features the wonder dog, "Strongheart."

Charlie Chaplin's latest for First National has been completed and is now in the cutting room. Twenty-six weeks were consumed in the making of this Chaplin antic. The name of the picture will be announced shortly.

Victor B. Fisher, supervising director, and Edward Belasco, president of Belasco Productions, Inc., are in Los Angeles preparing to start production within the next few days.

The Cosmopolitan, after completing the "Bishop of the Ozarks," is to start preparations for filming Mr. Howard's "Peggy Ware."

Clifford Elfelt will return from New York in two weeks, when he plans to start work on a picture starring James B. Warner at Brentwood studio.

Eddie Lyons is in New York. Both his production units at Berwilla studio are expected to resume work on his return.

STATER PRODUCTION PLANS

C. W. Stater, the Oklahoma producer, who is temporarily located at the Long Beach studios, has announced his production plans for the remainder of the year. He is at present gathering his staff and cast for his 12-reel super production, which he expects to start shooting on about August 15.

D. J. Gray, film editor of Marshall Neilan productions, has just returned to Los Angeles to give the new picture "Minnie" its final treatment under the producer's supervision. Gray has already started the work of cutting the film to the desired footage.

Marshall Neilan is negotiating for the use of the biggest shipyard on the Pacific Coast in his newest production, "The Strangers' Banquet" by Donn Byrne.

Marshall Neilan's "Minnie," adapted from George Patullo's story, "Her Man," has been edited and titled and will be released through Associated First National in the early fall.

Before leaving for New York, Wednesday of this week, W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph studios, admitted that word received from the east indicated that Corinne Griffith, Vitagraph's eastern star, would hereafter make her pictures at the company's lot in Hollywood. Actual confirmation of the report is dependent upon arrival in New York this week of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph.

Patricia Palmer, according to a report from Wyoming where she is on location with Lasky, will join director Bob Horner as soon as she completes her role in "The Cowboy and the Lady."

"Down to the Sea in Ships", the drama of New England's whaling days, which Elmer Clifton has been more than a year producing, is nearing completion. The business of cutting and assembling his twenty-five or more miles of film is now under way.

After thirteen weeks at Bisbee, Ariz., producing eight five-reel Western features on an open air stage, the Premium Picture unit was back in Los Angeles this week.

Harry Moody was director and "Doc" Cook cameraman of the troupe. The players were Jack Livingston, Mary Wynn, Hugh Saxon, Al Ferguson, and "Carolina" Brunson.

The pictures are being prepared for release through Russell and Russell.

Laurette Taylor and her husband, J. Hartley Manners, will arrive in Hollywood about August 1st. Production on "Peg O' My Heart" will start a week later.

Alf Goulding is to make another fairy tale with Baby Peggy. This time it is the story of "Hansel and Gretel." Goulding has a strong desire to make his own pictures in which he might play the leading comedy role.

Otis Harlan will support Dorothy Phillips in "All the World's a Stage."

J. WARREN KERRIGAN TO BE FEATURED

The William R. Lighton Productions, Inc., are preparing for production at the Hollywood studios, have completed arrangements with J. Warren Kerrigan to be featured in a series of the popular "Billy Fortune" stories by William R. Lighton. A new series of stories by Mr. Lighton will be released at an early date in the Saturday Evening Post and it will be from this material that the pictures featuring Mr. Kerrigan will be created.

Jack Cooper expects to sign contracts to be featured in a series of two-reel comedies by a corporation that will handle distribution of his subjects.

Thomas Meighan starts next Monday on his new Paramount picture. This will be "The Man Who Saw To-morrow" and Alfred Green will direct.

Harry Gerstad and Walter Lundin have been filming scenes with Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis as stars. When this story is completed, Miss Davis is to start a picture in her own right under the personal guidance of Hal E. Roach. It will be photographed by Harry Gerstad.

W. D. Russell, head of Russell productions, is here from Chicago.

Ward Lascelle seems enthused about his last picture made for W. K. Hodkinson Corporation in which Colleen Moore plays the stellar part. His next story will be ready to start within the next thirty days.

D. W. Griffith may possibly be elected to direct the Goldwyn production of "Ben Hur."

King Vidor now is permanently settled in his office in the Metro studio and has started the preparations for "Peg O' My Heart" with Laurette Taylor.

"Happiness A La Mode" is on the revival schedule for Selznick, for July 30th. Harrison Ford who has played in so many productions opposite Constance is in the cast and the direction is by Walter Edwards.

Fred Caldwell returned from New York where he and Mrs. A. B. Maescher showed "Night Life In Hollywood" to some of the largest releasing concerns and received some very tempting offers. Mrs. Maescher remained in New York to close the deal while Mr. Caldwell returned here to get his next story in shape.

The Goldwyn production of "Ben Hur" will be made partly in India and Palestine, and partly in the Goldwyn studios. The principal players will be selected in this country.

Charles Ray is working on his first-sequel of "The Girl I Love."

Wyndham Standing's next picture will be made in Hollywood.

Julia Fay's country cousins dropped in on her the other day and visited Lasky studio.

Current Reviews

"The Dust Flower"

ONCE upon a time there was an author by the name of Basil King who wrote a successful novel and photoplay. But it was too much for him so he dug up another story that was probably the first one that was ever rejected in his early career, and fed it to a public now dazzled by the brilliance of his name. "The Dust Flower" is it. He camouflages his weakling with a filmy alibi that it is a fairy tale and to look for Miss flapper Cinderella and Prince charming.

But we didn't have to look very hard. They were forced upon us.

The story is too amusing to leave untold. Cinderella, whose cruel stepmother is a stepfather, decides to take a jump in the lake. But fate waves her wand and throws her into the sea of matrimony instead.

Prince charming tells his haughty fiancée that he will marry the first dame he sees if she throws him down, which she does.

While airing his troubled soul mid the squirrels of Central park he sees Cinderella about to jump off so he sizes up the situation. Neither one cares what becomes of them so they get married. But all his wealth causes the poor heroine to worry and after many attempts to put on her old clothes and go back to drudgery they fall in love with each other and live happily ever after.

Rowland V. Lee kept the story moving along thus making it tolerable. Had the picture been allowed to drag, it would have been the only thing left to further insult our meager intelligence.

Helene Chadwick has not been treated fairly in handing her the modern Cinderella role. She has no chance to take a step forward in her career and many chances of backsliding.

James Rennie, the prince charming, takes his role seriously and his acting is pleasing. It is a poor vehicle in which to make his reentrance into pictures.

Claude Gillingwater has the prize role of the production. As "Steptoe," the symbolized fairy godmother steals the picture.

Mona Kingsley, Edward Peil and George Periolat were well cast. But for all that there is no saving an impossible picture.

Makin' Movies

THE earnest efforts of the child mind in working for specific results, are as important to the youth as the manipulations of the magnates who move the world are to these giants of industry.

Therefore when J. K. McDonald previewed "Makin' Movies" for the edification of a large mixed group this week, he well proved that he had grasped the possibilities of the natural child as fetching screen material.

He proved it so well with his Johnny Jones company, that every portion of peculiarly mixed audience, enthused, laughed and applauded in unison. There were no silent spots. Which is a very high compliment for the producer and his splendid organization.

The success of this, as well as the first McDonald production is the delightful freshness of it all. Johnny Jones, alert to put over another business deal which will clean up for that progressive young man, gets a glimpse of the movies, manipulates affairs to such good effect that he plays newsboy in a production. He then proceeds to buy a little camera and put on "Uncle Tom's Cabin," by the aid of those most natural children, Gertrude Messenger, Kenneth Gordon, True Boardman, Newton Hall, and several more mighty clever members of "the gang." The result is good for sore eyes and persons afflicted with chronic grouch.

The McDonald pictures have spelled goodbye for the old-time kid pictures, with their slapstick and forced situations, if others would keep abreast of the times.

W. E. W.

Harry Lamont, who just finished a part in "Omar, the Tentmaker," and is now in his second picture with Rodolph Valentino.

"Sherlock Brown"

FOR some reason or other "Sherlock Brown," a Bayard Veller production, has been called a rapid-fire comedy-drama. The latter is everything that the picture is not. There is nothing rapid as far as action goes. It moves along so slowly that one would like to take a whirl at the projection machine in hopes of stirring up a little speed. There is nothing particularly dramatic unless it is the chase through five reels for a sealed beribboned envelope containing the formula for a powerful explosive. The possible comedy situations probably arises from the fact that eight grown up people maul this helpless packet ruthlessly. But it ends in the hands of the right people thus giving relief to our troubled minds.

The story can be summed up in few words. The "papers," the "girl" and the handsome "detectative" put to action by the rules of the "How to Make Movies" book.

Bert Lytell is not the dashing hero of former productions. He is a frozen-faced, would-be detective. His action is deliberate and a bit forced due perhaps to his unfamiliarity with the type of part given him.

Ora Carew in an ordinary role is pleasing.

She has no difficult work before her unless it is being kidnapped and treated in the manner of the much pursued "papers."

Sylvia Breamer as the villainous beauty looks well and tries to act the same with fair results.

George Kuwa, the oriental comedian, has a small but welcome role.

George Barnum, Hardee Barnum, Wilton Taylor, Theodore Von Eltz and De Witt Jennings fill out the cast.

"One Clear Call"

THE one clear call which comes to us after witnessing this First National attraction, is the name of John M. Stahl. For it was he who is vastly responsible for this gripping and wholly satisfying example of masterly screen work.

Although the cast is weighed down with names of gold, and the spirit of a true artist hovered over the busy camera, the verdict remains the same—Director Stahl first.

It is true that Irene Rich held us helpless with her remarkable portrayal of the agonized mother in that chamber of stalking death; Henry Walthal exhibited all the striking power of his past Griffith days; Claire Windsor, the beautiful, arose to direction as never before; Milton Sills carried the thread of the winding story with splendid repression, while one loved the very ground upon which the blind mother stood—Edith Yorke; yet there was something needed greater than the splendid individual efforts of these and other true artists of the cast, Annette DeFoe, Joseph Dowling, Doris Pawn, Shannon Day, Irene Hunt and Stanley Goethals.

That something was provided by the director who was forced to take a story of wretched logic, and make the people not only like it, but yearn for more of the same.

It is hardly fair to the public to quarrel with any part of such a production, for such things tend to discourage attendance in a minor way. And to cause any lover of worthy screen effort to miss such a presentation, is working an injustice upon the person himself. But if someone—adapter or title writer—had taken the opportunity to disagree with Author Frances Nimmo Greene's novel at certain places, allowing the responsibility for acts committed to fall fairly upon the shoulders of the characters, there could have been no quarrel, for the story is not only mystifying, but commanding in its interest at all times.

The preachment of the story is based upon a familiar quotation, but the logic of the deduction might find itself staggering if, for example, a modern Bluebeard, getting a closeup of his "six feet of rope" because of the many wives sent on before, should begin his gallows speech with that same maxim—"There is a little bad in the best of us—"

Yes, and the hangman probably would make a premature motion of his hand which would mean in the sign language, "That will be about all from you."

We fear that someone has placed Henry Garnett (Walthal) in much the same position in this adaptation. And, as for some of the titles, how did you let those get past, John Stahl, after the triumph you created?

Where to Find People You Know

"Mother" Ashton is supporting Billie Dove and Cullen landis in "Country Love", Metro's latest production.

George Sheldon has returned from San Francisco where he was vacationing after his work in "Manslaughter" and "The Son Of The Wolf".

Burke Jenkins, who was formerly continuity writer for William de Mille and editor for Jesse D. Hampton, is at United Studios working with Frank Leon Smith on the Ruth Roland serial.

Ruth St. Denis will appear in Hollywood motion pictures with the Cosmopolitan Film Company when she returns from her European tour.

Charles Ray has a large group of players taking character roles in his new production "The Girl I Love", an old-fashioned story. Among them are Gus Leonard, F. B. Phillips, Helen Gilmore, Mabel Shoulters, Florence Gibson, Helen Muir, Georgia Sherart, Sadie Gordon, Billy Latimer, and Louise Lester.

Elsa Forsyth, former Marion Morgan dancer, is among the feminine beauty brigade which Larry Semon has assembled for his new comedy. Elsa is a Peggy Hamilton club girl.

Thomas H. Ince granted special permission to Madge Bellamy to serve as Jack Pickford's leading lady in "Garrison's Finish" and did the same thing in regard to Lloyd Hughes, who is consequently Mary Pickford's leading man in "Tess of the Storm Country."

The Lasky-Famous Players Corporation excused Charles Ogle and Clarence Burton from their stock duties on its "lot" long enough to play important parts in "Garrison's Finish."

George Hackathorn is to play the lead in D. W. Griffith's next picture, with Mae Marsh playing opposite. Miss Marsh is now in England, making pictures, but expects to return within a few weeks.

Matt Moore plays a principal role in Marshall Neilan's next production, "Her Man."

Hope Hampton is to be presented as Galahad's bride in many-towered Camelot, a startling change from the Lily Becker of "Star Dust." Her new vehicle, "The Light in the Dark," by William Dudley Pelley, is a modern drama with a thousand-foot cut-in of Arthurian romance.

Joe North, who has finished playing David Livingstone in "With Stanley In Africa," at Universal, is playing a part in the Pilgrimage play.

Beth Kosik is playing the part of a Samaritan girl in the Pilgrimage Play.

"The Girl I Love", which is now under production.

Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, is supervising the directing of the Century Fairy Tales.

Tiny Sanford is working opposite Monty Banks at Berwilla studios.

Fred Lancaster is playing his third heavy with Larry Semon.

Robert Ensminger, Vitagraph director, as recently intimated in Camera, was married before recently leaving on an eastern trip. Mr. Ensminger returned this week with his bride Miss Louise Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Sullivan of Boston. Miss Sullivan had lived here a year with her parents. William Duncan and Mrs. Duncan witnessed the ceremony which occurred at Riverside, June 12.

Little Richard Headrick, who will be remembered for his work in "The Child Thou Gavest Me," has a part in "Timber."

Alec Francis is cast for a part in "The Man Who Saw To-morrow," starring Thomas Meighan.

Elliott Dexter is to appear opposite Clara Kimball Young in "Enter Madam." This will be the second picture in which Mr. Dexter has played with Miss Young, as he was her leading man in "The Hands of Nara," now completed.

Elmo Lincoln will have the role of the village blacksmith in the S-L production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which Clarence G. Badger is directing for Metro.

Harry Depp and Taylor Graves will act as the Cobb twins for "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Leon Barry has been added to "June Madness," which Harry Beaumont is directing. Mr. Barry has recently completed an engagement with the Sennett studios where he appeared in "Suzanne" with Mabel Normand.

Geraldine Waggle is added to the cast of Bessie Love's picture, "Deserted at the Altar."

Coy Watson, Jr., is playing opposite Lloyd Hamilton in his latest picture.

Felix Whitefeather, an Indian, has been playing a soldier in "Omar the Tentmaker." He was found very useful in talking in his native tongue before the camera which would screen as a foreign language, presumably Arabic.

Claire Windsor has been selected for the leading role in Marshall Neilan's next production, "The Strangers' Banquet."

Leatrice Joy is engaged to play the leading role in Thomas Meighan's next starring picture, "The Man Who Saw To-morrow."

Fred Kelsey, showing in "One Clear Call" at the Kinema, is doing heavy work for Finis Fox in the Cosmopolitan Film company's "Bishop of the Ozarks."

P. A. Powers is a much sought man. Since he returned there is a steady stream of directors, stars and actors, who crave one peek at P. A. to tell him what they have for sale or distribution on the R-C program.

Century Notes

Jackie Morgan, Century's five year old comedian, will be seen in Al. Herman's latest novelty. Jackie will also play a part in the next fairy tale for Century.

Betty May, Century's newest beauty, will appear opposite Lee Moran in his next comedy.

Century's latest animal comedy has been changed from "At The Fair" to "Slam, Bang!"

West Coast theatres are running the Baby Peggy Contest in all their theatres. The idea originated with Sid Grauman and Julius Stern.

Julius Stern leaves for New York about the 1st of August. From there he will go abroad. Possibly Lee Moran will accompany him.

Arvid Gillstrom is casting for his next Century comedy with Lee Moran. Besides Betty May, in all likelihood little Jackie Morgan will play a prominent part.

Jackie Morgan, five year old Century comedian, has finished a prominent part in Brownie's latest.

Al. Herman's latest Century has been titled "The Cabby."

Duke Kahanamoka, world's greatest swimmer called on Alf Goulding and Gillstrom, Century directors and watched them in their work.

A new series of Centurized fairy tales are now being prepared. "Hansel and Gretel", now in production heads the list.

Kathleen North, character actress on stage and screen, plays the "First Woman" in the Pilgrimage play.

Pickups By The Staff

Cullen Landis has received a belt made of horse hair from a fan in Utah State Penitentiary where they are showing "The Outcast of Poker Flat".

Jean Hersholt has just rejected an offer to become director-general of a large film producing company in Copenhagen, Denmark—his birth-place.

Forrest Robinson, character actor, has received a letter from Iceland signed by J. Ice. Paradoxical as it may seem, the letter was one of warm praise of his work in "Tol'erable David."

Earle Williams and Mrs. Williams have returned from a vacation spent at Pebble Beach.

Alice Calhoun is happy again after an inconvenient experience with tonsillitis.

William Duncan and Mrs. Duncan (Edith Johnson) returned this week from Honolulu. While in the Islands Mr. and Mrs. Duncan made several personal appearances. They report a royal time.

The Mary Pickford doll, which will be an exact likeness of America's sweetheart, will be on the market in time for the next Christmas.

Gordon B. Pollock, who is responsible for the exquisite photography in "Science—or God?" and "The Ninety and Nine", the Mission Film Productions, is in San Francisco, making preliminary arrangements for the production of Hans Christian Anderson's fairy story "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep."

The Paramount company making "The Cowboy and the Lady" with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore heading the cast, under the direction of Charles Maigne, is expected to return to the Lasky studio for interior scenes.

The company working on "Country Love" will spend the next ten days at Sacramento, California. All the exterior river scenes for this picture which Emile Chautard is directing, are to be filmed along the Sacramento river.

Marshall Neilan's production "Minnie", is now receiving its final editing and will be shown publicly in the early fall.

Many prominent members of the motion picture colony and local financiers associated with Thomas H. Ince attended an informal reception tendered the producer by his studio staff upon his return from an extended stay in New York.

Cecil Holland was given an ovation by the actors and employees of the Fine Arts Studio for his climax scenes in the big oriental set of "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Douglas Dawson is interviewing people by the score at R-C studios for the forthcoming story that Chester Bennett is to direct with Jane Novak.

Edmund Russell writes from London to the Cosmopolitan company that he expects to return to India soon on a cinema engagement, but will return to California when Ruth St. Denis comes home to help in the directing and to take part in the new film.

The play to be produced will probably be "Harischandra". Special adaptations will be made to feature the dancing with Ruth St. Denis and Dereys Perdue taking the leading parts.

Milton Sills has been chosen by Edward Sloman to head an all-star cast for his first independent picture, "Blind Justice," now in production at Fine Arts.

Lloyd Hughes and Gloria Hope both deny the report to the effect that they will be co-starred. Each is sure of being starred individually by different producers.

Max Linder cables the following greeting to his American admirers: "I am home in Paris and home-sick for America." This seems to make it a certainty that Max will return to Uncle Sam's domain after completing his nine-reel super-production in France.

W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph studios in Hollywood, left Wednesday of this week for New York to meet president Albert E. Smith who is returning from Europe. Lining up of winter work for Vitagraph is the reason for Mr. Smith's departure. It is understood that Vitagraph will be humming again by, or shortly after, the first week in August.

Italy's most famous theater, the Teatro Della Scala of Milan, Italy, and the plaza facing the theater were reproduced on the huge stages of the Garson studios in Hollywood for an episode in "Enter Madame," Clara Kimball Young's picture which Harry Garson is producing. Wallace Worsley is directing.

Forrest Robinson, who is now playing a part in Mary Pickford's revival of "Tess of the Storm Country," has a painting of himself hung in the hall of fame in the Lamb's Club of New York. It happened thus: Robinson was selected to pose for Charles Chambers, the artist, for the cover of the program for the Lamb's Gambol of 1922, and, the painting was judged so remarkably meritorious that the club officials decided it deserved a place among the immortals. Chambers' art was so true that a New York art critic declared it to be "a startling revelation of the art of life-like color blending."

Charles Ray has built a new set out in the country where he is shooting scenes for "The Girl I Love". The set is an old-fashioned house and garden of the early seventies.

The polo field at Santa Barbara was transformed into a replica of the famous "Seven Flags" polo field at Bombay for the mallet-wielding scenes in Norma Talmadge's "Voice from the Minaret."

The amateur picture producer is burl-squed in "Homemade Movies," a Mack Sennett comedy that pivots about the reckless eyes of Ben Turpin.

Mabel Normand will return to the Sennett lot from Europe about September 1st and will immediately start work on a special comedy feature provided for her by Mr. Sennett.

Racing the storm from Riverside by motor car was the experience Pat O'Malley had last Sunday night. He had gone to that city on location with the Sloman producing company. As he was retiring for the night a telegram arrived telling him that an addition to his family was expected before morning. No time was lost in locating a high-powered automobile and Mr. O'Malley traveled the distance to the St. Vincent Hospital here in time for the doctor to whisper in his ear, "It's a girl." The child was born at 2:10 a. m., weighed seven and one-half pounds, and is the O'Malley's second daughter. This daughter's name is Sheila Patricia O'Malley.

Some of the finest blue ribbon winners of this season's Southern California horse show are pictured in "Rich Men's Wives," the B. P. Schulberg Special Production which was directed by Gasnier, starring House Peters and Claire Windsor.

Thru the efforts of Mr. Frank MacQuarrie a movement is under way in San Francisco to present a motion picture exposition at the Civic Auditorium in August.

This exposition will run for one week, ending up with a society mask ball.

A pageant carrying out the history of the motion picture up to the present period will be a feature attraction. The exposition management have been gathering data for over two years pertaining to the growth of pictures and many interesting relics will be on display—such as the first camera ever to film a motion picture.

Every producing company of importance will be on hand with booths. Special exhibits will be shipped from Europe.

Chatter About Southland Folks - By.... Harry Burns

William Farnum, is back among Hollywooders once more, also Emmett J. Flynn, who will probably direct the star in a special production.

Ruth Roland will write finis to her present serial about the time these columns go to press.

Cameron Coffey will take a flyer into vaudeville under the management of Morris Cassell. There will be two others in the act, which will soon be given a tryout before it is booked for a series of dates.

W. S. Van Dyke is listed to handle Buck Jones next story at the Fox studios if what is going the rounds of the rialto is authentic.

S. M. Beal has returned to the Thos. H. Ince studios to assist John Griffith Wray. S. M. just completed his work with his dad, Frank Beal, at the Fine Arts studios.

Tod Browning believes in getting the real stuff when he deals with New York atmosphere in his stories. Hence his boarding a rattler and riding to the metropolis for some scenes in the forthcoming release of the Priscilla Dean picture now in the making.

Jack Ford is to direct another big special for Fox. His last was well received by the powers that be.

Gordon Mullen has been signed to play part in "Thelma," which will reveal Jane Novak as the star, and Chester Bennett as the director.

Marcel Perez and Pete Morrison were seen coming out of the Horsley projection room with a smile on their faces of satisfaction. So their picture that they are producing for F. M. Sandford must be coming along great.

Eddie Lyons lost his car from in front of Universal City. It took a notion to go out for a spin, with someone else driving it, and from latest reports Eddie was still gunning for his car.

C. M. Franklin, aided by Arthur Rose, are still working on a novelty production of colored photography. It will reveal a Chinese tale that will startle the knowing ones, it is said.

Roy H. Klumb is in the producing game to stay, and has big plans on tap for future productions and releases.

Ethel Clayton had the nicest period costumes for the "Three Corners Kingdom" that the writer has seen in some time. The people looked as though they really belonged—thanks to the good judgment of Director Wesley Ruggles and his assistant, Ralph Walters, who are handling the story.

Vincent McDermott accidentally became an actor when he was ushered into a part at a race track scene that Jack Pickford was making. When it was all over Vincent was not only the wiser but richer for the director voted him "some actor."

Clyde De Vinna, Elfelt's cameraman for "Flaming Hearts" is in the South Seas.

J. C. Van Trees, who is filming "The Young Rajah" with Phil Rosen as director, can answer the mooted question "Does a cameraman make a good director?" J. C. will answer "Yes." Every sequence he films has so many difficult angles to remember and handle that it takes a trick cameraman to bring about exact results.

Ed Marcell put over a clever bit for Sam Wood in a hotel set the other day.

Henry McCarty and Charles Mack gave the southland the double o for some locations that they intend to use in the next Lester Cuneo picture that they ought to start most any day.

Louis Lipton joined Alfred Green and went to Catalina with the company, which has Thomas Meighan as star. Lipton's line of work is gags, titles and senarios.

Pat Moore plays "The Young Rajah" as a child. Pat's best scenes in the picture were taken the other day at a coronation in a temple, with hundreds of extras, near-greats, and stars taking part.

Mickey Moore is working with Gloria Swanson in the Sam Wood production at Lasky's. He, like his brother Pat, is in demand.

Norman Taurog must have seen Henry East with his head shaved and thought that Henry was cool and comfortable. Hence his dispensing with his hair, much to the heart aches of some feminine admirers.

Tenny Wright, member of the A. D. A., sends a postal from Southampton that "all is well" with him. The sea and fishes and he are on good speaking terms.

Edgar L. Kennedy took a flying trip to Murietta springs prior to starting his picture with Chester Conklin.

L. L. Baxter, manager of the Marshall Neilan company, and Billy Nolan, cutter of Douglas Fairbanks productions, were guests of the Assistant Directors association the other evening.

Charles Stallings accompanied Tod Browning to New York to get scenes for a new production.

Pete Gerald, secretary and treasurer of the Assistant Directors association, has originated a new song which carries the title, "Anybody Got Any Dues?" The words are touching, and the air doesn't appeal to everyone.

Arthur Rosson, who is directing Jack Pickford, gave United studio sets the once-over the other day, accompanied by Claude Mitchell, his assistant. The pair decided to shoot some scenes there.

Dot Farley has a job as co-director and author of some two-reel comedy dramas with Crystal Rapp as star, and Francis Ford studios the scene of their efforts.

Tulla Belle and Eba Mona are going to join the vaudevillians by September 1, touring back East.

Tom Murray has completed his engagement at the Charles Chaplin studios. He spent four months with the famous funster.

Ruby Hill is taking life easy these days. I met her on Cahuenga driving her coupe, at ease with the world and not a single worry.

Little, "The Big Photographer," has his troubles. While trying to take stills of everything from a wee baby to an elephant the other day, an autoist passed him so quickly that he almost took the tail end of his coat off.

W. S. Campbell is still waging his battle in the courts over the Chester Comedies that he produced for C. L. Chester. As soon as the proceedings are over W. W. intends to start working once more.

A. Linkoff expects to place his signatures on the dotted line within the next seven days. More power to you A. L. and may your strength never wane.

Claude Camp circled about the studios and lined things up in great shape for the handling of the crowds that gave our own Will H. Hays the big reception at the Ambassador Hotel, Wednesday evening. Claude is the hustling kid from hustlierville.

Frank Beal is very much elated over the picture he has been directing at the Fine Arts studios. "The cast will knock 'em off their seats, the story is one of those puzzling things that will keep them guessing until the final scene is screened."

Hugh Saxon admits that when he went to Arizona to play in the series of western dramas he called himself an actor. Now he thinks seriously of getting cards printed with the following:

HUGH SAXON—DARE-DEVIL AND STUNTS MY SPECIALTY.

He had to do 'em and smile while risking his neck.

Vladimir Lenska, virtuoso violinist, aided by Richard Wagner, who is a master at the piano, gave the A. D. A. boys quite a treat at the last meeting at the clubrooms. Lenska allowed the members to peep at a violin made in 1516, which has been the property of some of the world's greatest violinists.

Charles Lamont was around bidding folks at Fox studios good-bye the other day. He and Noel Smith have made their last picture at that plant for some time. They have resumed the Hallroom boys series for Harry Cohn, with Syd Smith leading and another to be selected. There will be another director to alternate with Noel Smith.

Joe Basil, who is assisting Tom Buckingham, believes in doubling in brass. To show Larry Semon that he doesn't like to stand around and do nothing but see that actors get on the set, look after details and locations, order lunches, machines and whatnots, that go to make up a troupe, he's working in makeup just to get in the fun while the funmaking is going on.

Geniues on Crutches

SOMEWHERE in that dear Chicago, where authors get life first-hand for their melodramas, dwells a sister who would write. She has written in fact and, between the dates of mailing out and the return of the prodigals, has also dug up a little war in which one dud is aimed our way.

Before it explodes and removes from our midst one who is not handsome, but willing to be if Edna Wallace Hopper will send us her recipe, we desire to observe from our bomb-proof trench that we still stick by what we said in the article, disguised by the title "When Genius Walks."

That outburst of enthusiasm and opinion has stirred up a bit of comment, but this is the first time the conductor has been charged with nominating a candidate in order to whittle up his liver with the family carving knife.

As Miss Dolly Lapsley, the lady with the bunch of grievances, has fallen into error which is very common among the uninitiated, perhaps it might be well to straighten it out for the entire tribe of "wanna know."

In order to drag in another victim under the supreme court ruling that misery must have company, we will single out Frank E. Woods first, easing our own case down later.

She says that Mr. Woods has written her that "there is no market for amateur scripts."

"Aha!" she mentally ejaculates; "if this be the truth, then why should the aspirant waste his time in studying the rules of the game?"

The reply is as simple as the explanation of the country merchant who wouldn't sell a shovel without a prescription. You see, someone takes the shovel and digs in his garden. Then he plants corn. He gathers the corn and after there is a lapse of time, he gathers in his friends, after which Volstead's hired man gathers in the whole flock.

You couldn't sell a shovel to an editor with a thirst, but he might give you his Hollywood home for some of the real stuff.

An amateur script is about as useless to a studio as a club membership to a married man. But neither Mr. Woods or anyone else has stated that there is no market for the fellow who has worked himself or herself out of the amateur class into recognition through application and native genius.

We do not presume that even Shakespeare was born with a copy of his first works in his hand. He must have had to grow up a little, both bodily and as a student.

Now, coming to the dud which is pursuing the conductor himself, we draw a decided line between studio readers and professional critics. The studio reader is supposed to recognize an idea when it pops out of a story and hits him between the eyes. He passes it along for what is evidently its worth. That is about the extent of his job.

The critic studies manuscripts sent him and returns them to the author with helpful criticism, constructive criticism. Many professionals both of fiction and photoplay, employ such critics.

If it were not for the knowledge of those who know, to be imparted to persons endowed with imagination and brains, there would be no new crops of professional writers to take up the work.

Success in photoplay writing makes similar demands to those of success in other professional lines.

We wouldn't employ a doctor's young son to treat our canine but, later, we might invite him in to cut our leg off—if he had polished up on that sort of thing, dontcha know.

"Angel-Food"

Take a generous cup of Romance,
Add a sprinkling, too, of Tears—
Whip together until Dreamy
With a teaspoonful of Fears.
Sift in Love and Conflict plenty,
Flavor well with Mystery—
Make your Plot a cake of Laughter
Which will live in History!
Test the oven of your Plotting
With the broomstick of Suspense;
Spread in tins of brightest Intrigue—
Just enough for Common Sense!
Make your Theme the sweetened frost-

ing
Which shall clothe your cake of Thought,

Spread it with the knife of Wisdom
Which the years to you have brought!
When your cake is baked and cooling,
Do not put your tins away,
Bake another—bigger—better—
Than the Cake of Yesterday!

Is It a Comeback?

IN reaching around for something to hold up during the slipping period of the cinema, England has gone back to first principles, staging a comeback that should cheer up the shade of Pop Anson, et al.

England is making many one-reel dramas.

Do you get that, gentle writer, who cannot find footage enough in a five-reeler for all your continuity?

Dramas, I said; dramas in 1,000 feet of celluloid.

I can hear the sarcastic gent in the red vest remarking:

"Yeah; what they call dramas."

Well, old sport, we will quote you a few, and you may decide, providing of course that you have heard that "The Merchant of Venice," "The Scarlet Letter," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Bleak House," "Jane Shore" and "The Lady of the Camelias" were published once, and seemed to have attracted attention from certain readers.

Yet these great tales are among the one-reel subjects filmed in England, as Camera! informed you a week ago.

That does not prove anything so far as the market or conditions are concerned, but, as we listen further to our English informant, we hear that these same one-reelers are "holding up the attendance."

Now, whether the human race is on such a mental par as to cause this recipe to be one for universal use, still is a question.

But America and all other countries once did a flourishing film-theater business when the program was composed entirely of single-barrelled dramas and comedies.

Many wiseacres have predicted, from time to time, that the short-subject program would come back, in part at least.

A certain number of writers would welcome a return of the day when they would be able to sit down and write a one-reel idea into a one-reel picture, instead of groping around in the old mind for 4,000 feet of beautiful thought, mental hitching posts, a couple of Joe Millers and a bunch of hokum in order to put it over.

The exhibitor with that kind of a feature on his screen can ballyhoo his ware to the passing crowd and get many a response:

"No thanks, old man; I'm walking out on one of the same right now."

A public too wise and weary to be fooled by the stuffed effigy, has caused many a child to become so familiar with its parents as to recognize them on sight.

And they will continue to do so under the present shower of poor pictures, to the advantage of the children, many of whom have found father and mother around the house so much that they can almost recognize them on sight.

It would be a rank injustice if it was not also conceded that the grand escape has made a domestic article out of the noble game of "gulluf." A home without a stymie is an outcast indeed.

One-half the complaint which has afflicted the emptying theaters, is high prices.

One hardly would advocate to our comeback program, to confine all dramatic subjects to the mere 15 minutes life of the one-reeler. It is quite probable that a standard might be set with a three-reeler as the "feature." Let it have the support of a single-reel comedy drama, and a single comedy, with the usual news or scenes showing.

This entire program could be run in one and one-half hours and, by packing them in on a 10, 20 and 25 cent charge, all houses without ridiculous overheads could win in a walk, so the wise ones argue it.

Naturally the prologue, Little Fanny, the "high class vaudeville artist" just from high school, and other claptrap would have to be given the air.

But that is much better than having the audience take it.

But what a boon to the writers would be the opportunity to write 'em in one, two or three reels!

Bam! Right into the heart of the story.

Hist! Danger and dirty doings!

Boom! That was not the city hall falling down, merely the punch.

Hurrah! Handsome Harold to the rescue. Ouch! The villain gets his.

Gooie, gooie! Sure Mike, Harold has her in his arms violently removing the beautiful Cupid's bow from her lips with his own removable curve.

Fadeout!

And what more would you want for the small sum of a dime?

All these arguments anent the return of low prices and mixed shorts sound very good. Now if some gent who still can make a noise like a plumber's pay-day will kindly reveal a practical example of the same, we shall see; we shall see.

To keep your stories fresh, re-write them often on clean paper.

Camera! intends to make the Pulse of the Studio accurate in every detail, if humanly possible. If you find any error, please telephone 595-179, Pulse Editor. Thank you!

Mary Lee Wise, who has just finished playing in "To Have and to Hold," is again with Lasky in Gloria Swanson's "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," under the direction of Sam Wood.

Cullen Landis will probably leave for New York, after he has finished in "Country Love," where he will confer with New York Producers.

Albert Kelly, formerly assistant director for the Viola Dana company, will be King Vidor's assistant for the filming of "Peg O' My Heart," in which Laurette Taylor will star.

Abe Stern, secretary and treasurer of Century Comedies is due in Hollywood this week.

Stanton Heck is in Reginald Barker's notable cast of players in "Timber."

Jean Hersholt, the well-known director, who after making four straight Zane Grey pictures for Benjamin B. Hampton, sought relief from the monotony of so much directorial responsibility by playing the role of Ben Letts, the terrible villain in Mary Pickford's "Tess of the Storm Country."

Eleanor Boardman has been selected by Marshall Neilan for the part of John Keogh's flighty wife in his picturization of Donn Byrne's, "The Strangers' Banquet."

Miss Boardman has just finished work in Rupert Hughes "Gimme" and several months ago was named the prize-winning movie type of greater New York by Bob MacIntyre who selected her from among five thousand applicants and awarded her a Goldwyn contract.

Bryant Washburn has the leading male role in "June Madness" with Viola Dana, under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Mr. Washburn will enact the role of a jazz orchestra leader in this story by Grosby George.

Rockliffe Fellows has arrived from New York in Los Angeles to take a leading part in "The Strangers' Banquet," at the Goldwyn studios.

Joan Standing is working in Reginald Barker's production, "Timber."

Publicity?---well

The record reads something like this:

Former publicity director for Henry Lehrman Comedies
Monte M. Katterjohn
Christie Comedies
"Tarzan of the Apes"

West Coast manager of Exhibitor's Trade Review for 2½ years.

Now writing all material for "The Wanderer," a distinctive monthly magazine, circulated nationally. For sale at news-stands.

Wish to become associated with first-class producing company, theater or individual, as director of publicity.

A certain amount of ability, combined with unlimited hard work, never fails to produce results.

Contemporary Criticisms

"IF YOU BELIEVE IT IT'S SO" (Paramount)

"The picture entertains through its intimate touches. . . . Thomas Meighan as the genial crook who sees the light, and Theodore Roberts, carrying the feature on his shoulders through his unique character portrayal, see to it that it is excellently interpreted. Joseph Dowling, the patriarch of "The Miracle Man," is in a similar role here. Ed Brady and Charles Ogle provide good atmosphere in their respective roles."

—Motion Picture News.

"The picture is unique in theme. . . . Very fine portrayals of types also characterize this production; particularly noteworthy is the work of Theodore Roberts in an unusual role decidedly out of the ordinary. Joseph Dowling is interesting and registers well as the patriarch. Pauline Stark is excellent as the simple country girl, and Charles Ogle is excellent as the lovable, poor and proud old uncle with too great a fondness for drink. Thomas Meighan is well suited to the role which he portrays, and Ed. Brady is a gem as the country constable, a role from which he extracts a lot of homely humor."

"Director Tom Forman deserves praise for the manner in which he has transferred to the screen the atmosphere and appeal of the story; however, the satisfactory denouncement has been somewhat forced in the subtitles."

—Moving Picture World.

"The story does not move quickly enough to properly hold the attention, and it is mostly excess footage that causes it to drag. Otherwise Tom Forman has done very well with the story. He gets over some comedy and handles the regeneration theme adequately. Of course, Perley Poore Sheehan's story is somewhat far-fetched, but Director Forman manages to keep it from being glaringly impossible, and he has provided a cast that does good work all around."

—Film Daily.

"There is no false sentimentality, no straining for effect, one situation glides smoothly into another, an undercurrent of bright comedy relieves the serious tension at appropriate occasions, and so cleverly have director, scenario writer and players combined their efforts that the spectator is kept on the keen edge of speculation as to just what is going to happen next."

"Thomas Meighan may safely set down his impersonation of Chick Harris as one of the most artistic contributions he has yet made to the world of filmdom. It is a clean-cut performance which touches the heart and never loses its magic from beginning to end. Pauline Starke is wistfully fascinating in the role of the heroine, Alvah Morely, Theodore Roberts gets some wonderful comedy effects out of the character study of old Sky Blue and better support than that provided by other members of the company could not be desired."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"ALWAYS THE WOMAN" (Compton-Goldwyn)

"Trading on the popularity of the desert story, with its Oriental posson and intrigue, it pretends to tell something of sheik love with all the customary trimmings, but it soon becomes hopelessly absurd—so much so that one cannot take it seriously. . . . The story is so topsy turvy that one cannot make head or tail of it."

"There is an attempt to suggest a note of mystery throughout, but the picture seldom succeeds in reaching the mark. There are scenes which are picturesque, and the offering at all times provides first rate atmosphere."

"Betty Compton has given herself too much latitude, a natural thing, since it is her production. She only gives fleeting glimpses of her "Miracle Man" talent. Macey Harlan is the truest in this story by Perley Poore Sheehan."

—Motion Picture News.

"Skillfully directed and handsomely photographed, 'Always the Woman' registers as an unusually brilliant example of fine screen technique. It is a most pretentious production, and exploits a story of peculiar interest to those for whom the theory of reincarnation holds fascination."

"Betty Compton adds fresh lustre to her laurels by her excellent work. . . . In the dancing interlude her physical charms are exploited to her best advantage and she is fully equal to any demands made upon her emotional ability. . . . Emory Johnson fills the lover role acceptably, Richard Rosson makes an eerie impression as the mystic Mahmud, Macey Harlan scores a decisive hit in the part of the reincarnated villain Kelim Pasha, and the native types are realistically convincing."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Though as a story the latter half of the film does not measure up to the strength which the first part carried, there is, however, no let up in the fineness of the settings, in the vivid photography, the artful acting or the smart clothes worn by the women."

"Miss Compton, as usual, gives an impressive portrayal of the character she impersonates. Her acting is exceptionally praiseworthy because of its artful naturalness, and the entire cast backs her up in a way to give an adequate background for her art."

—Moving Picture World.

"Arthur Rosson has provided a fairly spectacular production and there are numerous attractive settings that are excellently lighted and splendidly photographed. . . . It would seem that the director has given too much attention to drastic development and not enough to story development."

"The Egyptian sequence in the latter bears a resemblance to the recent Sheik pictures and contains a certain amount of audience appeal that can undoubtedly be relied upon to please them. Betty Compton gives a good performance. . . . She offers some humorous touches, and the subtitles bring a few laughs. Emory Jonson is suitable as the hero, while Macey Harlan glories in the role of the Egyptian statesman."

—Film Daily.

"THE LADDER JINX" (Vitagraph)

"This second Jess Robbins production is essentially one of action. That is its biggest asset. The story is a wild one, somewhat drawn out and at times ludicrous, but, with all that, it's entertaining, and inasmuch as it has been made for fun purposes only, one can overlook the impossible parts. The story deals with the terrible time visited upon a new bank cashier who walks under a ladder and is jinxed."

"There are some good characterizations contributed by Edward Horton as Arthur Barnes, cashier; by Tully Marshall as Peter Stalton; by Otis Harlan as the uncle. Margaret Landis is an attractive leading lady. The remainder of the cast is adequate. The direction is satisfactory. The photography is one of the features of the production."

—Motion Picture News.

"'The Ladder Jinx' must be considered nothing less than a film comedy gem. Neither must it be left unremarked that there is not a foot of the production that is not altogether 'clean,' and there is not a semblance of undesirable suggestiveness. The clever captions, too, are deserving of praise. 'Heart interest' is not lacking, and, in fact, plays a conspicuous part, even though the picture is a riot of comedy situations from beginning to end."

What Folks Think

TO HARRY BURNS
CARE OF CAMERA!
HOLLYWOOD.
MY DEAR HARRY:
I READ your paragraph
WHEREIN you said
THAT I hadn't worked
FOR MANY moons
AND IT worried you
TO KNOW how I COULD ride around
IN MY classy car
AND toilet not nor spin.
WEIL IT worried me
FOR MANY months
THAT WITH all the jobs
THERE SEEMED to be
THAT I could not
CONNECT with one
AND SO it was
THAT I took stock
OF THE scheme of life
AND FINALLY found
THAT WORRY makes wrinkles
AND availeth not
AND anyway
IN THE long run
THE ONE Who Directs
PUTS the Picture on TO SUIT Himself
AND WHEN He projects it
ON LIFE'S Screen
HE SMILES and says
THAT'S GOOD
AND THERE'S no recutting
AND ABOUT the car
I FORGOT to say
THE BOAT needs paint
AND A few new tires
AND A valve or two
BUT IT takes me there
AND BRINGS me back
AND LIFE'S pretty good
I THANK YOU.

(With Apologies to K. C. B.)

DEFENDS STATE RIGHTS

NEW YORK, July 19.—Editor, CAMERA!: Real independent producers and distributors today are in a better position than they have ever been in the history of the motion picture industry. This applies to the makers and distributors of meritorious pictures. Weak story, poor direction, inferior acting and photography foredoom a film to failure whether it is released on the program of a national distributing organization or on the state right market.

You state that unsuspecting producers are spending $25,000 to $30,000 each for fairly good five-reel western or out-door stories, expecting to make big profits. Any producer so ignorant or incompetent that he permits "fairly good" western pictures to cost this much deserves to fail.

Again permit us to quote you: "The independent producer is forced to sell his pictures at a lower price to the showman than is paid to the few big fellows who are making 'million dollar' specials almost daily."

This is absolutely false. The big productions have always been released through the independent market for the simple reason that they got more money that way than they could possibly hope to obtain through a national distributing organization.

An independent exchangeman, in business for himself, scrutinizes a production with the minutest care before he decides to invest his own money in it. He analyzes it from every angle to determine its box office possibilities and once he is convinced that the picture has possibilities he buys the rights for his territory. On top of that he invests a considerable amount in advertising and exploiting the picture in his territory. Now is it not reasonable to suppose that a man who has invested thousands of dollars in a production will get out and work hard to get that money back and a profit on top of it?

You state that the so-called big fellows own or control practically all first-run theatres. The inference that an independent picture can not play in these theatres is wrong. "Ten Nights in a Barroom" has played in first-run theatres owned or controlled by Famous Players, Fox, Goldwyn and First National.

You refer to the elimination of the middle-man or, as you put it, the New York market. This has been tried and time again, without success. The middle-man renders invaluable aid to the producer. When he takes a picture from a producer he has a great deal of money to invest and a great deal of hard work to do before that picture is marketable. He must have all of the advertising accessories created, he must design and make attractive posters, slides, heralds, lobby displays, photographs; press book, music cue or score, and advertising novelties. If a producer had to go to this expense on top of the cost of his production nine times out of ten he would be whipped before he started.

The distributor must see to it that the independent exchangeman who buys the producer's picture makes money, otherwise that will be the end of the independent exchangeman and, as a result, the end of the distributor.

The Arrow Film corporation is at all times in the market for good independent productions.

ADVOCATES "BACKFIRE"

PIOCHE, Nev., July 10.—Editor CAMERA!: The little homilies on the first page of CAMERA! from week to week are excellent prop. The industry needs propping and Heaven's aid more than the poor working girl these days, what with censorship threatening, and no stories to produce.

Some years ago I wrote to someone, in a spirit of helpfulness, that in time the so-called reformers would be snarling at the press, the theater, dancing, prancing, coco-cola and gaspers. I advocated fighting with backfires; whenever the reformers (whose favorite method of reforming is by wrecking) start to eructate for censorship of pictures, the united (?) forces of the industry should begin lobbying for investigations into the reformer's morals, etc. Have you noticed that the workers in all these movements never work? Never produce; never have a drop of honest or other sweat on their brows, but live on the lucre obtained by practical misrepresentations of their objects and of the end to be attained?

What I intended to convey is that your little time table is quite an aid to writers of stories. It is a business-like paper and full of helpful suggestions and Karma. Your criticisms, "Current Reviews," are really courageous; I had about concluded that there were no pictures which were not perfect.—ARTHUR REALL.

DELUGE OF "UNCLE TOMS"

R-C plans an all-star production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

McDonald Productions has completed a comedy version of "Uncle Tom" with Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messenger.

W. M. Smith Productions of Tulsa, Okla., announce an eight-reel version of this story in the original locations.

It is remembered that Marguerite Clark starred in a film version of the story for Paramount, directed by J. Searle Dawley. A version with Carlyle Blackwell, Florence Turner, Ralph Ince and Mary Fuller is now being distributed in Connecticut.

THREE KEATONS ON SCREEN

Buster Keaton has in his supporting cast in "The Electric House" his own father and mother. The three Keatons were formerly a vaudeville act of renown.

J. C. Wright, former art director for Goldwyn, will do the art work for "Enter Madame," which Harry Garson is producing for Metro.

John Bowers won the annual Commodore Yacht Club race held in the Newport Harbor recently. In his yawl, "Uncas," he bested the fastest sailing crafts in Southern California waters by a margin of more than four minutes.

William Kenton's juvenile lead in M. W. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks" is a new departure for this veteran of the legitimate stage. He has usually been cast in heavy leads.

Earl A. Legard, who just finished with Goldwyn, has been signed by Bob Horner to play in "The Law West of the Rockies," which the latter will direct upon his return from Chicago.

Bob Horner, who has been signed by Eastern Arts Film company, a Chicago concern, to direct their new series of western features, will locate in Hollywood.

Edward Sloman celebrated his anniversary a few days ago and was presented a large birthday cake by Carmel Myers, who is playing one of the principal roles in Sloman's first personally produced picture, "Blind Justice." The presentation was made between scenes in the picture at the Fine Arts studios. Ward Chance, production manager, acted as master of ceremonies.

Hugh Saxon was informed by Bisbee cowboys that Will Rogers is working with a company at Tombstone, Ariz.

Lawrence Creutz is film editor for Edward Sloman productions.

Dr. W. E. Schallenger, who is head of the Arrow Film corporation, is stopping at the Alexandria.

George Sheldon has returned from San Francisco where he spent two weeks resting after having finished his part with Madame Nazimova in "Salome".

"Hansel and Gretel", the first of the new Centurized fairy tales is nearing completion.

Before coming to America, Jean Hersholt, director-actor, was starred in plays by Ibsen, Strindberg, and Tolstoi for twelve years in the Scandanavian countries.

Edythe Chapman is cast for the mother of Charles Ray in "The Girl I Love."

Gale Henry, of many slap-stick comedies and portrayer of numerous eccentric screen roles, has been signed to enact a part in the S-L production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," for Metro which Clarence G. Badger is directing.

Victor H. Clarke of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has returned from a vacation at the Yosemite.

George Melford and his company went to Catalina last Wednesday to shoot scenes for "Ebb Tide," featuring Lila Lee and a James Kirkwood.

Raymond Hatton is in the supporting cast of "Ebb Tide," which Alfred Green is directing.

June Elvidge has been engaged by Lasky to play in "The Man Who Saw To-morrow."

Edward Patrick and Robert Brower have been engaged to play in "The Man Who Saw To-morrow," with Alfred Green directing.

David Kesson, Marshall Neilan's cinematographer for many years, will be in charge of the camera work for his new production, "The Strangers' Banquet."

Tom Held will continue with Marshall Neilan as his assistant director.

Barbara La Marr will uphold her reputation as the "best dressed vampire of the screen" in her new role, that of Lindy Putnam.

Hank Mann is the latest addition to "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Mr. Mann, who has been starred in comedies for several years, was engaged to enact the role of Ben Bates in this story by Charles Felton Pidgin which Clarence G. Badger is directing.

Derelys Perdue was given her first part as star in the Finis Fox production of the Cosmopolitan's "Bishop of the Ozarks."

The technical director, R. E. Sibley, has left the Wm. Fox Studio and is now with the studio at San Mateo, California.

Billy Franey, star of many comedy productions and one of the original "Keystone Cops," is to appear in "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Frank Alexander, that big fellow that dives instead of using dummies to double for him, is casting his lot with Joe Rock at Universal.

Allen McNeil is still the prize cutter of the Sennett lot and is aided by a staff of assistants that have the comedy tempo down to a nicety.

Bob Burns looked like a yearling in his riding suit the other day. The makeup was on as smooth as if Bob had been putting it on regularly for years.

Mason N. Litson showed Hollywoodites his latest two-reel comedy that he made with Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messenger, when he previewed his "Making Movies" at Hunley's theater.

Fritzi Fern has been engaged to play in the Baby Peggy Jean burlesque on "Hansel and Gretel." This will give Fritzi an opportunity to dance as well as act with the child star.

Jack Earle, Century's seven footer is playing the villain in Goulding's latest for Century.

Forrest Robinson, now in Mary Pickford's "Tess of the Storm Country," enacted one of the leading roles in "Wild Oats," one of the stage hits of 1875.

Little Elizabeth Foley, five and one-half years old, "doubles" for Margaret Courtot throughout the scenes of the prologue of Elmer Clifton's production "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Ruth De Francis has settled down in private life and joined the Harry H. Culver Co., at Culver City. She is known as Ruth Collier, and can be found in the Culver offices.

Robert De Lacey, film editor, is working with Finis Fox in the cutting and editing of "The Bishop of the Ozarks" for the Cosmopolitan Film Company.

Jack Richardson's comedy, "A Colorado Knight," was screened at Cosmoart studios Monday evening. Story and direction was by Bruce Mitchell, with Vernon Walker handling photography.

Fat Karr, Frank Hayes and Rose Dione showed visitors at Cosmoart studios Monday evening how "movies are made." They worked on one of the open stages, directed by Bruce Mitchell.

Anna Wilson had to play with fire in her last picture and in so doing had a number of close calls. Director Colin Campbell was well pleased with the way she worked.

Monte Collins, George Marion and Russ Powell put it on for Bill Seiter, who is directing Helen Jerome Eddy at R-C studios. The company shot scenes the other day at the Big U.

W. K. Howard and Johnny Walker should make a happy pair for they are as much alike as two peas. Johnny is as good an actor as is W. K. H. a director.

Harry Pollard is getting things in shape to start the series of Leather Pusher stories with Reginald Denny.

Harry Casteel wired James Thompson that he had a great proposition to offer him up north. The pair are former vaudevillians who have dabbled in filmland workings of late, and who have again turned strictest attention to variety theaters.

Billy Engle is once more smearing the grease paint on for Erle Kenton at Fox studios. B. E. sort of likes it.

Jack Wagner will return to Frothingham as soon as his work is completed with Joseph Schenck.

Lena Hall is helping out the Ruth Roland serial. She and Dick Currier have their hands full matching some of the action.

Harry Lamont has handed in his acceptance of a regular job to play villain for William Fairbanks in a Ben Wusol production at Berwillia studio. Look out, Harry! Being a dyed-in-wool desperado with William, the hero, is rough stuff for any one, so watch your step.

Ralph Lewis is working for Emory Johnson at the R-C lot. R. L. and Emory worked hand in hand in the picture that caused powers that be to bring about the present contract they are working under.

C. J. Silliman and Al Cody, with their associates, gave the Assistant Directors association their work they will be on hand next Thursday night as far as music is concerned.

On the return of Pauline Starke, who is now on location in the South Sea Isles with R. A. Walsh's Goldwyn troupe, she will start work immediately at the Long Beach studios, on the first of a series of four all star special productions for Mr. Stater. Several stories for Miss Starke's first starring vehicle are now under consideration. The staff and supporting cast for this picture will not be selected until late in August.

Lee Shumway is playing in "Timber," which will be made at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Jack Dill is cast for a part in the Reginald Barker production of "Timber."

Story By

Hope Loring, who fashioned the scenario of "Money, Money, Money," in which Katherine MacDonald is starred, wrote and sold her first story at the age of fifteen, when she was in boarding school.

Paul Dickey, who plays the part of Guy of Gisbourne in support of Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood," is co-author of a new stage play Mrs. W. B. Harris will produce in New York this coming fall. The most successful drama to come from his facile pen was "The Misleading Lady."

Director Fred Colwell just arrived from New York and is busy engaged writing the story for his forthcoming production titled "1972?"

Edward Montagne, of the Selznick scenario department, was under the impression that he was going to California for a rest when assigned to the West Coast studios of his company. Having written an original story and three scripts he has been assigned to start immediately on another continuity. Consequently the writing of his essay on "Outdoor Life in California" has been indefinitely postponed.

Victor Heerman, Selznick director, has purchased six acres in Beverly Hills and is planning the building of a modern villa with a swimming pool, tennis courts, golf course and everything.

Julien Josephson adapted the Clyde Fitch play "The Cowboy and the Lady," to the screen for Paramount.

Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon wrote the story of "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," which will be made by Paramount.

Walderman Young and Lorna Moon adapted the Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osborne story, "Ebb Tide," which is under production at Lasky studio.

Julian Josephson is at work on the scenario for Sinclair Lewis' widely discussed novel, "Main Street." As soon as it is completed the picture will be filmed by Warner Brothers as a part of their program to produce a series of current novels.

Victor Heerman is getting another original script ready for his star, Owen Moore, at the United studios.

"Under Oath" a story by Eddie Montagne which was directed by George Archainbaud was the first picture made by Elaine Hammerstein in California. It is scheduled for early release.

The O'Connor Productions, producing two-reel semi-slapstick comedies want gag stories in detail. Must have story and gags incident to action, suitable for Billy Franey and to cost about $6,000 to produce.

The O'Connor Productions also desire one- and two-reel situation comedy plots in synopsis form. Must be new stories and have requisite comedy situations. Suitable for young male lead with good feminine support.

Address Gus Schumaker, 1107 No. Bronson Ave. Submit through mails only.

The Man on the Cover: An Appreciation

"It is the close observation of little things which is the secret of success in business, in art, in science, and in every pursuit in life," wrote Samuel Smiles, the Scotch philosopher. And it is the exercise—the employment—of this faculty to which I attribute the steady advance of Jack Donovan toward the mark of his high calling.

To meet him is to contact a young man distinctly different from the usual type of this day and age. Possessing an inherent sense of art values, he has been able to combine with it an amazing practicality and mechanical skill. Ambitious always, he has, notwithstanding, realized the advantage of building a sure foundation. The moving pictures offered the opportunity.

Modestly, and with a determination to acquire the fundamentals before adventuring into the rarer atmosphere of the higher spaces, he signed as property man with Cecil De Mille. Profiting by what he saw and heard in this connection, it was not long before he was chosen as assistant to the chief technician at the old Keystone studios. There he formed a close friendship with a camera man and so thoroughly acquainted himself with this branch of the profession that he was soon serving as assistant camera man at the Morosco studio.

He made his first screen appearance in an Al Christie comedy. He rose from comedy to drama, eventually becoming leading man to Bessie Love.

When, some months ago, Alan Holubar was in quest of youth for the part of the young naval officer in his "Hurricane's Gal," he found his ideal in Jack Donovan. For he had served Uncle Sam as an aviator in the period of our belligerency and had learned there and profited as always. While at the Lasky studios he by no means confined himself to the property department. The construction and decoration of the stage sets piqued his interest, and many a night he assisted in the building. Out of this, coupled with a sense of line and color, he achieved an amazing skill for architectural design, and has gained a national fame for the unique beauty and simplicity of his creations. No one with eyes to see, in passing up or down Sunset boulevard, can fail to be attracted by that rarely beautiful studio dwelling on the corner of Cassil Place which is not only his home but the design of his fancy and largely the work of his hands. In all Southern California you will find nothing like it, nor like those quaintly lovely cottages, also his.

While employed at the Morosco studio young Donovan entered the University of Southern California Law School.

It is significant, too, that Donovan was among the first to start the cry for better and different pictures. His vision includes producing as well as acting and directing.

As an actor, however, Jack Donovan possesses all the rugged manliness and determination so desirable in the male player. With the call for artists who can do more than act he must have few idle days. In the picture with a soul, for which the public yearns, he, with his combination of physical and spiritual qualities, his passion for music, his fondness for children and flowers, must prove an ideal interpreter. These are, though, but the elements of one side of the man. On the other he is equally gifted. There is no branch of athletics in which he does not excel. Be it boxing, swimming, equestrianism, or any of them he will prove himself a master. With all these attainments Donovan, it appears to me, must go far. A successful career for him is assured.

Leo Sulky plays anything from a chink to a cowboy over at the Fox comedy lot. He changes costumes and makeups so often it is hard to keep track of him.

He had put his very soul into a super-extra-special feature, had this director. The idea was novel, so was his treatment, and the world seemed scheduled to receive a knockout. But when he came to market it——

"What!" exclaimed the distributor. "Another mounted police drama? We've handled six in three months."

The director's mouth dropped open.

"But my idea is original——"

"Evidently the others beat you to it!"

"If I'd only known before!"

"Old chap, let me tip you off," said the distributor kindly. "Read Camera! every week, and you'll know what's going on in the industry."

"You'd have saved $20,000 if you'd spent $2.00 on a subscription."

The director brightened.

So he did. Why don't You?

"Thanks for the tip! I'll send right now."

Just a twist of the wrist, and this corner of the page is torn off—try it! Sign it and send.

The Last of the Westerns

A FEW months ago a Wyoming cowboy rode from Cheyenne to Hollywood to tender Bill Hart a petition.

Tens of thousands of persons had signed the petition to say, in effect:

"Dear Bill—Please make some more westerns."

Millions of persons enjoyed western pictures. Millions would like them now. Many westerns were exaggerated, over-melodramatic,—but they invariably showed the hardiness and healthfulness of outdoor life, and taught lessons of self-reliance and bravery to American boys.

Strangely enough, those also are the aims of the great organization of Boy Scouts of America.

Why so few westerns available?

Well, it's impossible to make a western motion picture without somewhere showing a character with a gun in hand.

And, even if such a sight has not demoralized the majority of American millions, it is considered demoralizing in Pennsylvania ("Pictures which deal at length with gun play . . . will be disapproved"); Kansas (" . . . undue use of guns, revolvers . . . should be eliminated"), and Maryland ("Excessive use of firearms").

Because those three states are important enough to make or break a film production with the close margins many producers work under, such rulings effectually discourage the making of stories of early western life.

Because a majority of the 12,000,000 persons in those three states consider guns demoralizing, the remaining 88 per cent of the citizens of United States may not look upon the virile struggles of the days since '49.

Wonder what those 12,000,000 inhabitants of Maryland, Kansas and Pennsylvania think of the guns their soldiers carried in the World war?

Another Libel

MILDRED HARRIS' vaudeville skit shows the "private office" of a motion picture producer—a place daintily hung in pale blue, with artistically stenciled ornaments.

The setting is a silent libel on the picture industry—and the very presence of a former picture actress gives the setting authenticity in the public mind.

The other inconsistency in staging—the minor fact that the "film producer's" desk is stacked with law books, for props—is not obvious enough to discredit the principal, perhaps intentional, distortion.

Welcome! Warning!

POLA Negri sails August 15 for the United States. That will be the best move Pola Negri has made in her career.

Her personality, plus American cinema brains, should make a world-beating combination.

But—

About one more picture like "The Eyes of the Mummy," and Pola Negri will find herself on fame's toboggan. Even if it was made years ago, it's bad business to follow films like "Passion" and "One Arabian Night" with out-and-out trash.

Film Capital Production Notes

PERFECTION OF STEREOSCOPIC EXHIBITION

The Perfect Picture Company have finished their all-star feature production, "The Power of Love," a story of the early days of romantic California. Such well known players as Barbara Bedford, Elliott Sparling and Noah Beery will be shown in conjunction with their method of stereoscopic exhibition which they have perfected and are now ready to show in a commercial way.

Their new idea of exhibition has been shown to several leading film factors who have been amazed at the wonderful realistic effects that the screen shows with the perfect stereoscopic method.

An exhibition and preview will be given for the public in Los Angeles within the next few weeks and will then be road showed throughout the country, in the bigger theaters.

LASKY TO FILM FRENCH PLAY

The announcement has come from the Famous-Players Lasky studio that it will produce a film version of Andre Pascal's medical play, "The Caducee," a play that caused a great sensation in London and Paris.

Gus Inglis returned from New York bringing with him a contract for Florence Vidor, who is to appear in a series of four special pictures to be released through Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Included in the stories which Miss Vidor will make is an adaptation of a well known stage play. Production of the new series will start about September 1st at the Vidor studios.

Penrhyn Stanlaws plans to begin his new Paramount production, "Singed Wings," August 7th, and is now engaged in active preparations for the photoplay, which is an adaptation by E. A. Bingham of the story by Kathryn Newlin Burt.

R. A. Walsh's first Goldwyn production will be "Passions of the Sea." It will be produced on a large scale in the South Sea Islands.

Congressman M. W. Howard will rest a bit before undertaking to start production on his second big Southern drama, "Peggy Ware." This will require several weeks of location shooting in the mountains of Alabama, in Chattanooga, and other southern points.

Elsie Ferguson arrived in New York last week from Europe. Her next picture for Famous Players will be "Outcast," which will be made in the East.

"The Lonely Road" will be the next Preferred Pictures' production for Associated First National, with Katherine MacDonald in the star role.

Max Linder, the famous French comedian, plunged right into the big tank of producing a nine-reel super-production, which will occupy his undivided attention for a whole year at his new studios at Nice.

Jack London's whirlwind action romance of the sea, "Tales of the Fish Patrol," will be filmed at Universal City as a series of eight two-reel he-man dramas. The star has not yet been announced by Irving G. Thalberg, director-general of Universal City.

Lee Moran and Betty May will probably make a comedy for Century while in New York. Miss May will meet Moran in New York, after the cross-country trip.

We are not ashamed of our tears when Irene Rich plays tag with our heart strings. She may be numbered with the great emotional actresses of the screen.

Laurette Taylor, with her husband, J. Hartley Manners, author of the famous stage success, arrived from New York to make her screen debut in the same role which brought her international fame on the stage. Metro is to produce "Peg o' My Heart" and the noted actress is to start work next week at the Metro studios.

Miss Taylor will remain in Los Angeles for at least eight weeks, and possibly longer, in case she decides to do another picture. Upon her return to New York in the fall Miss Taylor will appear in a stage version of "Humoresque."

Jack Conway is preparing to make another Herbert Rawlinson success at Universal City. A short time ago he directed Rawlinson in "Don't Shoot," a smashing underworld story. The new vehicle for the Conway-Rawlinson combination is Victor Bridges' novel, "Another Man's Shoes," which Arthur Statter has adapted.

Hampton Del Ruth is now a producer in his own right and has plans for giving his niece, Audrey Chapman, famous as a screen beauty and artists' model, her first opportunity to touch the goal of cinema stardom. Neither Mr. Del Ruth or Miss Chapman has confirmed this rumor yet.

PALMER TO PRODUCE

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation has announced its intention of entering production and distribution on a large scale.

The company plans to film meritorious works of unknown authors and share with them whatever royalties may accrue from the ultimate distribution of their product. The statement issued gave no details regarding the new plan other than to merely state that it was in contemplation. Part of it discussed an alleged monopoly which throttled the efforts of those imaginative persons who had turned toward writing for the screen, saying that: "notwithstanding that prominent figures in the industry have publicly proclaimed the need for fresh story imagination, the contributor who accepted the implied invitation faced an almost impregnable wall when he offered his work to the editor of the coterie within these same studios."

The old production team of McConville and Flynn from the west is to be revived at Foxville, where Bernie McConville and Emmet Flynn will again renew activities, this time writing and producing at least one story with Bill Farnum as the star. They have not yet given out what they will do. They will be remembered for their performance of "A Connecticut Yankee." Bernie has just finished some work on the Metro ranch, among which was the continuity on "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Paul Gerson, president, and H. C. Weaver, general manager, of the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco, are in Los Angeles this week on business connected with the production activities of the company. They will confer with the heads of the R-C organization upon matters concerning the production of five-reel features for release through Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.

ELINOR GLYN STORY IN PREPARATION

Violet Clark, photo-playwright, has been engaged by the Goldwyn Pictures corporation to make the screen adaptation of Elmer Glyn's original story, "Six Days," recently purchased. Miss Clark has just returned to the coast from New York, where she combined vacation and business. Some of the scenes of "Six Days" will be made in Italy. The director has not been announced.

Harry Rapf, producing for Warner Brothers, is in receipt of a letter from Charles G. Norris, author of "Brass," which is to be the next Harry Rapf production for Warner Brothers. He states that the proposed treatment of the story for the screen meets with his approval and as soon as production starts he will come to Los Angeles.

Albert W. Hale is going to Birmingham to make some two-reel comedies for the International Moving Picture and Film company of Memphis and Birmingham, Tenn. He announces that they are open for good cameramen.

The second of the Darling comedies has just been completed by Universal. Lewis Sargent and Julia Brown have the stellar roles. The comedies comprise twelve one-reelers.

Current Reviews

"Blood and Sand"

ONCE more the cinema has been taken from the by-ways and led back to the throne. Crown and sceptre have resumed their sway in that remarkable production, "Blood and Sand."

It is a looming triumph for the film world. But one cannot sit at this great feast until the final writing upon the wall, without feeling that, at some period, something must have vortexed itself into the creator's life, quickening his soul to the heavy heart-beats of mankind. For he has summoned to the screen life itself in all truth.

Now come, in true colors, bits of life surcharged, broken blossoms indeed, and a great moment of tragic indelibility.

The sunrise is no more natural than Fred Niblo's human passages in this presentation, for he is the master who has given us this truly great portrait of the smiling morn, the promise of mid-day, and then the solemn night of penalty!

Niblo's humans play the game with a faithfulness which effaces all thought of mimicry. No miracles occur. His people surge steadfastly onward to their eventualities, although, for some, death flies in the offing.

"Blood and Sand," is the second tale by Vicente Blasco Ibanez to enter the film with Rodolph Valentino in the chief role. As in the first, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," tragedy rules.

Under Niblo direction, Valentino emerges from this, his supreme effort, as a distinctive star in his own right. Even those familiar with this actor's previous performances, cannot realize the scope and depth of his full powers until they shall have followed him through this all-powerful presentation.

Valentino has proven popular in all his productions, but "Blood and Sand" has led him to fame. It has revealed in him a greater genius, which needed only opportunity and consummate direction to disclose.

This Ibanez story proves a greater tragedy than "The Four Horsemen," yet it resembles forebear in more than one regard. The hero, (Valentino), again surrenders to the woman whom he should have shunned. Here also we have the man of superlative wisdom, having no part in the trend of events but, standing aside, delivering prophetic utterances which foretell the results of smouldering entanglements.

It was fitting that June Mathis, who adapted the former Ibanez story as Valentino's first vehicle, also should have developed the author's present tale for the same star. A cold sounding word, "continuity," for which picture audiences have found no recognition or appreciation, but still an art in itself which is making more and more for screen success.

But, in the main, there is a wide divergence between the two stories. This time Valentino is "Gallardo," a noted toreador, the pride of Spain.

One might quarrel with Ibanez for cloaking such as Gallardo with sympathy, bringing this excuse and that to his rescue. We are quite apt to recall another man who, centuries ago, voiced his excuse; "The woman . . . did give me of the tree, and I did eat."

But Nita Naldi, although portraying the vampire character to such remarkable extent as to win the hatred of every woman in the audience, and cause every man to sit with clinked fists, emerges from the Niblo triumph with many laurels also.

To do full justice to the numerous actors and actresses whose native genius lent strength to the director's efforts, would be to write a volume. Lila Lee, as the wife, was tender and appealing. Leo White was supreme in a comedy-relief role which fitted perfectly into the tragedy. Walter Long, as "Plumitas," the outlaw, was so impressive that, although seen but a few times, one will remember him as long as "Blood and Sand" lingers in the memory. Rose Rosanova was

"If you have tears, prepare to shed them," when you see Rudolph Valentino die in "Blood and Sand."

"Senora Augustias." To her the picture owes a decided debt.

The honor list continues to such very competent persons of film-land as George Field, Marie Marston, Charles Belcher, Jack Winn, Harry Lamont, Gilbert Clayton, George Periolat, Sidney DeGray, Dorcas Mathews and William E. Lawrence. It is a pity that full credit cannot be written here for each.

The beauty and fulness of this production cannot be conveyed to the reader in cold printer's ink. Only the screen, warmed by Director Niblo's own art can do that.

And, if public and critic should pronounce "Blood and Sand" as one of the greatest gifts from the realm of shadowland, the reviewer will be the last to reveal surprise.

"Kisses"

UNLIKE its title "Kisses" has no kick in it. The story is mildly entertaining and without climax. It takes courage to mention June Mathis as the scenarist after seeing her name over "Blood and Sand" because the continuity and action of this Metro production are far below her standard. The original story by May Tully is not so original. A dozen parallels could be drawn to the plot were it worth giving space to it.

Maxwell Karger directed "Kisses" in an inoffensive manner. He had a good cast to work with and an able cameraman.

Alice Lake, the society bud, and champion candymaker takes a whirl at high finance and worries her rivals out of fifty thousand. Miss Lake has many beautiful gowns to aid her success, for very little opportunity is given her to act.

Harry Myers is the same nonchalant person as in "The Connecticut Yankee." With his personality and easy manner he wins his way without having to worry about good looks.

Edward Connelly, Edward Jobson, Dana Todd, Mignon Anderson, John MacKinnon and Eugene Pouyet are included in the cast.

"In the Name Of the Law"

AFTER being tripped up at every downtown street corner by a paper mache officer of the law, we were sufficiently peeved to spend two hours viewing "In the Name of the Law," an Emory Johnson production. The first night having a "Yes" audience, no conclusions can be drawn from their acceptance but that of a forced approval.

Had Emory Johnson sacrificed vanity and family circle in casting the picture it would have jumped fifty per cent. But it is his first production and many allowances can be made.

Only one man has made a success of acting and directing at the same time and the world acknowledges only one—Chaplin.

The story from the pen of Emilie Johnson is more than good. It is charitable to the race known as policemen. Her story is based on the life of a good, yea honest officer of the law.

Ralph Lewis' work is comparable, only to his own portrayal in "The Conquering Power," although his present role doesn't call for the tense dramatic action of the former.

Ella Hall has been absent from the screen too long to be thrown into a leading part and her action doesn't benefit the production to any extent.

Emory Johnson divides his interests between directing and acting and it is decidedly visible to the spectator.

Claire McDowell in her usual mother role repeats the screen mother action in routine fashion.

Johnnie Walker is the average juvenile whose name means more than his ability shows in this picture.

Josephine Adair started the waif part that Ella Hall continued later. Had Miss Hall kept up the standard that Baby Josephine set more praise would have been forthcoming.

Benny Alexander, another clever kiddie, brightens the first reel with Johnnie Thompson.

Richard Morris has a minor role.

R. W.

"Lucky Carson"

THE fog in this Vitagraph picture was good, but it should have been much thicker. Some of the scenes and subtitles became visible at times, to the annoyance of the audience.

Where to Find People You Know

Lon Chaney has been engaged for the chief role in "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," the first of the series of Tom Forman Productions, to be made by B. P. Schulberg at the Preferred Pictures' studios, under Forman's direction.

Eddie Lyons has gone to New York and expects to return next week.

Joy Winthrop has been playing a character part in the Charles Ray production, "The Girl I Love," an old fashioned story.

Otto Matieson is playing the part of "Robert Hammond" in "Saint Elmo," starring John Gilbert, at Fox studio.

Otto Matieson has been cast for a part in "Tony the Wop," Buck Jones' current picture to be made for Fox.

C. P. Wood has finished twelve weeks playing a game warden with the Mary Pickford production.

Billy Franey, star of many comedy productions, is to appear in the S-L production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" for Metro.

Mary Jane Sanderson, the new Warner Brothers "find," has returned to the Warner studio after finishing with Clark Kimball Young in her latest production "Enter Madame." She will start work immediately with Marie Prevost in the Warner Brothers production of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Beautiful and Damned."

Marion F. Lee, who is employed by Abe Lehr at the Goldwyn ranch at Culver, has consented to act as correspondent from that part of Culver. Bradley King, our other correspondent finds it difficult to get away from her work at Tom Ince's ranch and get all of the news.

Pauline Starke and Antonio Moreno are the two leading "love-interest" characters in the Goldwyn production of "Passions of the Sea."

Myrtle Lind and William Haines are understudies for Pauline Starke and Antonio Moreno in "Passions of the Sea." This is a precaution against the possibilities of illness and disability in the tropical climate.

Jack Rose is the photographer for "The Dangerous Age," which is under production at the Mayer studios.

Ned Burns, who has appeared in Christie Comedies for three years, has just signed a long-term contract, under which he will be starred in six or seven comedies this coming year and an indefinite number of pictures yearly.

Burns' first picture under the new contract will be "That Son of a Sheik," which is also to be the first picture of the new series of twenty Christie Comedies to be released by Educational this year, beginning in September.

"Ike" Oakley is bound for New York, where he will stay until the fall.

Eight cameramen have been assigned by Myron Selznick to assist Director George Archambaud in the making of "One Week Of Love," which co-stars Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle. This battery includes Jules Cronjager, Bert Wilson, Merritt Gerstad, J. Leezor, Joe Goodrich, F. M. Cotner, Harry Fowler and J. R. Lockwood.

Ralph Graves is portraying his second role for Universal in the all-star picture directed by Irving Cummings, "The Jilt," a comedy drama. Graves recently completed the chief romantic role in "The Long Chance," another Universal production.

It makes no difference whether you call him Penrod or Wesley Barry. He has made both names mean the same little freckle-faced boy.

Robert De Lacy, film editor, has transferred his staff from the Fine Arts studio to the laboratory, where, with Finis Fox, he is in charge of the final cutting and editing of "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Marguerite Courtot has completed her work in Elmer Clifton's drama of whaling days "Down to the Sea in Ships," and she is on her way south for another production.

Madge Bellamy, who will be seen shortly in the biggest role of her screen career in C. Gardner Sullivan's "Someone to Love," will return to the Ince studios at Culver City next week. Miss Bellamy has been loaned to play opposite Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish."

Burke Jenkins, former continuity writer for William de Mille and editor for Jesse D. Hampton, is at United studios working with Frank Leon Wilson on the next Ruth Roland serial, which will be put under production by United shortly following the completion of "The Riddle of the Range," on which Miss Roland is now working.

Friend Sistrom, who once sat on the lid at Universal, is in our midst once more, this time with a section of Cosmopolitan. He has lost that worried look.

Roy Stone, the cutter, who has been working in New York with Thomas H. Ince on "The Hottentot," and "Lorna Doone," has returned to the Ince studios. Both of these films are being edited for fall release. "The Hottentot," taken from William Collier's play, is the first big comedy special to be released under Ince's new producing program. "Lorna Doone" is a screen version, produced under direction of Maurice Tourneur, of the famous historical novel.

Kenneth Harlan, who has played opposite Constance Talmadge in all of her pictures during the last year, has an important role in the Principal Pictures corporation's picturization of Elinor Glyn's story of studio life, "The World's a Stage." Mr. Harlan supports Dorothy Phillips in this production.

David Imboden, formerly famous as a swimmer and all-around athlete, has decided on a motion picture career. Rupert Hughes has given him an important part in "Gimme," his next Goldwyn production.

Imboden has been an artist and theatrical art director, but this will be his first motion picture experience.

May Wallace has an important character role in "Gimme," Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes' new photoplay for Goldwyn.

Cyril Chadwick has the role of Lord Robert Ure in Goldwyn's production of "The Christian."

Marguerite Kosik, the little girl who plays the leading child role in the Pilgrimage Play, is cast for a role in "Peg o' My Heart," soon to be filmed by King Vidor.

Billy Bevan and Mildred June, with their company, have been on location in the wild vastness and adjacent to Los Angeles shooting scenes under Roy Del Ruth's direction for their next two-reel comedy, "When Summer Comes."

George Siegmann has been engaged for an important part in "Passions of the Sea."

Lewis Stone has a part in John M. Stahl's production of "The Dangerous Age."

Alec Francis has finished with the Sloman productions and now has a part in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," which Al Green is directing at the Lasky studios.

Edwin Carewe has signed to make six features for First National in New York City. He has wired to Sol Polito, Bob DeLacey, and Wallace Fox if they can also go east.

Two of Harry Marks' dogs, Hero and Dewey, have just finished in Jackie Coogan's picture "Oliver Twist," while Jack and Hero have been playing at Lasky's in the "Old Homestead."

Harry Marks has a group of some of the most talented animals in the country for picture work, including monkeys, squirrels, cats, goats, owls, and turtles.

Edith Roberts is playing in "The Dangerous Age" at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Pickups By The Staff

REGINALD BARKER COMPANY RESCUED FROM FOREST FIRE

Reginald Barker, with his company which he took up to British Columbia to film scenes for "Timber," was trapped in a forest fire while trying secure some big forest fire settings. They were so busy shooting scenes that they failed to notice the impetus with which the fire was progressing and they were soon cut off from any means of exit. The forest rangers and the Northwest mounted police came to their rescue.

Those in the company were Irene Rich, Frank Keenan, Cleo Madison, Anna Wilson, Charles Condon, James Voschella, Dude Cox, Florence Browning, Sylvia Sanborn, and little Richard Headrick.

Forrest Robinson left Hollywood and arrived in New York on his sixty-fourth birthday. Mr. Robinson's haste to get back to Gotham was to be with his wife on the anniversary of his birth and to close his house in the big city so as to move to Hollywood, where he expects to reside permanently. He has just finished three months with Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country."

Mrs. Claire Horsholt, who for twenty years was Denmark's most popular actress, but who is now retired, has just departed from Hollywood after a year's visit with her son, Jean Hersholt, the celebrated director-actor whose latest performance as the villain in Mary Pickford's new "Tess of the Storm Country."

San Francisco and its environs will be the location of special episodes for "The Young Rajah," Rudolph Valentino's new Paramount picture, and the company leaves this week for this purpose.

Accompanied by his wife, Enid Bennett, Fred Niblo left Saturday for Little Bear Lake, where he has leased a secluded lodge for a week. The greater part of his baggage consisted of books, play manuscripts and scenarios to which he will devote practically all of his time in search of a suitable story for his first Louis B. Mayer offering through Metro.

Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore will return from Wyoming where, under the direction of Charles Maigne, they have been making exterior scenes for the Paramount picture, "The Cowboy and the Lady."

The titling and editing of the Harry Rapf productions for Warner Brothers, "Rags to Riches," starring Wesley Barry, has been completed. Harry Rapf, Jack and Sam Warner are going over it for the final changes before shipping east.

Ernest Belcher has just finished staging a dance for the Harry Rapf production, for Warner Brothers, "Little Heroes of the Street," starring Wesley Barry. With the aid of a number of his pupils Mr. Belcher transformed the auditorium stage into the "Midnight Frolic" and Marie Prevost was in the center of the mad whirl.

Jack and Sam Warner have received the plans from their new art director Edward M. Langley, for the remodeling of their studio on Sunset Blvd., and work will start immediately.

Wilfred North, who has been appearing with Carter de Haven at the R-C studios, is recovering from an accident in which a stage coach overturned at a location in Seven Oaks. He is confined to his bed while several fractured ribs are knitting together.

We have just had a few glimpses of Rose Dione in dramatic roles and are anxiously awaiting another.

Many prominent people associated with Thomas H. Ince recently attended an informal reception tendered the producer at his ranch in Culver upon his return from an extended stay in New York. Tom had been in the eastern city for five months searching for feature screen story material and on business in connection with the distribution of his pictures.

"Little Heroes of the Street," the Harry Rapf production for Warner Brothers, starring Wesley Barry, is rapidly nearing completion at the Warner Brothers West Coast studios.

Richard Barthelmess is angling for the purchase of the screen rights to William Anthony McGuire's "Six Cylinder Love," which has been running in New York all season. If his plans materialize he intends to give the leading feminine role to his wife, Mary Hay.

According to advices from France, where Mabel Normand, Mack Sennett star, is sojourning, the city of Autell literally gasped when Mabel appeared at the races recently attired in a gown of gold, in which diamonds had been sewed.

BIG SET ERECTED FOR "ONE WEEK OF LOVE"

A tower 110 feet high has been erected in Topango Canyon for effective camera "shots" for the Selznick production, "One Week of Love," which features Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle in the principle roles. To get the lumber to the location, which is far off the main highways, it was necessary to pack it on burros over a distance of several miles of mountains.

"Love Is An Awful Thing," the Selznick production, starring Owen Moore, which was recently completed by Victor Heerman, has come from the cutting room and is now ready for showing. In the cast are Owen Moore, Marjorie Daw, Kathryn Perry (Mrs. Moore), Douglas Carter, Arthur Hoyt, Snitz Edwards and Alice Howell.

John M. Stahl, director of "One Clear Call," and other Louis B. Mayer-First National attractions, is now hard at work on "The Dangerous Age." According to the present estimates, about two weeks more of "shooting" on the interior sets will be required before the film is ready for the cutting and titling stages.

Adele Ritchie, who was known as "the Dresden China doll" before she left musical comedy to become Mrs. Guy Bates Post, is visiting her folks back East, and her husband is in the midst of his work on "Omar the Tentmaker." Every noontime, post puts in a radiophone call for his wife—he has installed a powerful sending machine on the set, and she motors over to a receiving station.

Edward M. Kimball, father of Clara Kimball Young, is a recent addition to the cast which Richard Walton Tully has selected to support Guy Bates Post in the filming of "Omar, the Tentmaker," Tully's romantic love-play of old Persia, in which Post starred on the legitimate stage for four years. Kimball will play the brief but vivid role of the Inn-keeper.

Director Orchibaud and other members of the Selznick company, are returning from Topango Canyon this week, where they have been located for several days, making "One Week of Love," which features Conway Tearle and Elaine Hammerstein. They will now occupy themselves with a few days of interior scenes at the United studios.

Viola Dana has created a new dance which she will present for the approval of theatergoers in "June Madness," her new Metro starring picture. "The Wedding Dance" is the name Miss Dana has selected for this new fantastic presentation in which she will impersonate all the principles at a wedding ceremony. For the past few weeks the Metro star has been a daily visitor at Theodore Kosloff's Imperial Russian Ballet school of dancing, where she has been working with Mr. Kosloff in developing this specialty.

Chester Conklin is building a tubercular hospital in Horseshoe Valley in the Mohave Desert. He is building it in memory of his mother, and has named it the Alice Cooper Memorial Hospital.

Chatter About Southland Folks - By.... Harry Burns

Bob McKenzie and his family, which includes Mrs. Mac, Ida May, Ella, and Fay, all worked for Helen Jerome Eddy at R-C studio the other day. Bob figures on borrowing some unemployed kiddies and grownups, and starting a booking office of his own.

Wilfred Lucas is getting to be quite a scrapper. The other day at Universal he tangled with Reginald Denny and Pat Harmon in the King Baggott production. Finishing that, he fell right into another mix-up with Phil Ford at Warner Brothers'. The way they milled brought a round of applause from onlookers.

Norman Dawn is getting another story in shape to start soon. We can expect to hear some interesting announcements forthcoming from him anent just what his story and affiliations are to be.

Mel Brown, Rex Taylor, Paul Weigel and three others put on a dramatic sketch the other night at T. D. and I. theatre in Glendale. It had many bits of comedy embodied in the dialogue that Mel and Rex must have worked hard to get in. The audience, including Mrs. B. and myself, enjoyed the skit.

Eagle Eye, who is a horseman, stunt man and long-haired dare-devil, was asked if he was playing a flapper in the movies. When he questioned the man why he thought so, he said, "I see you have your hair bobbed like a flapper." You're all wrong, chirped Eagle Eye. I have been doing a fanatic for James Young in the production of "Omar the Tentmaker."

Charles J. Parrott has settled down to directing Harry (Snub) Pollard. He was formerly carrying that burden of being the supervising director of comedies of the one and two-reel subjects at the Hal E. Roach studios.

Carter De Haven has been receiving so many requests for personal appearances from exhibitors that he will likely close shop one fine day, take Mrs. De Haven and give townspeople all over the United States a chance to see the pair in real life.

Hampton Del Ruth was to get away to a good start last Monday at Balboa studios on a feature production. He made a good move when he hired S. M. Beal as assistant.

Craig Hutchinson is working at Hal E. Roach studios helping Harry "Snub" Pollard along in this funny world. When theatre-goers see one of Snub's comedies and look at who wrote and directed the story, they will see that it's our own Craig.

Charlotte "Peaches" Jackson played Wesley Barry's sister in "Heroes of the Street." She and Ernest Butterworth battled to a fare-the-well—and parted the best of friends when their battle was over.

Sam Kaufman had a narrow escape from serious injury the other day when a horse kicked him in the forehead while he was lying upon the ground in a scene of "Omar the Tentmaker," at United studios. Sam is getting on fine and dandy from all reports.

Will H. Hays let me extend my right hand. I used to play vaudeville and followed some great acts. But the lineup you topped at the Ambassador banquet, who did their talking bit and acted right out in the open—Jesse Lasky, Rupert Hughes, Capt. Fredericks and Fred Niblo—certainly made you show your true colors. Alladin with his magic lamp couldn't have brought things home as clearly as you did that evening."

Floyd Brown has just terminated an engagement with Dustin Farnum at the Fox studios.

Mark Goldaine not only came to life when I wondered about his whereabouts and what he was doing, but he promised me a job.

There lies a moral. When you become interested in some one else and forget yourself, good will reflect back to you. There is a right place reserved for us if we can only find it.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger came here, attended to a barrel-full of business, saw nearly 100 reels of film screened in different projection rooms, then took French leave. He will return to the Southland some time in September.

Phil De Esco is working with the De Haven troupe, and when I say he is earning the money that the pay envelope brings him the end of the week, I mean that.

Bud White is moving about studios with his bear, John Brown, so much of late that it is a wonder the animal knows his home when he reaches it.

Carmen De Rue is to return to pictures after passing through a high school course. Her father, Eugene De Rue, has had many requests for the child actress to appear on the screen.

Sig Neufield, the fellow who puts the fun in the funny pictures made at Century by his master cutting, 'tis said will soon be given opportunity to handle something which will mean quite a boost for him.

Glenn Cavender is to shake the dust from his shoes soon and depart for Vancouver, British Columbia, and will tour throughout that province, giving the country a double O and possibly making pictures "on his own," backed by Canadian capital.

Wilfred Buckland, who designed sets for the stage play of "Omar the Tentmaker," did a like service for the screen adaption. To say that he has done himself proud is putting it mildly when one gazes at the wonderful sets erected at United and R-C studios.

Francis Ford is about to start another feature production at his studio at Gordon and Sunset Boulevard, which means some performers in every line will soon be earning a few honest simoleons they didn't expect.

Bryan Foy has been walking around with a swollen jaw. He and a pair of molars parted and he hasn't felt right about it since,—what more, he has looked the part, too.

Wesley Barry, driving a cute roadster, goes to location daily all by his lonesome. When he gets to the spot that he is to labor, he usually isn't very lonesome. Every one wants either to kodak Wes or shake his hand.

K. G. McLean, who has been filming the best known comedians, is thinking seriously of accepting a job to photograph a dramatic star.

Ed Stafford and Red Rose are a couple of tough hombres working in the Wesley Barry productions at Warner Brothers' studios. In ordinary life they are nice, quiet, peaceful citizen.

J. L. Warner, better known as Jack, might be called Jack-of-all-trades and let it be known he is master of them all. His only rival is S. L. Warner, who is called at times Sam. At any rate try and follow them through a given day's time and find out all they go through to keep every one happy.

Dave Allen must be making money these days. He left his booking offices flat, journeyed to Catalina, took the rubber band off his last million, opened the throttle wide, and then returned to work.

Lex Neal has joined the William Beaudine forces in a position which might be termed scenario aide, gag man, utility pinch hitter or whatnot.

Milt Brown, that young old man, who has seen so much of horse operas that he can sound his high C without the slightest of effort, is walking the boards and answering to directorial instructions from Leo Maloney, in a two-reel western story.

Harry Devere says he is earning an honest living in the "movies" and has for years gone by. By the way, he is working in an all-star cast at the Big U right now.

The Screen Writers' Page - Conducted by William E. Wing

Is The Mule Blind?

WRITERS for the screen, most of all, wonder at the lack of story wisdom in certain film organizations. The public has ceased to wonder, long since, for its attention is turning to other things less trite than the majority of picture productions.

Do you recall the mystery surrounding the studio; the hush and awe hovering over the sacred portals, which visitors passed with abated breath?

Then there was the avalanched of advertisements which shrieked of the outpouring of gold, of lavish spilling of fortunes, of director-generals who could not possibly be as other men were, and of highly-paid stars who scintillated so effectively that the firmament directly above Hollywood laid off business when their earthly peers were twinkling.

Was it any wonder that Oskaloosa, South Bend, Bloody Gulch, Spicer's Corner and the rest of these free but dry United States believed that the millennium was about to occur in 'steen hundred trust theaters and a few cowed independent houses.

When the congregation gathered, with its bated breath, offspring and mortgage money for tickets, did the double-distilled magnificence of these greatest-ever productions proceed to knock the common person for a row of Woolworth buildings.

They did not.

Did the ravishing dream-castles, upon which no human eye could gaze without becoming totally blind, smite to earth the poor public, minus its dough?

Not that anyone could notice.

Instead, what did the audiences of these United States gaze upon, after the hold-up at the door?

Bla!

Plenty of common, ordinary bla!

Sameness of story—shallowness of theme—weak plots—high prices.

This is not the verdict of the conductor of this page, but the result announced by one of the leading photoplay journals of America after great research. Thousands of people everywhere participated in the matter, expressing freely their inmost convictions. The above verdict represents the sum and substance of that great research.

Meantime the whole people had added their silent but meanful vote by beginning an exodus from the theater. That is a decision from the supreme court indeed.

The same journal adds to editorial, and letters from the people, a review of film results for the year by Frederick James Smith, who speaks most frankly and without fear.

The leading film manufacturer is declared to be "developing a steady output of stereotyped stuff . . . ground out of the same machine."

Next, "the final average" (of the second one) "runs about the same."

Another one of guilty of "cheap melodramas" and "great specials" which are not, by far "as great" as other specials.

Another well known corporation makes pictures which "prove that the powers that be have a genius for selling bad pictures."

A fifth company of many years standing is sliding into oblivion.

Pretty bitter truths, brethren, but all from unbiased sources.

The question, why these trite stories which insult the intelligence of the public, arises. Is it because photoplays are the selections of business men, and not of editors, or is it because—

Well:

A negro in the South endeavored to sell his mule to another colored man.

"Dis animal looks saorter decrepitude ter me," said the prospective buyer.

"G'wan!" retorted the other. "Dat is de fastes' mule in dis here state."

To prove it he kicked the mule.

The animal awoke and arose. He surged through a fence, caromed off a stone wall and finally butted into a tree, head first.

The prospect shook his head and said:

"Huh! I won't want no blind mule."

"Blind nothin'," retorted the owner; "Dat mule jest nacherally don't give a d—n!"

ENTIRELY PERSONAL

THE writer of this page desires to uphold his attacks upon present day pictures, by declaring that fault does not lie in the lack of adequate stories.

In order to spread the issue fairly before any who may be interested, the writer declares that there are upon the market today, a number of "returned" original stories which are entirely worthy of production.

He also declares to scenarists that, very frequently, the best film tales are the most difficult to sell.

Why?

Is the mule blind or don't he—

Education!!

WRITERS will be interested to know that fate is yawning for the pictures. The authority in this case is R. B. Von KleinSmid who, despite the spelling his name, is president of a Methodist university.

Well, the war is over.

Comrade KleinSmid gets a flying start by declaring that "something is going to happen to the film industry." The cause of the catastrophe is to be found in his next utterance:

"The lower and meaner sort seem to be influencing the other kind."

This is a startling declaration for the head of a big education institute. It is little wonder that he parts his name in the middle with a hissing sound.

The bad is bound to pull down the good!

Yea; the sneak thief will corrupt society, and the high-class safe-blower is going to drag down the church with him.

Civilization in fact is doomed, for we have the word of this conspicuous educator that the "low and mean" are sure to counteract the works of the righteous. Surely one who assumes such a high place in our great educational plan would not apply such a deliberate rule to thousands of persons in Los Angeles, and deny that the same rule must obtain universally.

Proceed Dr. Von KleinSmid; you have started something.

Tell us the answer

AND THEN IT HAPPENED—"We will have to change your story a little."

The Armless Writer

THAT all-year sport of maiming the photoplay writer with due legality is one which should bring joy to the heart of true son of Blumona, or other holier-than-thou advertiser.

Not only have government, state and cow-town removed the scenarist's arms, but, with the ghost of "foreign relations" pursuing the scribe, he hardly has a leg to stand upon in these pure and eugenic days, when the public is deprived of almost everything interesting—excepting smutty periodicals, salacious stage plays, daring Sunday sermons and blood-curdling Sunday supplements of the well-guarded daily press.

The motion picture being the only thing in the public eye which menaces the welfare of the nation and its people, naturally a special police force had to be appointed to see that the following crimes were not committed:

Photoplays based upon the actual crime of the nation.

Screen offerings which repeat immorality of "our very best people," including members of the cloth.

Films based upon the sermon subjects of certain Barnums of the pulpit. (A pause for shudders here).

To make scenarios more harmless still, Uncle Sam as well as other nations, makes the simple request that the melodramatist lay off "casting" any subjects as anything but immortals with sprouting wings and a hymn book in every hand.

Uncle Sam has its underworld, the West its gunmen; France has its dreaded Apaches, England its Limehouse criminals. Mexico has its "greaser," and Italy its black hand.

Every country, in fact, has its low, rakish gang and, far from suppressing the facts or giving denial to the same, press and fictionist of these same countries "play up" these criminal classes, not without a certain manifestation of pride.

But each and every country declare in stentorian tone that the photoplay must not depict a single one of these world-famous wrong-doers upon the screen.

And the august government of these United States, with most of its trust investigations still in committee, back up this demand.

Foreign relations!

The conductor of this writer's page has but one solution for the problem which involves the bread and butter of many scribes.

Let us all turn our attention to that great, inspiring field—

Bedtime stories for very, very good children!

To avoid censorship, cut out reference to the hero's "piercing" glances.

OH, MR HAYS

WHEN all the movies are disinfected, er—that is, made as spotless as a laundered angora goat and as harmless as a cooing dove under an anaesthetic, will the self-appointed volunteer their resignations as censors, and return to the fish business?

ILL FRANEY and Charley Conklin are friends again until the next time. Franey told Conklin to move.

Now that sounds like Conklin was back in his rent, but it isn't. It was a game of checkers.

Walter Wills, who had a nice part in Cecil de Mille's picture, "Manslaughter," says eccentric dancing comes to him naturally. At an early age he used to dance dudie-dodie for a teacher who had a stout strap.

Harry Booker, Fox comedian, says Joe Roberts is not his father.

"Just because he is bigger than I am he thinks he can claim everything."

Alf Goulding, directing Babby Peggie at Century, hopes his friends will not get swell-head just because they know him.

Felix Valli, champion rope spinner and actor, has quit punching cows. He punched her brother by mistake and had to leave.

Ray Gray, assistant to F. Richard Jones, is raising a beard for art's sake.

George Fitzmaurice has completed his picture with Betty Compson and called it "To Have and to Hold." Now what does he mean? Betty, or his wages?

Dick Sutherland, who is a Shriek bandit in Ben Turpin's special, has run out of victims and advertises for a couple of heiresses to be kidnapped.

Make appointments in advance.

Harold Lloyd has just finished taking "Doctor's Orders."

Why! I did not know he was sick! What was the matter?

Oh, too much exposure.

Buster Keaton has made a comedy without a woman in it. Gosh—maybe that is the key to successful pictures!

Colin Campbell says he has been so busy shooting the picture that he has not had time to read the script.

He thinks it will come out all right, as it is all made up before hand.

There are two Joe Murphys in the picture business: The assistant director and the writer. Now for goodness' sake, do not get us mixed. That poor boy is innocent:

Here is something funny, but not to laugh at—except to those on the other side of the desk. The studio maintains a casting office at an expense. When actors are called in a large number of cases, it is through the agencies which ask a commission from the actor.

Now the question, Mr. Hays, is this:

Why have a casting office if they hire through an agency, or why patronize an agency at all?

It's funny. I don't understand it—at least from this side.

Jim Donley of Fox lot fame, says he knows of a new shoe-topper. A shoe-topper is an amateur boot-legger.

Hays has come and gone and we all feel the better for his visit. We have been struggling along for ten years trying to make pictures that people would look at without locking them in! The fog is lifting now, and we can see clear sailing through the Hays.

Robert Kerr is working with Clarence Badger at the Metro studios, aiding him in getting some of the comedy situations worked out for "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Robert McGowan, member of the A. D. A., is still directing kiddie comedies for the Hal E. Roach studios at Culver City.

James Marcus, on his return from the North with the Allan Holubar company, went to work for Marshall Neilan.

Peggy O' Day is playing in the Francis Ford feature. The latter started the other day. The charming leading lady seems to have caught on with exhibitors who have screened her latest efforts with the same producer.

Hap Ward and his dog, Camisole, have been working in Harry Rapf's production at Warner studio. The dog has been working with Wesley Barry.

Harry De Rosa, who has Charley, the cute little monk, has accepted an engagement at Century studio for his chimpanzee.

Contemporary Criticisms

"IN THE NAME OF THE LAW" (Emory-Jonson Production)

"At least one feature of this production is strikingly different. Burlesque, which has long been considered indispensable in connection with screen portraiture, is entirely absent. Here is a sincere portrayal of the American policeman, is man treatment of the side of life of which the public usually hears nothing. "The cast is commendable for the whole-souled interest, which each displays, and, together with the director, deserves credit for the naturalness of the performance."

—Moving Picture World.

"The play offers representations of melo-dramatic situations which time and many pictures have shown to be provocative of emotional response. From the outset the spectator is aware that the director has allotted the situations more prominence than they deserve by giving them too much footage. Thus, Mr. Jonson has produced a picture that drags in spots, but one in which there are many finely done scenes and decidedly appealing moments."

"Ralph Lewis imparts a telling power to the character of the cop and, with good support all along the line, he assumes leadership in a cast that is almost uniformly good."

"Johnny Walker plays his role with great sincerity of purpose and effect, and Claire McDowell realizes all the possibilities of the mother role. Emory Jonson, Edna Hall and the juvenile stars also record good performances."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Those who favor this particular type of screen offering will be adequately pleased with the Emory Jonson production inasmuch as it blends the elements that make for human interest appeal in a satisfying manner without becoming too tense or dragging too harshly upon the heart strings."

"Jonson, for the most part, tells his story in an unminced fashion. . . . Some of the interiors are a bit off. . . . At times detail also is a bit stressed. . . . He has selected a good company to fill the various roles"

—Film Daily.

"The best performance is contributed by Johnny Walker as the youth on trial. You who recall Ben Alexander, the child wonder of some early Griffith's, will be surprised to find him growing up. He plays one of the children in the fore part of the picture."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE TROUPER" (Universal)

"Were it not for the fact that this picture were called a burlesque on the road show, and in part lives up to it, one would have to dismiss it as one of little consequence. As it is, it is far below the good standard maintained by Gladys Walton in the past year."

"The Troupier" should have been broadly burlesqued with the hokum put on so thickly that you couldn't cut it with a knife. In its humorous moments it carries a slight sparkle. But in adding the sentiment and stressing it the picture strays into the dramatic field and, consequently, falters."

—Motion Picture News.

"Gladys Walton succeeds in achieving a performance that is moderately interesting throughout and quite stirring when it reaches a climax that the author and director have held back too long. . . . 'The Troupier' must be passed along for just what it is—a simple, unpretentious yarn which, in its own passive way, affords about an hour of leisurely amusement."

"Miss Walton's performance is satisfying all the way through. The members of her supporting cast, and especially her leading man, Jack Perrin, all perform creditably."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Because it is a clean cut slice of theatrical life in its less ideal phase, 'The Troupier' is sure to please those in search of something original."

"Gladys Walton plays a little dragged out slavey. Her career might have been conceived by Charles Dickens, so extremely drab, pathetic, and melodramatic are its phases. The star gives a faithful characterization, and excites sympathy and indignation by turns in her interpretation of the child who has been brought up on abuse."

"The acting of the others, too, is intelligent and vivid. Jack Perrin, as the 'honest' actor in the troupe, takes himself seriously in the most delightful manner. Kathleen O'Connor has an unattractive role which she handles with skill."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE MAN UNCONQUERABLE" (Paramount)

"Here is a melodrama straight from the shoulder—the action starting immediately after the leader and continuing without interruption through the climax."

"It starts out with a moving plot and considerable counterplot, and never deviates from its course. . . . It is all fast and furious, and pretty good entertainment. While it is pure fiction the scenes are broad enough so that the spectator is not compelled to take it too seriously. The settings are picturesque, the atmosphere appropriate throughout."

—Motion Picture News.

"The plot is not difficult to follow despite the clever complications of the robbery and subsequent murder mystery, the love interest is neatly developed and the climax satisfactory."

"The role of Robert Kendall is the kind of part in which Jack Holt shines supreme. His athletic prowess comes in handy, and he rounds the melodramatic corners with a sort of natural ease and seeming indifference to probable consequences. . . . Sylvia Breamer is a fascinating heroine, Edwin Stevens a fine specimen of the courteous, dignified old Don, her father, and Clarence Burton's work . . . leaves nothing to be desired."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"This is a film that the exhibitor can go the limit in exploiting as a 'thriller' with a story that carries through in an interesting and plausible manner."

"The acting, too, is to be commended in every respect, even every minor part being adroitly portrayed. The photograph is excellent, and taken all in all the drama will appeal to any audience which delights in a hero who batters hefty but criminal foremen into submission and thus wins the girl of his choice."

—Moving Picture World.

"FORGET ME NOT" (Burston-Metro)

"An exceptionally human interest story is Louis Burston's 'Forget Me Not,' which Metro is releasing. It succeeds in its purpose of arousing sentiment and sympathy even though it is manipulated by a process of direction that suggests convenient devices."

"Bessie Love contributes her finest performance as an orphan girl—emerging from gawky girlhood into young womanhood with true understanding of the transformation. Irene Hunt plays the mother with splendid feeling, while Otto Lederer as the musician offers many touching moments. Gareth Hughes is the boy, and his interpretation is not so good, chiefly because he is allowed too much latitude in registering the various emotions. Mention should be made of a dog which adds to the humanities."

—Motion Picture News.

"This picture is so worthy of praise, and the theme is so pathetic that to attempt to give it its just due by the use of mere words would only detract from its simple strength and becloud its pathos."

"But to be so brief in praise would leave unremarked the fine direction, the excellent photography, the simple and strong titling, the continuity which flows along without a break, the compelling story and the praiseworthy acting."

"To mention in particular any one of the fine cast would be to discriminate against the others who were no less capable, but it can be said without fear of causing jealousy that a dog of wonderful intelligence and training did a rare bit in 'backing up' the excellent portrayal of the other actors."

—Moving Picture World.

"HUMAN HEARTS"

"The story is by Hal Reid, and has served as a popular stage play in the past. . . . The atmosphere of the small town, with its typical townspeople and associate characteristics is remarkably well represented."

—Film Daily.

What Folks Think

EXIT THE SAUSAGE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 1.—Editor CAMERA! : The end of the string of sausage pictures has been reached.

Experts predict a big improvement in movie entertainment starting September. Their prophecy is as correct as that made by any human based on a close observation of facts, figures and events now taking place, affecting motion picture production here.

Producers face the fact that the modus operandi of the sausage industry has nothing in common with the making of successful screen productions. Those who have not become thoroughly sold on this fact will soon have to untie the white apron strings of their profession and hang up the "To Let" sign.

You cannot make bologna look like fried chicken. A sausage picture will always look like—a sausage.

Producers have come to realize this. Instead of seeing how fast they can make four pictures they now see how good they can make one.

This concentration on individual productions is reflected in the making of "Broken Chains," "Robin Hood," "Peg O' My Heart," "Hungry Hearts," "The Christian," "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and many similar pictures now in the making.

The public this season will see more big attractions than at any similar period in the past. There will also be a marked decrease in the quantity of output. This will do much to increase the popularity of motion pictures.—MARSHALL NEILAN.

CREDIT THE SCENARIST

HOLLYWOOD, July 30.—Editor CAMERA! : You would be doing a kind turn to all of us if you mention the manner in which most critics and reviewers, supposed to be writers themselves, give the writer the small end, invariably. Credit is given directors, stars and lesser actors, and the scenarist has to be content with a brief mention of his name as such.

It would be a darned good thing for the world to understand some of the facts about this game, and 'critics' could do a lot of good if they would occasionally compare books with continuity as written, and see for themselves the manner in which we have to eliminate and build—and then have our work chopped to pieces by a director who believes that training as a horse-wrangler or telephone lineman has made him an artist, and who thinks a split infinitive is something you put on a calf when you want to wean the darn thing!—E. W. GUYOL.

BRING BACK THE STAR

LOS ANGELES, July 30.—Editor CAMERA! : What is your attitude towards the present policy of producers to crowd casts with names of players who have every right to be starred alone?

Speaking from the standpoint of a fan who would not presume to a technical criticism of the photodrama, this tendency has reached an extreme destructive to a spectator's real enjoyment.

It would seem that moderation is a virtue unknown to producers. Some two years ago the cry was raised against the program picture, inasmuch as the star was exploited to the nth degree, and supporting players relegated to oblivion by the cutter's shears whenever they might threaten the star's prestige.

This was followed up by the slogan, "The story's the thing," with the production exploited, the star featured, and a suitable cast assisting.

Now we see the pendulum swing to the extreme of making the names of the cast the attraction and destroying the unity of the story.

Many recent casts consist of so many notable players—stars and near-stars for each of whom it is necessary to "fatten" the part—that the audience is bewildered following several threads of story.

There are any number of clever actors and actresses capable of lending excellent support who could never aspire successfully to stardom, yet whose very limitation might be an advantage.

A return to a consistent story written for a popular star, with minor players lending capable support, would increase enjoyment of cinema patrons—and perhaps, incidentally, box office receipts. Eh? What.—SEMI-FAN.

FREE LANCES WANT IT

LONG BEACH, July 22.—Editor CAMERA! : Would like to suggest that you continue the column of scenario markets in Camera! which was discontinued. It makes your weekly doubly valuable to all free lance writers, and I doubt not but what they are many. Even in my own circle of writer friends there are several who express a desire of seeing it continued.—HAROLD J. ASHE.

(William E. Wing will devote the Screen Writer's Page to the scenario market the last issue of each month. The July 22 issue was so devoted. Every issue of CAMERA! is teeming with scrips suggestions for those who read between the lines.—EDITOR.)

LOST, STRAYED OR —

PHOENIX, ARIZ., July 28. — Editor CAMERA! : What has become of Ferdinand Earle's much heralded screen production, "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," which was finished last summer, kidnapped last fall, strayed or stolen during the winter?

Before the near-completed "Omar the Tentmaker" shall have scooped up the market some charitable person should offer a reward for the finder of Earle's valuable property, otherwise the stockholders must console themselves with the following epitaph from one of Omar's famous quatrains:

Dust unto dust, and under dust to lie,
Sans wine, sans song, sans singer and sans end.

Perhaps I am a stockholder, who knows?—RUBAIYAT SKEPTIC.

FOREIGN NOTES

Tom Terris has just arrived in London, where he has lined up with a big producing corporation to direct at least four pictures, including a spectacular historical production.

Tom Terris has directed in the U. S. A. something like fifty films for Vitagraph, Famous Players, and other concerns. It is considered in England that his technical knowledge obtained in America during his nine years' residence there will be of great value to the firm with which he is now attached.

Mae Marsh is staying at the Savoy Hotel, London, with her husband and baby, at the invitation of Astra Films, who are starring her in their new production, "Flowers of Passion."

A dinner was given in honor of Mae Marsh at the Savoy recently. Mr. Carrol, the American Consul in London, was present to make the speech of welcome.

The German producing concern, Decla Bioscope, have unsuccessfully attempted to enter into a working arrangement with a British house for an interchange of output.

Herr E. Pommer of Decla, who has just returned to Berlin after study British Film trade conditions, said that the Decla policy is to make big international films suitable for the world market, and their "1922 output would be limited to ten productions which will be issued without any attempt at camouflage as German made."

Pathe Freres had a busy time at a Woman's Exhibition held at Olympia, London, in July.

At a studio, which had been specially provided in the building, those who fancied that they had a screen face, had an opportunity of satisfying themselves on the point. For a sum of approximately five dollars a screen test was given by the director of the organization, and the aspirant was presented with forty feet of celluloid impression as a memento of the occasion. Although many hundreds of tests were made, we have not yet heard of any of those tested being engaged to oust Mary Pickford or Charlie Chaplin from the screen.

Mr. Watterson R. Rothacker, President of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing company of Chicago, arrived in England by the Majestic on July 15th.

In a statement made in the British House of Commons by Mr. Newbould, M. P., representing the film industry of Great Britain, he pointed out that there were at least forty million pounds invested in the motion picture industry, and that the industry employs some 120,000 people—and in asking the government for relief from taxation pointed out that throughout the war, and since the war on every occasion of national emergency, the government had gone to the cinema industry for help and assistance.

Constance Binney, in giving her impressions of her work at the Ideal studios, London, where she has been starring in "A Bill of Divorcement," said, "Although American film technique is more advanced than British, English studios seem to have a deep love of their art; work is taken more easily, and also more seriously, with a result that it appears to have a deeper sincerity." She has now left for Paris.

At a cinema theatre in Sheffield, England, where "Heliotrope" was being shown, the management had the foyer and passages artistically decorated with streamers of that color.

While maintaining his position as one of the leading lights in the cinematic world, Ralph Graves finds diversion in writing magazine stories. A number of them have been published and Graves is now working on a novel.

Ferdinand P. Earle visited the Cosmopolitan Film's company's big oriental set in the final scenes of the "Bishop of the Ozarks," as the guest of Finis Fox.

Sol Polito, cinematographer for the Finis Fox production of "The Bishop of the Ozarks," is an authority on the paintings of the masters of his native Italy.

Gus I. Saville just closed a fourteen weeks' engagement playing "Daddy Longman," supporting Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country."

Colleen Moore, who has a featured role in the Goldwyn production, "Broken Chains," directed by Allen Holubar, says she feels in the characterization of the wistful young wife, beaten down by a miserly husband and difficult circumstances, that she is in reality portraying a composite role of all the things she has ever done on the screen.

Ruth Clifford has been playing a role in "The Dangerous Age," under direction of John M. Stahl, at the Mayer studio.

Dick Jones, Mack Sennett's production manager, at present directing Ben Turpin in his next special, "The Shriek," had a narrow escape from injury while shooting scenes in the desert recently. A fractious horse Jones was riding reared and turned a complete back somersault. Only the agility of the director saved him, for he managed to disengage his feet from the stirrups and jump clear.

Henry F. Gilbert, who has been aptly characterized as "the Mark Twain of American music," is designing the score for Elmer Clifton's whaling drama, "Down to the Sea in Ships."

DAUGHTER OF FILM DIRECTOR DIES

Eleven-year-old Shirley Christie, daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Al Christie of Hollywood, on Sunday died of injuries received when she fell from her horse last Friday. She had been taken to the Children's Hospital in Hollywood.

The little daughter of the film director fell from her horse when she turned to speak to her riding instructor. The horse became excited when she accidentally flanked him.

House Peters has received some decidedly unique fan letters from the South Seas. He may make a personal appearance or two in theaters of the few chief cities, while he is there portraying the title role in the Goldwyn production of "Passions Of the Sea," which R. A. Walsh is making.

Muriel Frances Dana has returned from a five weeks' engagement with the Max Graf company at San Francisco.

Derelys Perdue, star in Milford S. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks," and the Southland's premier danseuse, has been modeled by Humberto Pedretti, noted Italian sculptor, and her statue is being completed in bronze to be exhibited soon in New York City. Derelys Perdue is said to have the most perfect form of any dancer in the world.

Lillian Leighton has returned to that dear Hollywood after several weeks trouping with the Nell Shipman combination up North.

Frank E. Woods, chief supervisor of Paramount productions, has fallen for golluf, the game of hit-it-and-then-find-it-if-you-can.

Homer Scott, Sennett cameraman, with a number of others, accompanied Dick Jones into the desert to shoot scenes for "The Shriek," a forthcoming Ben Turpin special.

Vin Moore has a poultry ranch, which he finds very handy when he desires to hatch a plot.

Harry Neumann, "wiz" cameraman, has just shot a chimpanzee and wild-animal comedy, in which he tricked the lead into appearing in nine different characters. A nifty bird that.

Wyndham Standing is interested in a little girl of an old friend. When he heard that she was to be married he asked her how she was making out in the matrimonial lines and she replied, "Fine, Mr. Sterling, I'm on my fifth lap already this evening!"

Elmer Clifton has other things besides whales in his motion picture drama, "Down to the Sea in Ships." When he returned from the Caribbean Sea he brought a Haitian pig with him. Later a goat was added to the collection.

L. E. Wall, formerly of the Harter Wall company of Bakersfield, has taken over the interest of J. C. Harter, and the company from now on will be known as the Larry Wall Productions, otherwise no changes being made in the staff.

Bob Horne has returned from Chicago. He will be at the Bronx studio in a week or ten days to start work on a new production. Patricia Palmer will again be his leading lady as soon as she finishes with Lasky in the "Cowboy and the Lady."

George Larkin is busting all the furniture he possesses at his home. No, kind readers; he hasn't gone wild. Only his friend director, William Craft, has had him out on the golf links learning the game of put and take on the green. Hence his using the family broom and the oranges intended for breakfast to practice his drives.

William Siström, who was general manager of Universal for some time, is in our midst. He is looking after the business matters of the Frank Borzage production that the latter is to make for Cosmopolitan titled "The Pride of Palomar."

Jean Hathaway is fun-making for the Lloyd Hamilton organization. She has been engaged to take a part.

CHANGE IN TITLE

The title of the newest Goldwyn picture, which is being filmed in the South Seas, has been changed from "Captain Blackbird" to "Passions Of the Sea."

"One Week of Love" has been definitely decided upon as the title for the big Selznick all-star production which is being made at the United studios under the direction of George Archainbaud with the working title "Blazing Sands." Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are co-stars in the story which is from the pen of Edward J. Montague. "One Week of Love" is the first of the series of special productions being produced by Myron Selznick for release next season on the Select Pictures Corp. schedule.

Two Universal titles of newly completed pictures have stood "the test of production" and will stand as the releasing names.

"Broad Daylight" is an all-star production, directed by Irving Cummings with Jack Mulhall, Lois Wilson, Ralph Lewis and others in the principal roles. Harvey Gates wrote the story and scenario.

"Wolf Law" is a Hugh Pendexter story which was filmed under Stuart Paton's direction with Sylvia Breamer, Charles Brinley, Tom S. Guise and other players in support.

SELL TO REX INGRAM

John Russell and Harvey Thew, one a local boy and the other recently a winter visitor here, have just sold a story of the South and other Seas to Rex Ingram. Rex, who has gone east, will take the story with him to Jamaica and do it at the same time he does "Toilers of the Sea," a Victor Hugo story written by one of the most prominent of the contemporary Russian novelists.

John Russell is author of "Where the Pavement Ends."

Charles Logue is the author of "The Lonely Road." This will be the third vehicle of Charles Logue's to be produced by Preferred Pictures for First National, and starring Katherine MacDonald.

Lois Zellner provided the continuity for "The Lonely Road."

Henry M. Tichenor, former editor of St. Louis magazine, is preparing, in collaboration with Milford W. Howard, a new story, "The Sage of Wildeness Ridge," for the Cosmopolitan Film company.

Olga Printzlau is writing the scenario for "The Beautiful and the Damned," a story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Warner Brothers' studio.

Wilbur Daniel Steele wrote the story of "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," Lon Chaney's next starring picture.

Hope Loring adapted "Ching, Chin, Chinaman," to the screen. It is the first of the series of the Tom Forman productions and will feature Lon Chaney.

Frances Irene Reel, author of the "Song of Life," and "The Woman in His House," wrote the story of "The Dangerous Age," the next John M. Stahl production.

"Lorna Doone," a song written by A. A. Penn and Frederick Vanderpool, has been dedicated to Madge Bellamy, the Thomas H. Ince star, who plays the name role in Maurice Tourneur's screen version of the English classic.

Violet Clark has written the continuity for Carey Wilson's story, "This Way Out."

Anzia Yezierska, a Russian writer, is the author of "Hungry Hearts," a picture made by E. Mason Hopper.

The new Larry Wall studio is now nearing completion, and in order to avoid any unnecessary delays, Larry has taken his company to Kernville on location.

MOVIE EDITION OF DICKEN'S "OLIVER TWIST" PLANNED

Among the many exploitation assets that will accompany the showing of Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist," will be a special movie edition of the book which is now on the press. The edition will carry an elaborate supply of still photographs from the production and will sell at popular prices.

Book stores will give ample window display and newspaper space to the Coogan edition of the famous Dicken's book and the exhibitor himself will be advised of several huge "tie-ups" that he can make use of with the volume during the showing of the feature production in his theatre.

J. G. Hawks and Bess Meredith prepared the scenario for "The Dangerous Age."

The continuity for "Ben Hur" is being written under the supervision of Paul Bern, Goldwyn's editor-in-chief, and his two associates. A. L. Erlanger, sponsor for the stage version will pass upon the continuity as soon as it is prepared.

Uncovering Genius

IN a corner of the Hollywood studios there exists a little democracy that, were more known of it, would set an example to the whole motion picture industry of good fellowship and co-operation.

It is hard to distinguish J. K. McDonald, the head of this production company, because one is more likely to find him helping shift scenes than enthroned behind a mahogany desk. But that is another story.

It was J. K. McDonald who had the happy thought of organizing a kids company and showing the public that children could bring more joy and laughter to the world in two reels than a big production organization could do in six or eight with the so-called all-star cast. Then came the ordeal of finding a suitable director.

McDonald interviewed many well-knowns. Well known for handling stars, but children? There was the catch.

Then Lady Luck took a hand and sent him Mason Litson, the former director and production manager of Goldwyn. Litson had directed Johnny Jones pictures, many of them, in the Booth Tarkington series. But the glory and success fell to the glaring name of their author and Litson's clever moulding and faithful work was lost in the shuffle.

Flashing back to McDonald we find the man who appreciated and saw under the glare of electric lights the real reason for the Johnny Jones pictures' success.

McDonald declares that Litson is the greatest child director in the business and is pleased to think he has been instrumental in giving Litson's artistry a deserving prominence on the screen.

Litson made people sit up and take notice when his production "Supply and Demand" reached the screen, but when he followed it up with "Makin' Movies," which he wrote and directed himself, he swept them off their feet.

CENTURY NOTES

Betty May is playing a prominent part in Lee Moran's newest Century Comedy.

Julius Stern leaves this week for New York, and then to Europe for three months' trip.

Arvid Gillstrom, director; Lee Moran, comedian, and "Brick" Enright, scenario writer, will cross the continent the end of this week in the interests of Century Comedies. Julius Stern is sponsoring the trip, which will be made by auto.

Abe Stern, secretary and treasurer of Century Comedies, arrived in Los Angeles August 1st. This winds up a four and one-half months' trip through Europe.

"Hansel and Gretel," Century's third fairy tale, is nearing completion. Alf Goulding is directing under the personal supervision of Century's president.

"Brownie the Sleuth" has been finished by Gillstrom.

Jackie Morgan plays a principal part in "Brownie," the wonder dog's latest Century Comedy.

Baby Peggy might play "Little Bo Peep" as her next starring vehicle. Alf Goulding who has directed her recently made Fairy Tale series, will again wield the megaphone.

Camera!

Dear Sirs:

Following your sound advice (a twist of the wrist), I am sending you enclosed, a money order for two dollars ($2.00), for which you will kindly send me CAMERA! for one year.

Since arriving here from New York a short time ago, I have read your magazine with increasing interest and profit. Your Pulse of The Studios has proven invaluable to me.

At present I am with John M. Stahl's "The Dangerous Age" company at the L. B. Mayer studios. Have recently been with "Robin Hood" (Fairbanks), and "Broken Chains" (Goldwyn).

People, Chit Chat and Pickups have been great aids to me in locating former Edison people, with whom I worked when I was playing kid parts in that pioneer picture organization.

While happy to be among your many subscribers, and wishing you continued success, believe me to be,

Very sincerely yours,

Yale Boss

Links in the Chain

FROM the time the idea flashes to the author's mind to the time the screen flashes it to the spectator's eyes, many persons have for various periods the picture's destiny in their hands.

Each sees the film's importance, and his relation to it, in a different light. Each thinks of the others mostly as irritating incidentals to the BIG job—his own.

It's good for the artist and good for his work to put all he has into it. It's not good to retain a too-exalted viewpoint. When the individual analyzes his part in putting forth a motion picture, he will find that not upon him, solely, success revolves—that without any one of the others his work would be for naught.

The situation was graphically and convincingly brought forth by Harry Wilson at the Wampas meeting the other night. Wilson outlined the great continuity of picture production, and chose speakers to talk from several important viewpoints.

SAYS THE MAN WHO WRITES THE STORY:

Author alone doesn't stand much chance of putting forth a brilliant screen achievement. Let author, director and scenarist foregather. One furnishes an idea, another sees startling possibilities, the third develops them.

Successful direct-for-screen stories are more likely to come from the boys selling films or writing publicity than from "great authors."

We're up against a question today, not of getting the story by the censor, but of getting it by the producers afraid of the censors. We're making pictures for censors instead of for the public.—Carey Wilson.

SAYS THE MAN WHO BUYS THE AUTHOR'S STORY:

Unless we give the exhibitor something to exploit he can't do much with a picture. He has to have a picture with good talking points to sell the public.—Sol Lesser.

SAYS THE MAN WHO LENDS THE MONEY:

I am surprised at the life of films. Films five and six years old—ones we've forgotten about—are still showing somewhere—bringing in from $500 to $1000 a week.

They would bring in three or four times that if we can get exhibitors to use more salesmanship to the public.

We go beyond all reason in our production costs. Remember all bills are paid at the box office. You can't get crowds of people interested by advertising just to exhibitors. Reach the man who pays the money.—Motley Flint.

SAYS THE MAN WHO DIRECTS THE PICTURE:

The director must put pep into the story if it lacks it. He must fulfill his obligation by making a picture that will return its investment.—E. Mason Hopper.

SAYS THE MAN WHO TELLS THE PEOPLE ABOUT THE PICTURE:

We publicity men must purge ourselves of the sin of making supercilious snobs in our publicity copy of stars who might be human folks.

After a weary day's work the average man isn't interested in stories of girls who live in luxury and extravagance. He wants to know about girls like his own daughter.—Mike Boylan.

SAYS THE MAN WHO DISTRIBUTES THE PICTURE TO THE THEATERS:

A lot of us try to fool the exhibitor. He's smarter than we think. We can't spread too much hokum.

We should tell the exhibitor how to exploit his picture. The paper should be carefully planned. Many an exhibitor buys a picture on the strength of the posters alone.

We don't want extravagant stories in our press sheets. Publicity stories should have more human interest. Stills should have action . . . few persons in them . . . be taken as close up as possible if they are to be printed in newspapers.—L. O. Lukin.

SAYS THE MAN WHO SHOWS THE PICTURE TO THE PUBLIC:

Exhibitors have been in a rut since 1917. In those days theaters were swamped by patrons. Now they have to go out and get patrons—and some of them don't realize it yet.

The greatest publicity medium is mouth-to-mouth advertising. The person who tells his friend about the picture he thinks is great doesn't do it in extravagant phrases. He describes some simple scene that struck his fancy.—Harry Arthur.

SAYS THE MAN WHO PASSES JUDGMENT ON THE PICTURE:

The critic's work is to encourage the art and protect the public. If he's too kind to the art the public kicks. If he's too harsh to the producer of the art, the producer kicks.

I believe motion pictures have reached a permanency of style. Picture making is now stabilized that the Shakespeare of the screen can come forward. It may not be for years, but the field is prepared for him.—Edwin Schallert.

Film Capital Production Notes

RENCO WILL PRODUCE "OLD SONG SPECIALS"

The first of a series of "old song specials" is now in preparation by Renco Film Company. Contracts for production rights have been signed by H. J. Reynolds, president of the company, and Charles K. Harris, author of the famous song, "After the Ball."

Negotiations looking to this deal have been in progress for weeks. In 1912, a five-reel melodrama thriller, of the pioneer vintage, was written around the song title, and even in the crudities of that day it took the popular fancy and became a box-office winner.

The story for the forthcoming super-special has been written by Harris himself. He has held closely to the well known theme of the song but has built up a massive and gripping narrative in modern settings. Work already has commenced on the continuity and the selection of the cast.

"Singed Wings," with Bebe Daniels in the featured role, is Penrhyn Stanlaws next production for Paramount Pictures. Miss Daniels will complete this picture in time to undertake the leading role in William deMille's forthcoming production, "Notoriety."

"Singed Wings" is by Kathleen Newlin Burt and was published in Cosmopolitan magazine. Conrad Nagel has the male lead.

August 14th has been set as the starting date of Agnes Ayres' new Paramount star picture, "A Daughter of Luxury," by Beulah Marie Dix, who wrote "Borderland," Miss Ayres' recently completed vehicle. Paul Powell will handle the megaphone.

Wallace Reid's next vehicle will be started some time this month under the direction of James Cruze. "Thirty Days" is the title of the picture and it was written by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton.

William deMille will start in September on his new production, "Notoriety," with Bebe Daniels. This story was written by Clara Beranger, who adapted "Clarence" and other William deMille productions for Paramount.

CHIMPANZEE COMEDY

Mary, "the chimpanzee with a human brain," proposes to give screen heroines a run for their money. William E. Wing has written a rather fantastic conceit as Mary's first starring vehicle, which has to do with the ways of the jungle and its maids. Vin Moore, comedy director, has put the tale into film.

The filming of "Bow Wow," the Mack Sennett comedy featuring Louise Fazenda, John Henry, Jr., and Teddy the wonder dog, has been completed. It is now in the cutting room for editing and titling, before being shipped to the distributing hands of First National.

Actual photography will be finished this week on Rupert Hughes' production of "Gimme." The story is by Rupert and Adelaide Hughes, and the cast includes Helene Chadwick, Gaston Glass, Eleanor Boardman, Henry B. Walthall and David Imboden.

INDIAN REVOLT PICTURES

Remarkable pictures of the activities of the Hindu agitators who are backing Ghandi, the imprisoned revolutionist of India, have been obtained by Captain Ariel Vargas, International's cameraman-of-fortune. He is now in India for the purpose of filming many of the so-called "mysteries" of that strange land and people, for International News.

Buster Keaton's next comedy is to be "The Love Nest." There will be no women in the cast.

It takes more than a six months' seige of whooping cough to down Micky McBan, the little mer-man.

COMEDY FINISHED

Lewis Sargent has finished his first comedy starring role at Universal—"His First Job." Scott Darling wrote the story and directed it with Robert Kerr, Mary Philbin, Julia Leonard, Bennie Billings and Albert Lee supported the boy star of "Huck Finn" fame.

The second of the Lew Sargent starring comedies is ready and will be under production immediately.

Production activities at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios are gradually drawing to a close. "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is finished, all but cutting and titling. Mary Pickford has ten days more work on "Tess of the Storm Country," and her brother Jack has a week to go yet on "Garrison's Finish." None of these luminaries has yet announced future plans.

Ward Lascelle will begin production on August 7th on "Mind Over Motor," one of Mary Roberts Rhinehart's stories of the widely-read "Tish" series.

Trixie Friganza, vaudeville star, will be featured in the production, the cast of which will include additional celebrities to be announced later.

BIG UNIVERSAL FEATURE NOW BEING EDITED

Two Universal-Jewel productions of superior calibre have just gone into the editor's hands at Universal City, "The Flirt" and "The Kentucky Derby."

"The Flirt" was directed by Herbert Henley with an all-star cast including Helen Jerome Eddy, Eileen Percy, Edward Hearn, Bert Roach, Harold Goodwin, Lloyd Whitlock, William Welsh, Lydia Knott, Nell Craig, Buddy Messenger, Tom Kennedy, George Nichols and others. The Booth Tarkington novel, a classic of middle western American life, was adapted by A. P. Younger.

"The Kentucky Derby," was directed by King Baggot, the man who directed "Human Hearts" and carries in its cast the names of Lillian Rich, Reginald Denny, Lionel Belmore, Kingsley Benedict, Gertrude Astor, Walter McGrail, and others. It is an adaptation of Charles Dazey's famous success of the stage, "The Suburban." It is of interest to note that Benedict, played in the stage version, for nine and a half years.

"The Galloping Kid," a Hoot Gibson vehicle from the pen of Ralph Cummins, and directed by Nat Ross, also has just gone into editorial hands. Edna Murphy plays the leading feminine role.

Gladys Walton's vehicle, "The Girl Who Ran Wild," which is being filmed from Bret Harte's story, "M'Liss," under the direction of Rupert Julian, is in the final stages of production and will enter the editorial stage within a week. Herbert Rawlinson's newest vehicle, "Confidence," from a story by Bernard Hyman, has just been completed by Harry A. Pollard; Harriet Hammond, bathing beauty, is the leading woman.

Mary Pickford has completed her new version of "Tess of the Storm Country," the Grace Miller White story.

"Bow Wow," the Mack Sennett comedy, has been completely directed and is now in the cutting room to be edited and titled before being shipped.

AT FINE ARTS

Doubleday Productions, starring Lester Cuneo, have left Fine Arts for about a week's location work at Keen's Camp, near Hemet. Twenty-two persons comprised the party. "Skyfire" is the title of the company's current western, and is being directed by Henry McCarty.

Finis Fox will start work shortly on a new story, the title and details of which have not yet been announced. He is now cutting his recently completed picture, "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Perfect Pictures Corporation is planning to start work within the next few days on a South-Sea Island story, starring Barbara Bedford. Nat Deverich will direct.

The management of the Fine Arts studios announced this week that three new producing companies will start work at the plant within the next few days, two of which are headed by well known film celebrities, formerly engaged as directors.

Current Reviews

"Free Air"

WITH only one big name back of the production, and in spite of subtitles that were probably intended for a travelogue, "Free Air," an independent, is a snappy picture with enough interest to hold attention. The only familiar name here is that of Sinclair Lewis, the author. The story is only ordinary, and every situation is anticipated. But it is well directed and entertaining.

Our sense of humor overcomes us, however, when this picture of the great outdoors flashes painted and obviously photographed backgrounds of Glasier park. The idea in this ne wtype of film is supposed to be a combination of scenic and plot.

Marjorie Seaman, new to the screen, is thrown into a featured part and does very well. She is pretty, has a nice personality, and has grasped screen tricks in a short time.

Tom Douglas is a young chap of the Charles Ray type. However, he and his director know this fact very well and the bashful small town tactics are easily recognized.

Katherine Hilliker, known for writing titles on industries in the South Sea Islands, and how sugar cane is cut and dried, wrote the titles, forgetting it was a feature story.

Others in the cast whose work is commendable are Henry Sells and George Paunceforte.

"Hearts Haven"

FAITH healing and "miracle" pictures, though not quite so much in style, have entered the Northwest Mounted Police and Sheik class. Propaganda of any kind worked into a beautiful production brings with it a wave of resentment. In "Hearts Haven" another of Benjamin B. Hampton's spotless productions, the story for two reels runs along well directed and well acted. Suddenly it suffers a cramp and turns Christian Scientist. From then on the story becomes impossible. It diverts from the land of real people to closed doors and practitioners.

Clara Louise Burnham, the author of "Hearts Haven," tried to slip the same stuff over on us as children. She wrote the "Jewel Story" books, but Anderson's fairy tales had it all over her.

The surprising phase of this production is the fact that the director-producer (Hampton) should step off his neutral ground where he made so many red-blooded pictures, into the land of religious propagandists.

Robert McKim, though one of the features of the cast, had little to do. His role is unusual for him, but he handles it well.

Claire Adams is beautiful and graceful, but it is when she becomes a cripple in the story that her emotional acting proves her worth.

Frank Hayes, the long-faced comedian, so often seen in slap-stick, is on his good behavior here. He and his set of pills and tonics form a created contrast to the atmosphere of the story.

Aggie Harron has a small part, but she is a sympathetic figure, and makes her good heartedness radiate from the screen.

Frankie Lee and Virginia Lee Corbin, the famed kiddie team, improve the production with their clever acting and appeal.

Betty Brice played a true-to-life character (the only real-life person in the story) in a way that caused the remark, "I've seen women just like her" from observers.

Claire McDowell was the faith healer this time. Her role took on the sameness of every other one she has played since "mother" features have come to the screen. Many others completed the cast. Photography was good.

We are not surprised that so sweet a star as Mae Summers has risen from the ranks of an extra to a serial queen.

Scott Darling, well known as a senarioist, came through with the following:

"I will never again blame a director for changing the continuity of a story that I write. Since becoming a director, I can see why such changes are essential." Darling, let it be known, has been made director of Louis Sargent, known for his performances in "Huckleberry Finn" and "Just Around the Corner."

"A WIDE OPEN TOWN"

Again we have the example of the popular fiction story which becomes trite when shown upon "the screen of a million photographs." You see, they can still fool them with printer's ink, but the multitude knows an old friend, especially when the friend calls often.

"A Wide Open Town" is interesting to the average audience, but suffers from old-fashioned methods of direction, besides carrying very familiar plot and episodes. At that, it is far above the average Selznick offering, although this may be damning the production with faint praise.

Conway Tearle and Faine Binney are the two principles in the picture, but neither could do themselves justice in the circumstances.

W. E. W.

Independence

THE eyes of the motion picture world are taking an interested slant at the independent producer at the present time. He is showing signs of gaining weight. While no one was looking, this foot-loose fellow has evidently crept into the pantry with interesting results.

Most of us want this fellow to continue feeding up, that he may make the weight in a battle that gives every entry hard rubs and then more hard rubs. Therefore one should extend to the new favorite the usual words of wisdom and advice.

The one mistake of most independents who have entered the producing field, has been that they considered the struggle all over when they landed their finances. After that it was merely a matter of going right out and making the picture.

It has required many years of bitter struggle and great losses to bring the old-timer of the business to the realization that there is something besides currency and his own superlative wisdom behind successful pictures. He rebelled to the last against the story itself. It was the organization, the director and management that made for results. The story was something of a lead-off, but it had so little to do with the actual production, that it was unworthy of much credit or price.

Now the story is the big thing when in successful continuity, and the Old Guard is pawing the air to discover in its midst, imaginative writers who have trained down to the minute—the present minute—for the job of directing the picture on paper.

The independent well might take a tear-stained leaf from that book of experience, and turn to the only proven system of successful production, that of co-operation between author and director.

But, the independent will do well to improve upon some of the standard methods by refusing to allow studio system to ruin the effects of such co-operation.

None of the great screen successes have been made under a studio system.

In each case the unit was unhampered by outside interference. A hasty roll-call of the really big ones will prove this.

Therefore the independent is in a happy position. He may take all the good from the other fellow's experiences, and cheerfully chuck aside the stumbling blocks which the Old Guard is too stubborn or helpless to discard.

The product of the author's brain cannot be put upon the screen in all fullness by any director, without the personal aid of that writer. On the other hand, the mind of the director should be an aid to the author while the continuity is in process of development. If both these persons are competent and will work together, success is assured.

The wise independent is happily placed. He stands a chance of winning from the outset.

HERO HAROLD SAYS

If the jungle beast would become entirely popular with picture audiences, he might try biting the serial producer a few.

Where to Find People You Know

SLOMAN'S NEW QUARTERS

Edward Sloman Productions has established production quarters at the Berwillia studios on Santa Monica boulevard, where Mr. Sloman is now supervising the cutting and tilting of his latest picture, "Blind Justice."

Virginia Valli's work in Universal's newest Jewel special, "The Storm," has resulted in Carl Laemmle's decision to star her in Universal-Jewel specials. Miss Valli will co-star in one more picture, probably, before she becomes a star in her own right.

Nita Naldi has signed a five-year contract as a member of the Paramount Stock Company.

Miss Naldi will go back to the Lasky studio on September 1, and will play leading parts in a number of productions which Jesse L. Lasky is now planning.

Jack White has two directors working on his second Mermaid production, Del Lord and Marry Edwards. Both directors are long experienced and well known in the comedy field.

Lloyd Bacon has become the most valuable all-around member of the Lloyd Hamilton company. Although he has long been a scenario writer for the comedian, Mr. Bacon likes to don make-up occasionally. Lloyd Hamilton has commandeered his services in the second production of his new series of feature comedies for Educational.

Rush Hughes, 20-year-old son of Rupert Hughes, is appearing in "Gimme," which Mr. and Mrs. Hughes wrote, and which Hughes is directing at the Goldwyn studios.

Universal City is the headquarters of Joe Rock in making a film burlesque version of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," starring Billie Rhodes.

Harry ("Snub") Pollard, eight years associated with Hal E. Roach, and for the past two years featured in one-reelers, is to be starred in two-reel comedies under the Roach-Pathe banner.

Monte Katterjohn has returned to Paramount Pictures. He is at present adapting "His American Wife," an original story written purposely for Gloria Swanson by Hector Turnbull. Katterjohn has been indefinitely assigned to the Gloria Swanson unit for Paramount.

De Witte Hager has joined his old friends of the Lasky lot in the Mission Film corporation. His official title is not yet decided upon.

Lambert Hillyer is substituting for Stuart Paton in the direction of "Altar Stairs," Frank Mayo's latest starring picture, at Universal City.

Forrest Seabury, who has been associated with the Majestic Theatre stock company for years, and who is at present portraying "Judas" in the Pilgrimage Play, has been engaged by Marshall Neilan to appear in "The Strangers' Banquet."

Priscilla Dean and company are back from New York and are now hard at work at the Universal studio on Priscilla Dean's next starring vehicle, "Lady Raffles."

SCREEN CONTEST WINNER HERE

Jackie Parker, the five-year-old Cleveland who made his debut in the film world a few months ago through a motion picture contest, is now playing about on the ladders of fame in Hollywood. At present he is working with Betty Compson in the making of "To Have and to Hold," a new George Fitzmaurice-Paramount picture.

"One of the most promising children who have stepped into the movie world," is what L. M. Goodstadt, casting director of the Paramount studios, says of the Cleveland find.

Three thousand children were entered in the contest which proved to be Jackie Parker's debut.

"Snitz" Edwards, who has created numerous stage and screen comedy roles, has been cast for a part in "June Madness," Viola Dana's new Metro starring picture which Harry Beaumont is directing.

Orville Caldwell, he of the fine physique, is to support Katherine MacDonald in her new production, "The Lonely Road." Caldwell is a newcomer. Born at Oakland, graduated at U. C., played with Maud Fulton at Oakland and San Francisco.

Lon Chaney has played about everything excepting the role of a Chinese laundryman. Tom Forman is going to fix even that in "Ching, Ching, Chinaman." John Sainpolis, Marguerite de la Motte and Harrison Ford are in the same cast.

Patricia Palmer, who is now working under Charles Maigne in "The Cowboy and the Lady," at Lasky studios, has been selected by Bob Horner to play the lead in his forthcoming special, "Pride of the Prairies," which he will direct for Western Arts Film company.

Bob Horner has been signed to direct "Pride of the Prairies" for Western Arts Film company at the Bronx studios in Edendale. He is now putting finishing touches to the continuity and will start work shortly.

Ted Melford will assist Bob Horner in the direction of "Pride of the Prairies" at the Bronx studios.

Craig Ward is a new find drafted from the speaking stage by Reginald Barker. He is playing the lead opposite Anna Q. Nilsson in "Timber."

Sunshine Hart is working in her ninth picture with the Hamilton White comedies.

Little five-year-old Arthur Trimble is the featured player for the Arthur Trimble productions which will produce a series of two-reel specials for the independent market.

Frederick G. Becker is directing Arthur Trimble in two-reel specials at the Hollywood studios.

Eugenie Besserer, that altogether admirable actress, will be seen in Marshal Neilan's new production, "The Stranger's Banquet." Miss Besserer's performances are pretty fine feasts in themselves.

Pickups By The Staff

PLANS NEW YORK SHOWING

Edward Sloman will not negotiate the sale of "Blind Justice," his first personally produced picture, until after he has given it an official trade showing in New York. During the past few days he has been swamped with letters, telegrams and personal interviews from representatives of various distributing organizations, inquiring as to his plans for the release of the picture. He is now arranging a location and date for the presentation of the film in the eastern metropolis.

Although he has been married five months, Kewpie Morgan, Sennett comedy heavy man, has just started on his honeymoon trip. The delay was due to the fact that this well known comedian was cast in several pictures with Billy Bevan and Mildren June, which had to be completed on schedule.

MARILYN MILLER MAY STAR WITH JACK PICKFORD

Marilyn Miller, bride of Jack Pickford, will in all likelihood co-star with Jack in his next production according to a statement issued from the Pickford-Fairbanks studios. It is understood that Miss Miller's contract with Flo Ziegfeld runs only until next September, at which time she will be free to take a fling at the films.

Jack Pickford has just returned from Tropic, Calif., where for several days he has been filming trains and depots, arrivals and departures of jockeys, trainers and owners—all for "Garrison's Finish," his new photoplay. This is the twenty-third location Jack has been on since the picture was started.

Roy Del Ruth will spend the next three weeks looking after his real estate interests in Southern California. He will start work on his next Mack Sennett comedy about the middle of August. The latest Sennett comedy directed by Del Ruth, "When Summer Comes," has been completed and will shortly be sent to the distribution agencies of First National.

MAE MARSH WITH GRIFFITH

Mae Marsh sailed for England to appear in a picture for the Graham-Wilcox Prod., an English producing company.

Miss Marsh will probably be back in New York about September 1, and will shortly after start work with Griffith.

Upon completion of this picture, Miss Marsh will return to England to make two more pictures for Graham-Wilcox Prod.

Albert L. Grey, of the Griffith offices says the story will be an original, in which both Miss Marsh and Carol Dempster will appear.

Lewis J. Selznick has just celebrated the tenth anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture business. Stars that Selznick first created on the screen include Nazimova, Elaine Hammerstein, Constance Talmadge, Eugene O'Brien, Alice Brady, Conway Tearle, Robert Warwick, Bert Lytell and Vivian Martin.

Irvin Willett is soon to start a feature production at the Metro. John Waters will once more be his right hand.

MISS MINTER INJURED

Mary Miles Minter and her company narrowly escaped serious injuries when switch engine backed into the train in which they were passengers, at Victor, Idaho, last week. Patricia Palmer, a member of the company, suffered back injuries and possible internal injuries. Tom Moore and Viola Daniels escaped with a few bruises. The company were returning from Yellowstone Park territory where they had been filming scenes for the past six weeks.

When we see the emotional acting of Eugenie Besserer we are tempted to compare her artistry with Sarah Bernhardt.

Ward Lascelle has completed arrangements to produce "Mind Over Motor" at Universal City. His production personnel will include Joe McDonough, assistant director; Bessie Muller, film editor; H. Landers Jackson, who has prepared the continuity and will write the sub-titles; Lillian Lascelle, business manager, and Abe Scholtz, cinematographer. The cast which will support Trixie Friganza is being selected.

WILL HAYS MEMBER OF "WAMPAS"

Will H. Hays has been unanimously elected to honorary membership in the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, comprising the advertising and publicity men of the studios, theatres, and exchanges in Los Angeles.

The offer was gratefully received by Mr. Hays and the following day at the mass meeting held in the Hollywood Bowl, the leader of the industry was presented with his honorary membership card by Pete Smith, Vice-President in the absence of the President.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Edward Montagne, associate editor of the Selznick scenario department, has come to the conclusion that it would be a wiser and cheaper thing for him to change his name to Montague. Not only does everyone persist in calling him Montague, but editors and proofreaders go to the greatest of pains to change his name to Montague when in reality it is from the French and spelt Montagne.

Three persons have been hurt during the making of "One Week of Love. Elaine Hammerstein lost a valuable locket on location, Director George Archambaud was thrown from a horse, and several members of the company contracted poison ivy. Outside of that everything is going along nicely.

Owen Moore has received a letter from Judge Thomas, well-known Virginia sportsman and owner of a racing stable, stating that he has named a horse after the screen star. The horse is scheduled to run his first race at the Saratoga track.

Philharmonic auditorium has housed a complete production of New York's "Midnight Frolic." Scenes were being shot for Harry Rapf's production, "Little Heroes of the Street." Ernest Belcher staged the dances in the center of whom is Marie Prevost.

Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge and Joseph Schenck, will sail for Europe upon the completion of Norma's "The Voice from the Minaret."

Elaine Hammerstein has donned an aviation outfit and is preparing to become a dare-devil air woman for "One Week of Love," Selznick production, in which she is co-starred with Conway Tearle.

C. H. Christie, general manager of the comedy company, and Pat Dowling, his exploitation director, are touring the United States in the interests of their product.

EXPLOITS SHIP YARDS

The Los Angeles ship building industry plays an important part in Marshall Neilan's new production, "The Strangers' Banquet," an adaptation of Donn Byrne's colorful novel.

In the past few years the ship building industry of this city at San Pedro, has grown to a size where it compares favorably with the leading ports of the country. Here, with thousands of workers supplying the "atmosphere," Mr. Neilan is now picturizing some of the most dramatic situations in Donn Byrne's book.

Lloyd Hamilton will not go to Oakland to visit his mother during his brief rests between pictures. Instead, his mother, Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, has arrived in Los Angeles to visit her son, who is now at work on the second feature comedy of his new series for Educational.

Leigh R. Smith, Assistant Director in Elmer Clifton's production, "Down to the Sea in Ships," took his "Sea-Going Ford" to a movie ball recently and led the grand march in it.

Chatter About Southland Folks - By.... Harry Burns

D. J. Kelly has had all sorts of pictures to cast at the Fox studios. But his latest consignment calls for sons of the desert, camel drivers, cowboys, who can look like Arabians, and what nots, that go to make up such a story. Leave it to D. J. to have 'em there, and to look the part.

John Lancaster, the well-known agent, is in New York. His mission seems a dark mystery, but you can bet that he will return with a pocket full of contracts, which means that some of the best artists will soon be working. During his absence Mrs. O'Brien is capably handling the affairs of his offices.

Joe Bonner is now working on his second picture with Gloria Joy over on the R-C lot, and reports he is getting on fine and dandy.

Hobart Bosworth, while making a boost picture in San Francisco, almost caused a young riot when they worked in front of the city hall. A minion of the law misunderstanding what it was all about, was about to arrest the participants, when he noticed the movie camera was registering their every movement.

Hazel Dean made a flying trip to San Francisco to visit her father. When I said flying I don't mean that she sailed the briny skies in an areoplane; she boarded a train.

Leach Cross' friends will be pleased to know that he has bought a tract of land at Cahuenga and Yucca, where he intends to build an apartment house that will be a credit to Hollywood. It will become one of the leading hosteliaries of this community.

Tom Kennedy is selling oil stocks for a living and getting more than his share without digging for it.

Earl Olin put up one of the niftiest sets that a comedy company has erected in many a day, when he designed the Spanish Inn for Larry Semon company at the Vitagraph. He built it in such a manner that director can shoot it from any angle.

Lloyd Hamilton had a ballroom set the other day that was filled with some of our best artists in full regalia. An orchestra urged them on in their movements. Ham played a trombone, some of his notes being sweet while others—well it's no use saying, I haven't the heart.

Nan Collins is looking after the casting offices of the United. Her husband, C. B. (Chick) Collins, has landed a regular heman's job in Miami, Florida. John Brunton is business manager, while Jack Oakey, who was technical director at Brunton's for years, is director. C. B. gets the second company as soon as stage room is adjusted for that organization.

Fred Norfleet came back from the East with plenty of contracts for the Sanford productions. Upon his return Frank Matteson left for San Francisco to look after the Sanford releases. While he is gone Tweedy will make a comedy for the organization.

Wesley Barry, Marie Prevost, Jack Mulhall and Philo McCullough worked to the strains of the Symphony orchestra that the California theatre has engaged to give a daily concert. The concert was on while the artists were working in scenes at the stage entrance. Fair enough for all concerned.

Monte Collins is the true exponent of the saying that "beauty" is only skin deep.

Pete Gerald, arranged a minstrel show for the regular meeting of the Assistant Directors Association. Cal Cohen, Bill White, Monty Collins, Fred Gambold, Bert Leland, Jim Welch, George Allen, C. C. Simpson and Lon Morris succeeded in whopping things up for the boys.

Jack Dawn, who was at the Century studio as assistant director, has gone over to the Vitagraph, where he is working with Larry Semon company. The story deals with bootleggers. To the surprise of all there was a real still working about four blocks away from their set, which no one knew about until the honest to goodness Internal Revenue men raided the place. Then every one knew about it.

Jerry Mandy is being paid by Gil Pratt to be funny in one of his comedies at the Big U.

Norman Kerry came all the way from New York to smear on the grease paint in the Eric Von Stroheim feature about to be started at the Universal. Eddie Sowders and Jack Sullivan are to be the right hand assistants of Eric Von Stroheim.

Henry East returned to Fox, with his dog Buddy, for some retakes. He should worry, it means more money for him and plenty of bones and everything for Buddy.

Chuck Reisner tells a funny on Bull Montana. While he was directing the latter in his initial film it was up to Bull to cry in a scene. It was next to impossible to do. Finally Chuck started talking about his Dear Mother, whom he was soon to see in sunny Italy; how he could see her with tears in her eyes to greet him after all these years. Chuck acted so seriously that he, and those about him, were having a crying fest. All of a sudden big beads of tears fell from the strong man's eyes, and the camera registered every drop.

Harry Gribbon is to make another picture and then take his bag and baggage for a tour of the Orpheum circuit in a single act. Brother Eddie is still one of our best actors, who likes our climate and people, and will act right out in the open when they hire 'im to do so.

George Marshall went under a nasal operation the other day. From now on he hopes to breathe easier, no matter what happens.

Dr. Sidney R. Broadbent, of the Hollywood Community hospital, seems to have won a soft spot in the hearts of many of the boys whom he has treated. The latest victim to receive treatment was our own Samuel Kaufman.

C. M. Franklin is cutting at the United studios, at the same time keeping his mind on his future two-reel comedies that he intends to make with children and animals.

John Coogan was so hot the other day, while laboring in his offices, that he stripped down to his gymnasium shirt and what goes with it. He then notified his aides that he was ready for all comers. When the sun went down, he was still plugging away.

Jack Proctor is an honest to goodness bachelor these days, and any one wanting a good cook can hire him to stew water without burning it.

Buck Connors slipped away to Eureka with a company. Here's hoping the earthquake that was reported there didn't turn Buck's hair any grayer than it is already.

Jimmy Aubrey was a visitor at the A. D. A. open meeting the other evening and spent a few jolly hours with the boys.

Bob Homburg is once again making the rounds of the studios, offering his acting wares for American made dollars that the mint will accept as bonafide mazuma.

Jane Talent is working with J. P. McGowan in the story he is now producing at Universal. It seems like home to Jane, especially with McGowan directing.

Dave Brandman is aiding William Watson in directing his funfests with Neeley Edwards out at the Big U, and Dave is getting a fine thank you.

G. Raymond Nye should be about the happiest of people since William Farnum is to make a picture. To see a Farnum story without G. N. N. is like drinking coffee without sugar, when you have a sweet tooth.

WRITER OR DIRECTOR?

If several international conferences couldn't settle a little problem like world peace, we do not suppose that printer's ink can decide the great war now raging in and about Hollywood; at least, not at one fell swoop.

However, it seems to be the duty of someone to call the police before it becomes absolutely necessary to petition Governor Bill for the militia.

Is it the writer's wonderful story and surcharged continuity, or the director's marvelous genius which puts over the successful production?

When we were freckled-faced kids and put all the martyrs in the piker class by personally supervising the miracle known as washing the neck, mother used to occupy a portion of her Saturdays in composing music the angelic strains of which brought heaven to many souls.

The refrain was called "doughnuts!"

They sang sweetly in every language.

Lizt was pretty fair as a composer; Mendelssohn was able to put quite a few over, and Wagner was not so bad but, compared with the consummate soul of those homely offerings, the works of this trio faded into commonplace whisperings of the breeze on an ordinary day.

Other doughnuts were born before them, filled with the glory of their being. Doughnuts have arrived since, proudly sporting many medals, but you and I know that mother's doughnuts crashed their way to the most lofty pinnacle, in a burst of alchemy the like of which was never known before or since.

Now, moving and having her being in the self same kitchen was one Lena, extremely imported, whose movement represented the sylphlike grace of a sleepy, baby pachyderm.

The only music which ever entered her soul was the heavy footsteps of the hired man.

And yet, mother often handed her super compositions to Lena for further development.

She allowed Lena to fry those doughnuts!

When Lena did not miss the pan, while hurling a limp circle of heavenly dough at the sizzling grease; or, after the golden batch has begun its final development, if Olaf did not appear to hash the scene, the result was the great triumph I have described.

Now, until the author-director question arose to minimize the prohibition debate, we never questioned for a moment the matrix of credit for those heavenly doughnuts.

We always entertained an idea, in our dense mind, that mother was mostly responsible.

Even though Lena had been other than ordinary clay; if she had hailed from Viking poets, or experienced an atavistic penchant for tuning up the old brain; even if she had been the proud descendant from the champion doughnut-maker of all Norway, the general results would have been the same.

Certain of the scenari—that is, doughnuts which flivvered, might have been saved to mankind, instead of emerging from that bubbling pan of glory marked as one who reflected a mis-spent life.

But these cases were few; in the main Lena was a successful director of the frying pan.

And yet, to this day, we have no record of any congressional medals being voted for Lena or any of her offspring.

Now, once more returning to the author-director question—but why ask us?

We are too busy dreaming about those doughnuts!

Director—Did you notice the kick I put in your story?

Author—Yes, I observed it at the box-office.

Al Risley says: "If they would begin featuring the story instead of the star, the public might stick around after all."

It takes such an actress as Anne Shaefer to retain her popularity from the old Vitagraph days to the new flapper age.

HAMMERS OUT!

Many productions are more to be pitied than censored.

President Obregon took a look at the American censor in action, and then put in his bid for recognition by the U. S. by following suit.

If buyers of foreign pictures for the home market are seeking to add quality to their releases, we are sorry for them both ways.

If we are forced to cut out all reference to foreign characters that are off-color, we still can fill in the gaps by insulting American womanhood in the films.

The gallant N. W. Mounted Policeman has done about everything in the films save handcuffs the persistent writers of their stories. Happy hint!

The Hokum family made a mistake that it did not keep up its copyright.

WHEN ROYALTY COMES

The kind we mean is royalty for scenario writers, and we said "when."

To speak of breaking into the studio and getting away with some of the earnings, of course is treason on the high seas; akin, in fact, to putting evil thoughts into the minds of children. We feel pretty bad about it ourselves.

However, if the writer of film stories desires to feel that he is an asset and not a tolerated hired man, he might put this nefarious scheme over on the man who makes the cleanup from his scenarios.

If the highwayman behind the pen can do this, he still may be able to join the big crush across the pond and put his foot on the third rail once more, hooray!

Of course the writer who outraged all precedent by pulling off such a raw deal would be called some hard names between clinched teeth, but he could stand it if he wore cotton in his ears and emitted a jingling sound as he walked away.

Naturally there are two ways of looking at the thing.

The manufacturer believes that precedent—especially one relating to money—is a sacred trust which must be guarded with religious fervor.

The writer's view is a little different. In this proposition he declares that precedent is a squash-faced fake that ought to be shot in the gizzard and committed to Bluemona for life.

The view of the average producer is that the scenarist ought to fall on his knees every evening and give thanks to his maker, meaning of course, his film maker. Why, the poor son-of-a-gun would starve to death if it wasn't for "us."

The gentle scribe says he knows where the producer would be without successful stories, and it wouldn't be at the Isador Hostelry, eating four-bits' worth of food for the small charge of $18 either.

And thus the battle wages, pro and con until such time as someone shall beat the barrier and get away with a little legal larceny, as it were.

The manufacturer avers he pays "round" prices for original stories.

"Yea," snorts the scribe, "round like a nickle. Then he goes and pays a mere $25,000 or $50,000 for a stage play or published story, to say nothing of the expense of ruining it in the studio. We should buy a printing press and make a noise like the 'Scatterhay Pest.'"

Well, it will be a great day when royalties come.

When!

Men may strike and capital can squeeze the people, but no film producer may take those things out of the hand of committee.

The press can spread detailed horrors to the utmost points of the earth; the pulpit is a wide-open thunderer of things one hardly may discuss with his children; fiction can depict in hair-raising manner murder, clever criminals getting away with theft successfully, and the correct dope on secret poisons and their use. But pictures, being the only harmful purveyors of destruction, must not touch upon mild relatives of the above topics.

A wholesome comedy-drama is worth a thousand sex stories, any way you look at it.

FOREIGN NOTES

Peggy Hyland has just completed in London the first of a series of comedies called "With Father's Help."

Peggy may be remembered as starring in a number of Fox pictures two or three years ago. Finding the lure of her native land too strong she left drama and went back to England to make comedies.

Gibson Gowland writes from Tripoli that there is still plenty of excitement to be had in the making of pictures. He states that last week two hundred Arabs and a hundred camels were used in a big scene for the picture "The Price of Silence," in which he plays one of the leading parts. The company had to camp out in the African desert under armed guard as a few days before there was a native fight in which many were killed.

Fred LeRoy Granville of Los Angeles is directing the production and is expecting to return to England in a few weeks.

Constance Binney writes from London and describes her role in "A Bill of Divorcement" in which she co-stars with the British actress, Fay Compton, as "quite the most gorgeous part that has ever been written" and the whole story as "striking the right note in artistic and dramatic values."

During the revolt in Dublin, Ireland, a Pathe cameraman, who was taking pictures for Pathe Topical News, was forced to shelter four hours in a Red Cross hospital in Marlborough Street, Dublin, when the big guns were firing in O'Connell Street. Later he went and set up his camera on Nelson's pillar to record the fray.

Oscar Apfel has arrived in England to direct "Bulldog Drummond" for the Hollandia Film Company of Haarlam, Holland, in which Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greely have been engaged to co-star.

It will be remembered that Apfel directed "Brewsters Millions," "The Squaw Man" and many other films for Famous Players Lasky.

The interiors will be made at the Haarlam studios and the exteriors in England on locations mentioned such as the Carlton, the up-river scenes and other places.

ITEMS FROM FRISCO

J. Farrell McDonald, Sam Appell, E. L. Du Duit and the writer made a hasty trip to San Francisco to complete some scenes in "The Young Rajah," featuring Rodolph Valentino. Working aboard the "Dorothy Alexander" as hindu conspirator, a tug boat took them off in the bay, after making the scenes, and rushed them back to San Francisco, where the quartet got aboard a train for the Angel City.

Lawson Butt is making "The Flying Dutchman" at San Carlos, directing himself in the leading role. They have built a Dutch street up there for use in the film.

Creighton Hale is sharing honors with Isabelle Love in a stage production of "Little Old New York," in one of the leading San Francisco theatres.

Colin Kenney is in the Northern metropolis making two-reel travelogue comedies under the direction of Henry Otto, with E. J. Zerr as cameraman and Ena Gregory supporting the star. The Artist Inc., made up of Santa Monica capitalists, are backing the project.

Kenneth McGaffey has just returned from the Orient, where he arranged for the rights of a series of one-reel Japanese stories, which were filmed in the latter country. He intends to return and make a series of one-reel fairy tales, with an all-Chinese cast. Ken is making his headquarters in the Chronicle Building, San Francisco.

Max Graff is completing "The Modern Madonna," with Milton Sills, in his San Mateo studios.

Contemporary Criticisms

"BORDERLAND" (Paramount)

"The producers have taken a difficult subject and approached it with delicacy, clear expression and remarkably fine film craftsmanship. The result is a decidedly worth while picture that will meet with unequalled approval from any type of audience."

"The author's material has been handled in direction, by Paul Powell, with vision and imagination, and all the time there is such a true note of sincerity that the neatly woven story of life after death in contrast to existence here on earth seems as logical as anything of the sort ever done before."

"Agnes Ayres is assigned what are really three different roles. . . Her performances are superb. Miss Ayres is a beautiful aristocrat with remarkable acting talent, a combination which she exerts to full extent in this picture. The star is supported by a cast that includes a group of performers that gave sincere and expert performances. 'Borderland' is a fine thing in films."

—Moving Picture World.

"A picture altogether out of the ordinary rut, beautifully photographed, well directed and presented by a thoroughly capable cast, 'Borderland' touches the high-watermark of artistic achievement."

"Agnes Ayres registers as an accomplished and versatile emotional actress; indeed, her performance may be set down as the best contribution she has so far made to the screen. Other excellent characterizations are those of Ruby Lafayette as the aged housekeeper, Sylvia Ashton, . . . and Dale Fuller, . . . Milton Sills fills the part of James Wayne with his usual polished grace; the four-footed actor, Pal, is a dog of rare intelligence, and capital support is rendered by others in the company."

"The spirit land views are uncannily beautiful, splendid lighting effects being attained, camera trick work at extraordinary skill is constantly in evidence. . . The continuity is well preserved and the action moves smoothly."

—Motion Picture News.

"You may have looked upon triangle in various guises, but it is a certainty that you never saw it treated in such a novel manner as is found in 'Borderland.' It is a curious story—made so by its dash of spiritualism, its slice of sentiment, and some moments of melo-drama—all of which have been blended into an impressive picture in so far as its photography is concerned. Getting down to rock bottom, the theme itself is absurd, but it has been treated so seriously by the director and author, that even the smiling scoffers of spiritism will be impressed by it."

—Moving Picture World.

"HURRICANE'S GAL" (Associated First National)

"Allen Holubar has shown a keen sense of showmanship values in adapting 'Hurricane's Gal' to the screen. The picture with its contrasts of startling fury and beauty, its sharp characterizations, and crystal clear photography, is one of the most most picturesque sea subjects that has been provided. The result is a production of decided appeal."

"Dorothy Phillips, as commander of a contraband ship, plays with an intensity that makes the other earnest performances seem luke-warm. Her domination of the entire crew may not seem plausible, but it is picturesque. The role is the most vivid and effective of her career and will give her a more definite place in the ranks of popularity."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"This latest Allen Holubar-Dorothy Phillips film ought to bring home the bacon. It has about everything in it to attract and hold the attention of lovers of sensational drama; . . .

"Miss Phillips, as the owner of a smugglers' ship, has a strenuous role and makes every scene count. Robert Ellis appears opposite her as the hero Wallace Beery as the despicable Chris Borg, adds to his laurels as one of the best screen villains extant. . . William Fong was excellent in a comedy role"

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'Hurricane's Gal' is as fine example of excellent photography, skillful direction and all-round good acting as the most captious critic could desire, not the sort of flim to gain approval from the high-brow element, for it deals the rough stuff out unsparingly. . . Allen Holubar has succeeded in getting the real ocean charm into his production."

"That sterling screen favorite, Dorothy Phillips, is a fascinating figure as the slightly rowdyish, swaggering Lola, whose masculine views of life suffer a decided change after she falls under the influence of her lover, Steele O'Connor, so aptly portrayed by Robert Ellis. . . James O. Barrows presents a polished magnetic character sketch of old Captain Danny, Gertrude Astor fills the part of Phyllis Fairchild acceptably."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE KICK-BACK" (F. B. O.)

"Harry Carey retains the type of Western characterizations in which he made his reputation. It is an entertaining production with a story that runs along smoothly and sticks closely to the main theme."

"The ending is weakened by the oft-used device of having the hero's life saved by the summoning of the military, this time the Texas Rangers. Nevertheless it is a Western of more than average interest and Harry Carey fans will like this one."

"The star is congenially cast, with Ethel Gray Terry adequate in the opposite role, and Henry B. Walthall as the deep-scheming heavy. The photoplay settings and direction are good."

—Moving Picture World.

"The scenes have all the fine sweep and stirring realism that picturesque settings and skillful photography can accomplish. There is love interest to flavor the melo-dramatic dash. . . in a word, there are all things which go to make up a congenial environment for the star."

"Mr. Carey plays in the mood which has brought him his present popularity. In the support Henry B. Walthall is prominent in a role that affords him little real opportunity. The balance of the cast gives a good account."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The story moves along rather sluggishly at first but after it gets into the plot, there is enough excitement and action to satisfy the most blasé fan. Edgar Forrest wrote the story especially for Mr. Carey, and as a drama of the cattle country and Mexican border territory it is well adapted for this particular star."

"Ethel Grey Terry renders fine support, as does Henry B. Walthall."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"THE WORLDLY MADONNA" (Equity Pictures Corporation)

"'The Worldly Madonna' has lots of good acting, strong drama, contrast and all the other elements that go to make an appealing production, but the story fails to convince and the star gains little sympathy for himself."

"The good work that . . . Clara Kimball Young, . . . does in this complicated dual role is entirely overshadowed by the weakness in the story. Director Garson has done as well as could be expected with this material."

—Film Daily.

"While not strong enough for a week in in the better class pre-release houses, it nevertheless is a feature that will get by in most localities. There is an angle to the story that may offend in some territories where there is a particularly strong Catholic element."

"Were not the story so unbelievable the picture would have been a corker from the standpoint of direction, sets and photography. As it is, however, it is just a good program picture."

—Variety.

"THE MARRIED FLAPPER" (Universal)

"There can be but one verdict after a view of this Universal play starring Marie Prevost and that is 'may the ranks of the flapper grow and prosper until all femininity is encompassed thereby.' . . . This picture affords a thoroughly satisfactory hour of entertainment. The characters are so human . . . and the various situations played in such truthful mood that this reviewer sat and hoped against the inevitable, which was discernible early in the proceedings."

"Marie Prevost is altogether charming and effective as Pamela and she will make more friends among the picturegoers by this performance. Kenneth Harlan plays his role splendidly. Philo McCullough overacts when he gets the chance but manages to give a good performance in spite of that. 'Mr. Paton's direction seems worthy of the highest praise.'"

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A lively little flapper tale that wins your attention at the star and holds it right through to the thrilling finish."

"With a cast numbering such well-known players as Kenneth Harlan, Philo McCullough, Frank Kingsley and the ever delightful Lucille Ricksen, who has put on long dresses and put up her hair, Marie Prevost has a time holding the centre of the stage in 'The Married Flapper.'"

—Exhibitors Herald.

"This story is a sort of indictment of the rapid courtship and marriage before they really know each other. Marie Prevost skips about having a good time in the best style of the flapper."

"It is not a very substantial story insofar as introducing any dramatics is concerned. . . There is absent that light comedy brand of hokum which has featured the star's late stories. The offering being well titled and acted up to the handle will interest most every spectator."

—Motion Picture News.

People

Jack Holt, Paramount star, will return from New York to finish, at the Lasky Studio, his new picture entitled "Making a Man." Joseph Henabery is the director and will return with his company from the East.

This is a story by Peter B. Kyne, one of America's most representative authors and was adapted by Albert Shelby LeVino.

Ralph Graves will shortly complete his role in "The Jilt," a Saturday Evening Post story being filmed at Universal City under the direction of Irving Cummings. He is playing the leading role.

Alan Dwan, who has just directed the new Douglas Fairbanks film "Robin Hood," in all probability will direct the coming Valentino picture, "The Spanish Cavalier" for Famous Players-Lasky. Later he plans to do several pictures in Europe.

Kittie Rinehart, working in a Larry Semon comedy, soon is to be featured in a independent production.

Billy Hauber, Al Thompson, Robert McKenzie, Harry De Roy, Ed Wertz, and a dozen other good performers are filling all the gaps for Director Tom Buckingham.

Gene Perkins is back from the East, and is once more working with J. P. McGowan at the Big "U."

Carl W. Braga and Fred M. Paulson, who compose the working staff of their own organization, Trampalogue Productions, are preparing to invade Central and South America with cameras soon, and shoot much wild scenery. The various republics also will be filmed. The company has completed four reels of Hawaiian scenics.

Charles Dudley is portraying a character in the Frank Lloyd production being made with Norma Talmadge.

James Neill, Harry Layton, and William Conklin are in the Hobart Bosworth cast, with William H. Clifford directing. J. O. Taylor, who has invented a camera that shoots scenes in two different directions, is filming the narrative.

George Jeske is working with J. A. Howe at Hal E. Roach studios, Culver City. The story has Paul Parrott as the leading light, supported by Joshua Ralston, Eddie Baker and others.

Tom Bates is working with Norma Talmadge, at the United studios, playing a beggar.

Lynn Reynolds is to direct Tox Mix in an Arabian story at the Fox studios, starting inside of ten days.

Jack Hoxie is to be directed by Robert Bradbury in his next five-reel western. The company have gone to Keene's Camp for locations.

Sidney Algiers, who is a member of A. D. A. and is assisting John M. Stahl, has just completed "The Dangerous Age," and is getting another story in shape to start soon.

Archie Stout is once more working at the Christie studios. This should make Archie very happy, for that studio is like home, sweet home, to him.

Harry Tembrook has been working with Emory Johnson on the R-C lot, and will then turn his attentions to the Jack Pickford company.

Bruce Carter is making comedy new-settes with an all-star cast at the Montague studios, and keeping a lot of the regular actors working in them.

Nelson McDowell has been cast by Universal to play a character part in "Another Man's Shoes."

Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle with other members of the Selznick are up in the mountains near Chatsworth where Director Archinbaud is making scenes for "One Week of Love."

Edward Montagne, who recently completed the script on "One Week of Love," has started on another which will be made as an all-star production by Myron Selznick.

Victor Heerman, Selznick director, served as best man at the recent Jack Pickford-Marylyn Miller wedding, and he says that he now knows how it feels to be an extra in a big scene.

De Witte Hagar has joined his old friends of the Lasky lot in the Mission Film Corporation. His official title is not yet decided upon.

Norman Walker, junior member of the H. J. Walker Company of Cleveland, Ohio, has recently become affiliated with the Mission Film Corporation. He is attached to the financial department at present, but will have an official title in the production end of the business soon.

Ernest Traxler is superintending the re-writing of "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," the Hans Christian Anderson fairy tale which Clarence Geldert is to direct for Mission Films.

Dorothy Martin, the little girl who made her successful screen debut in the blind child part in "Science—Or God?" will play the leading feminine role in "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," which will be the next Mission Film production.

Leon Rice, vice-president and financial director of the Mission Film corporation, is in San Francisco, conferring with capitalists there, and assisting Gordon Pollock in preparing for the production of "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," which will be made in the north.

Eugene Acker, well known New York motion picture actor, who has recently come to the western picture colony is considering changing his name. His real name is Eugene Acker Ivanoff, and it is possible he may drop the Acker part of it and become Eugene Ivanoff, for people out here are confusing him with the popular feminine artist, Jean Acker.

SAVES CHILDREN FROM DROWNING

Richard Sears, International News cameraman in Boston, distinguished himself as a hero when he rescued several children from drowning in the Neponset River after they had been thrown from a "non-capsizable" boat, being demonstrated for the benefit of news cameramen.

Five children were in the boat with its designer, R. W. Dobson of Atlantic, Mass., when the craft suddenly turned turtle, imprisoning the children beneath it. Sears was on the bank with the other cameramen, about twenty yards away. He immediately plunged in and extricated the children, one by one, so promptly that they suffered only slightly from their submersion.

Bob Reed has been engaged as cameraman for "The Pride of the Prairies."

Gertrude Astor, now in Gloria Swanson's cast making "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," was a trombone soloist before she entered filmdom. From the time she was eleven years of age until she was twenty she earned her livelihood pumping the old slide trombone.

Billie Dove has completed her work in "Country Love," the first of the Metro special stories series of productions, and has gone to Catalina Island for a few days vacation.

It is reported that there is strong likelihood of Lloyd Hughes being featured in a big Metro special before he finally does return to the fold of Thomas H. Ince, who holds an option to star this talented artist.

Monte Banks announces he has invented new kind of comedy—neither slap-stick or situational. What can it be? That's what Monte wants you to ask until September, when his first innovation will be released.

Who's who among the Dorothy Manners? The Dorothy Manners supporting Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish," wants to make sure of avoiding confusion. Hence hereafter she will be known as Dorothy G. Manners. She's a decided brunette while the other Dorothy Manners of the screen is a blond.

Max Linder, famous French comedian, cables from Paris that what Europe needs more than American dollars is American optimism. Evidently the old autocrat, despondency, has said Europa by the throat.

Gladys Walton and others in the cast of "The Lavendar Bath Lady," a Universal production, have been on location in Pasadena for the past few days.

Tom Santschi, one of the steadfast stars of the silver sheet, has fully recovered from his dangerous operation which confined him to the hospital for three months. He will resume studio work within a short time.

Director Jack O'Brien is able to toddle around, after having three ribs set. His own ribs, we mean.

Vin Moore is rehearsing a new suit of armor, oiling up the joints and breezing around the old ranch in the outfit. Hence it is to be presumed he is in harness again for one of those little wild-animal things.

John Leezer, who knows as much about the photographic art as the best of them, has reappeared in Hollywood, looking for new camera game.

Frank E. Woods, supervisor of Paramount productions, now and then receives gushing letters from the fair ones who desire his photo, declaring that they have seen him in all his screen appearances. As Frank still is to make his debut as an actor, these effusions come as a surprise.

Eugenie Besserer will appear with Viola Dana in "June Madness."

Norman Taurog is directing Joe Rock in a series of comedies for Federated.

A. Guy Frumm is now treasurer for the Pacific Film Co. He was formerly with Universal.

William Fairbanks is to play the leading role in "Peaceful Peters," which Ben Wilson will produce.

John Finn is acting as assistant to Mason N. Litson in producing two-reel comedies with Johnny Jones, Gertrude Messenger and other kiddies.

Bruce Mitchell has been signed to direct Monte Banks. Mitchell directed Jack Richards in a series of comedies for the T. R. Coffin Co.

Bruce McRae is cast in Principal Pictures, "The World's a Stage," by Elinor Glyn.

Mary Philbin will appear with Lew Sargent in a one-reel comedy. Before starting work in the forthcoming Von Stroheim pictures.

Kala Pasha has been engaged to appear in the Alfred S. Green production, in which Thomas Meighan, as the leading actor will disport on Catalina Islands.

Rowland V. Lee has completed direction of William Russell in "Mixed Faces," Fox production, and is making preparations on the script of his next vehicle for that organization.

"Little Napoleon's" first comedy, made for the Morris R. Schlank productions, was recently shown in the Golden Gate Theatre, San Francisco, and met with the very best of success, according to the management. The story and direction was handled by Harry Burns.

Bill Dyer, famous as the heavy in "The Silent Call," has just completed an excellent part in the Jack Pickford story of "Garrison's Finish."

Les Manter is working in the William Desmond picture at the Universal studios.

Joe McDonough, a member of the A. D. A., has been engaged to assist Ward Lascelle in the direction of Trixie Friganza.

Joseph Swickard is working in two studios at the same time. In between working in the "Young Rajah," is also showing off his acting ability in the Jack Conway production at Universal.

Lewis Stone, Tully Marshall, Henry Walshall and Irene Rich are supporting Alta Allen in the Hampton Del Ruth production, now in the making at the Balboa studios.

Eva Thatcher is working with Director J. G. Blystone at the Fox studios.

King Baggott, after returning from San Francisco, where he attended the opening performance of "Human Hearts," has started a picture with Gladys Walton at Universal.

Tony Gaudio is responsible for the main photography work in the Norma Talmadge picture now in the making. He is said to be bringing home some very good effects.

Helen Ruppert has opened a beauty parlor, doing her work in her own home. She formerly devoted all her time to working at the different studios as an actress.

James Farley expects to start with William Duncan when the latter stars his next story.

Vernon Dent has deserted comedies to return to the drama, after a successful engagement with Larry Semon. He has accepted an offer to work in a Thos. H. Ince production.

Fred Hibbard is back from Big Bear, and has started shooting another of his fun-films at the United studios. In the cast is Jack Duffy and other well-known players.

Williard Louis is with Jackie Coogan, after finishing his part in the Douglas Fairbanks version of Robin Hood.

J. P. McCarthy has left for New York city on business.

EXPLOITING "BUFFALO BILL"

Universal startled down-town Chicago recently at the pre-release trade showing of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," by importing a twenty-six piece band of Indians from a near-by amusement park, and holding a band-concert in the street in front of the Universal branch office. The Indians, originally from the St. John's Mission, Komatke, Arizona, were in their colorful Indian costumes.

Story By

Robert McGowan has just written finis to his "Little Rascals" story, his seventh completed production.

James Ewens has a continuity to write for a well-known producer as soon as "Omar the Tentmaker" is finished. It is now on its home stretch as far as shooting is concerned.

Mrs. Ethel Gillette Whitehorn, daughter of James N. Gillette, has written the scenario which carries a working title of "The Beloved Unknown. Hobart Bosworth is the star.

Irving Luddy sold four stories last week to some producers who are putting on kid and animal pictures.

Fred Caldwell just received word from Mrs. A. B. Maescher that the Arrow corporation have bought up "Night Life in Hollywood," which story he wrote and directed. Now he is getting his next script in shape to start shooting.

Burke Jenkins is working with Frank Leon Smith on the continuity of the Ruth Roland serial to follow "The Riddle of the Range."

James M. Fidler, former city editor of the Hollywood News, has been added to the Paramount publicity department.

TITLE UNCHANGED

Universal has kept the title and refrained from making even the slightest story changes in "Broad Daylight," the all-star picture which Irving Cummings directed from a Harvey Gates plot.

CENTURY NOTES

Director Arvid Gillstrom, Century comedian Lee Moran, and scenario writer Enright, leave on an overland automobile trip to New York in the interests of Century Comedies.

Albert Williams, eight-year-old comedian, is finishing his part for Century Comedies the end of the week.

Jackie Morgan has completed his contract with Century Comedies, and is vacationing at San Francisco and Berkeley.

Brownie, Century's wonder dog, is working on his next comedy. The story is the work of Abe Stern, and will give Brownie some of the finest bits to perform.

Bert Sternbach, casting director for Century Comedies, is back at his desk, after a three months trip abroad as Abe Stern's companion.

"RUSHES"

PORTRAITS DONE IN GREASE PAINT UNIQUE ART MEDIUM OF DIRECTOR

Joseph De Grasse, the subject of the portrait on our cover, undoubtedly is best known as the director of some of Charles Ray's greatest screen successes—"A Tailor-Made Man," now at the California theater; "The Old Swimmin' Hole," "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and "Nineteen and Phyllis." He is again directing Ray in "The Girl I Loved," based upon James Whitcomb Riley's poem.

But he has other claims to attention, and his fate seems to be that of many versatile persons—to have some of his finest talents obscured by what appeals more directly to a commercial age. Mr. De Grasse is so good a painter, both of portraits and landscapes, that he might have shone in the artistic world with distinction if he had not turned his gifts first to the stage and then to the direction of motion pictures.

In one respect his artistic expression is entirely unique. He discovered the adaptability to newness of the ordinary grease-paint employed by actors in make-up, and a considerable gallery of work that he has done in recent years, as time permitted, contains many gems of this peculiar and striking art-form.

Mr. De Grasse claims to be the only man who ever experimented with grease-paints in this direction. It came about in an odd manner. Always interested, since his acting days, in the art of make-up, he first took to sketching out and then coloring the portions of characters to be portrayed. He carried the practice into his motion picture direction as an aid to the members of his casts.

The process is so at variance with other methods that it is interesting to professional and layman alike. It involves the use of one finger, a broken match, a pen-knife and a palette-knife. With these outie instruments he has developed his original technique to an astonishing skill.

While this has been going on Mr. De Grasse has been persuading the manufacturing of grease-paints to enlarge the color-scope of their product, and thus actors who are quite unaware of it are indebted to this director for an augmented supply of the commodities that are so necessary a factor in the achievement of illusion by acting before the camera.

The effects achieved by this medium are more impressionistic than realistic. The illusion of perspective is created by careful juxtaposition of color.

So if the characters in Mr. De Grasse's cinema productions are recalled as remarkable for fidelity to the parts portrayed, this talent that he often brings to their aid explains what may be something of a mystery to other directors.

CAMERA! IN SAN-FRANCISCO

H. F. Sheehan, of the Pacific Motion Picture Producers Service of San Francisco, has been appointed correspondent of the "Camera" in the Northern city and will cover all news and business of the periodical up there. He can be reached at 2349 Leavenworth street. His phone numbers are Sutter 6439, Prospect 1406 and Park 5511. All readers of this organ who go north should look up Mr. Sheehan. His organization is an agency for Southern producers who desire locations, also extra talent to work in to their productions that call for Bay City atmosphere and its vicinity.

PATENT WAR LOOMS

Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Jesse Lasky, Thomas Ince, Joseph Engel, Abraham Lehr and Vitagraph have aligned legal forces with Irving Martin and Ferdinand Earle in a drive upon holders of alleged "fictitious patents" covering various processes in motion picture production.

Among processes which producers declare are too old and too common properties on which to hold patent rights are the use of painted or other artificial portions of sets by multiple exposure, the use of paintings on glass to obtain similar effects by single exposure, the use of flexible masks as props, the use of back-lighting in underwater photography.

First legal action will occur October 11, when Norman Dawn's petition for an injunction against Earle's film edition of "The Rubaiyat" will be heard in federal court. Charles Rosher, Arthur Edeson and A. J. Physioc are said to be witnesses for Earle.

Should Dawn be victorious in his suit, lawyers say he could immediately restrain the showing of all pictures using a double-exposed background, which would affect "Robin Hood."

Robert Eddy is still knocking out the Toonerville Trolley comedies with Billy Mason and Una Trevalyn, at the Paul Gerson studios in Frisco. According to contracts at hand he will be busy for some time to come.

Joseph Bell, the Morosco theater juvenile, has completed one of the principal roles in "Love's Coming of Age," the Robertson-Cole feature starring Helen Jerome Eddy.

Detroit News has purchased the Daily Journal, which leaves the afternoon field covered by the News and Times, the Hearst paper. The Times Sunday edition started August 6.

Gerald Pring has been cast for a part in "June Madness," Viola Dana's new Metro starring picture now being produced under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

NEWS FOR PRESS AGENTS

Herman L. Dieck, dramatic editor of the Philadelphia Record, is on a vacation trip to the Pacific coast.

Florence Crabb, motion picture editor of the Milwaukee, (Wis.) News and Sunday Telegram, is going to visit the studios in Hollywood.

Henry M. Neely, dramatic editor of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, was injured in an accident aboard his house-boat. A cap on the engine was blown out by a back fire, striking Neely on the forehead.

MYSTERIOUS ASSAILANT WOUNDS O'BRIEN

Wandering dazedly over Cahuenga Pass after he had been wounded by a mysterious assailant, Eugene O'Brien was Thursday morning run down by an auto truck.

At the Hollywood Community hospital Dr. Sidney R. Broadbent found the Selznick star had been terribly beaten about the head with a blunt instrument—supposedly the butt of a revolver.

O'Brien's head must be completely shaven, and it will be a month at least before he can face the camera again. A trip he planned east is indefinitely postponed.

INGRAM GOES EAST

Rex Ingram, Metro's noted director, and his star-wife, Alice Terry, have departed for New York. Before leaving Hollywood, Mr. Ingram announced that his first production to be made in New York would be "Where the Pavement Ends," by John Russell. Ramon Novarro, who had the leading male role in "Black Orchids," and Edward Connelly, Metro's veteran character actor, will leave for the East in a short time to appear in this picture. Accompanying Mr. Ingram on his Eastern trip besides his wife, were Starrett Ford, production manager, and Willis Goldbeck, Mr. Ingram's personal publicity manager. John Seitz, who has photographed all of Mr. Ingram's successes, will join Mr. Ingram in New York in a few weeks.

GOES TO PUT 'EM OVER

David Bader, west coast director of publicity, has left for New York with Julius Stern, president of Century. After Stern has left for Europe, Bader will cover key cities, working hand in hand with Universal exchanges, to put over the fall releases.

SOME BUSY "B"

Eugenie Besserer has been kept quite busy the past few weeks burning up the roads between the Metro and Goldwyn studios. At Metro she is with Viola Dana, and at Goldwyn with Marshall Neilan. As soon as she finishes these two parts, she starts with Katherine McDonald. Miss Besserer says: "Variety is the spice of Life. Here I am a gay flapper widow, then a hard-boiled mother, and then a dear old spinster lady."

During the filming of one of the exciting scenes in Elmer Clifton's whaling drama, "Down to the Sea in Ships," a boat was being lowered from a whaler when, without the slightest warning a davit broke, and the boat plunged bow downward into the sea. As the half-filled craft brought its sputtering occupants to the surface, Raymond shouted to Mr. Clifton: "You sure didn't have to direct Bill Cavanaugh to bail the boat that time!"

- 4--An Establishment

Recently a well-known advertising trade journal publishing an article dealing with the success of some of the large business institutions of the country and in every case the investigation revealed that the biggest factor in the definite establishment of these companies was GOOD ADVERTISING AND ADVERTISING AND "KEEPING EVER-LASTINGLY AT IT." They knew the value of the right type of publicity, and that the greatest profit emanated from this advertising when it was continually before the public.

That applies to the movies, AND TO YOU! If you ever expect to establish yourself as a great actor, actress, director or producer, that is, if you are going to ESTABLISH yourself, ADVERTISE! RIGHT NOW! Work won't come to you, you've got to go after work. There is one way to get it and always be sure of more.

What Say, Mr. Hays?

WHAT can Will Hays do for independent producers?

What will he do for the independents?

The question is not brought up by CAMERA! The impression seems prevalent that Hays can help the independents. The independents themselves apparently think so. Hays has made no satisfactory statement on the matter. He should do so at once.

In the first place, let's not belittle Hays.

He is important to all of the industry—in some ways. To the public, to the lawmakers, he is a figurehead. He represents to them a vast power of 20,000 screens. He demonstrates to them the fact that big rival film concerns are working together in many matters.

But let's not overestimate Hays.

As director general of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Hays is paid by such companies as Lasky, Goldwyn, Universal, Metro and Vitagraph.

As the employe of these big concerns, will Will Hays do anything for the independent producers?

* * *

IN the independently produced motion picture lies the future of the cinema as an art.

Real art must be free, that's why.

Some of the finest works of the screen have been made at the big, efficient, factory-like studios. "Blood and Sand," "Monte Cristo," "Foolish Wives," "The Conquering Power," "The Old Nest," roll from the tongue with alacrity.

But—the fact that those were great works simply reinforces the statement: Real art must be free.

The men who produce real classics for the big corporations are able to do so because they are given free hand, and because every facility for fine production is laid at their disposal.

No studio executives dictating orders from a swivel chair ever made a fine picture—and never will. There must be personality, untrammelled, behind any work of art.

And in independent productions such personalities have their opportunity to develop. When they do develop the big company welcomes them. But it's usually a long, hard grind before the man who starts at the bottom or is engaged as "just another director" in a big company gets the big story to work with and carte blanche to turn out something worth while.

The independent is a big factor in this big game. He mustn't be overlooked. He cannot be overlooked.

* * *

ONE independent producer wrote to Hays in New York asking what he intended to do for the freelancers. The friendly, stereotyped reply was construed to mean Hays would aid the independent.

Another freelance producer stood up at the directors-screen writers-wampas luncheon to Hays and put a similar question. It was ruled out of order and Hays not permitted to answer.

Last week the concern that controls the Danish-made version of "Hamlet" declared it had been unable to place it in any Broadway (N. Y.) theater, and suggested the formation of a non-profit distribution system to serve theaters and producers alike.

A. M. Becker, secretary of the company, in a letter to the New York Times, made the following statement:

"If Mr. Hays is sincere in regard to his repeated public announcements that he wants to bring the motion picture industry to a higher plane than it now occupies, he will find a good base to work from in the fact that so extraordinary a work as the Asta Nielson's 'Hamlet' is denied a showing on Broadway in theaters controlled by members of his organization, while the veriest rot finds ready access to those theaters."

(In reply the manager of the Rialto and Rivoli offered to explain his viewpoint. The manager of the Strand said that the fact 'Hamlet' had first been shown at a smaller house automatically killed it for his house, which plays first runs only.)

* * *

IT may not be Hays' place to do anything of particular value for the independent. The men who pay his salary might resent it.

But it would be well to have an understanding with the independents. A frank statement of just what he can own and cannot do would well be forthcoming right now, that there be no false hopes.

Then if Hays is not in position to work for the independents, they can form their own cooperative body. But it's unfair to leave the independents in the dark.

Film Capital Production Notes

LAURETTE TAYLOR HERE FOR DEBUT IN "PEG O' MY HEART"

Laurette Taylor and J. Hartley Manners, star and author of "Peg O' My Heart," and also husband and wife, have arrived in Los Angeles, the city of their first great triumph, to prepare for the filming of this famous stage success, which is to be produced by Metro.

Miss Taylor is to assume the title role in the Metro screen version of "Peg O' My Heart," the same part that has made her internationally famous on the speaking stage. Actual production is to start at the Metro studios in about a week under the direction of King Vidor.

Accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Manners on the trip from New York to Los Angeles was another member of the original "Peg O' My Heart" company, who also first attained fame in the western metropolis. He is "Mike," the tiny dog that has appeared in more than 1000 performances of the play on the stage. He also will appear in the picturization of the famous play.

Rowland V. Lee's next production for Fox will be "A Circus Story," starring Shirley Mason and written by Robert N. Lee, former newspaperman and brother to the director.

Ward Lascelle, head of Ward Lascelle Productions, will release the "Tish" feature, "Mind Over Motor," directed by him and starring Trixie Friganza, through the Hodgkinson organization. It is understood that negotiations are under way for the filming and the release of the remaining stories of the Mary Roberts Rinehart "Tish" series.

Carter De Haven started another picture, "Keep 'Em Home," a two-reel comedy. Lee Garmes is photographing the De Havens.

The Harry Rapf production for Warner Brothers "Little Heroes of the Street," which was directed by William Beaudine, with Wesley Barry as the star, has been finished. Rapf is preparing to start cutting and titling it.

Maurice Tourneur has written finis to "The Christian," for Goldwyn.

Fred Becker is starting a series of two-reel fairy tales said to be his own original ideas. He will have Hal Mohr as cameraman. They intend to work at the Hollywood studios.

Cecil Holland soon will resume production of his dramatic novelties. The first, "The Mind of Man," had a successful run at Grauman's. Each production will reveal Holland's master makeups. Raymond Cannon will direct and Fanchon Royer, former editor of Camera! will prepare the stories. Ernest Miller is cameraman.

E. V. Greville and W. R. Coe, president and vice-president of Gold Star Productions, have been selecting the cast for their forthcoming picture, "Wings of the Air," starring Bob Reeves, who has just recently finished a series of two-reel westerns under the Rogell-Halperin banner. The cast will include Curley Dresden, and it is rumored that Mrs. William Desmond (Mary McIvor) will play the leading feminine role.

Mr. Brunton, of the Brunton studio, is now in Miami, Florida where he has opened a studio. His first feature which is already under way is called "The Filligreed Flask." Marguerite Courtot portrays the chief "boot-legger."

Monty Banks the comedy star, has just completed a two-year study of drama. He will make no more slap-stick comedies.

He bats off scripts for Selznick, and his name is Eddie Montagne, not Montague.

Cecil B. DeMille, back from a cruise among Southern California islands, is preparing his next picture.

AT FINE ARTS

Doubleday Productions, starring Lester Cuneo, returned from a week's location trip at Keen's Camp this week and is now filming interiors for "Skyfire" at the Fine Arts studios. Henry McCarty wrote the story and is directing.

A preview of Finis Fox's latest production, "The Bishop of the Ozarks," was given at the Fine Arts studios this week before a gathering of the producer's personal friends. The picture will soon be ready for distribution.

Nat Deverich, president of Fine Arts made a hurried trip to San Francisco this week, having received word from film producers there that they intend to make their production quarters in Los Angeles. As a result of the trip Mr. Deverich announced that two northern film units will start work at Fine Arts within the next few days.

Edward Sloman who recently completed the filming of Frank R. Adams' popular story, "Blind Justice," announced this week that his next picture will be a story that has been running in serial form through one of the newspaper syndicates. The title and details of the story will be announced shortly.

W. P. S. EARLE'S TECHNICIAN PREPARES

Paul Dodge, technical director for William P. S. Earle, arrived in Hollywood this week to prepare for Earle's oriental drama. Dodge was formerly technical director for the Selznick studios at Leona, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. S. Earle have settled at Franklin avenue, where the director has also established his experimental technical studio.

Now in the eighth week of production on his latest Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, "The Dangerous Age," John M. Stahl expects to finish the picture within a week or ten days. Only a few outdoor sequences remain to be shot. "The Dangerous Age" has an all-star cast headed by Lewis Stone, Edith Roberts, Ruth Clifford, Cleo Madison, James Morrison, Myrtle Stedman and Helene Lynch.

Halperin Productions are now preparing its next feature to follow "What Do We Live For?" "Tea—With a Kick," is the title of the new picture.

William Fox may establish a producing unit in England.

Ernest Shipman is in Newfoundland, where he plans to produce a film of Viking days.

Milford W. Howard, author-producer-actor, has been compelled to take action against an infringement of his copyright of "Peggy Ware," his next southern drama to be filmed. A New York firm is manufacturing "Peggy Ware" dresses.

Kathran Cuddy, author of "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," which is to be the next Mission Film production, arrived here from San Francisco this week. Production of the story will begin very soon. The entire cast will be made up of children who have been studying with Mrs. Cuddy for some time. The title role will be played by Dorothy Martin, well-known San Francisco child-actress, who made her screen debut in "Science—or God?"

LATIN FILMS PLANNED

Pictures produced especially for the Latin-American market is a Hollywood possibility according to Leandro Garza Leal, Mexican consul to Los Angeles.

Enrique Tovar Avalos, actor and former professor of dramatic expression in the National University, Mexico, would form a company of Latin players, furnish scenarios acceptable to southern American countries, but produce and distribute through a United States concern.

Such pictures would offset alleged insults to Mexico and South American countries by depiction of Latin characters as villains.

In January officials of a Compania Nacional Cinematographia Mexicana expected to start productions by June. No more has been heard of the project. This company held an option on the string of theaters owned by the Mexican government, and planned to produce for these theaters.

Current Reviews

"The Tailor Made Man"

IT has been a long time since we've had Charley Ray so near his best. As John Paul Bart, though, in his initial United Artists production, he shows just how much he merits classification under the column of the great ones. Charley is versatile—you can't get away from that. But we've seen him so much as the bashful, apparently helpless country boy that it might seem that to have him any other way would be a shock. It isn't. True, he has not left the old mannerisms entirely behind,—there are spots in "A Tailor-Made Man" that still smack of the country boy—but you can hardly blame him for that.

Ray's supporting cast is good. Frank Butler as Theodore Jellicot, the fellow who unwittingly furnished John Paul Bart with his first dress suit, and Victor Potel as Peter, John Paul's plodding companion in the tailor shop, are perhaps the best. Butler especially makes a good job of a comedy role.

Douglas Gerard's Dr. Sonntag is another rather difficult bit excellently handled.

Playing opposite Ray is Ethel Grandin as Tanya Huber, daughter of the tailor; engaged to the bolshevistic Dr. Sonntag; but really John Paul's sweetheart. She is good.

Jacqueline Logan, as the vampish daughter of the capitalist, runs Miss Grandin a close second. It really wouldn't have been bad at all if John Paul had succumbed to her wiles—most of the audience did.

Joseph De Grasse handled the direction well, and the camera work on the whole is good. Taken all in all, "A Tailor-Made Man" is well above the average.

Other well played bits are by Kate Lester as Mrs. Stanlaw; Nellie Peck Saunders as Mrs. Dupuy; Thomas Ricketts, Thomas Jefferson, William Park, Frederick Thompson, and Michael Dark.

K. T.

Well, the trained scenarist ought to be clever in writing home for money.

Do not twist your plot too much. Think of all the trouble it gives the down-trodden director to untwist it into a familiar story again.

"Life's Greatest Question"

LIFE'S GREATEST QUESTION," at the Hillstreet, still remains unanswered insofar as the audience, for whom the picture was intended, concerned. Reformation, the theme of the play, is carried through the plot by Louise Lovely, who died too soon to gain sympathy or accomplish said reformation. Roy Stewart, Dorothy Valegra, Eugene Buff give fair performances while Harry Van Meter sustains the entire action by his virility and sincere portrayals. Too much night stuff shot in the day time keeps the audience guessing. Harry Revier directed the production, which, as a whole, was quite acceptable to the public.

R. W.

We are encouraged. Two readers have written in to state that we are all wrong.

"If You Believe It It's So"

WHEN Paramount made "While Susan Sleeps," they made a production that was entertaining and commendable as well as a good box office bet. So they did it all over again with another cast and a little camouflage. Perley Poore Sheehan is the author of "If You Believe It It's so," and Waldemar Young prepared it for the screen. The story is well told under the direction of Tom Forman, and it entertains. But it is the same one of the crook who goes to a small town where everyone believes in him until he begins to believe in himself, thereby reforming.

Gertrude Messinger, the baby ingenue, so ably supporting little Johnny Jones of Johnny Jones Comedies. The boys' clothes which she was forced to don in their latest comedy titled "Broadcasting," released thru Pathe Exchanges.

Thomas Meighan plays a crook who would steal from a blind man's cup, and looks with disapproval upon an honest man taking a drink. His work is pleasing and the Meighan personality covers up a multitude of illogical situations.

Theodore Roberts proves that he can get a laugh without his comedy cigar. This role is unique for Roberts, but he chases old man gloom away which saves the day.

Pauline Starke has little acting to do. Her piqancy brightens up the love interest corners of the story.

Joseph Dowling, Charles Ogle, Laura Ansen, Charles French, Thomas Kennedy and Ed. Brady all contribute to the action, thus making the entertainment value greater.

Photography is good.

EDITOR: Are colored pictures popular?
TESSIE.

Well, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" went over fairly well.

"Rich Men's Wives"

AN overcrowded cast, an old story told in an ordinary way and mediocre direction make "Rich Men's Wives" what it never should have been, uninteresting to say the least.

The authors, Frank Dazey and Christine Johnson might have known what they were driving at, but it was unkind of them to leave us in the dark as to what the story was all about.

House Peters, again oversure of himself, fails to convince us of his sincerity in a role intended to be highly dramatic. Once we admitted Peters to be a great actor. Now he is entirely satisfied with himself, thus dethroning him in our eyes.

Claire Windsor had the opportunity of a lifetime to show her acting ability. It proved no inducement for her to rise to the occasion, however, and her emoting was misery to behold.

Richard Headrick stole the picture from the stars that cluttered the cast. Perhaps his secret of success was doing as he was told.

Gaston Glass and Rosemary Theby played their usual heavy roles in their usual way.

Charles Clary should have had three more scenes. He could have handled six, but what chance has a regular actor in a cast so prominent.

Myrtle Stedman, Mildred June, William Austin, Martha Mattox and Carol Halloway were wedged into the story somehow. All are artists with parts unworthy of their efforts.

R. W.

The price of silence—censorship!

If at first you don't succeed, write hokum.

"The Shiek of Araby"

ONE does not have to await resurrection day to see the dead come back. Shelf pictures and reissues have shown us how it will be.

It is hardly fair to judge this "Sheik of Araby" along with the recently made films, but when the producers changed the original title "The Man Who Turned White" to a so-called magnetic or modern one, he subjected his production to comparison with down to date subjects.

The story is no different than any sheik or Arabian one, except that it was made three years ago before the turbaned ones were out their welcome on the screen.

H. B. Warner, the solemn faced person, was a good actor even three years ago. And Barbara Caselton, though at the disadvantage of wearing ancient styles, needed only her beauty and personality to put over her role.

But, as a whole, the picture is quite impossible.

R. W.

Comedy, thy name is "delight," but thy scenario check is sick unto death.

Where to Find People You Know

Jack McCready is working for Universal under Tod Browning, who is directing Priscilla Dean.

Clara Horton is working in the Trixie Friganza story at the Big U under Director Ward Lascelle in "Mind Over Motor," with Joe McDonough the assistant.

Chas. Huber worked with Tom Forman, who has Jimmy Dugan as his assistant.

Evelyn Selbie has moved her wardrobe and makeup to the Louis B. Mayer studios.

E. B. Johnson and L. V. Huff are appearing in some scenes under King Baggott's guidance with Gladys Walton as the star.

Jimmy Adams is being directed by Fred Hibbard. This is the commencement of a new series that Jack White is sponsor for at the United studios. Fred Corby is the photographer.

Eddie Gribbon has been cast in the Johnny Walker feature which has a working title of "Capt. Fly-by-Night" and will be made at the R-C studios for that corporation.

Cullen Landis is to be featured by Sherwood Macdonald productions in a feature soon to be started at the R-C studios.

Frank Keenan has returned to the directorial fold of Reginald Barker in "Hearts Aflame." He made his screen debut and scored his first film success under Mr. Barker's direction about seven years ago.

Hunt Stromberg is busy lining up things for the next Bull Montana comedy he is to make at Metro. Who will aid him in direction isn't settled.

Chuck Reisner no more than finished with Charles Chaplin, when the latter completed his picture, than he was engaged to direct a comedy at Universal.

Marie Prevost, Philo McCullough, Jack Mulhall and others equally well known, are sharing honors with Wesley Barry in a Rapf feature directed by William Beaudine. The company worked at the Auditorium and California theatres, taking exterior scenes and back alley shots. Maurice Rapf, son of Harry Rapf, the producer, is one of the kidlets that make up the tough gang in the story. James Hogan is aiding Director Beaudine.

Abe Scholtz will be the cinematographer for "Mind Over Motor," the next Ward Lascelle production.

Wilson Hummel is playing the leading character role in a J. K. McDonald production titled "Listening In."

June Elvidge has been selected for an important role in the S-L (Sawyer-Lubin) production of "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Miss Elvidge is a leading actress on both the stage and screen. She has recently returned to Hollywood after a successful vaudeville tour.

Fritzi Brunette is doing a part in the Buck Jones western story at Fox.

Chas. Dudley is working with Chester Bennett in "Thelma."

Edward Burns, who supplied the male interest in Constance Talmadge's "East is West," is now playing opposite Gladys Walton at Universal City.

Zip Monberg has signed to play opposite Syd Smith in the Hallroom Boys comedies.

Bert Roach and Neeley Edwards are a couple of Weary Willies in a series of comedies that William Watson is directing at Universal.

Donald House has been acting in the Century comedies.

Jack Lawton is connected with the location department at the Universal.

Vic Milner is with the Gladys Walton-King Baggott company as cinematographer.

Jack Mulhall is starring in Jack London's "The Fish Patrol," at Universal. Louise Lorraine is playing opposite him with Edith Cull directing. He will be working for eight or ten weeks.

Hallam Cooley has been engaged by Myron Selznick for one of the leading roles in support of Conway Tearle and Elaine Hammerstein in the Selznick special production "One Week of Love," which director George Archainbaud is now making at the United studios.

Harry De More is working with J. P. McGowan at Universal. The latter is directing William Desmond. Sandy McGregor is doing likewise.

Marie Janess is working for Eddie Kull at the Universal.

Dorothy Vernon has been cast to play in the Syd Smith-George Monberg-Hallroom Boys comedy that Noel Smith is directing. Charles Lamont is the assistant and Harry Cohn is sponsoring the outfit.

Charles Lemoyne, who is the villain that always fights Harry Carey, says he can't smoke cigarettes and fight, so he has quit the cigarettes and he fights better. Anyway he realized that he didn't need them. Its mind over matter, don't you know?

Doc Bytell has been doing servants so much that the kids in the neighborhood see him coming down the street and shout "Home James."

Harry Revere has just finished a feature production in the Golden Gate City, and expects to start another one soon.

Patricia Palmer begins work with the Ranger Productions at the Long Beach studios on completion of her present Lasky engagement. She will not be associated with the Bob Horner productions as stated in a former issue of Camera!

Jean Hersholt, who has just finished the role of the meanest kind of a villain in support of Mary Pickford in her new "Tess of the Storm Country," has been added to the cast of Marshall Neilan's "The Stranger's Banquet," now being filmed at the Goldwyn studios.

Gaston Glass will enact the hero's role in Rupert Hughes next Goldwyn production, "Souls For Sale." Mr. Glass only recently finished an engagement with Mr. Hughes, playing a feature part opposite Helene Chadwick in "Gimme."

Gloria Hope was the last member of Mary Pickford's supporting cast to finish in that star's new "Tess of the Storm Country." She plans a month's vacation before resuming her studio work.

Jim Alamo is now in his sixth serial as heavy in a story that J. P. McGowan is directing. Alamo has been three years with Universal in a like capacity.

John Peterson is working with Neal Hart at the Big U.

Arvid E. Gillstrom is to make a two-reeler with Lee Moran. He will then go to New York with his assistant, Brick Enright.

Phil Goldstone has engaged Al Knight to direct Franklyn Farnum in another five-reel western story.

Al St. John is back at work once more. He has started another picture at Fox studio, and his opening shots were taken at Mixville.

Lincoln Plummer is once more back at Christie's. This time he is working for the chief director, Al E. Christie, in a story in which Dorothy De Vore is being starred.

George Fitzmaurice is directing Betty Compson at Lasky's in "Kick In" with Frank B. O'Connor aiding him.

Jimmy Adams has been signed to work with Syd Smith in the Hall Room boys. Al Santell has been engaged to alternate with Noel Smith in the direction of the boys.

J. Farrell McDonald, George Perioliat, Sam Appell and others left for San Francisco to join the Phil Rosen company.

Kenneth Harlan and Marie Prevost will work in the next feature that will be made at the Warner Bros. studios upon completion of "Hero's of the Street."

W. K. Howard is to direct Johnny Walker in "Capt. Fly by Night," a story that is said to be along the lines of "The Mark of Zorro."

George Raehm is to play a heavy in the Francis Ford feature that the latter started making recently at his studio.

Pickups By The Staff

Mr. George C. Dromgold, formerly connected with the Marshal Neilan Productions, has recently been added to the capable staff of the J. K. McDonald Productions, now engaged in producing the Johnny Jones Kid Comedies, which are attracting such exceptional press comment.

Mr. McDonald is highly enthused over this latest affiliation and states that he will give Dromgold every latitude for the expression of his individuality in assisting Mason N. Litson, the director who is handling the reins for his juvenile cast at the Hollywood studios.

The strike situation has at least detained one member of the film colony from departing eastward. This is Edward Sloman who, having completed the titling of his latest picture, "Blind Justice," is waiting for train schedules to return to normalcy before making a trip to New York to arrange for the picture's distribution.

Carmel Myers is said to have the most important role of her screen career in Edward Sloman's production, "Blind Justice." Although the cast is composed of eight principal artists Miss Myers is the only female player.

Helene Chadwick has rounded out her third eventful year under the Goldwyn banner by playing the feature role in Rupert Hughes' latest cinema study of American life, "Gimme," which is scheduled for early fall release. Miss Chadwick's contract with Goldwyn has two more years to run and it is understood that organization has some big plans for her during this remaining period.

Reginald Barker recently blew up a big dam at the Kootnay Lake outlet in British Columbia, releasing a hundred thousand logs to go racing down the river a scene for "Hearts Aflame." Natives from all about the section travelled as far as twenty miles to be present.

According to advices from the Louis B. Mayer offices, an announcement of great interest to the trade and public will follow Fred Niblo's present journey to New York. It is known that the object of his visit is to complete negotiations involving a fortune for the screen rights to a certain stage success. Charles R. Condon, director of publicity for Louis B. Mayer, accompanied Mr. Niblo on the trip East.

Viola Dana used 250 people in a church set the other day in a picture now in the making at the Metro studios.

Joe Brandt is expected to come to Los Angeles within the next ten days with some new plans for the Federated Corporation of America and the C. B. C. Corporation.

Little Napoleon is appearing in Long Beach, where he is amusing the visitors with his funny antics, while his owner, Andre Anderson, is negotiating with different studios about using his star-monkey actor for the theatre.

Membership in the Writers' club is limited to 350 members. This may keep some of Fred Palmer's proteges out.

Lloyd Hughes, leading man, was in a serious automobile accident last Sunday afternoon near Santa Barbara, Calif. There were two others beside himself in the car in which he was riding and four in a machine which collided with his and he was the only one out of the whole seven who escaped without a single scratch. It was the third automobile smash-up in which he had figured during the present year.

Ed Yeager, who handles the destinies of the Reliable Photoplayers association, has some plans for the improvement of his organization and expects to put them in effect at the next open house meeting, and he is lining up a good evening's entertainment to help things along.

Mary Pickford had a lot of them stretching their necks out at Universal City, when it became known that she was to work on the New York street. Alibis were coming thick and fast in the different departments why different people wanted to leave their offices, which just proves that in the heart of the industry they never tire of seeing a real star in real life.

Forrest Robinson, who slayed Daddy Skinner in Mary Pickford's new "Tess of the Storm Country," is among those marooned by the railroad strike. Immediately upon completing his work with Miss Pickford he had hastened to New York City to escort his wife and some household effects to Hollywood. He got started on the westward return trip just in time to get tied up in the first serious interruption of traffic. He was obliged to return to New York and await the arrival of better travelling conditions.

Mericles of the motion-picture industry turned out recently at a farewell dinner given by the Screen Writers' Guild to Tom Geraghty, to speed him on his way to New York, where he is to take charge of the Famous Players-Lasky Long Island studio. The Geraghty dinner christened the club's new dining-room and is declared to have been one of the most successful functions ever given by the writers.

"If a census of Hollywood had been taken while the dinner was in progress," said Frank Woods, president of the guild, "I'm afraid the census-taker would have set the movie capital down as a deserted village, for a large percentage of the population was saying good-by to Geraghty."

Accompanying Geraghty to New York is E. Lloyd Sheldon, who will be his assistant at the Long Island studio.

ANOTHER MOVIE DISASTER

A dove which was being used in a scene from "One Week of Love," ran amuck in the United studios this week and savagely attacked Elaine Hammerstein. Elaine was so terrified by the utter wildness of the bird that she was unable to resume work for quite some time.

The Selznick company has journeyed to Mentone to film some railroad thrills for "One Week of Love." A special set has been erected close to the tracks and the company is using an engine and several cars to produce some exciting scenes.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Moore have gone to Delmonte for a few days rest and have consequently taken along golf clubs, tennis rackets, and fishing poles to make sure they get it.

May Allison has completed a picture in Porto Rico, and is back in New York.

Julian Johnson is in town with the new Mrs. Johnson.

Doc Cook is going to explore Portland with J. J. Flemming. The pair just returned from Bisbee, Ariz., where they made up the unit that Harry Moody directed. In the Oregon city they intend to make some five-reel big woods stories.

Irving Asher, while playing a chauffeur, got a real chance to serve in real life. One of the boys at the studio was injured falling from a scaffold and Irving rushed him to the emergency hospital.

Mary Pickford has won two more converts to Hollywood. David Torrence and Forrest Robinson were both summoned from New York to play prominent parts in the famous Mary's new "Tess of the Storm Country," and the upshot of their engagements was that both decided to become permanent residents in the celebrated film capitol.

Dr. Guy Bogart, publicity director and secretary of the Cosmopolitan, found his youthful career as a pastor quite convenient when he attended the wedding of his friend, F. C. Luck, editorial and research authority of the Keystone company, and Miss Alma Hyam. The officiating minister was unavoidably detained at the last moment and Dr. Bogart was pressed into service to perform the ceremony.

Harold Lloyd, in "Grandma's Boy," was put over in great style last week by the Golden Gate Post 40 of the American Legion. The latter organization took possession of the Strand Theatre and showed their own picture of "Buddy" on the same program. The Lloyd laugh ran the third week and no sign of a let-up in attendance which is a fair example of how San Franciscans took to the pride of the Southland.

Huntley and Palmer, Ltd., the well-known biscuit manufacturers of Reading, England, have just introduced a Jackie Coogan biscuit, which shows the head of the young film star. It has an enormous sale among the British youngsters.

Ted Edlin, who is appearing in Pilgrimage Play, also is a filmland worker. When he met me the other day, the first question he asked was "Have you seen the Pilgrimage Play?" and I am going to ask my readers the same question. I have and advise you not to miss seeing that wonder of the ages. It held me every second and set my mind in but one channel and that was THE RIGHT ONE. Don't miss it.

James Young is the greatest booster that Symphony Orchestra has in Hollywood. While working Sunday he called all of his people together and told them of the marvelous concerts and promised to quit work by 5 p. m. so everyone could attend.

Leo McCarey gave the New York lodge of the Assistant Directors association the double O at Keene's chop house, where the boys were holding a banquet. He delivered a message of welcome from the Hollywood A. A. A. boys. Charles Stallings, also a member of the association, met the boys later and did his part of telling them about how we run things out here.

Jackie Coogan plays indoor baseball when he isn't working, which means that when he grows up he will catch a few high ones and enjoy the sport.

Newton House is working with Leo Maloney. He seems to have struck his stride in the westerns.

Reaves (Breezy) Eason and his company of players which includes his star, Hoot Gibson, left last Saturday for Sacramento, where they will ride the brake beams and everything that goes to make up a western and railroad story.

Maurice Graham, who took sick suddenly while working on "The Young Rajah," as assistant to Director Phil Rosen, is once more feeling like himself. During his absence Cullen (Hessie) Tate has been batting a million while his boss, Cecil B. DeMille, was getting his next story ready.

Grace Marvin, who is to the Southland what Vera Gordon is to the East, has all kinds of trouble telling some of our natives that she didn't do the mother in "Humoresque."

Tiny Sanford, a bigger man than his name implies, was made up the other day for a character that could be the devil or anything that you are a mind to call it, and it was for a Joe Rock comedy.

James Gibbs, they tell me, is a crooked butler. No, not in real life, but in the King Baggott picture.

H. B. Suttie says that working with Douglas Fairbanks is like getting a smell of some sweet perfume when one has just come out of a dirty alley way.

Shorty Holt is clipping the bad takes and cutting the good ones of "Bitter Sweets," a Lon Chaney special that was made by the Universal.

Fat Karr slipped over to the United studios, made his bow in "Omar, the Tent-maker," salamed out, and was back working with Al. St. John the following day.

Bob Roberts is cutting "Another Man's Shoes," which leads one to the eternal question. Since when has Mr. Roberts become a shoemaker?

Jack White, Harry Edwards and Lige Conley sat around in Mr. White's private office last Sunday with their best finger of their right hands pointed to their temples and getting over that they were thinking deeply. The Three Wise Men were thinking seriously of how to make the next story of Lige Conley so funny that Father Time will laugh himself sick.

Fred Datig is one of the best posted men in filmland; anything that you want to know about actors or actresses, just ask Fred, he is a walking encyclopedia. Caught him and Jack Conway exchanging opinions the other day, and as Jack started to talk about the ability of some well known artists if they were capable of playing a certain part, Fred handed out such first-class information that a mere child could have grasped the value of his knowledge.

Patricia Magill is making the rounds of the studios and getting her share of work in them, which means that Patricia is very happy and she wishes everyone the same success.

Mack Sennett, according to the "movie rialto" gossip, is to have a lineup of companies making two-reelers in his fun film factory at Edendale.

Thomas H. Ince, it is claimed, will come back bigger and greater than ever in his history as a producer. From the way things are moving along at Culver City, it wouldn't be surprising in the least if it matured.

Cecil B. DeMille is expected to be whispering sweet instructions to his artists on how to act in the scenes on his new story, about the first of next month.

Bobby Vernon is once more being directed by Al E. Christie. Not that Robert has been away, but Al has been paying attention to some of his other stars and letting Vernon handle himself aided by a director. You know the old story of the colored chap who was encouraged along about doing good work until one day they found him dead from overwork. Well, put this pair together and you'll find them following almost in the footsteps of that individual, for they dearly love one another and love to labor together.

C. T. Lee says it's a bad summer for beards, meaning that the pictures of today are pointing towards the clean faced guy who are a bunch of heart breakers. Hope they soon change C. T.

Pete Hungate has been knocking a home run every day at Lasky's while L. M. Goodstead has been taking a vacation. To get a look at Pete at the of a perfect day, reminds one of the man who had worried all night about his last million fading away and no sight of another heading his way.

Vernon Walker came through with this one: "If I don't get a job real soon I am going out to the tracks and go to work." "What tracks, the race tracks, Vern?" asked a bystander. "P. E. tracks," retorted Vernon.

John Thompson is filming the antics of Gloria Joy at the R-C studios and says that the actress is the most charming one he has worked with for some time. "Thatta Boy." John, always stick to the ship until the last man goes down and then swim out for safety.

Ivar McFadden seems to think that San Francisco is bidding him to come North and make some better pictures for the better class of theaters.

Florence Gilbert is enjoying her engagement with Jack Hoxie, the cowboy star who is making a series of five-reel westerns that make your hair stand up and drop down, while he rides 'em cowboy over the plains, and makes all the bad men of the vicinity behave and you know the rest.

Earl Rodney is playing the owner of a delicatessen store in the Bobby Vernon picture at Christie studios. Hot dog! let's go, Earl, and eat a mess of weenies and sour kraute and everything that goes to make a old-fashioned feed (minus the beverage that Mr. Volstead took out of our lives).

Don Maines made a good looking Spanish type for Larry Semon at the Vitagraph.

Chasin' th' Devil

(Special Correspondence)

BLUEMONA, Aug. 18.—The new censorship board of Bluemona finally has met and revued a pitcher, after being delayed somewhat by several things.

First Elder Indigo had to go to the reform school to visit his son who is not an employe there. Sister Gloom was held at home nursing her husband who was shot at a hencoop on a dark night, when he lost his way and was mistook for a thief by Constable Brown who had missed chickens regular. He ain't missed any since the accident.

Next Tobias Twink had to go to the county seat on bussnes with the grand jury where they say he made a grand speech explaining his system of having a bank account without doing a lick of work for the last seven years.

But all got back to join the rest of the board at the Bluemona Purity Theater last night, to examine the pitcher, "Wives For Husbands Onely," perduced by one of them edacashunal companies.

Your correspondent was allowed to be among those presently and took things down as the proceedings proceeded.

The place went dark and the pitcher begun. Sister Gloom was onely silent a little wile when she says to the woman side of her, "Don't you think that Bluebird case is the most intrusting one you ever read? The man I mean which slaughtered all them wives. chokin' some and poisonin' others. I can't wait until I get the next Sunday suppelment so as to read about them he hacked to pieces—" But jest then the buzzer rang and the pitcher stopt wile one of the board ordered the projectkor man to chop out the scene where the vichus cat chased the poor, helpless rat all over the house. The board decided that it was throwin' cruelty right into the faces of people.

The pitcher and Sister Sarah begun simultaneous. She saye as how it was comforting to know that our town was so pure wile them big cities she was reading about was chuck full of imorality. She recited sevrul shocking examples and adviced us all to take warning and buy the magazene su they could read the articles also. The board all said they would borrar her magazenes. Then someone stopt the pitcher because a scene showed a strange man in a woman's house wile her husband was absent, which must be cut out, the scene we mean. The board decided that although the man got in there by mistake and went right out again before the husband came back, it was suggestiff and might set the pure-minded to thinking.

The pitcher hardly got under way before it was stopt again because a lady showed all of her stocking except the cotton top. When this was sucessfully cut out, Elder Donnt told us about the missingary we had sent to save the heathings in a furon island.

"Why," said the elder, "them poor heath-ing women is so destoot that they can't buy clothes. The missingary inclosed pitchers showing the poor things nude nakd. My boys was much intrustd in 'em. I saw Tom looking at the back of the best one and ast him why. He said he thout mebbe the address was on the back. I told him it was in the South Sea Islands that our missiniary was doing such grand work. We sorter think Tom has a leanin' to be a missingary."

B z z z ! The buzzer again. Sister Gloom, that was interusted in the Bluebird man rung it this time. She was horrerfied at a nurse putting a powder in a rich patient's coffee. The title said it was a sleeping powder but Sister Gloom shook her head firmlike and said it suggested prussick acid or something like that, and the scene would have to go as people looking at it might be prone to evil mindednes.

So they kept on cutting this and that, the sherif that had a gun in his hand when he chased the badman, a little tot being kissed by a friend of the fambly, and a bottel of perfume that lookd like somthing worse, ecetra ecetra.

While Elder Gloom was telling us about a inspiring sermon he had heard on the sub-jeck, "Hell and Who Go There, or, Vivid Pages From the Spicy Era," the pitcher ended.

"What will I do with the pitcher?" says the projectkor man. "What is left don't make sense."

"Show it at the institoot for the foolish," retorts Elder Indigo with a loud laff in wich we all joined.

"Then I'll keep it right here in Bluemona," says the man, but everyone is surging out by this time.

Bitter Sweet

EVERYONE is doing it. If there is a magazine published in the land which has not explained carefully the ailment of the movie, it is not included in our free list of publications.

Most of the solutions get back to the real starting point and, with great logic, say that loss of patronage is because of mediocre pictures.

It is as simple as it is true.

Even the business-like manufacturers are admitting that "the story is the thing," but few of these practice what they preach, and poor pictures continue to emanate from high places.

Another leading journal has treated the subject again putting the blame on the hackneyed theme, the empty plot and maw-kish sentiment.

This special writer wants "good, plausible and entertaining stories." New writers must be found who will give us novelty; fresh flavoring.

It goes right back home to the fact that the scenarist who succeeds in grinding out a novelty, a departure from the beaten track, is liable to be left standing upon one foot until the evening chill sets in.

The very manufacturer who envies the huge earnings of the unusual feature, is the fellow who admits that the next novelty story is a good one, but fears to gamble with new departures.

Then another "Miracle Man," or "Four Horseman" pops out, generally from an independent, and cleans up.

While the old-timer continues to make 'em by ancient rule, tossing huge sums of money into sets and extras in order to cover up the baldness of the familiar stories he is producing with machine-like precision.

Even when the Old Guard "takes a chance" with the unusual story, ancient rules and studio "system" proceed, with great promptness, to "make a movie" of it.

A departure in method as well as story is demanded.

"The Four Horsemen" broke about all the rules compiled from the year One. It began one or two reels before regulation picture rules said it should. The production told the story regardless, unfolding it naturally and without once departing from the line of march to pay its respects to Chapter 23, on How to Annoy the Plot.

"Blood and Sand," adapted by the same writer, also proceeded to kill off the leading man, probably to the secret horror of 90 per cent of Ancient Guardsmen. The chips fell where the ax was working, and everything worked out so naturally that "Blood and Sand," as seen in Los Angeles at least, was not what is termed "a movie."

The phrase should be "only a movie."

Even the tormented stage has made the same radical departure, for a new Broadway show reveals itself in eight scenes, and disregards all stage-made rules, with the result of natural, human unfoldment.

"Come On Over," bears the barriers in more ways than one, and any story as simple but human, will clean up without aid. You cannot take a chapter from loveable life itself and fail—unless some authority with the old brush and veneer takes the privilege of smearing it until it is so artificial that the children can observe it.

Therefore it would seem advisable for imaginative writers who are good at novelty and peculiar twists to cease following "Sheik" pictures because one went over big, or any other popular styles, and seek less beaten tracks.

Then the second task presents itself—that of making the grand search for independents who are not only willing, but glad, to purchase and put over such stories.

Bitter Sweet

After a few more staggering blows, even the man-in-the-rut might lend a furtive ear to you.

The companion of the "Come On Over" should be its contrast, the melodrama. The public has demanded fast action, fights and thrills since Adams stirred up the snake in the garden and got bit for his pains. War and strife have shaken nation and tribe since the beginning, and these things occurred plenty of times because the populace wanted a little red-blooded action as an appetizer. Shakespeare, without a melodramatic mind, would probably have starved to death beside the road while begging jitneys off the haughty scions of his race.

Nothing has lived in play or story save the good, old melo. Count 'em: the Bible, wars of nations, "Monte Cristo," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," holy grail stuff—the list is a long one, but depends upon the melodrama for its long life.

Of course the gentle censor in several states is doing his best to kill any picture which moves faster than his own sluggish mind, but all exhibitors will agree that melodrama of the right kind still goes big with the public.

The West itself, as well as the East, wants its westerns, just as Mirandy and Cy want their rural plays when they visit the great metropolis. You can't beat human nature, no, with all the antiquated methods and a censor in every block. The people will have melo, and wise manufacturers will continue giving it to them.

One manufacturer is asking for stories with society background solely. Just why he should restrict himself in this manner he does not explain. However, there is danger in such a request. The outside writer has been watching the screen with eagle eye. He has seen salacious sex stuff, maddening mush and slimy slush played up as "society stuff," and is apt to try that sort of thing in his own stories.

As a matter of fact the society background no longer can excuse smut and highly distasteful scenes. The story must be as clean and wholesome as under any other guise, and writers should be the first to recognize this.

Of course any word in favor of the heart-interest story is wasted. That alluring, gripping story will live forever upon screen and printed page. We have all too few of them in pictures today, in this period of endeavoring to outshock the product of the other fellow.

The simple but steadfast story which affects the happiness of one or more people, mixed with 50 per cent of humor, seems to be the champion of all classes at present. Lucky is the writer who can grow this bouquet, freshly enhanced with exotics plucked in strange gardens.

Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, New York City, has started a movement for better music for the movies. He feels, the conductor should create a new spirit for the composition, the spirit dictated by the needs of the film.

Nazimova is billed in New York for the speaking stage. She will play the stellar role in "Salome," this season.

WE SOMETIMES THINK

That pictures are funny.

That heroines are not always necessary.

That a few of the 37 plot-varieties are being run ragged.

That the censor will kill himself some day with his choking bigotry and conceit, and save the rest of us the trouble.

That real originality kills your story, so far as several studio managements are concerned.

Contemporary Criticisms

"HER GILDED CAGE" (Paramount)

"Subtract the gorgeous sets and costumes from this picture and it wouldn't carry a single item of interest. It takes a long time to plant the characters and plot and once everything is started toward the denouement, you discover there is nothing which calls for so much effort along this line. Money has been expected—call it wasted—upon a story which unconsciously presented. And everything is subordinated for the sake of putting over a lavish production . . . through this gorgeous background troops Gloria Swanson on parade—revealing an array of modish gowns. 'The story is artificial, only relieved occasionally by Walter Hiers comedy relief as the press agent and David Powell's attempt to be sincere in a hopelessly conventional role.'"

—Motion Picture News.

"'Her Gilded Cage' contains many ingredients of a successful picture, but the most prominent are, perhaps, the rich investiture and a remarkably fine performance by an attractive and talented star. Another is the story . . . the treatment it receives in the hands of the producer and art director make it a picture of high entertainment value. 'Gloria Swanson gives one of the best acting performances of her career in a role that calls upon her for a wide variety of emotional expression.'"

—Moving Picture World.

"The best that can be said for 'Her Gilded Cage' is that it is passable entertainment. Here and there the story succeeds in getting over a bit of pathos and . . . comedy relief thanks to the efforts of that sterling, ever jovial artist, Walter Hiers."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE BONDED WOMAN" (Paramount)

"A woman will respect and admire a saint, but she'll follow a sinner to the ends of the earth." This is the substance of the story and it is offered in an introductory subtitle, thus taking away any value of suspense. The first part of the picture is interesting, particularly the shots of a storm at sea, and the first mate rescuing the skipper from Davy Jones' locker.

—Motion Picture News.

"'The Bonded Woman' is a marine melodrama that has all the earmarks of a popular success."

"It is a humdinger, and proves that a simple, melodramatic, story may be marked with distinction if handled intelligently."

"The plot has been developed with dramatic construction, embracing the primal law of story telling—exposition, conflict, result. This has been accomplished through the agency of both scenario and expert direction."

"The acting of the star and her small but select supporting company is one of the strong advantages towards entertainment value the film has."

—Moving Picture World.

"There is some well placed comedy in the first couple of reels and also the beginning of thrills and suspense that last throughout the story."

"The storm at sea has been capitally filmed and affords some scenes of real worth. The love story that involves two well-liked male leads is of the sort that will appeal of its own accord plus the popularity of the actors."

"Betty Compson gives a pleasing performance. John Bowers . . . is good in his part and does his drunken scenes without becoming obnoxious. Richard Dix . . . makes himself so agreeable that it appears to be a toss-up to see which man the audience prefers to see win out. The supporting cast is good."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"OATHBOUND" (Fox)

"A good story with melodramatic flavorings and a fairly well concealed element that develops keen interest as the plot thickens."

"Detective plots usually register well and if convincingly done, satisfy a large number of patrons. In 'Oathbound' this feature has been capably handled and by the use of ambiguous titles the solution of the mystery has been made less evident thereby heightening and holding the interest until the climax is reached."

"Dustin Farnum lends his usual he-man punch to the story. Ethel Grey Terry is an attractive lead and Maurice Flynn partially regains his former honors as Ned Hastings."

"All exterior shots have been clearly photographed. The boat races have been especially well done. Interiors are pleasing. The continuity is satisfactory and moves rapidly."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

" . . . an interesting melodrama despite its gaps . . . The hero is really stupid to be outwitted so easily. But it all goes under the head of melodrama."

"There isn't much chance for the romance, and it isn't missed. 'Oathbound' is a satisfactory melodrama, even if you feel cheated in the director's effort to keep you guessing."

—Motion Picture News.

"Lots of action and a constant shift of scene help hold the attention. Director Durning kept things moving at top speed and did fairly well with the material at hand. He scored best in the action scenes but did not help simplify the story."

"Dustin Farnum hasn't a very important role to play and does not come out very well in the end. The entire cast do good work but a greater contrast in types would have reduced the confusion."

—Film Daily.

"An unusually exhilarating subject, superior to the average program feature is offered by Fox in 'Oathbound' . . . the story is not one that need be taken seriously. The treatment is refreshing and makes use of the material in a way that is pictorially pleasing."

"Dustin Farnum is the star, but the performance of Maurice Flynn is most prominent. He has a swift forceful manner that directs interested attention in whatever he does. Ethel Grey Terry has the leading feminine role which demands attractive clothes and a vivacious manner."

—Moving Picture World.

"It is the best picture that Farnum has had for some time and one that deserves to be very popular."

—Morning Telegraph.

"THE NEW TEACHER" (Fox)

"An inconsequential little trifle is 'The New Teacher' Shirley Mason's newest opus which seems to have no beginning nor end, but just skips along rather aimlessly. There is apparently no aim on the part of the director to season it with a dash of paprika. Rather does he rely upon the conventional sentiment and forced drama to make it presentable, but it is so obviously weak that the question arises—why should it have been produced at all?"

"Shirley Mason is deserving of better things."

—Motion Picture News.

"As a vehicle for Shirley Mason, 'The New Teacher' is lacking in certain qualities. She is rather too prosperous and too saintly to be interesting."

"The school-room and the tenements are the background for the story. Lunch hour on the roof of the school-house shows some amusing touches that are more successful than pathetic."

"One of the distinguished members of the cast is glad his name has been omitted from the cast. He has one brief glorious moment of acting when his appetite is interrupted by the fumes of another boy's garlic. It is one of the best touches of the picture."

—Moving Picture World.

"SIGN OF THE ROSE" (American)

"'The Sign of the Rose' is a picture that has apparently been done with exceptionally worthy co-operation on the part of everyone who had anything to do with the production in any way. The story is graphically told and is thoroughly realistic and complete in every detail. . . . There are many tense moments throughout and if a tearful audience is any indication of good entertainment value then 'The Sign of the Rose' has it."

"The especially fine acting of Mr. Beban . . . deserves high praise. His movements and expressions are characteristic and always convincing. Dorothy Giraci . . . does some excellent work. Each member of the cast has contributed his best and the result is absolutely satisfying in every instance."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The biggest angle for exploitation, of course, is George Beban, his previous success in the stage version and the heart interest note in the drama. The story of Peitro and Bambino is just the type of picture which most people enjoy crying over."

"Beban is the compelling personality of the production. His performance shows the keenest understanding of his character and a technical fineness that is the result of much study and practice. His scenes with Rosina, played by Dorothy Giraci, are delightful. The child responds to these imaginative moments with a sympathy and intelligence that is remarkable."

"The scenario shows a skillful handling of the material so as to realize the most out of it for screen success."

—Moving Picture World.

"George Beban's Italian sketch has grown as mellow as Warfield's 'Music Master.' It is a screen version of his stage play and has been adapted to the silversheet in such a manner that its many highlights are constantly in the foreground. . . . Mr. Beban plays again the simple sorrowful figure of the Italian whose entire life is devoted to the care of his motherless child."

"He acts his part with deep feeling—with genuine enthusiasm. That's what makes his simple sketches so real—that's what makes his Italian such a beloved character."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE COUNTRY FLAPPER" (Producers Security)

"This picture almost reaches the stage of burlesque because of its reliance upon rural jinks. F. Richard Jones, a graduate of the Sennett school, has applied the master's here and there with the result that the offering may be called fairly amusing. . . . It provides a good frolic for the irrepressible Dorothy Gish, who can get more fun out of a situation than any other comedienne we might mention."

"There are moments—many of them—when one situation is used up—and the director starts off on another track."

"The picture does not live up to its title. There is nothing of the sophisticated sub-deb in Dorothy Gish's interpretation, but she does have a lot of fun. Glenn Hunter, who flashed a real genius in 'The Cradle Buster,' has moments here when he demonstrates his talent after Booth Tarkington's puppy lover."

—Motion Picture News.

"Register another distinct hit for Dorothy Gish in 'The Country Flapper,' which, while not an elaborate affair, does offer good, clean and wholesome entertainment of the comedy brand that is characteristic of this charming comedienne."

" . . . It is something new in cinematographic offerings and because the effort to entertain is genuine, the comedy stands out pleasingly."

"Joe Farnum has done his best work in this picture. His titles are a revelation and the best written by this genial person. He cut and edited the film and to him must necessarily go the bulk of credit for the entertainment value of the offering."

—Moving Picture World.

What Folks Think

DAWN DEFENDS RIGHTS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 12.—Editor CAMERA! : Your article in CAMERA! under heading "Patent War Looms," has come to my attention. In this article you quote "fictitious patents" in referring to my suit against Ferdinand Earle.

This patent was granted June, 1917, by the U. S. patent office, and far from being fictitious, is very much of a reality. If you doubt this the patent record may be examined or I refer you to my counsel, Carrol King.

In using the word "fictitious" you deliberately do an unfair thing to me by giving the impression that I am suing people on a myth when I am lawfully defending the rights vested in my patent and should have the support of all honest Americans and law abiding citizens.

Mr. Earle has given you a distorted version of the matter and you apparently have not taken the trouble to ascertain the facts in the case.—NORMAN DAWN.

(CAMERA!'s article told of "a drive upon alleged 'fictitious' patents, covering various processes in motion picture production. The drive, as reported in CAMERA!, is a fact and was printed as such. CAMERA! takes no side in this or any other controversy. It will publish the news developments on both sides.—EDITOR.)

STAY WEST, FOLKS!

NEW YORK, July 27, 1922.—Editor CAMERA! : To those who consider their lot hard on the 'Coast,' and who are desirous of bettering (?) this condition in New York, I would like to say—'Remain where you are.' For never in the history of this city have things been so bad. Very few pictures are being made and salaries are being cut to almost—comparatively—nothing. The writer has been in the thick of it—not only the picture end, but the speaking stage as well, and it suffices to say—in the latter, one is expected to put in five weeks (three rehearsals) for the doubtful privilege of drawing two weeks' pay. This is the usual guarantee for three weeks' rehearsals and as shows have been opening and closing one after another, two weeks' (after a grilling round of seeking engagements) money is clearly insufficient to weather the storm of non-employment of several weeks. Living is excessively high, everything else in proportion—so, considering that the living end in Los Angeles is much lower, occasional work much more ready—

Barbara Bedford has been ill and has held up the Jack Conway production at Universal City, with Herbert Rawlinson as the star actor.

Gertrude Astor now supporting Gloria Swanson in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew" has appeared in one hundred and ten moving picture features.

Johnny Waters has decided to remain with Lasky and not go over to the Metro with Irvin Willat.

Sid Smith, the comedian of Hall Room Boys fame, denies he is playing in a musical comedy entitled, "The New Hall" now touring Southern California cities and advertising a Sig Smith as a star.

Audrey Chapman has completed her seven-week engagement in "Garrison's Finish," starring Jack Pickford. Before entering pictures, Miss Chapman scored many triumphs on the concert stage.

Jack Walters and Bill Knight are roommates out alley row at Universal; that is, they dress together but usually work for different directors. Jack is with McGowan and Bill at last reports was with Conway.

The two De Lacy's at the Fine Arts studio are not related to one another—this in answer to many inquiries. Ralph De Lacy, technical director, is a veteran of the old lot, having been there with D. W. Griffith in the production of "Intolerance," and other big spectacles. Robert De Lacy is an old-time New York film editor who has edited and cut some of the biggest films in the Hollywood studios during the past few years, and is now completing work on "The Bishop of the Ozarks."

Fred Hibbard is at Big Bear for a two-weeks' vacation.

William Fairbanks, after a lay off while waiting for the return of Fred Balshofer, got up nerve to go to work. He was signed by Ben Wilson to do a five-reel westerner.

Dorothy Manners, whose next screen appearance will be in support of Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish," is said to be due to receive a vote of thanks from the Chamber of Commerce of Hollywood. A post-card campaign, defending this city against its defamers, which she launched is proving very effective as a result of hundreds of citizens following her suggestion to make it a habit to send out at least a dozen post-cards a week to friends and relatives telling them not to believe the detrimental gossip anent the film capitol.

Gloria Hope, who is conceded to possess the most gloriously beautiful red hair in all picturedom, has written a series of articles under the general heading of "Beauty Hints to Milady of Red Tresses Exclusively." These articles will be published by a syndicate serving more than two hundred newspapers.

Billy De Vall completed a job in a Jack Hoxie picture now on its last episode, under the direction of Al Knight.

Jackie Parker is the little five-year-old boy who won the screen contest in Cleveland among three thousand other contestants. He has since played with Barbara Castleton in "False Fronts," where he took the part of a street urchin. He attracted considerable attention when playing a page in King James' court in the Lasky production of "To Have and to Hold," directed by George Fitzmaurice. His third part was in "Love's Coming of Age."

Clete Zimlick is doing her part in the Larry Semon company by making up one of the many charming girls working in a big cafe set. She says that as soon as George Clark starts producing again she will play opposite him.

Matt Moore has been cast for a part in the Irving Cummings production.

Harry Edwards is directing Lige Conley for Jack White, assisted by Rea Hunt, aided by Robert Smith and Lionel Comport.

A. Mezzetti is "jack of all trades" with the Hamilton-White forces.

Monty Banks made his first two-reel comedy for Ben Wilson, signed a contract for a series, and came through with the following: "A contract doesn't amount to much—if I don't behave myself and make good pictures, what good is a contract?"

Joseph M. Schenck announced last week that Norma Talmadge would begin production of the stage play, "Within the Law," upon her return from foreign shores, in November.

Larry Trimble and Jane Murfin, producers of "Brawn of the North," departed for New York two weeks ago to make distribution arrangements with First National executives.

Phyllis Haver is on the move again. Having completed her work in "The Christian," Mack Sennett has loaned her to Buster Keaton, and she will be seen opposite the sad faced star in his next comedy, as yet untitled.

Frank Lloyd announces that the recent accident to Eugene O'Brien did not interfere in any way with the production schedule for Norma Talmadge's picture, "The Voice From the Minaret." O'Brien finished his scenes for this production on the same day he was struck by a truck.

Byron Munson set foot on Los Angeles soil once more the other day, telling all comers that he had enjoyed his trip to the metropolis but was happier to be back among Hollywooders.

Scott Sidney has returned from Balboa, where he has been making a house-boat story with Neal Burns for the Christie company.

Leon Rice, vice-president of the Mission Film Corporation, has returned from a business trip to San Francisco.

Eugene Acker Ivanoff has just returned from a week at Santa Barbara.

Richard Dix, when asked how he liked Europe, came back with the following: "Caughenga and Hollywood Boulevard never looked so good to me than after I returned from England."

Andrew D. W. Reid, vice-president, and John Rikkleman, secretary and treasurer of Fine Arts studios, are planning to spend a week's vacation at Yosemite and will leave the studios within the next few days by motor car.

Walter Hiers may make a flying trip to New York City for a vacation between pictures.

Jack Mulhall is to be directed in a series of Jack London sea stories which will take him north to shoot some fishing village scenes. Eddie Kull is directing while Billy Tummell is assisting.

Ernest Adams is working for the Bull Montana picture.

Hughey Fay is stepping up in the world. From directing Lloyd Hamilton, he moves over to look after Bull Montana.

GREEN ROOM CLUB New York City

Story By

Edward J. Le Saint is writing continuity for "Only a Shop Girl," which will be produced by the Hallroom boys.

Eugene De Rue, who directs both Eddie Lyons and Bobby Dunn for Arrow release, is getting stories ready for them.

Keene Thompson is knocking stories out for directors on the Universal.

Mrs. R. D. Shepherd has been engaged to prepare a stage version of M. W. Howard's "Bishop of the Ozarks," just filmed at the Fine Arts studio by Finis Fox.

Hank Mann has accepted a new role, that of writing stories and gags for the Hallroom Boys comedies.

David Torrence, character actor, is going to write a series of Scotch stories for an eastern newspaper syndicate, while he will also start on a new picture soon.

The Better Pictures Association of the World has awarded its "Medal of Merit" to Halperin Productions as a mark of excellence and approval for its last picture, "What Do We Live For?" The association represents civic organizations, women's clubs, ministerial unions, churches, boards of education, etc., throughout the country. It will assist in the exploitation of "What Do We Live For?"

HOW TO SUCCEED IN THE MOVIES

By Edward J. Montagne

TO BE AN ASSISTANT DIRECTOR—Wear riding breeches, puttees, and a superior air. Raise one of those cute little twirling mustaches. Don't recognize any of your friends. And—this is important—always ride around in one of those big $5,000 cars. No, we don't know how you get the car. If we did we'd have one ourself.

TO BE A SCENARIO WRITER—Of course, the first hundred will come back, even though you have read all the best plays and novels. But don't give up. Next write a book on the technique of the photoplay. This will give dignity. Now start a photoplay school, teaching others how to sell their stories. Then you won't have to sell your own.

TO BE A GREAT DIRECTOR—First, admit it yourself. Fire any of your assistants who doesn't tell you about it. Get them in the habit of saying "Yes." See only your own pictures. To look at the other fellow's would be an admission that other pictures are being made. Always talk about "My art."

TO BE A MOVIE MAGNATE—Run up and down hotel lobbies talking to yourself. Keep going up to the Western Union desk asking for telegrams, and learn to say "five million," "ten million" without cracking a smile. Always mark up the table linen with large figures. Outsiders may think that you are Sam Bernard rehearsing a new role, but insiders will know that you are a movie magnate and chose you up to your room, begging you to take money away from them.

TO BE A STAR—Acknowledge it in full page ads. Organize your own company. Elect yourself president. Write a few scenarios and then feature yourself in a series of super-productions. Get some real actors to support you. Then try to sell the pictures.

Sidney D'Albrook sprained his wrist while working with Buck Jones and comes through with the saying that, "West is West and East is East. But, let me stay West and work, but not in Western pictures; they are too rough on some people."

"RUSHES"

The Camera Boys

Percy Milburn, who has been with Reginald Barker for the past five years, and is now chief cinematographer in the making of "Hearts Aflame," has had as many as ten cameramen under his direction for the recording of some of the British Columbia location scenes for "Hearts Aflame."

John Seitz, member American Society of Cinematographers, will leave for New York shortly to photograph Rex Ingram's forthcoming production. Seitz photographed "The Four Horsemen," and other Ingram successes.

Robert Newhard, A. S. C., has returned from Spokane where he was cinematographer for Nell Shipman productions.

Phillip E. Rosen, A. S. C., has finished the direction of Valentino in "The Young Rajah," which was filmed by Jimmy Van Trees, A. S. C.

Karl Brown, A. S. C., has completed photographing "The Old Homestead."

J. R. Lockwood, A. S. C., has begun filming of Hunt Stromberg's latest Bull Montana comedy.

Herford Tynes Cowling, A. S. C., is en route to London whence he will depart to film the contry adjacent to the Roosevelt trail in Africa.

The American Society of Cinematographers now embraces memberships in England, Russia and South Africa.

Bert Cann, A. S. C., is traveling in Europe. When last heard from, Cann was in Austria.

Jackson Rose, A. S. C., has finished filming "The Dangerous Age," and will leave shortly for San Francisco.

The actual shooting work of Arthur Edson, A. S. C., is completed on "Robin Hood."

Charles Stumar, A. S. C., is serving as chief cinematographer with Universal's "Ivohoe" company in Europe.

Fred Jackman, president A. S. C., with his family, is away on a four-week motor trip through Yellowstone Park and the Northwest. Jackman completed direction of "Bow Wow," Sennett comedy, a short time ago.

Harry La Verne will be seen in "Within the Law," a Gamut Club play to be produced in October. He will have the part of Smithson. He recently carried parts in "Robin Hood."

Harry L. Keepers, the well-known old-timer on the camera is putting the final touches on the first natural color production of the Technicolor Company of Boston. C. M. Franklin directed the picture, which was adapted from a famous Chinese story.

Despite rumors to the contrary Otto Lederer will continue in the role of Solomon Levi in "Abie's Irish Rose at the Morosco."

Harvey Thew gave a farewell dinner at the Writers' club for Tom Gerehty, last Saturday, before he went east to take charge of the Famous Players-Lasky studio. The farewell was premature, for Gerehty and Chet Withey (on his way to direct Elsie Ferguson) were turned back from Needles by the railroad strike.

Where CAMERA! Stands

CAMERA! exists for three reasons: to publish actual happenings in motion pictures; to tell what we think about film matters; to publish what you think about film matters.

The news.—CAMERA! intends to print all news about or of interest to the men and women engaged in making motion pictures. CAMERA! intends to publish news impartially regardless of personal opinions of its publisher and staff.

Our opinions.—In editorials, reviews and comment CAMERA! presents personal opinions of its writers. These opinions will be granted free and uninfluenced expression so long as this magazine is in its present hands.

Your opinions.—What readers of CAMERA! think about anything connected with motion pictures is welcomed for publication even though it differs from CAMERA!'s ideas.

NOW—How about a new movie motto: THE TRUTH. Let's be fair to each other and ourselves, folks. Let's talk things over as they are, uncolored by hokum. Bunk, bunk, bunk has almost stifled this industry. Stamp it down. What good does it do anyone in the long run, anyhow? Somebody always knows the truth about everything. CAMERA! hopes to be able to print it.

Robert E. Sherwood, famous Hollywood hunter and life photoplay critic, is conducting a review department for the Photodramatist.

"From Pen to Silversheet," by Melvin M. Riddle, author of "Behind the Camera with Elinor Glyn," is now on sale at $1 a copy (adv't.) Send the dollar to Myron Zobel, publisher of Screenland. He'll forward Mel's 10 cents.

Douglas Z. Doty contributes an article on "Why Your Stories Are Rejected," to August Photodramatist. It's for script writers, not press agents.

All lovers of poetry should read the August 12th issue of the Script. There are half a dozen odes to Tom Geraghty's passing eastward, a column and a half of blank verse, and some classic stuff in Harvey Thew's column, "The Cat's Whiskers."

A new theatre, "The Hollywood," valued at $200,000 at 78th street and New Utrecht avenue, Brooklyn, was hacked to pieces last week, according to the police. The operator's booth was opened and every thing loose was either destroyed or stolen. The manager could offer no reason for the vandalism.

In the Ring With Toreador

This, according to Harvey Thew, occurred in a studio about midway between New Orleans and Honolulu:

Visitor: "Tell me what IS a continuity?"
Wampas: "A continuity is something the doctor takes in his hand, glances at the first page and says, 'Well, for gawd's sake!'"

AUTHOR SUES

Another author to make a legal fight when his name was used on a story different from his own is Frank L. Packard. He is suing Fox for $25,000, saying "The Iron Rider" as screened was not his story. The story, he claimed, was picturized as "Smiles and Trumps."

CHANGE IN TITLE

Louis B. Mayer announces that "Hearts Aflame" has been selected as the releasing title for his first Reginald Barker Production, an all-star special based on the famous Harold Titus novel, "Timber." J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby made the adaptation.

Clifford Elfelt writes from New York that he is "just leaving for good old California," and will start production with the Reynolds Metropolitan Productions upon arrival.

Benefits and Detriments

THE kindheartedness of picture people was submitted to severe strain last Saturday.

Response of player folk to pleas of aid has always been prompt and sacrificing. It is a tradition of the stage that those who act for the screen have upheld.

But the tradition is likely to become a legend in the face of such experiences as that of the "mammoth benefit" at Philharmonic auditorium.

* * *

DAYS before, advertisements in Los Angeles daily papers read:

"Mammoth Benefit Given by the Profession to Victims of Automobile Accident. Screen-Vaudeville-Drama Stars Personal Appearance."

Forty or fifty names were printed. Motion picture players were in the majority, many popular stars included.

Many of these knew nothing of the prospected benefit until they read their names in this ad.

Some of them, and justifiedly, declined to have anything to do with it.

Presumably the benefit was to aid Georgie Sewell, vaudeville actress; Rothstein Cornblatt, William Bleet, and Sam Liebster, who were injured in the accident in which Edna Kuhn, said to have acted in pictures, was killed a few weeks ago. Jay Herman and Eddie Kane, a vaudeville team, together with Mrs. Kane and Jane Croxsen, were also in the car, but were uninjured.

The benefit was advertised to be under direction of Herman L. Roth, attorney, while B. Anderson Smith was master of ceremonies and Lew Kane was stage director.

ON the night of the benefit Philharmonic auditorium was filled with people who had paid from 50 cents to $2 a seat to see in person the long role of stars recited in the advertising.

A loyal little handful of film folk swallowed their pride at the arbitrary way in which they had been drawn into the project, remembering that, after all, fellow professionals in distress were to be aided. They were there: Helen Ferguson, May McAvoy, Virginia Fox, Bessie Love, Clara Horton, Hank Mann, Larry Semon, William Russell, and James Young.

With fine acceptance of the emergency they did their best, although no program had been arranged and there had been but a meagre rehearsal in the afternoon.

The audience, naturally, was infuriated when it suspected it had been hoodwinked. There were cries from the auditorium for missing performers and hisses directed at the master of ceremonies

As it appeared to them the missing motion picture players had simply fallen down on an engagement—worse, an engagement for charity to which, apparently, they had pledged support.

That view of the proceeding was retailed to ten-fold the number present.

It was a black eye for all motion pictures in the public mind—although pictures were not to blame.

* * *

THERE is a lesson in this matter.

No actor should have anything to do with any benefit performance not sanctioned specifically by at least one of the many film organizations in the profession.

If his or her name is used without permission in connection with an unauthorized benefit performance vigorous protest should be made at once—complaint made to the city prosecutor's office if necessary.

There are city laws against untruthful advertising, and they may be invoked in a case of this kind.

And to the loyal few who represented motion pictures at the fiasco, let them have all credit for doing the best they could under adverse circumstances.

TED TAYLOR.

Relativity Explained

BETWEEN the rail strike, McCormick's glands, the Irish war and Will Hays, Einstein seems lost to public attention.

That, perhaps, is one practical illustration of the theory of relativity.

German film producers have been busy preparing a cinema exposition of Einstein's theories, however, using animated drawings, motion photographs of homely illustrations, and subtitled explanations.

Information Wanted

ANYONE know what happened to the briefly famous Paramount School and Stock Company?

Has it taken its place with the runaway Turkish heiress, "Virgin of Stamboul"; the famous Japanese girl suicide note; Mr. T. R. Zan and his tame lions; Mrs. Leslie Carter's tanbarked street and Anna Held's milk baths?

Film Capital Production Notes

ED SLOMAN WILL PRODUCE "A HONEYMOON FOR THREE"

Edward Sloman announced that his next picture will be "A Honeymoon for Three," the popular story that ran in serial form in the magazine section of the Hearst newspapers. Sloman is said to have purchased the screen rights to the story under its original title, "The Tavern and the Arrows," before its appearance in the newspapers and he has recently received permission to produce the play with the title, "A Honeymoon for Three." The picture will be made with an all-star cast, states Sloman, and production will commence upon his return from the eastern metropolis.

Work on "The Strangers' Banquet" is progressing rapidly under Neilan's personal direction in collaboration with Frank Urson. The production is now in its fifth week and within the next two weeks will be completed. By a special producing arrangement whereby the "shooting" of the picture is dovetailed and by working nights, it will be possible to complete the picturization of this drama within this time, an unusual feat for a production of this magnitude.

Productions from the studios of Thomas H. Ince during the coming season will be released through the Associated First National, according to an agreement just reached by the independent producer and the releasing organization.

After several months of negotiations to determine the exhibition values of nine big specials which have been in production under Mr. Ince's supervision, satisfactory arrangements have been completed for early release of all of these.

Vitagraph fall activity was given momentum Thursday night of this week when the William Duncan company opened production of "When Danger Smiles," a western story in which Edith Johnson will co-star.

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms" is the second Gasnier production to be made by B. P. Schulberg. Estelle Taylor, who scored such a pronounced success in the chief role in "A Fool There Was," has the lead.

Titling and editing "Robin Hood" which has been going forward under the guiding hand of the star himself, is now practically complete, but in all probability "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" will not be given its premiere until late September or early October.

Larry Semon's latest two-reel comedy is in final laps of the cutting stage and will leave within a few days for New York. Larry's next picture will be under way within a week. The locale is to be the northwest woods.

"Money, Money, Money," the latest Preferred Pictures' production, has just been completed under Tom Forman's direction. It is by Larry Evans, the novelist and magazine writer.

Helen Jerome Eddy is nearing completion of "When Love Comes of Age."

"The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," Gloria Swanson's new Paramount picture, a Sam Wood production, is finished, and after a short rest "His American Wife" will be started, August 28th, being the date set. The present picture is an adaptation by Percy Heath of the story by David Lisle, while the forthcoming production is by Hector Turnbull, adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn.

In spite of his few years, Jackie Morgan has worked in forty pictures. Now he is vacationing.

Wallace Reid has started work on "Thirty Days" for Paramount. James Cruze, fresh from his triumphant direction of "The Old Homestead," will direct this picture and Wanda Hawley is to be leading woman. The original play was by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton. A fine cast of players will be selected for this highly amusing farce-comedy.

"A Daughter of Luxury" is Agnes Ayres' next starring vehicle for Paramount. It was started last Monday with Paul Powell at the helm.

"Tales of the Fish Patrol," Jack London's action stories of the sea, will be filmed by Universal in the locale of which he wrote. An expeditionary force has left Universal City for the north coast where boats will be chartered and exterior scenes made. Edward Kull directs, Jack Mulhall stars.

Harry Carey is now producing the second of his series of outdoor specials for the F. B. O. His first, "The Kick Back," was booked by the New York Capitol theatre as a mid-summer attraction, marking the debut of Carey as a Capitol star. His second production is "Good Men and True," a screen adaption of the story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes.

Ethel Clayton is finishing her first production for F. B. O. entitled "The Three Cornered Kingdom."

"A GIPSY CAVALIER"

"A Gipsy Cavalier" has been selected as the title for the film now being produced in London by Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, with Georges Carpentier and an all-star British cast, which is adapted from the novel, "My Lady April" by John Overton.

M. Carpentier has a dual role—that of a dilettante aristocrat and of a picturesque boxing gipsy; and in one part of the film has a third characterization, when he disguises himself as a Spanish grandee. Florale Breton, the screen and stage actress and dancer, has the role of the heroine, while Miss Mary Clare, noted dramatic actress, has an important part. Mr. Rex McDougall, an English actor who has gained fame in America, also appears in a leading role.

Earle Williams started on his new feature at the Vitagraph studios last week. "You Never Know" is the present title of his drama.

W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph studios, returned from New York last Monday with some new prospects in view.

Larry Semon has started on another two-reel comedy at the Vitagraph studios. His latest picture finished has been shipped East.

Richard Thomas is getting ready to start a five-reel mystery story at the Berwillia studios. H. Jackson is responsible for the story. Richard Thomas has the Chamber of Commerce of Pleasanton nibbling with him to move his organization to that city and build a studio there.

Al E. Christie, since making the trip to Europe, has the fever to make another journey, but this time he intends to make two pictures while enroute. The voyage he has in mind is a trip to Honolulu, making scenes back and forth and on the Hawaiian Islands with Bobby Vernon.

David Ingraham Productions has taken quarters at the Fine Arts studios where work commenced this week on the company's first dramatic feature, the title of which has not been announced. Lloyd Ingraham is directing.

Charles Mack, producer of Lester Cuneo westerns for Western Pictures Exploitation, announces the completion of "Skyfire," the fifth in the company's series of eight five-reelers a year. The picture is now being assembled for distribution. Work will start on a new story this week.

Johnnie Walker's make-up for the stranger in "Captain Fly-by-Night," his first starring vehicle for R-C which went into camera work this week with William K. Howard directing. The cast includes Francis McDonald, Shannon Day, Fred Kelsey, Victory Bateman, Max Asher and others.

The large enclosed stage at Fine Arts was leased last week to Sanford Productions for the filming of scenes in the latest "Tweedy" comedy.

Irvin Willat has started on a sea story at the Metro studios.

Current Reviews

"The Fatal Marriage"

DIGGING up D. W. Griffith's old-timers isn't going to do a thing to the motion picture industry—not a thing!

Not when pictures like "The Fatal Marriage," made some seven years ago, can come so close to running present-day attempts right off the screen. D. W.'s picturization of "Enoch Arden" is not a great picture, but it is still worthy of projection right alongside of a good half of the productions being released today.

Griffith—or Cabanne, rather, for the picture was directed by Christy Cabanne under the supervision of D. W. Griffith—had an all-star cast in his fatal-marriage "Enoch Arden," although he probably was not aware of the fact at the time.

Take Lillian Gish, for instance, as the sweet little Annie who loved so well and suffered so much. Her early scenes are mostly mystic mazes of whirling arms, but underneath it all she even then displayed a delicate feeling and her capacity for worthwhile performances that have marked her as one of the best there is today.

And Wallace Reid is there; quite a while before he joined the matinee idol class. He had his looks then, but he had to work for his place on the screen. Wallie essayed the part of Phillip, the rich chap who married Annie when Enoch was given up for lost, and was left out of more than half the picture, but from what we do see of him, it's easy to see that he has earned his fame.

Mildred Harris is the only other member of the cast who has cut a niche for herself in the movie hall of fame. She had a bit as the eldest daughter of Enoch and Annie.

Enoch himself was played by Alfred Paget, a gentleman well deserving of a better fate than the three sisters have apparently cut out for him, for he seems to have disappeared in these intervening years.

Perhaps the highest paid actor of the lot—although he specializes in a different branch of the industry now—is D. W. Griffith himself, who has a very small bit as Phillip's father.
